The Ted Mack camp is operated under the general direction of the television amateur star whose name it bears. The camp is for eight weeks and in addition to music study, has such activities as boating, trips and camp craft. The students also will have opportunities to hear the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood, Mass., and opera at the Berkshire Music center. The camp director is Dr. Warren S. Freeman.

The two Kansas City youths will leave today for the camp. Tucker is a senior at North Kansas City high school, has studied trumpet five years and is a student of Donald Newhart. He plays in the school band and orchestras, and has his own dance band. Vail is a senior at Southwest high school. He has studied clarinet and saxophone for seven years and is in the Southwest student dance band, the Madcats. He played in the all-city orchestra and has won four first class ratings at the University of Missouri. His music teacher is Robert L. Luyben.

The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 18, 1957

8 Indian Hill Camp Alumni Now Students at Tanglewood

STOCKBRIDGE — Eight former campers from the Indian Hill Music Workshop here are studying at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this season.

One of the eight, Morey Ritt, will be a piano soloist with the Tanglewood Student Orchestra in tonight's concert. Miss Ritt, who comes from Hempstead, R.I., will play the first movement of a Schuman Piano Concerto with the orchestra. Miss Ritt, who is 20-years old, attended Indian Hill in 1952.

In addition to many students at Tanglewood, Seymour Lipkin, lives at Indian Hill and conducts Indian Hill's final festival after the Tanglewood season. A conductor and pianist, Mr. Lipkin is a member of the composing faculty at Tanglewood. He appeared as a soloist with Lukas Foss in Bach's Concerto for Two Pianos in C minor on July 5 and gave a concert of piano duets with Ralph Berkowitz on July 10.

Others at Center

Among the other Indian Hill alumni at Tanglewood is David Ward-Steinman, a student in the composing department. His Piano Sonata was played Sunday night in the Composer's Forum at Tanglewood.

Mr. Ward-Steinman, who comes from Alexandria, La., attended Indian Hill in 1954. He had a Charles Ives Scholarship to the camp. Recipients are picked after a nationwide competition by the National Federation of Music Clubs. In the six years the scholarship, given in honor of the late American composer, has been offerd only three people have been judged worthy of it. Mr. Ward-Steinman was the second. Ramiro Cortez of California, now studying under a Prix de Rome scholarship, was the first recipient and Richard Fanning of Dayton, Ohio is the scholarship holder this summer.

Michael Kasler, a composing student from Maple Shade, N.J., attended Indian Hill in 1954. He had his Sonata No. 2 for Violin and Piano performed at Sunday's Composers' Forum.

William Rheim, who was at Indian Hill in 1954 and 1955, is a double bass player with the Tanglewood Student Orchestra. He lives in New Haven and is first double bass player with the New Haven Symphony.

Peter H. Zaret of Nutley, N.J., is another Indian Hill Camper studying at Tanglewood. A violinist, he was at Indian Hill in 1954.

Harriet Turtletaub, Nicol Milner and Kristen Synnestwedt, who attended Indian Hill in 1954, are members of the Tanglewood Study Group.

These eight seem to make Indian Hill, one of the first of the camps specializing in the arts in the country, a prep school for the Tanglewood Festival.

Indian Hill, started in 1952, is directed by Mr. and Mrs. Mordecai Bauman. It is located on the former Norman Davis estate on Prospect Hill. It has 96 campers and a teaching staff of 20.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

JUL 16 1957

Refugee to Conduct Tanglewood Choir

Lajos Toth, who came here last fall as a refugee from Hungary, tonight will conduct the Tanglewood Choir in four songs of Bela Bartok at the Berkshire Music Festival.

Now employed at Jordan Marsh Company, Toth won a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center. He is a former conductor of the Musicians Guild Orchestra in Budapest and the Radio Budapest Orchestra.

He is one of six student conductors who will appear in tonight's program, the choir's first concert of this current season. Faculty directors will be Alfred Nash Patterson and Lorna Cooke DeVaron of the Music Center.

Indian Hill Alumni at Music Center

STOCKBRIDGE — Eight former campers from the Indian Hill Music Workshop here are studying at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this season.

TIGHT BINDING

C115]

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 14 1957

Musicians From 30 States Attend Tanglewood Classes

Fifteenth Annual Berkshire Music Center Also Has Pupils From 10 Foreign Countries; Eminent Names Listed on Faculty

Lenox, July 13 Musicians representing 30 states, the District of Columbia and 18 foreign countries have come to Tanglewood for the 15th annual session of the Berkshire Music Center. The summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch offers expert teaching and training in instrumental and choral work, and composition, with an average of four public performances weekly given by students of the center. The 1957 season runs through August 11.

Established in 1940

The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, to provide a place where musicians could add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the Center. Aaron Copland is chairman of the faculty; Ralph Berkowitz is dean; and Leonard Burkat is administrator. The distinguished faculty includes the well known musicians Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Irving Fine, Ludwig Zirner, Seymour Lipkin and 23 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Milton Babbitt, associate professor of music at Princeton University, is guest composer at Tanglewood this summer, continuing the tradition of having an eminent visiting composer on the faculty each year. His predecessors have been Goffredo Petrassi, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, Ernest Toch, Carlos Chavez, Luigi Dallapiccola, Jacques Ibert, Darius Milhaud, Arthur Honegger, Bohuslav Martinu, Paul Hindemith, and Oliver Messiaen.

Bay State Has 43

The international representation at the Music Center this summer is large. Eight students come from Canada, six from Hungary, three from Korea, two from Switzerland, two from Israel, two from Great Britain, two from Puerto Rico. Represented by one student apiece are Japan, India, Formosa, Peru, Columbia, Venezuela, Uruguay, Argentina, Hawaii, Norway and Sweden.

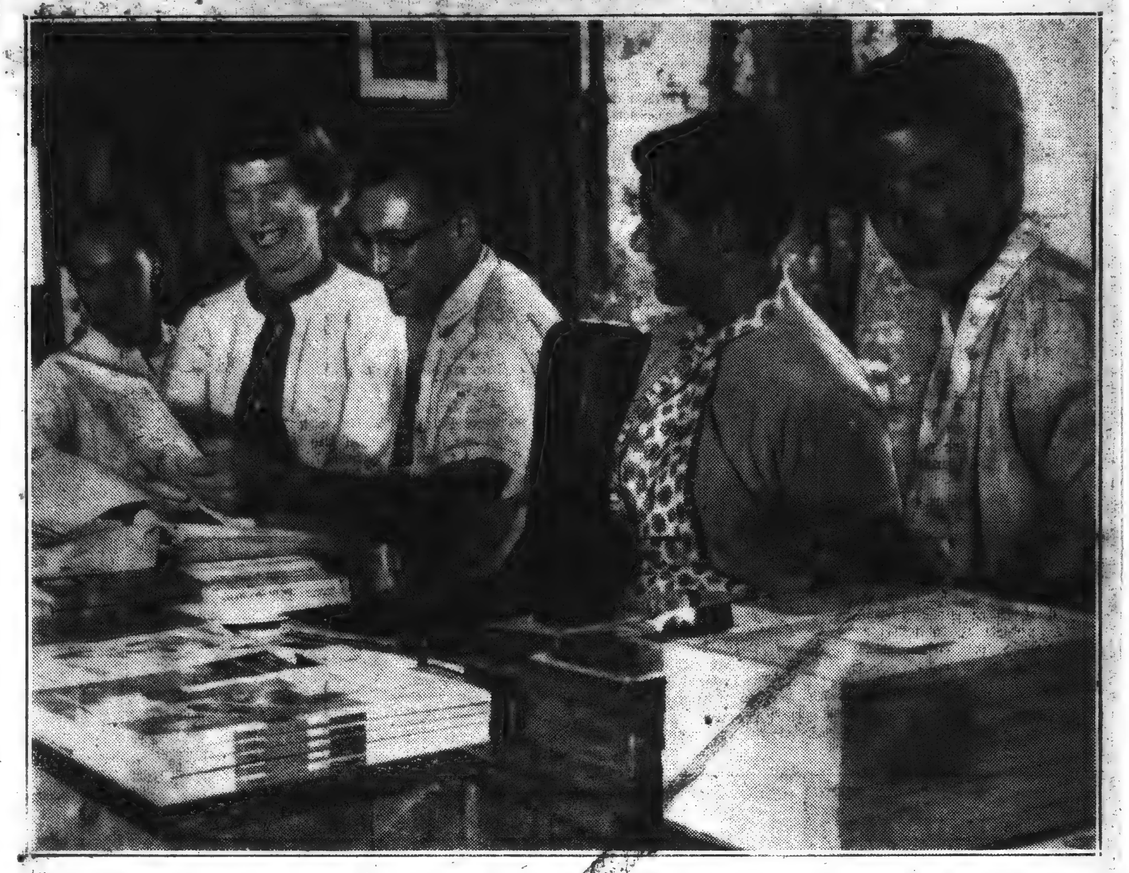
Orchestral conductors who will study this summer with Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho are Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland; Wyn Morris of South Wales, Great Britain; and Fernand Graton, of Montreal, Canada.

As in past years, New York is the state most heavily represented at the Music Center this summer, with 72 students, 43 coming from Massachusetts, 19 from Pennsylvania, and 12 from Illinois. New Jersey and Ohio are each represented by 11 students, and 10 come from neighboring Connecticut. Other states which have contributed heavily to this year's enrollment are Washington and Michigan, with nine students apiece; California with six; the District of Columbia with six, and five from Louisiana and Virginia.

The professional and amateur musicians at Tanglewood this summer pursue careers in other fields. Among the students this summer are a diplomat, dentist, publishing executive, electronics engineer, radio announcer, and die model maker for automotive tooling. A number of social workers, secretaries, premedical students and law school students have also enrolled. Rev. Charles Dupuis, the Director of the Chorale of the College of Saint-Laurent, Canada, returns to the Music Center to study choral conducting with Hugh Ross. Father Dupuis studied Gregorian Chant at the Abaye de Solesmes and at the Institute Gregorian in Paris. He was a student at Tanglewood in 1956.

The majority of Tanglewood students live at the Lenox School and at Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. For recreation, they swim and boat in the Stockbridge Bowl (Lake Mahkee-nac), the lake whose shoreline touches the Tanglewood estate.

12 BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN, SAT., JULY 27, 1957



Music on Their Minds—Students from Boston and vicinity visit the music store of the Berkshire Music Center . . . making selections for class work. In the group are Annette Cisel of Boston, Catherine Wakefield of Dover, Gerald Weinburg of West Roxbury, Jean Marie Colford of Boston and Jacqueline Buchanan of Boston. They're in the student orchestra or the choral department at the center, maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox. Dr. Charles Munch is the center's director.

The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, July 9, 1957—9

Hungarian Choral Conductor in Berkshires

Mahan

Mrs. Willem Willeke, musical director of South Mountain, with Atpad Darasz, choral director who recently escaped from Hungary; and Miriam E. de Kiki, project director of the American National Theater and Academy Emergency Office for Hungarian Refugees.

Atpad Darasz, 35-year-old choral conductor who recently escaped from Hungary, is spending the summer at South Mountain Chamber Music Colony and studying at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Mr. Darasz and his family were offered a summer home in the Berkshires by Mrs. Willem Willeke, musical director of South Mountain.

Through the efforts of Miram E. de Kiki, project director of the American National Theater and Academy Emergency Office for Hungarian Refugee Performing Artists, Mr. Darasz received a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation to enable him to perfect his English and establish himself professionally in this country. He is studying at Tanglewood under a scholarship. Miss de Kiki is a long time resident of this area, spending her summers at South Mountain.

Mr. Darasz will conduct a choral concert of Hungarian composers at Tanglewood July 16. Works by Bartók and Kodaly are on the program to be sung by the Festival Chorus.

In Europe Mr. Darasz won first prize in competition at Eistefodd, the Welsh festival. His services were much in demand in Hungary, where he conducted the Choral Society of the Budapest Radio.

During World War II Mr. Darasz worked in a U.S. Air Force rest camp in Germany as a waiter while still a graduate student.

His wife, Piroska, and children, Burt, Desi, and Judith, are living in the Apple Tree Cottage at South Mountain.

Tanglewood's Musical 'Farm Team'

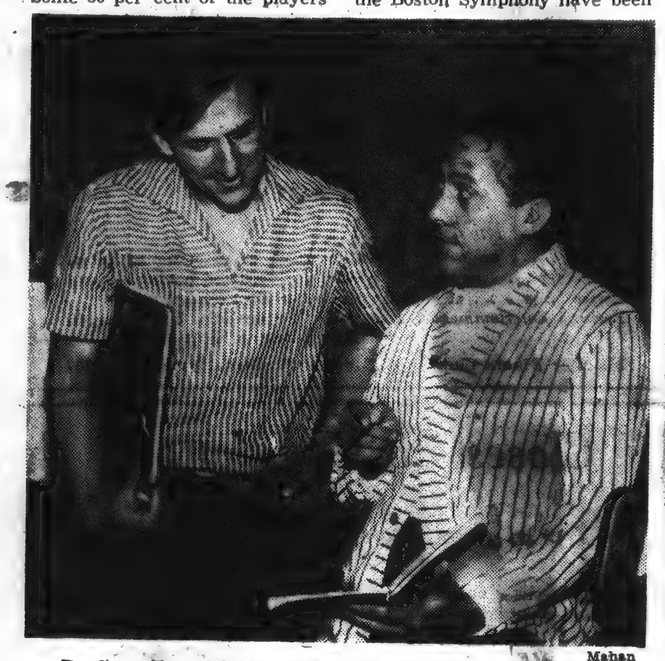
By IRWIN SHAINMAN

Associate Music Professor
Williams College

IF YOU imagine Tanglewood is no more than a series of big weekends featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra, I suggest you join the 3,000 or more people who attend the Thursday night Shed concerts. The musicians are members of one of America's most active and distinctly musical "farm teams," the Berkshire Music Center student orchestra.

During its 15-year history this orchestra has attracted fine instrumentalists from all over the world, developing into one of the country's foremost training groups.

Leading conductors regularly recruit talent from this source. Some 30 per cent of the players in America's professional orchestras and at least 20 members of the Boston Symphony have been "brought up to the majors" in this manner.



Mahan

De Carvalho with Swiss student conductor Gustav Meier

Mahan

Students Elinor Preble of Denver, [illegible] Seattle, Carolyn Lentz of Muskegon, Mich., Eugene Sulliv[illegible] Pittsfield

In talking to players and staff of this unique establishment, one is immediately aware of enthusiasm and devotion to performance. The school's chief administrator, Leonard Burkat, characterizes the setup as "one of the few training programs that offers the player a true introduction to working as an instrumental musician under completely professional conditions."

'Ideal Conditions'

In practice this means a new program for each Thursday concert, preceded by some 18 hours of rehearsal. Compare this to the average conservatory orchestra where as much as two months is spent preparing one concert.

Pittsfield's Eugene Sullivan—member of the orchestra's horn section, graduate of Juilliard, the West Point Band, and the first recipient of the newly awarded Berkshire Scholarship—summed up the typical student reaction to the almost continuous orchestral and chamber music sessions: "Wonderful. This represents the most concentrated amount of playing under ideal conditions that I have ever done."

Should you imagine this group as primarily a haven for the eager but relatively inexperienced amateur with nothing better to do with his summer, you will think differently when you meet such people as 27-year-old Chester Wood, a cellist from Seattle. Having just completed a long stint in the Air Force Orchestra, he has already been engaged for next season by the National Symphony of Washington, D.C.

Then there is Miss Carolyn Lentz, a 24-year-old violist and university graduate who puts the experience of two years in the student group to practical use by running the high-school orchestra and other musical activities in Muskegon, Mich. In her opinion: "University of Michigan instrumental majors plan to come to Tanglewood as almost a normal part of their training."

Among Best

The present group, considered one of the best in many seasons, was picked after almost 300 auditions from as many applicants. That the 100 "surviving" players are receiving a standard yet challenging musical diet was demonstrated by a five-minute "Gallup Poll" during which one year's concert programs were exhaustively surveyed by Dean Ralph Berkowitz and this writer. The result: standard orchestral classics over contemporary repertoire and "novelty selections," 18 to 3. According to the dean, this is good preparation for any symphonic group now playing.

The orchestra department (officially known as Department I, one of five divisions of the school) is noted for its talented crop of student conductors as well as its players. Leonard Bernstein and Eleazar de Carvalho (present faculty director) got their starts here. Most regular Boston Symphony conductors take over at least once during the six-week season, increasing the value of the schooling.

Happy Pupils

As I wandered around at intermission during one of the orchestra's regular morning rehearsals, I was surrounded by talented, well-practiced, devoted, cooperative and friendly people who seemed very pleased to be in a position to rub elbows and swap musical yarns with Boston Symphony musicians.

These young people were proud of their place in the shadow of one of the world's great performing bodies. If you want to see what I mean, just look up Miss Elinor Preble, a 21-year-old New England Conservatory student from Denver.

When I asked her how she felt about being picked to play first flute for a performance of Beethoven's "Sixth Symphony," she looked at me and exclaimed: "It's the end of the whole world."

Warren Clark, Jr.

STUDENTS IN 'TANGLEWOOD.' Elaine V. Quint, soprano, Syracuse; George R. Powers, trombonist, Ithaca, and Lanalee Litz, harpist, Syracuse, studying in Berkshire Music Center, pictured left to right. Miss Quint is in the opera department; Powers and Miss Litz play in the student orchestra.

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

MICKEY MANTLES are as rare in music as they are in baseball, but Tanglewood this season has a clarinet player named William Smith who can swing from both the jazz and classical sides of the plate.

Smith is spending the summer at the Music Center as a Fromm Fellowship player. This is a group of 11—a string quartet, a woodwind quintet, a pianist and a soprano—which performs for the students and gives one public concert a week. They play only modern music and they lead an extremely busy life, what with performing at the Sunday night composers' forums, playing the works of the neophyte composers during class sessions, illustrating the seminars on contemporary music, demonstrating and explaining their various musical instruments to the students and giving a regular Saturday afternoon concert for the Friends of the Music Center.

William Smith

* * *

THIS IS the first year for this unique group at Tanglewood, and Smith is extremely enthusiastic about the work being done. He feels that access to such a group would have aided immeasurably in his own training, and that schools and universities throughout the country should have similar setups to give demonstrations, counsel and teach students.

Bill Smith was born 31 years ago in Sacramento, Calif., but received his schooling in Oakland. He started clarinet lessons at the age of 10, and had his own small dance band through grammar and high school. Upon his graduation, he journeyed East for a year at Juilliard, and then returned to Oakland to study composition with Darius Milhaud at Mills College. Mills is strictly a woman's college, but a few men are let in for special courses from time to time to salt the diet.

Among the male students was a piano player named Dave Brubeck, and the two musicians became fast friends. They gathered together with some of the other students and formed a jazz octet which played several concerts in the area. Smith went on to the University of California in Berkeley from which he received his B. A. in 1950. He then continued his studies with Roger Sessions and received an M. A. degree in music in 1952.

* * *

THE HARD work started to pay off in 1951 when Smith won the Prix de Paris, which gave him a year's study of the clarinet at the Paris Conservatory. This was followed by the Phelan award for composition, a prize reserved for California composers, and just a few months ago Smith won the Prix de Rome which will set him up in that eternal city this fall and winter.

In between prizes, Smith taught at the San Francisco Conservatory for a year and then at the University of California in Berkeley before going over to the University of Southern California, from which institution he is now on a year's leave of absence. While both the prizes and the teaching jobs were going on, he found time to marry one of his female classmates at Mills College, and they have collaborated on three children, all still in a minor key.

* * *

SMITH FEELS at home in either the jazz or classical milieu, writing blues or string quartets with either hand. He says that the two types overlap sometimes in his compositions, but there is no strain, no bother, no fuss. He can turn out a Divertimento for Five Instruments for the Composers' Forum at Tanglewood as readily as the Divertimento for Six Jazz Instrumentalists which was recently recorded by Red Norvo on Contemporary Records. The clarinetist has also written a string quartet, a Suite for Violin and Clarinet, and a Capriccio for Violin and Piano, all of which have been recorded by Contemporary and will be released after the first of the year.

Smith not only composes in both the classical and jazz fields, but also plays a fine clarinet, which can be as formal or as improvisational as the occasion demands. He has a lovely tone and swings along beautifully, especially in the lower register. He can unslip his clarinet in a chamber music hall or a jazz joint without causing anyone to look askance.

* * *

YOU MIGHT say that he is a shining example of the modern jazz musician, a man trained in all types and capable of composing as well as reading music. The old-timers may shudder at these clean-living, studious youngsters, but nobody can deny the music they make. It's still the real thing. These men are bringing their jazz preferences into the sacred halls of the classical artists. A little more of the influence and next year you might see "Louis Armstrong and His Memphis 500" playing at Tanglewood on Parade with Danny Kaye conducting. The history books will probably say that the whole trend was started by a man who claimed his name was Bill Smith. And it was. Or rather, it is.

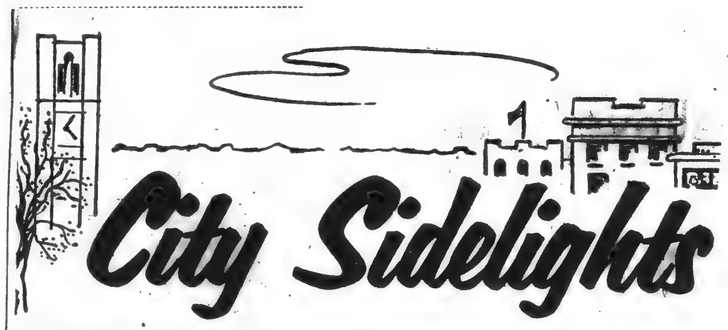
Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, Aug. 8, 1957—

Clark

JAPANESE CELLIST Takayori Atsumi, left, consults with Dean Ralph Berkowitz of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Mr. Atsumi plays in the student orchestra.

RALEIGH, N. C.
TIMES
Circ. D. 15,179

JUL 16 1957



BY THE WOMAN'S STAFF

We're always a wee bit overawed in the presence of real talent—an amazing admission, you'll admit, considering as how most newspaper people are more than in love with their own talents.

But on occasion, we find ourselves really smitten with the abilities of others. One such ability-laden Raleigh girl is Miss Anne Rothgeb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Rothgeb of Iredell Drive.

While she was here recently, Anne spent many hours pouring over 80 pages of the opera, "Hansel and Gretel," in which she will sing the role of Hansel at Tanglewood Massachusetts Berkshire music Camp. Singing Hansel, says Anne, will "help develop my low notes!"

She'll also have roles in "The Magic Flute" and "Idomeneo." While at Tanglewood, Anne will hob nob with musical greats like Boris Goldovsky, opera director, and Charles Munch, Boston Symphony Orchestra director.

Like all talented musicians, Anne will make a 'pilgrimage to Vienna. She sails Sept. 5 for that fairyland city to study voice at Vienna Academy of Music, armed with a Fulbright Scholarship.

Anne Rothgeb

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258

JUL 17 1957

Hungarian Musicians Study in Berkshires

LENOX, Mass. — Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer. Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Commitee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young women have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in western Massachusetts which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theatre and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 206,408 - S. 279,780

JUL 21 1957

Berkshire School Takes Refugees

LENOX, Mass. — Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer. Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in Western Massachusetts which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn,
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 9 - 1957

Hungarian Refugees Win Music Grants

Six Young Students Are At Berkshire Center

Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer. Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in western Massachusetts, which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theatre and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andras Darazs and Lajos Toth, both now living in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Festival Chorus and Tanglewood Choir this summer as students in the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, has spent the past winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship obtained through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21 year old pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center this summer, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. He has spent the past winter studying with Edouard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York.

The only woman member of the group to come to Tanglewood, Piroska Kellen, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department of the Music Center this summer. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group, 20 year old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster.

TIGHT BINDING

C118]

Six Hungarians Are Enrolled In Tanglewood Music Center

TANGLEWOOD—Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school, maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth are studying choral conducting and will sing in the festival chorus and Tanglewood choir this summer as students in the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Darazs received his education at the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest, from which he obtained the degree of conductor in 1944. From 1952-55, he directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he served as conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England.

Mr. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest from 1936 until 1942, studying composition, voice and violin. In 1951-52, he served as director of the chorus of the Association of Unions in Budapest. Subsequently, he led orchestras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild. Mr. Darazs and Mr. Toth are being introduced to American musical life at Tanglewood. They both appeared as conductors of the Tanglewood Choir at its first concert of the 1957 season, on Tuesday, July 16.

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, studied at the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1940 until 1952. In exile for three years, he returned to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, Mr. Sethy was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra. He has spent the past winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship obtained through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center this summer, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. He appeared several times as a guest soloist and with chamber groups on Radio Budapest, and spent the past winter studying with Edouard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York. He plans to continue his studies there after the close of the Berkshire Music Center's 1957 season.

One Woman in Group

The only woman of the group to come to Tanglewood, Piroska Kellen, sings in the festival chorus and studies in the choral department of the Music Center this summer. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group, 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. He attended the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1952-56 and won a prize for performance of a composition by Bartok. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster. Mr. Vas will return to Juilliard next winter.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 17 1957

Hungarians at Tanglewood

By the Associated Press

Lenox, Mass.

The Berkshire Music Center today announced the award of scholarships for study this season to six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came here after the revolution in their country last year. The center is supported by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth will study choral conducting and sing in the Tanglewood Festival Chorus and Choir.

Mr. Darazs received a degree in conducting from Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest and from 1952 to 1955 directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus. In 1956 he was conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring France, Italy, and England.

Mr. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest from 1936 until 1942, studying composition, voice and violin. In 1951-52, he served as director of the chorus of the Association of Unions in Budapest. Subsequently, he led orchestras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild. Mr. Darazs and Mr. Toth are being introduced to American musical life at Tanglewood. They both appeared as conductors of the Tanglewood Choir at its first concert of the 1957 season, on Tuesday, July 16.

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, studied at the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1940 until 1952. In exile for three years, he returned to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, Mr. Sethy was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra. He has spent the past winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship obtained through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center this summer, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. He appeared several times as a guest soloist and with chamber groups on Radio Budapest, and has spent the past winter studying with Edouard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York. He plans to continue his studies there after the close of the Berkshire Music Center's 1957 season at the end of the summer.

Only Woman Member

The only woman member of the group to come to Tanglewood is Piroska Kellen, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department of the Music Center this summer. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary since graduating from the Franz Liszt Liszt Academy of Music. She intends to follow a career as an opera singer. Youngest member of the group is George Alexander Vas, 20, a pianist, who won a prize for performance of a composition by Bartok while a student at the Bartok Conservatory in Budapest. He is enrolled in Juilliard.

Here and there: Jane Petta of the Petta Academy School and Petta Music Center has been in attendance at a meeting of the board of the American Accordionists Association at the Palmer House, Chicago. She has been helping with the educating more than 1,000 accordionists in a national contest. Lane Technical High School . . . This is the largest enrollment such contests, to date. . . . also attends the annual convention of the Music Trade and Manufacturers . . . Mrs. Harland O. Potter (Ruth Hindon) have been in New Seabury, Mass., and on Cape Cod during the day. In Hyannis, Mrs. Potter visited her voice pupil, Donald Sanders, baritone, who is spending all summer in Melody Mr. and Mrs. Potter spent a week in Henderson Harbor before going to New England. Mrs. Potter is organist and choir director of Erwin Methodist Church.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411
JUL 17 1957

Six Hungarian Refugee Students Attending Berkshire Music Center

Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution last October, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood at Lenox.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one woman have resumed their careers in this country and are spending the Summer at the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth, both now living in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Festival Chorus and Tanglewood Choir.

Erno Sethy is a student of orchestral conducting and has spent the past Winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman is a 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department. He has been studying with Eduoard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York.

The only woman member of the group is Piroska Kellen, who sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past Winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group is 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.,
WEDNESDAY, JULY 17, 1957

Hungarian Musicians Study At Berkshire Music Center

Refugees Fleeing to U. S. After Revolution in Native Land Awarded Scholarships at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 16—Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer.

From Refugee Camps

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in Western Massachusetts which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth, both now living in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Festival Chorus and Tanglewood Choir this summer as students in the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Darazs received his education at the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest, from which he obtained the degree of conductor in 1944. From 1952-55, he directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he served as conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England.

Studied In Budapest

Mr. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest from 1936 until 1942, studying composition, voice and violin. In 1951-52, he served as director of the chorus of the Association of Unions in Budapest. Subsequently, he led orchestras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild. Mr. Darazs and Mr. Toth are being introduced to American musical life at Tanglewood. They both appeared as conductors of the Tanglewood Choir at its first concert of the 1957 season, on Tuesday, July 16.

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, studied at the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1940 until 1952. In exile for three years, he returned to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, Mr. Sethy was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra. He has spent the past winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship obtained through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center this summer, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. He appeared several times as a guest soloist and with chamber groups on Radio Budapest, and has spent the past winter studying with Edouard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York. He plans to continue his studies there after the close of the Berkshire Music Center's 1957 season at the end of the summer.

Only Woman Member

The only woman member of the group to come to Tanglewood is Piroska Kellen, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department of the Music Center this summer. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group, 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. He attended the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1952-56 and won a prize for performance of a composition by Bartok. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster. Mr. Vas will return to Juilliard next winter.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012
JUL 20 1957

6 Hungarian Refugees Win Tanglewood Scholarships

SIX young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last Winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this Summer.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman are spending the Summer at the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth are studying choral conducting. From 1952-5, Mr. Darazs directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he was conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England. Mr. Toth led various orchestras and choruses. Both conducted the Tanglewood Choir Tuesday.

The four others, who have studied at the Juilliard School of Music since arrival in this country, are Erno Sethy, student of orchestral conducting who in 1955 was accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra; Gabor Neuman, pianist who appeared as soloist or with chamber groups on Radio Budapest; Miss Piroska Kellen, who gave numerous concerts in Hungary and plans an operatic career; and George Alexander Vas, another pianist who won a prize for performance of a Bartok composition at the Bartok Conservatory in Budapest.

TALKING IT OVE

Hungarian Musicians Study In Berkshire Music Center

Syracuse Herald-American 7/18/57

By Emma Van Wormer

Awarded scholarships for study in Berkshire Center, six young Hungarian refugees who came United States following the revolution in their nativ last winter, are in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., season.

The five men and one woman were taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to this country through efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society. The Aid to Hungarian Artists program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled the six to continue their studies in the States.

Lajos Toth and Arpad Andreas Daraze, who now live in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Berkshire Festival Chorus and the Tanglewood Choir as summer students. Daraze has a degree in conducting from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest and conducted a Hungarian troup touring France, Italy and England. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest, studying composition, voice and violin. Both he and Daraze appeared as conductors of the Tanglewood Choir last night at its first concert of the 1957 season.

Erno Sethy studied in the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest. In exile three years, he returned to Budapest to complete studies in the Conservatory of Music. On arrival in New York he studied with Mme. Rosa Lhevinne in the Juilliard School of Music, where he obtained a full scholarship through efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21, pianist in the Berkshire Music Center chamber music department, received a diploma, with honors, in the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest. He will continue studies with Edouard Steuermann in Juilliard at the close of the Berkshire season.

Piroska Kellen, only woman in the group of six, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the Choral Department. She has given numerous concerts in Hungary since graduating from the Franiz Lisazt Liszt Academy of Music. She intends to follow a career as an opera singer. Youngest member of the group is George Alexander Vas, 20, a pianist, who won a prize for performance of a composition by Bartok while a student at the Bartok Conservatory in Budapest. He is enrolled in Juilliard.

Here and there: Jane Petta of the Petta Academy School and Petta Music Center has been in attendance at a meeting of the board of the American Accordionists Association at the Palmer House, Chicago. She has been helping with the educating more than 1,000 accordionists in a national contest. Lane Technical High School . . . This is the largest enrollment such contests, to date. . . . also attends the annual convention of the Music Trade and Manufacturers . . . Mrs. Harland O. Potter (Ruth Hindon) have been in New Seabury, Mass., and on Cape Cod during the day. In Hyannis, Mrs. Potter visited her voice pupil, Donald Sanders, baritone, who is spending all summer in Melody Mr. and Mrs. Potter spent a week in Henderson Harbor before going to New England. Mrs. Potter is organist and choir director of Erwin Methodist Church.

TIGHT BINDING

(1182)

4—The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, July 16, 1957

Six Hungarians Are Enrolled In Tanglewood Music Center

TANGLEWOOD—Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school, maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth are studying choral conducting and will sing in the festival chorus and Tanglewood choir this summer as students in the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Darazs received his education at the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest, from which he obtained the degree of conductor in 1944. From 1952-55, he directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he served as conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England.

Mr. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest from 1936 until 1942, studying composition, voice and violin. In 1951-52, he served as director of the chorus of the Association of Unions in Budapest. Subsequently, he led orchestras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild. Mr. Darazs and Mr. Toth are being introduced to American musical life at Tanglewood.

Exiled Three Years

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, studied at the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1940 until 1952. In exile for three years, he returned to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, Mr. Sethy was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra. He has spent the past winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship obtained through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center this summer, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. He appeared several times as a guest soloist and with chamber groups on Radio Budapest, and spent the past winter studying with Edouard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York. He plans to continue his studies there after the close of the Berkshire Music Center's 1957 season.

One Woman in Group

The only woman of the group to come to Tanglewood, Piroska Kellen, sings in the festival chorus and studies in the choral department of the Music Center this summer. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group, 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. He attended the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1952-56 and won a prize for performance of a composition by Bartok. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster. Mr. Vas will return to Juilliard next winter.

...at Tanglewood

...er of ...scholarships for study this season to six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came here after the revolution in their country last year. The center is supported by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth will study choral conducting and sing in the Tanglewood Festival Chorus and Choir.

Mr. Darazs received a degree in conducting from Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest and from 1952 to 1955 directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus. In 1956 he was conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring France, Italy, and England.

Mr. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest, studying composition, voice, and violin. He was director of the chorus of the Association of Unions in Budapest and led orchestras in Budapest.

Erno Sethy will study orchestral conducting. He studied at the Béla Bartók Conservatory, Budapest, and was accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra.

Gabor Neuman will study chamber music. He was graduated from Franz Liszt Academy and appeared as pianist with chamber groups on Radio Budapest.

George Alexaander Vas also will study piano chamber music. He attended Béla Bartók Conservatory and won a prize for a performance of a composition by Bartók. At 20 he is the youngest member of the group.

The only woman member selected for scholarship at Tanglewood is Piroska Kellen, who will study in the center's choral department. She was graduated from Franz Liszt Academy and has given numerous concerts in Hungary.

...Refugee Students ...shire Music Center

...ians, ...nited ... last

October, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood at Lenox.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one woman have resumed their careers in this country and are spending the Summer at the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth, both now living in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Festival Chorus and Tanglewood Choir.

Erno Sethy is a student of orchestral conducting and has spent the past Winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman is a 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department. He has been studying with Eduoard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York.

The only woman member of the group is Piroska Kellen, who sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past Winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group is 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.,

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17, 1957

Hungarian Musicians Study At Berkshire Music Center

Refugees Fleeing to U. S. After Revolution in Native Land Awarded Scholarships at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 16—Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer.

From Refugee Camps

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in Western Massachusetts which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth, both now living in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Festival Chorus and Tanglewood Choir this summer as students in the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Darazs received his education at the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest, from which he obtained the degree of conductor in 1944. From 1952-55, he directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he served as conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England.

Studied In Budapest

Mr. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest from 1936 until 1942, studying composition, voice and violin. In 1951-52, he served as director of the chorus of the Association of Unions in Budapest. Subsequently, he led orchestras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild. Mr. Darazs and Mr. Toth are being introduced to American musical life at Tanglewood. They both appeared as conductors of the Tanglewood Choir at its first concert of the 1957 season, on Tuesday, July 16.

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, studied at the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1940 until 1952. In exile for three years, he returned to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, Mr. Sethy was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra. He has spent the past winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship obtained through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center this summer, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. He appeared several times as a guest soloist and with chamber groups on Radio Budapest, and has spent the past winter studying with Edouard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York. He plans to continue his studies there after the close of the Berkshire Music Center's 1957 season at the end of the summer.

Only Woman Member

The only woman member of the group to come to Tanglewood is Piroska Kellen, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department of the Music Center this summer. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group, 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. He attended the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1952-56 and won a prize for performance of a composition by Bartok. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster. Mr. Vas will return to Juilliard next winter.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

JUL 20 1957

6 Hungarian Refugees Win Tanglewood Scholarships

SIX young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last Winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this Summer.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman are spending the Summer at the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth are studying choral conducting. From 1952-5, Mr. Darazs directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he was conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England. Mr. Toth led various orchestras and choruses. Both conducted the Tanglewood Choir Tuesday.

The four others, who have studied at the Juilliard School of Music since arrival in this country, are Erno Sethy, student of orchestral conducting who in 1955 was accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra; Gabor Neuman, pianist who appeared as soloist or with chamber groups on Radio Budapest; Miss Piroska Kellen, who gave numerous concerts in Hungary and plans an operatic career; and George Alexander Vas, another pianist who won a prize for performance of a Bartok composition at the Bartok Conservatory in Budapest.

TALKING IT OVE...

Hungarian Musicians Study... In Berkshire Music Center

Syracuse Herald-American 7/18/57

By Emma Van Wormer

Awarded scholarships for study in Berkshire... Center, six young Hungarian refugees who came... United States following the revolution in their nati... last winter, are in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., ... season.

The five men and one woman were taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to this country through efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society. The Aid to Hungarian Artists program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled the six to continue their studies in the States.

Lajos Toth and Arpad Andreas Daraze, who now live in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Berkshire Festival Chorus and the Tanglewood Choir as summer students. Daraze has a degree in conducting from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest and conducted a Hungarian troup touring France, Italy and England. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest, studying composition, voice and violin. Both he and Daraze appeared as conductors of the Tanglewood Choir last night at its first concert of the 1957 season.

Erno Sethy studied in the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest. In exile three years, he returned to Budapest to complete studies in the Conservatory of Music. On arrival in New York he studied with Mme. Rosa Lhevinne in the Juilliard School of Music, where he obtained a full scholarship through efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21, pianist in the Berkshire Music Center chamber music department, received a diploma, with honors, in the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest. He will continue studies with Edouard Steuermann in Juilliard at the close of the Berkshire season.

Piroska Kellen, only woman in the group of six, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the Choral Department. She has given numerous concerts in Hungary since graduating from the Franz Lisazt Liszt Academy of Music. She intends to follow a career as an opera singer. Youngest member of the group is George Alexander Vas, 20, a pianist, who won a prize for performance of a ... Bartok while a student ... Bartok Conservatory ... pest. He is enrolled in ...

Here and there: ... Petta of the Petta ... School and Petta Music ... been in attendance at ... ing of the board of ... can Accordionists Asso... the Palmer House, Chi... has been helping with ... cating more than 1,0... dionists in a national ... Lane Technical High ... This is the largest ... such contests, to be ... also attends the ... vention of the Music ... and Manufacturers ... Mrs. Harland O. Pr... Hindon) have been in ... Mass., and on Cape Cod ... day. In Hyannis, Mrs. ... visited her voice pupil ... Sanders, baritone, who ... ing all summer in Mel... Mr. and Mrs. Potter ... week in Henderson Ha... fore going to New Engl... Potter is organist and ... rector of Erwin Me... Church.

...arian Wo...
...pad A. Darozs
...mer Resident
...k Mountain
...st Dec. ... when ... Darozs and her ... re making their ... oss the Hungar... ustria, they had ... g that less than ... they would be ... a restaurant in ... cussing favorite ... s with a food ... I would be so ... think I would ... s. Darozs admit... ungarian village ... t 7 and were in ... ut it was a very ... ozs and her hus... at Tanglewood, ... ir three children ... ttage at South ... summer. If by ... rt-goers at South ... iff of some delici... ey drive up the ... well be from the ... ozs prepares the ... arian dishes be... nily. She has not ... stigate American ... and quickly de... baked goods the ... Crocker and Pills... ets have her enthusias... val. ... er Singer ... gary, where her husband ... leader of the Hungarian ... orus and conductor of the ... n Folk Troupe Chorus and ..., Mrs. Darozs had little ... cooking as she was a ... ften working all day and ... he evening. ... 't cook much until I came ... he said in very good Eng... t if I cook I like to cook ... good." ... f her favorite recipes use ... Probably one of the best ... Hungarian dishes is chick... rika. Hungarian paprika, ... in very short supply in the ... s of a slightly different ... d is hotter than the Span... California paprika, general... icken paprika, Mrs. Darozs ... ops three big onions and ... hem in fat, stirring all the ... til they get brown. She ... s one or two sliced green ... and cooks them until they ... Three teaspoons of red ... more if you wish a richer ... re added, the whole mix... tirred to blend and then ...

...ad Newsclip Agency, Inc. ... Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

...vish Advocate ... OSTON, Mas... Indep... Circ. 26,550

... 18 1957

...rian Musicians ... at Berkshire

...oung Hungarian musi... refugees who came to ...ted States after the ...on in their native land ...er, have been awarded ...ips for study at the ...e Music Center in ...ood, Lenox, Mass., this ... from refugee camps ...ia and brought to the ... States through the ef... the International Res... mittee and the Hebrew ...nt Aid Society, the five ...d one young woman ...sumed their musical ...n this country and are ... the summer at the ...hool in western Mas... s which is maintained ... Boston Symphony Or... ...id to Hungarian Art... ...ram of the American ... Theater and Academy ...led them to continue ...udies in the United (1182)

4—The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, July 16, 1957

Six Hungarians Are Enrolled In Tanglewood Music Center

TANGLEWOOD—Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school, maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth are studying choral conducting and will sing in the festival chorus and Tanglewood choir this summer as students in the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Darazs received his education at the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest, from which he obtained the degree of conductor in 1944. From 1952-55, he directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he served as conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England.

Mr. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest from 1936 until 1942, studying composition, voice and violin. In 1951-52, he served as director of the chorus of the Association of Unions in Budapest. Subsequently, he led orchestras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild. Mr. Darazs and Mr. Toth are being introduced to American musical life at Tanglewood.

Exiled Three Years

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, studied at the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1940 until 1952. In exile for three years, he returned to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, Mr. Sethy was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra. He has spent the past winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship obtained through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center this summer, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. He appeared several times as a guest soloist and with chamber groups on Radio Budapest, and spent the past winter studying with Edouard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York. He plans to continue his studies there after the close of the Berkshire Music Center's 1957 season.

One Woman in Group

The only woman of the group to come to Tanglewood, Piroska Kellen, sings in the festival chorus and studies in the choral department of the Music Center this summer. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group, 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. He attended the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1952-56 and won a prize for performance of a composition by Bartok. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster. Mr. Vas will return to Juilliard next winter.

at Tanglewood

er of scholarships for study this season to six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came here after the revolution in their country last year. The center is supported by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth will study choral conducting and sing in the Tanglewood Festival Chorus and Choir.

Mr. Darazs received a degree in conducting from Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest and from 1952 to 1955 directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus. In 1956 he was conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring France, Italy, and England.

Mr. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest, studying composition, voice, and violin. He was director of the chorus of the Association of Unions in Budapest and led orchestras in Budapest.

Erno Sethy will study orchestral conducting. He studied at the Béla Bartók Conservatory, Budapest, and was accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra.

Gabor Neuman will study chamber music. He was graduated from Franz Liszt Academy and appeared as pianist with chamber groups on Radio Budapest.

Georgs Alexaander Vas also will study piano chamber music. He attended Béla Bartók Conservatory and won a prize for a performance of a composition by Bartók. At 20 he is the youngest member of the group.

The only woman member selected for scholarship at Tanglewood is Piroska Kellen, who will study in the center's choral department. She was graduated from Franz Liszt Academy and has given numerous concerts in Hungary.

Refugee Students ...shire Music Center

...ians, ...nited ... last

October, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood at Lenox.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one woman have resumed their careers in this country and are spending the Summer at the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth, both now living in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Festival Chorus and Tanglewood Choir.

Erno Sethy is a student of orchestral conducting and has spent the past Winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman is a 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department. He has been studying with Eduoard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York.

The only woman member of the group is Piroska Kellen, who sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past Winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group is 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.,
WEDNESDAY, JULY 17, 1957

Hungarian Musicians Study At Berkshire Music Center

Refugees Fleeing to U. S. After Revolution in Native Land Awarded Scholarships at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 16—Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer.

From Refugee Camps

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in Western Massachusetts which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth, both now living in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Festival Chorus and Tanglewood Choir this summer as students in the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Darazs received his education at the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest, from which he obtained the degree of conductor in 1944. From 1952-55, he directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he served as conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England.

Studied In Budapest

Mr. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest from 1936 until 1942, studying composition, voice and violin. In 1951-52, he served as director of the chorus of the Association of Unions in Budapest. Subsequently, he led orchestras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild. Mr. Darazs and Mr. Toth are being introduced to American musical life at Tanglewood. They both appeared as conductors of the Tanglewood Choir at its first concert of the 1957 season, on Tuesday, July 16.

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, studied at the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1940 until 1952. In exile for three years, he returned to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, Mr. Sethy was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra. He has spent the past winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship obtained through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center this summer, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. He appeared several times as a guest soloist and with chamber groups on Radio Budapest, and has spent the past winter studying with Edouard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York. He plans to continue his studies there after the close of the Berkshire Music Center's 1957 season at the end of the summer.

Only Woman Member

The only woman member of the group to come to Tanglewood, Piroska Kellen, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department of the Music Center this summer. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group, 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. He attended the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1952-56 and won a prize for performance of a composition by Bartok. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster. Mr. Vas will return to Juilliard next winter.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

JUL 20 1957

6 Hungarian Refugees Win Tanglewood Scholarships

SIX young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last Winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this Summer.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman are spending the Summer at the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth are studying choral conducting. From 1952-5, Mr. Darazs directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he was conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England. Mr. Toth led various orchestras and choruses. Both conducted the Tanglewood Choir Tuesday.

The four others, who have studied at the Juilliard School of Music since arrival in this country, are Erno Sethy, student of orchestral conducting who in 1955 was accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra; Gabor Neuman, pianist who appeared as soloist or with chamber groups on Radio Budapest; Miss Piroska Kellen, who gave numerous concerts in Hungary and plans an operatic career; and George Alexander Vas, another pianist who won a prize for performance of a Bartok composition at the Bartok Conservatory in Budapest.

TALKING IT OVE...

Hungarian Musicians Study In Berkshire Music Center

Syracuse Herald-American 7/18/57

By Emma Van Wormer

Awarded scholarships for study in Berkshire Center, six young Hungarian refugees who came United States following the revolution in their na... last winter, are in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., ... season.

The five men and one woman were taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to this country through efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society. The Aid to Hungarian Artists program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled the six to continue their studies in the States.

Lajos Toth and Arpad Andreas Daraze, who now live in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Berkshire Festival Chorus and the Tanglewood Choir as summer students. Daraze has a degree in conducting from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest and conducted a Hungarian troup touring France, Italy and England. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest, studying composition, voice and violin. Both he and Daraze appeared as conductors of the Tanglewood Choir last night at its first concert of the 1957 season.

Erno Sethy studied in the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest. In exile three years, he returned to Budapest to complete studies in the Conservatory of Music. On arrival in New York he studied with Mme. Rosa Lhevinne in the Juilliard School of Music, where he obtained a full scholarship through efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21, pianist in the Berkshire Music Center chamber music department, received a diploma, with honors, in the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest. He will continue studies with Edouard Steuermann at Juilliard at the close of the Berkshire season.

Piroska Kellen, only woman in the group of six, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the Choral Department. She has given numerous concerts in Hungary since graduating from the Franz Lisazt Liszt Academy of Music. She intends to follow a career as an opera singer. Youngest member of the group is George Alexander Vas, 20, a pianist, who won a prize for performance of a ... Bartok while a student ... Bartok Conservatory ... pest. He is enrolled in ...

Here and there: ... Petta of the Petta ... School and Petta Music ... been in attendance at ... ing of the board of ... can Accordionists Asso... the Palmer House, Chi... has been helping wi... cating more than 1,... dionists in a national ... Lane Technical High ... This is the largest ... such contests, to ... also attends the ... vention of the Music ... and Manufacturers ... Mrs. Harland O. Pet... Hindon) have been in ... Mass., and on Cape Cod ... day. In Hyannis, Mrs. ... visited her voice pupil ... Sanders, baritone, who ... ing all summer in Mexi... Mr. and Mrs. Potter ... week in Henderson Har... fore going to New Engl... Potter is organist and ... rector of Erwin Me... Church.

...ad Newsclip Agency, Inc.
...oston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

...rish Advocate
...OSTON, Ma...
Indep
Circ. 26,550

THE ...

...18 1957

...rian Musicians ... at Berkshire

...oung Hungarian mus... ...efugees who came t... ...ited States after the ... ...on in their native land ... ...ter, have been awarded ... ...ips for study at the ... ...e Music Center in ... ...ood, Lenox, Mass., this ...

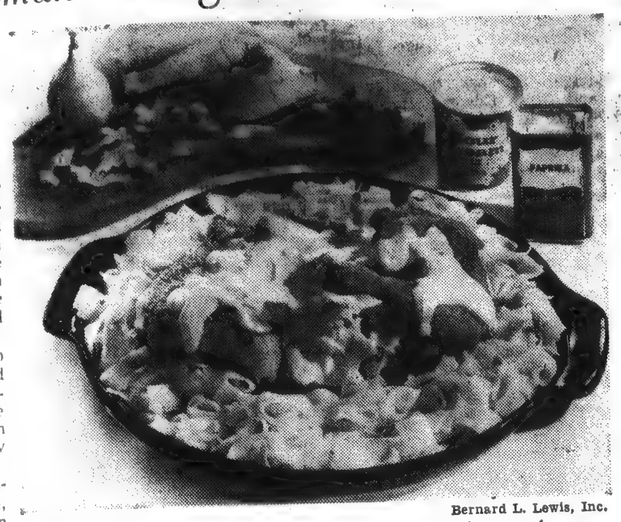
... from refugee camps ... ...ia and brought to the ... States through the ef... the International Res... ...mittee and the Hebrew ... ...nt Aid Society the five ... ...d one young woman ... ...sumed their musical ... ...n this country and are ... the summer at the ... ...chool in western Mas... ...ts which is maintained ... Boston Symphony Or...

...id to Hungarian Art... ...ram of the American ... Theater and Academy ... ...bled them to continue ... ...udies in the United

Hungarian Woman Living Here Tells of Her National Dishes

Mrs. Arpad A. Darozs Is a Summer Resident At South Mountain

Paprika Is Used In Most of Her Chicken Recipes



Bernard L. Lewis, Inc.

Chicken paprika or Paprika Csirke is one of most famous dishes of Hungary. Mixture of black pepper and paprika gives true Magyar flavor. Served with noodles, sour cream.

On the night of last Dec. 2, when Mrs. Arpad A. Darozs and her daughter, Judy, were making their frightened way across the Hungarian border into Austria, they had no way of knowing that less than ten months later they would be calmly sitting in a restaurant in this country discussing favorite Hungarian recipes with a food writer.

"If I had known I would be so frightened I don't think I would have done it," Mrs. Darozs admitted. "We left the Hungarian village near the border at 7 and were in Austria at 8:45, but it was a very long time."

Blond Mrs. Darozs and her husband, a student at Tanglewood, are living with their three children in Apple Tree Cottage at South Mountain for the summer. If by any chance concert-goers at South Mountain get a whiff of some delicious cooking as they drive up the mountain, it may well be from the Darozs' kitchen.

Here Mrs. Darozs prepares the traditional Hungarian dishes beloved by her family. She has not neglected to investigate American dishes, however, and quickly declares that for baked goods the premixed Betty Crocker and Pillsbury products have her enthusiastic approval.

A Former Singer

In Hungary, where her husband was the leader of the Hungarian Radio Chorus and conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, Mrs. Darozs had little time for cooking as she was a singer, often working all day and on into the evening.

"I didn't cook much until I came here," she said in very good English, "but if I cook I like to cook something good."

Most of her favorite recipes use chicken. Probably one of the best-known of Hungarian dishes is chicken paprika. Hungarian paprika, which is in very short supply in the states, is of a slightly different flavor and is hotter than the Spanish or California paprika generally used.

For chicken paprika, Mrs. Darozs finely chops three big onions and sautes them in fat, stirring all the time until they get brown. She then adds one or two sliced green peppers and cooks them until they darken. Three teaspoons of red paprika, more if you wish a richer color, are added, the whole mixture is stirred to blend and then is removed from the heat. In a prior step a cleaned chicken has been cut up and now is added to the mixture which is returned to the heat. The chicken is stirred for two or three minutes and then water is added to cover the chicken. Salt to taste and cook over low heat until the chicken is tender.

Another favorite chicken recipe is for Rantott Csirke or fried chicken. Here is her rule. A cut-up chicken is rolled in a mixture of flour, two slightly beaten eggs and breadcrumbs, then placed in a deep pot of hot fat and cooked covered until browned on both sides. It should be turned from time to time to hasten browning.

Thrifty Chicken Stew

The following chicken recipe is very thrifty as the stock is drained off and served with egg noodles as a first course. The chicken is then served ringed with the vegetables.

A whole, cleaned chicken is placed in a deep pot together with whole carrots (about one package is sufficient for five servings) a bunch of celery, cleaned but left in stalks, one green pepper, one or two tomatoes, cleaned but not cut up, three teaspoons of black peppercorns, one whole onion with only the outside skin removed, two or three cloves of garlic and salt. The pot is then filled with water and the stew left to cook over a low heat until the chicken is soft and tender. Water may need to be added and the seasoning corrected before serving.

The neck, gizzard and liver of a chicken are utilized in another dish that features canned or frozen green beans. The aforementioned parts of from two to four chickens are cooked in water for a short time. Fat (Mrs. Darozs likes lard or salt pork but any shortening may be used) is stirred in with enough flour to make a thin, easily stirred mixture. When the chicken is almost browned, a little paprika is added for color. The mixture is removed from the heat and enough water added to give a sauce-like consistency. Then two cans of sweet green beans are added. The chicken parts are removed, the dish brought to the boiling point and then home-made noodles are dropped in bit by bit and the soup is salted to taste before serving. To make the noodles, enough flour is added to one unbeaten egg to make one cup. The mixture is slowly stirred with a teaspoon until it is thick and smooth. It is then added drop by drop to the soup.

One other Hungarian, or as the former singer says, half Hungarian, half-American, dish is for macaroni with ham.

One package of elbow macaroni is cooked in salted water. To this is added six slices of chopped cooked ham, one and a half sticks of butter and half a cup of grated cheddar cheese, one and a [illegible] mayonnaise and a half cup of sour cream. The mixture is stirred together, and when the noodles are cooked, the mixture in transferred to a casserole dish, barely covered with breadcrumbs and dotted with about a half-stick of butter. It is baked in a 350 degree oven for 25 minutes and served with dobs of sour cream on top.

For a woman who did so little cooking in her native land, Mrs. Darozs certainly achieves some culinary masterpieces in her South Mountain cottage kitchen.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 17 1957

Six Hungarians Are Studying At Tanglewood, One Woman

Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer.

From Refugee Camps

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in western Massachusetts which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth are studying choral conducting. From 1952-5, Mr. Darazs directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he was conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England. Mr. Toth led various orchestras and choruses. Both conducted the Tanglewood Choir Tuesday.

The four others, who have studied at the Juilliard School of Music since arrival in this country, are Erno Sethy, student of orchestral conducting who in 1955 was accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra; Gabor Neuman, pianist who appeared as soloist or with chamber groups on Radio Budapest; Miss Piroska Kellen, who gave numerous concerts in Hungary and plans an operatic career; and George Alexander Vas, another pianist who won a prize for performance of a Bartok composition at the Bartok Conservatory in Budapest.

[illegible] three years, he returned to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, Mr. Sethy was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra. He has spent the past winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship obtained through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neuman, 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center this summer received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. He appeared several times as a guest soloist and with chamber groups on Radio Budapest, and has spent the past winter studying with Edouard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York. He plans to continue his studies there after the close of the Berkshire Music Center's 1957 season at the end of the summer.

Only Woman Member

The only woman member of the group to come to Tanglewood, Piroska Kellen, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department of the Music Center this summer. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group, 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. He attended the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1952-56 and won a prize for performance of a composition by Bartok. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster. Mr. Vas will return to Juilliard next winter.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 21 1957

SIX HUNGARIAN MUSICIANS AT MUSIC CENTER

Refugees at Tanglewood On Scholarships for Summer

Lenox, July 30—Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, this summer. Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in western Massachusetts maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

One Woman in Group

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth, both now living in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Festival Chorus and Tanglewood Choir this summer from 1952-55, directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he served as conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England. Toth has led orchestras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild.

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conductung here, was in exile for three years, returning to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, he was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra.

Gabor Neuman, 21-year old pianist in the chamber music department, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. The youngest member of the group 21-year-old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department.

The only woman member of the group to come to Tanglewood, Piroska Kellen, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
370 Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, M[illegible]
[illegible] Inde[illegible]
Circ. 26,550

JUL 18 1957

Hungarian Musicians Study at Berkshire

Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last Winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this Summer.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman are spending the Summer at the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth are studying choral

6 Hungarian Refugees Win Tanglewood Scholarships

SIX young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last Winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this Summer.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman are spending the Summer at the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth are studying choral conducting. From 1952-5, Mr. Darazs directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he was conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England. Mr. Toth led various orchestras and choruses. Both conducted the Tanglewood Choir Tuesday.

The four others, who have studied at the Juilliard School of Music since arrival in this country, are Erno Sethy, student of orchestral conducting who in 1955 was accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra; Gabor Neuman, pianist who appeared as soloist or with chamber groups on Radio Budapest; Miss Piroska Kellen, who gave numerous concerts in Hungary and plans an operatic career; and George Alexander Vas, another pianist who won a prize for performance of a Bartok composition at the Bartok Conservatory in Budapest.

[illegible]ied by the [illegible]estra. The [illegible]s Program [illegible]al Theatre [illegible]ed them to [illegible] the United [illegible] and Lajos [illegible] the vicin[illegible]ring choral [illegible] in the Fes[illegible]wood Choir [illegible]nts in the [illegible] Berkshire [illegible]s received [illegible]ranz Liszt [illegible]rom which [illegible] of conduc[illegible], he direct[illegible]lio Chorus [illegible]ed as con[illegible]rian Folk [illegible]estra, tour[illegible] Italy and [illegible] Academy [illegible] from 1936 [illegible]omposition, [illegible] 1951-52, he [illegible] the chorus [illegible] Unions in [illegible] he led or[illegible]estras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild. Mr. Darazs and Mr. Toth are being introduced to American musical life at Tanglewood. They both appeared as conductors of the Tanglewood Choir at its first concert of the 1957 season last night.

Student of Conducting

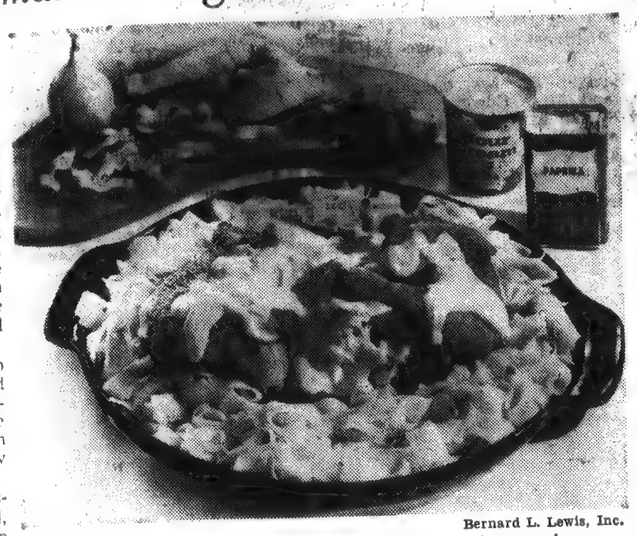
Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, studied at the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1940 until 1952. In exile for

C1197

Hungarian Woman Living Here Tells of Her National Dishes

Mrs. Arpad A. Darozs Is a Summer Resident At South Mountain

Paprika Is Used In Most of Her Chicken Recipes



Bernard L. Lewis, Inc.

Chicken paprika or Paprika Csirke is one of most famous dishes of Hungary. Mixture of black pepper and paprika gives true Magyar flavor. Served with noodles, sour cream.

On the night of last Dec. 2, when Mrs. Arpad A. Darozs and her daughter, Judy, were making their frightened way across the Hungarian border into Austria, they had no way of knowing that less than ten months later they would be calmly sitting in a restaurant in this country discussing favorite Hungarian recipes with a food writer.

"If I had known I would be so frightened I don't think I would have done it," Mrs. Darozs admitted. "We left the Hungarian village near the border at 7 and were in Austria at 8:45, but it was a very long time."

Blond Mrs. Darozs and her husband, a student at Tanglewood, are living with their three children in Apple Tree Cottage at South Mountain for the summer. If by any chance concert-goers at South Mountain get a whiff of some delicious cooking as they drive up the mountain, it may well be from the Darozs' kitchen.

Here Mrs. Darozs prepares the traditional Hungarian dishes beloved by her family. She has not neglected to investigate American dishes, however, and quickly declares that for baked goods the premixed Betty Crocker and Pillsbury products have her enthusiastic approval.

A Former Singer

In Hungary, where her husband was the leader of the Hungarian Radio Chorus and conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, Mrs. Darozs had little time for cooking as she was a singer, often working all day and on into the evening.

"I didn't cook much until I came here," she said in very good English, "but if I cook I like to cook something good."

Most of her favorite recipes use chicken. Probably one of the best-known of Hungarian dishes is chicken paprika. Hungarian paprika, which is in very short supply in the states, is of a slightly different flavor and is hotter than the Spanish or California paprika generally used.

For chicken paprika, Mrs. Darozs finely chops three big onions and sautes them in fat, stirring all the time until they get brown. She then adds one or two sliced green peppers and cooks them until they darken. Three teaspoons of red paprika, more if you wish a richer color, are added, the whole mixture is stirred to blend and then is removed from the heat. In a prior step a cleaned chicken has been cut up and now is added to the mixture which is returned to the heat. The chicken is stirred for two or three minutes and then water is added to cover the chicken. Salt to taste and cook over low heat until the chicken is tender.

Another favorite chicken recipe is for Rantott Csirke or fried chicken. Here is her rule. A cut-up chicken is rolled in a mixture of flour, two slightly beaten eggs and breadcrumbs, then placed in a deep pot of hot fat and cooked covered until browned on both sides. It should be turned from time to time to hasten browning.

Thrifty Chicken Stew

The following chicken recipe is very thrifty as the stock is drained off and served with egg noodles as a first course. The chicken is then served ringed with the vegetables.

A whole, cleaned chicken is placed in a deep pot together with whole carrots (about one package is sufficient for five servings) a bunch of celery, cleaned but left in stalks, one green pepper, one or two tomatoes, cleaned but not cut up, three teaspoons of black peppercorns, one whole onion with only the outside skin removed, two or three cloves of garlic and salt. The pot is then filled with water and the stew left to cook over a low heat until the chicken is soft and tender. Water may need to be added and the seasoning corrected before serving.

The neck, gizzard and liver of a chicken are utilized in another dish that features canned or frozen green beans. The aforementioned parts of from two to four chickens are cooked in water for a short time. Fat (Mrs. Darozs likes lard or salt pork but any shortening may be used) is stirred in with enough flour to make a thin, easily stirred mixture. When the chicken is almost browned, a little paprika is added for color. The mixture is removed from the heat and enough water added to give a sauce-like consistency. Then two cans of sweet green beans are removed, the dish brought to the boiling point and then home-made noodles are dropped in bit by bit and the soup is salted to taste before serving. To make the noodles, enough flour is added to one unbeaten egg to make one cup. The mixture is slowly stirred with a teaspoon until it is thick and smooth. It is then added drop by drop to the soup.

One other Hungarian, or as the former singer says, half Hungarian, half-American, dish is for macaroni with ham.

One package of elbow macaroni is cooked in salted water. To this is added six slices of chopped cooked ham, one and a half sticks of butter and half a cup of grated cheddar cheese, one and a half cups mayonnaise and a half cup of sour cream. The mixture is stirred together, and when the noodles are cooked, the mixture is transferred to a casserole dish, barely covered with breadcrumbs and dotted with about a half-stick of butter. It is baked in a 350 degree oven for 25 minutes and served with dobs of sour cream on top.

For a woman who did so little cooking in her native land, Mrs. Darozs certainly achieves some culinary masterpieces in her South Mountain cottage kitchen.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
JUL 21 1957

SIX HUNGARIAN MUSICIANS AT MUSIC CENTER

Refugees at Tanglewood On Scholarships for Summer

Lenox, July 30—Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, this summer. Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in western Massachusetts maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

One Woman in Group

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth, both now living in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Festival Chorus and Tanglewood Choir this summer from 1952-55, directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he served as conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England. Toth has led orchestras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild.

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conductung here, was in exile for three years, returning to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, he was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra.

Gabor Neuman, 21-year old pianist in the chamber music department, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. The youngest member of the group 21-year-old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department.

The only woman member of the group to come to Tanglewood, Piroska Kellen, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 17 1957

Six Hungarians Are Studying At Tanglewood, One Woman

Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer.

From Refugee Camps

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in western Massachusetts which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theatre and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

Arpad Andreas Darazs and Lajos Toth, both now living in the vicinity of Boston, are studying choral conducting and will sing in the Festival Chorus and Tanglewood Choir this summer as students in the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Darazs received his education at the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest, from which he obtained the degree of conductor in 1944. From 1952-55, he directed the Hungarian Radio Chorus and in 1955-56 he served as conductor of the Hungarian Folk Troupe Chorus and Orchestra, touring through France, Italy and England.

Mr. Toth attended the Academy of Music in Budapest from 1936 until 1942, studying composition, voice and violin. In 1951-52, he served as director of the chorus of the Association of Unions in Budapest. Subsequently, he led orchestras and choruses of the Radio Workers' Guild, Merchant and Financial Workers' Guild, Budapest Institute of Technology and Electrical Workers' Guild. Mr. Darazs and Mr. Toth are being introduced to American musical life at Tanglewood. They both appeared as conductors of the Tanglewood Choir at its first concert of the 1957 season last night.

Student of Conducting

Erno Sethy, a student of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, studied at the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1940 until 1952. In exile for three years, he returned to Budapest in 1955 to complete his studies at the Conservatory of Music. Also in 1955, Mr. Sethy was appointed accompanist to the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra. He has spent the past winter studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where he received a full scholarship obtained through the efforts of the World University Service.

Gabor Neaman, 21-year-old pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center this summer, received a diploma with honors from the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in 1955. He appeared several times as a guest soloist and with chamber groups on Radio Budapest, and has spent the past winter studying with Edouard Steuermann at the Juilliard School in New York. He plans to continue his studies there after the close of the Berkshire Music Center's 1957 season at the end of the summer.

Only Woman Member

The only woman member of the group to come to Tanglewood, Piroska Kellen, sings in the Festival Chorus and studies in the choral department of the Music Center this summer. She graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 1952 and has given numerous concerts in Hungary. Miss Kellen studied voice at the Juilliard School during the past winter and intends to follow a career as an opera singer in this country.

The youngest member of the group, 20-year-old George Alexander Vas, is a pianist in the chamber music department of the Music Center. He attended the Bela Bartok Conservatory in Budapest from 1952-56 and won a prize for performance of a composition by Bartok. Upon arrival in the United States, he enrolled at the Juilliard School, where he has studied piano with Beveridge Webster. Mr. Vas will return to Juilliard next winter.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
HAncock 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 26,550
JUL 18 1957

Hungarian Musicians Study at Berkshire

Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer.

Taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the United States through the efforts of the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society the five men and one young woman have resumed their musical careers in this country and are spending the summer at the music school in western Massachusetts which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy has enabled them to continue their studies in the United States.

EDITORIAL PA

6 Hun... Tangle... Ker... Cou...

...ned

...pageant Friday eveni...
...ne Lacy, 18, of Waterbu...
...Freeman of Hartford

Hartford Times Photo

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

JUL 5 1957

[120]

Music Review

Paganini String Quartet Opens Tanglewood Season

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE 20th SEASON of Berkshire Festivals was launched Wednesday evening at Tanglewood when the Paganini string quartet gave the first concert in a series of six varied chamber music programs scheduled for successive Wedensday evenings in the theater-concert hall.

The quartet, Henri Temianka and Gustave Rosseels, violins, Charles Foidart, viola, and Lucien Laporte, 'cello, make a brilliant evening of their program of Beethoven, Ginastera and Ravel.

The most exciting part of the program was the first quartet of the Argentinian composer who at the age of 30, in 1946, had himself been a student at the Berkshire Music Center. Ginastera had written this quartet for the Paganinis three years ago and they introduced it in New York at that time. Some part of the impact it made may have been due to the nature of the Paganini's playing preceding this contemporary work, for their Beethoven had been the essence of refinement and intimacy. But now they threw caution to the winds and revealed Ginastera's youthful vigor and high spirits with an abandon and audacity as zestful as it was confident.

* * *

THE QUARTET is full of striking rhythmic devices, very likely derived from the primitive dances of his native land. But it was the vitality with which the Paganinis played it that gave it such stimulating and elated fascination. Ginastera uses an effective method of introducing the slow movement by writing for the three lower voices in the guitar's normal tuning, above which he gives the first violin a poignantly ingratiating wandering fantasy.

In calmer retrospect the music is not as intricate as the riotous first impression might indicate. Indeed much of its basic foundations are close to the conventional. He does make use of much imaginative tonal effect, utilizing every possible sound the instruments are capable of. The strings are both plucked and bowed at every point between the bridge and the top of the fingerboard and slides are required by the left hand on the unordinary side of the violin.

* * *

THE BEETHOVEN choice with which the program began was the "Compliment" quartet, opus 18, No. 2, in G major. The performance was marked by remarkably equal strength in all four chairs and their ensemble, in which tone and balance were conspicuously developed, permitted each one, as the music required, to emerge without forcing to be heard in his proper perspective. For example, when the main theme returns in the adagio after the gaily interlude, the 'cello sang with a tone of extraordinary beauty and effortless expression.

The intonation of the quartet was more secure after the Beethoven and the authority of their readings became more credible. It was strange to notice in so scholarly a performance that certain details were executed without reliance on either tradition or usage; a failure to contrast the second theme of the first movement sufficiently, even though Beethoven marked it to be fortified, a mild disregard of unimportant note values, and, in the slow movement, the usage of a bel canto method in the graceful soaring passages which left Mr. Temianka in mid-air at times instead of possessing a direction and goal. These were all the more noticeable in a performance otherwise so authoritative.

* * *

THE RAVEL was purely ethereal. They produced scintillating variety and contrasts with lavish color and transparent lucidity. The individual players distinguished themselves continually within their remarkable ensemble. There was tremendous tension under control in this performance and much original thinking, such as the marvelous coup in the third movement of playing certain passages without vibrato. The appreciation the large audience accorded them was spontaneous and deeply sincere.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE,
NE, FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1957

Paganini Quartet Concert Open Tanglewood Season

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 4.—The 20th Berkshire Festival season opened last night with a concert of chamber music by the Paganini Quartet in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood. The audience inside the hall, and listeners on the lawn outside, enjoyed a program of quartets by Beethoven, Ginastera, and Ravel.

Now in their third year at Tanglewood, the series of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, of which the Paganini Quartet was the first, have proved to be a popular addition to the six weeks of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, benefiting the scholarship fund of the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center.

Members of the Paganini Quartet, who performed on a set of Stradivarius instruments, included Henri Temianka, violin; Gustave Fosseels, violin; Charles Foidart, viola, and Lucien Laporte, cello.

D Springfield Rep. 7/7/57

Second Thoughts On Music

Opening Chamber Music Concert Warmly Received

Paganini String Quartet Heard in Works by Ravel, Beethoven and Ginastera as 20th Berkshire Music Festival Begins at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 6—It is pleasant to be back at Tanglewood again, where the grass is lush and green and music will reign supreme for the next six weeks. The 20th season of the Berkshire Music Festival opened officially Wednesday night with a superb chamber music concert by the Paganini String Quartet. The week end includes three concerts of the music of John Sebastian Bach, directed by Charles Munch. We will comment on these concerts in our next column.

There is an emphasis being placed on the performance of contemporary works this year. Whether the audiences will enjoy them is something only the future can tell, but contemporary music must be heard and its performance will probably be as fine as may be heard anywhere.

Paganini Quartet

Wednesday night, aside from Ravel's String Quartet in F major and Beethoven's delectable Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2, we heard the first string quartet of Alberto Ginastera, an Argentinian composer who was once a student of composition at the Berkshire Music School. He was indeed fortunate in having so fine a quartet to perform his work. The Paganini Quartet was founded in 1946 and today it is one of the finest string ensembles to be heard.

Four magnificent Stradivarious instruments are used. One finds in their performances a perfect balance, an awareness of phrase and color and a scholarly approach to the music. Ginastera's quartet is not entirely original, although its rhythms and strong melodies leave no doubt as from whence it emanates. Much of the music is stark and strongly rhythmic.

Only one movement depends on melodic beauty and that movement might well have come from France. As a whole, the work has an exciting appeal which fascinated the audience. The players were recalled twice at its conclusion and there had been applause following each movement.

"St. Matthew Passion"

This afternoon at 2.30, the second portion of the "St. Matthew Passion" by Bach will be sung under the direction of Charles Munch. The soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm and James Joyce, basses. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Chorale Society will make up the chorus.

Daniel Pinkham will be at the harpsichord; Alfred Nash Patterson, at the organ and Alfred Zighera will play the Viola da Gamba. With such resources at his command, Mr. Munch has all that is necessary to put on a magnificent performance. Adele Addision is also scheduled to sing in the final performance of Beethoven's ninth symphony.

Coming Concerts

The chamber music concert on Wednesday, promises special delights. Two fine pianists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, will combine their talents in Music for Piano Duet. They will be heard in works by Schubert and Hindemith and will be the pianists in a performance of Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes, Op. 52." The four singers in this work will be Saramae Endich, soprano, who has been engaged to sing Mimi in the Springfield orchestra's performance of "La Boheme" next season; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. One hears this delightful music too seldom, and this will be an admirable opportunity to renew one's remembrance of it, or to have the experience of hearing it for the first time.

The week end concerts will be devoted to the music of Mozart, conducted by Charles Munch. The Friday night concert should be treasurable. The program will include the "Haffner" symphony; "Divertimenti in D major, for strings," "Serenade in C major," for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons, as well as the "Mass in C Major" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra. Also slated is the "Regina Coeli" and "Ave Verum Corpus." soloists in the vocal works will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor and Fague Springmann, bass.

Continuing with Mozart, the Saturday night concert will be given over to three symphonies, including the "Jupiter" and the Sunday afternoon concert will feature as soloists Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn and Sherman Walt, bassoon. The concert will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor, for string orchestra. Then follows the concerto for Bassoon in B flat major; the concerto for Horn in E flat and the Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon. The virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be making beautiful music together next week end.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1957

TANGLEWOOD 20TH SEASON IS UNDERWAY

Paganini String Quartet Presents Opening Chamber Music Concert

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 3—Artistically and weatherwise, the 20th season of the Berkshire Music Festival opened auspiciously tonight. As usual, the season opened with a chamber music concert, this year by the Paganini String quartet.

Week-End Concerts

Concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday afternoon will be devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach, directed by Charles Munch.

The charm and beauty of Beethoven's "String Quartet in Major, Op. 18, No. 2, the beauty of Tanglewood grounds. Nature has been kind the Berkshires. The grass is a wonderful green, the flowers and shrubs bloom lavishly.

The Paganini players have been together since 1948. They are Henri Temianka and Gustave Rossells, violins; Charles Foidart, viola and Lucien LaPorte, cello. They bring to their playing fine interpretations a perfect unanimity of thought and a mutual understanding for coloraton and dynamics.

Beethoven's exquisite music flowed flawlessly from the instruments and delicacy and grace were matched with power and incisiveness. In all over the chamber music concerts, we doubt if finer playing will be heard this season.

By Former Student

Next to the Beethoven came a contemporary work by the Argentine composer Alberto Ginastera, former student at the Berkshire Music Center. It was his string Quartet No. 1. The work held and fascinated the people who made up tonight's audience. It is a definite work, rhythmically rich, often stark and

The first and second reveal their scholarship, the lovely third movement have come to be one of It lives briefly and via the final movement, rhythms and tone the opening move-

n a superb performance and finely colored were called back its conclusion and applause followed it.

concluded with a mance of Beethoven's t in F Major."

superficial." ail had been said and said was the listener.

there is little doubt d's quartet, it has of time and one he most arresting erature. As it was it seemed as fresh was written. The drew a wall of from a most attentive audience.

art series opens th concerts on Sunday to follow on Saturday and on Sunday afternoon, a day afternoon, a for the Friday night music Center, Boston Symphony and Harvard Society and Radcliffe Chorale.

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, NORTHAMPTON

Brilliant Program Opens Season At Tanglewood

July 5

An interesting program played superbly by the Paganini String Quartet served as a brilliant opening of the 20th season at ensemble appeared before a discriminating audience of 870 Wednesday in the theatre-concert hall.

This quartet has received fulsome praise for its musicality and technical proficiency and last night's performance could serve only to heighten its reputation. It combines individual excellence with an almost instinctive coordinative sense and the results are truly rewarding.

The concert opened with a reverent and careful performance of Beethoven's String Quartet in G Major. The richness of tone, the lyric interpretations, the fine sense of phrase made the whole a joyous thing indeed. Most memorable were the second and fourth movements, the former with a sustained and almost rhapsodic devotion to balance, the latter with precision and delicacy that was entirely right.

After the cool classicism of the Beethoven, the furious and almost neurotic String Quartet No. 1 by Ginastera was shocking and disturbing. Some (this critic among them) might call this cacophony and not music. But everyone must agree as to its inherent interest. The audience broke into applause at the conclusion of the first and second movements. Strong and pulsating rhythms served as the foundations for three of the four movements, with only the third attaining movements of lyricism—haunting and brooding. It received magnificent treatment by the quartet and the audience responses was most enthusiastic.

The highlight of the evening, for this reviewer, was the lovely F major quartet by Ravel, a beautifully proportioned portrait, alternating moods of sweetness, excitement and seriousness. The third movement juxtaposed somber colorations with splashes of light and the last was a rhythmic fiesta. It was a performance rich in detail, vital and flowing. The members of the group (Henri Temianka, violin; Gustave Rosseels, violin; Charles Foidart, viola, and Lucien Laporte, cello) gave to each opus the same measure of respect and musicianship. It was music making of the highest order.

This weekend, the Boston Symphony will play a series of Bach concerts in the theatre-concert shed; next week, Mozart will be the featured composer. Tanglewood is with us again, promising six weeks of rich musical fare.—B. D.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

JUL 5 1957

[120]

Music Review

Paganini String Quartet Opens Tanglewood Season

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE 20th SEASON of Berkshire Festivals was launched Wednesday evening at Tanglewood when the Paganini string quartet gave the first concert in a series of six varied chamber music programs scheduled for successive Wedensday evenings in the theater-concert hall.

The quartet, Henri Temianka and Gustave Rosseels, violins, Charles Foidart, viola, and Lucien Laporte, 'cello, make a brilliant evening of their program of Beethoven, Ginastera and Ravel.

The most exciting part of the program was the first quartet of the Argentinian composer who at the age of 30, in 1946, had himself been a student at the Berkshire Music Center. Ginastera had written this quartet for the Paganinis three years ago and they introduced it in New York at that time. Some part of the impact it made may have been due to the nature of the Paganini's playing preceding this contemporary work, for their Beethoven had been the essence of refinement and intimacy. But now they threw caution to the winds and revealed Ginastera's youthful vigor and high spirits with an abandon and audacity as zestful as it was confident.

* * *

THE QUARTET is full of striking rhythmic devices, very likely derived from the primitive dances of his native land. But it was the vitality with which the Paganinis played it that gave it such stimulating and elated fascination. Ginastera uses an effective method of introducing the slow movement by writing for the three lower voices in the guitar's normal tuning, above which he gives the first violin a poignantly ingratiating wandering fantasy.

In calmer retrospect the music is not as intricate as the riotous first impression might indicate. Indeed much of its basic foundations are close to the conventional. He does make use of much imaginative tonal effect, utilizing every possible sound the instruments are capable of. The strings are both plucked and bowed at every point between the bridge and the top of the fingerboard and slides are required by the left hand on the unordinary side of the violin.

* * *

THE BEETHOVEN choice with which the program began was the "Compliment" quartet, opus 18, No. 2, in G major. The performance was marked by remarkably equal strength in all four chairs and their ensemble, in which tone and balance were conspicuously developed, permitted each one, as the music required, to emerge without forcing to be heard in his proper perspective. For example, when the main theme returns in the adagio after the quick interlude, the 'cello sang with a tone of extraordinary beauty and effortless expression.

The intonation of the quartet was more secure after the Beethoven and the authority of their readings became more credible. It was strange to notice in so scholarly a performance that certain details were executed without reliance on either tradition or usage; a failure to contrast the second theme of the first movement sufficiently, even though Beethoven marked it to be fortified, a mild disregard of unimportant note values, and, in the slow movement, the usage of a bel canto method in the graceful soaring passages which left Mr. Temianka in mid-air at times instead of possessing a direction and goal. These were all the more noticeable in a performance otherwise so authoritative.

* * *

THE RAVEL was purely ethereal. They produced scintillating variety and contrasts with lavish color and transparent lucidity. The individual players distinguished themselves continually within their remarkable ensemble. There was tremendous tension under control in this performance and much original thinking, such as the marvelous coup in the third movement of playing certain passages without vibrato. The appreciation the large audience accorded them was spontaneous and deeply sincere.

D Lenox Eagle 7/7/57

Second Thoughts On Music

Opening Chamber Music Concert Warmly Received

Paganini String Quartet Heard in Works by Ravel, Beethoven and Ginastera as 20th Berkshire Music Festival Begins at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 6—It is pleasant to be back at Tanglewood again, where the grass is lush and green and music will reign supreme for the next six weeks. The 20th season of the Berkshire Music Festival opened officially Wednesday night with a superb chamber music concert by the Paganini String Quartet. The week end includes three concerts of the music of John Sebastian Bach, directed by Charles Munch. We will comment on these concerts in our next column.

There is an emphasis being placed on the performance of contemporary works this year. Whether the audiences will enjoy them is something only the future can tell, but contemporary music must be heard and its performance will probably be as fine as may be heard anywhere.

Paganini Quartet

Wednesday night, aside from Ravel's String Quartet in F major and Beethoven's delectable Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2, we heard the first string quartet of Alberto Ginastera, an Argentinian composer who was once a student of composition at the Berkshire Music School. He was indeed fortunate in having so fine a quartet to perform his work. The Paganini Quartet was founded in 1946 and today it is one of the finest string ensembles to be heard.

Four magnificent Stradivarious instruments are used. One finds in their performances a perfect balance, an awareness of phrase and color and a scholarly approach to the music. Ginastera's quartet is not entirely original, although its rhythms and strong melodies leave no doubt as from whence it emanates. Much of the music is stark and strongly rhythmic.

Only one movement depends on melodic beauty and that movement might well have come from France. As a whole, the work has an exciting appeal which fascinated the audience. The players were recalled twice at its conclusion and there had been applause following each movement.

"St. Matthew Passion"

This afternoon at 2.30, the second portion of the "St. Matthew Passion" by Bach will be sung under the direction of Charles Munch. The soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm and James Joyce, basses. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Chorale Society will make up the chorus.

Daniel Pinkham will be at the harpsichord; Alfred Nash Patterson, at the organ and Alfred Zighera will play the Viola da Gamba. With such resources at his command, Mr. Munch has all that is necessary to put on a magnificent performance. Adele Addision is also scheduled to sing in the final performance of Beethoven's ninth symphony.

Coming Concerts

The chamber music concert on Wednesday, promises special delights. Two fine pianists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, will combine their talents in Music for Piano Duet. They will be heard in works by Schubert and Hindemith and will be the pianists in a performance of Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes, Op. 52." The four singers in this work will be Saramae Endich, soprano, who has been engaged to sing Mimi in the Springfield orchestra's performance of "La Boheme" next season; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. One hears this delightful music too seldom, and this will be an admirable opportunity to renew one's remembrance of it, or to have the experience of hearing it for the first time.

The week end concerts will be devoted to the music of Mozart, conducted by Charles Munch. The Friday night concert should be treasurable. The program will include the "Haffner" symphony; "Divertimenti in D major, for strings,"; "Serenade in C major," for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons, as well as the "Mass in C Major" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra. Also slated is the "Regina Coeli" and "Ave Verum Corpus." soloists in the vocal works will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor and Fague Springmann, bass.

Continuing with Mozart, the Saturday night concert will be given over to three symphonies, including the "Jupiter" and the Sunday afternoon concert will feature as soloists Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn and Sherman Walt, bassoon. The concert will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor, for string orchestra. Then follows the concerto for Bassoon in B flat major; the concerto for Horn in E flat and the Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon. The virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be making beautiful music together next week end.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE,
NE, FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1957

Paganini Quartet Concert Open Tanglewood Season

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 4.—The 20th Berkshire Festival season opened last night with a concert of chamber music by the Paganini Quartet in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood. The audience inside the hall, and listeners on the lawn outside, enjoyed a program of quartets by Beethoven, Ginastera, and Ravel.

Now in their third year at Tanglewood, the series of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, of which the Paganini Quartet was the first, have proved to be a popular addition to the six weeks of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, benefiting the scholarship fund of the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center.

Members of the Paganini Quartet, who performed on a set of Stradivarius instruments, included Henri Temianka, violin; Gustave Fosseels, violin; Charles Foidart, viola, and Lucien Laporte, cello.

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, NORTHAMPTO

Brillia
July 5
An interest
superbly by t Quartet serve opening of t ensemble app criminating a nesday in the
This quarte some praise and technica last night's serve only to tion. It combi
lence with ar coordinative
sults are truly
The concert
erent and car
Beethoven's S
Major. The r lyric interpr sense of phra
a joyous th memorable w fourth mover with a susta rhapsodic de the latter wit icacy that was After the the Beethoven almost neurot
No. 1 by Gina and disturbing among them) ophony and no one must agree interest. The a EXTRA
THE W
TOP CHOI
CHUCK
ROAST
TOP CHOICE
SHORT
100% PURE
FRESH
G
FRESH MADE
SKINLESS
FI
MINCED HA
GENUINE HO

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1957

TANGLEWOOD 20TH SEASON IS UNDERWAY

Paganini String Quartet Presents Opening Chamber Music Concert

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 3—Artistically and weatherwise, the 20th season of the Berkshire Music Festival opened auspiciously tonight. As usual, the season opened with a chamber music concert, this year by the Paganini String quartet.

Week-End Concerts

Concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday afternoon will be devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach, directed by Charles M

The charm and [illegible] Beethoven's "String Q[illegible] Major, Op. 18, No. [illegible] the beauty of [illegible] grounds. Nature has been [illegible] the Berkshires. The grass [illegible] a wonderful green [illegible] flowers and shrubs bloom [illegible] ly.

The Paganini players have been together since 1948. They are Henri Temianka and Gustave Rossells, violins; Charles [illegible] viola and Lucien Laporte, [illegible] They bring to their playing [illegible] interpretations a perfect [illegible] mity of thought and a [illegible] ing for coloraton and dyna

Beethoven's exquisite [illegible] flowed flawlessly from the [illegible] avarius instruments and de[illegible] and grace were matched [illegible] power and incisiveness. I [illegible] over the chamber music concerts, we doubt if finer playing will be heard this season.

By Former Student

Next to the Beethoven [illegible] came a contemporary work by the Argentine composer Alberto Ginastera, former student at the Berkshire Music Center. It was his string Quartet No. 1. The work held and fascinated the [illegible] people who made up tonight's audience.

It is a definite work, rhythmically rich, often stark and always strong. The first and second movements reveal their source of origin but the lovely third movement might have come [illegible] of France. It lives briefly and then returns, via the final movement, to the rhythms and tone patterns of the opening movements.

It was given a superb performance, vital and finely colored. The players were called back twice after its conclusion and there was applause following each movement.

The concert concluded with a glowing performance of Ravel's "String Quartet in F Major" which was given no superficial reading. Every detail had been carefully considered and each was made known to the listener.

At this date, there is little left to say of Ravel's quartet. It has stood the test of time and remains one of the most attractive works of the literature. As it was played tonight it seemed as new as the day it was written. The performance drew a well deserved ovation from a most discriminating audience.

The Bach-Mozart series opens Friday night with [illegible] music of Bach to follow on Saturday evening, and on Sunday afternoon.

Also on Saturday [illegible] special concert for the [illegible] the Berkshire Music Ce[illegible] be given by the [illegible] cliffe Chorale Society and Harvard Glee Club.

SCHEN

nini Quarte

D. E. RITZ
nini String Quartet
20th season of the Festival at Tanglednesday evening with f rare charm.

* * *

ETET performed the Quartet opus 18, num-String Quartet num-the Argentinian comto Ginastera; and the et in F minor.

nce of over 900 per-thered in the Theatre-l for the event, a de-runner to the festival embers, each an ar-highest caliber, are lianka and Gustave

olins; Charles Foid-and Lucien Laporte, uartet was organized gave a series of con-Library of Congress on that year, followed York debut and hun-earances in the major Europe, Canada and

hesday evening per-as the group's first at Tanglewood. Memon four famous in-all Stradivari, which Paganini. The "Pa-truments were refter a century of dis-wing the death of the ist.

* * *

ENTS, ALL by the
, give a quartet a rare beyond and above superb playing and of its members. Hearganini quartet is an which is a bit on the side.
oven quartet was exits soft ripples of opening "Allegro," rrying passages in its legro" and the charm-by solo cello in the legro molto, quas quartet is music with usive quality, delinea-delicate and a feeling ayer is playing for the his own listening and instrument. A pizzica-tripping figure forms movement, "Assez vif,

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1957

Paganini Quartet Opens 20th Festival at Tanglewood

By D. K. RITZ

The Paganini String Quartet opened the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood on Wednesday evening with a program of rare charm.

* * *

THE QUARTET performed the Beethoven Quartet opus 18, number 2; the String Quartet number 1 by the Argentinian composer, Alberto Ginastera; and the Ravel Quartet in F minor.

An audience of over 900 persons had gathered in the Theatre-Concert Hall for the event, a delightful forerunner to the festival proper.

The quartet members, each an artist of the highest caliber, are Henri Temianka and Gustave Rosseels, violins; Charles Foidart, viola; and Lucien Laporte, cello. The quartet was organized in 1946 and gave a series of concerts at the Library of Congress in Washington that year, followed by a New York debut and hundreds of appearances in the major cities of Europe, Canada and the United States.

The Wednesday evening performance was the group's first appearance at Tanglewood. Members play on four famous instruments, all Stradivari, which belonged to Paganini. The "Paganini" instruments were reassembled after a century of dispersal following the death of the great violinist.

* * *

INSTRUMENTS, ALL by the same maker, give a quartet a rare unanimity beyond and above that of the superb playing and thinking of its members. Hearing the Paganini quartet is an experience which is a bit on the breathtaking side.

The Beethoven quartet was exquisite with its soft ripples of fun in the opening "Allegro," with the scurrying passages in its "Scherzo, allegro" and the charming opening by solo cello in the finale, "Allegro molto, quasi presto."

The Ravel quartet is music with that most elusive quality, delineation most delicate and a feeling that each player is playing for the benefit of his own listening and that of his instrument. A pizzicato with a tripping figure forms the second movement, "Assez vif, Tres rhythme" and the "Vif et agite" of the finale is truly vigorous and joyous.

* * *

THE GINASTERA work drew hearty appreciation from the audience for its writing which shows an unusual knowledge of the possibilities of strings, in the advanced modern idiom. The composer, incidentally, is a former student at the Berkshire Music Center, and the work's inclusion in the program shows the high quality musicianship which the Center has fostered. Marked by highly accentuated rhythms, melodies of a strange cast and strange effects including a most peculiarly performed glissando both up and down the fingerboard, the work holds much more than a passing interest.

Weekend programs will open tonight at 8:30 o'clock, continue tomorrow at the same hour and include a Sunday program at 2:30 p.m. All will be devoted to music of Bach and all will be conducted by Charles Munch.

The programs will be presented by a chamber orchestra made up of first chair men of the Boston Symphony and tickets will be on sale at the box office for all of the concerts.

* * *

SOLOISTS tonight include Lukas Foss and Seymour Lipkin, pianists; Richard Burgin, violin; and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute. The program includes the Suite number 3 in D major, for orchestra; Brandenburg Concerto number 5 in D major for orchestra with piano, flute and violin; the Suite number 2 in B minor, for flute and strings; and the Concerto in C minor for Two Pianos, number 1.

Tomorrow evening's program will be made up of the Brandenburg Concertos numbers 1, 2, 3, 6 and 4. Soloists include Mrs. Dwyer, Burgin; James Pappoutsakis, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Roger Voisin, trumpet.

The Sunday afternoon program will be given over to the opening chorus and "Part II" of "The Passion According to St. Matthew." Vocal soloists include Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm and James Joyce, basses.

* * *

THE HARVARD Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth will assist. Instrumental soloists include Daniel Pinkham, harpsichord; Alfred Nash Patterson, organ; and Alfred Zighera, viola da gamba.

TIGHT BINDING

C1223

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, MONDAY, JULY 8, 1957

All-Bach Week End Opens Berkshire Music Festival

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 7.—Generally speaking there are only two ways in which it is possible to emerge from an all-Bach week end—overwhelmed or overtired. The current first-week activities of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, however, have contrived to induce simultaneously both states, what with a performance yesterday afternoon in the Music Shed of the opening chorus and complete second part of "The Passion According to St. Matthew" and the presentation on Saturday night, in the Theater-Concert Hall, of a Brandenburg Concerto marathon that offered all but one of the composer's six works in this form. As ever, Charles Munch was on hand to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted, in response to the requirements of the individual numbers, by a veritable platoon of instrumental and vocal soloists.

Deep Delight

It made the head reel, for listening to Bach's music demands, by and large, such powers of attention not necessary to lavish on most other masters. He does not lull you like Schumann, wash over you like Bruckner or caress you like Debussy. Thus, given no cause for reverie or flights into personal fancy, there is no change but to concentrate and listen hard. And that, precisely is what a combined Saturday-Sunday audience of 8,000 did to their obvious satisfaction and deep delight.

Certainly a large share of that delight derived from yesterday's profoundly stirring account of the "Matthew Passion," a work that may boldly lay claim to being the greatest choral piece in the literature. It is true, of course, that the performance flew in the face of the most resolute purist tradition, but then it almost always does, a situation that seems to bother no one save the purists themselves. At any rate, the joint Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, a group confessedly too large to deal subtly with Bach's contrapuntal amenities, looked to the massed numbers, while a quintet of absolutely superb vocalists were in charge of the solos. They included Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm and James Joyce, bassos.

All of them, too, it might be said, are Bach singers whose traditions are born of the nineteenth rather than the eighteenth century, for they work on the broadest of all possible scales. I fail to see how they could do otherwise in a hall seating 6,000, nor would I want them to. The point is that the "Matthew Passion," as they read it, jarred the senses and pierced the heart, as did also the thoroughly admirable singing of the chorus. And if there are those who snicker that such an outlay of grandiose forces was unknown to Bach himself, let them be reminded that it is music's immediate effect, not its distant history, that in the final analysis counts for anything.

An Adventure

It would be sheer folly to single out among the singers one or two for a special word of praise—they were all that good. And the orchestra was throughout perfectly handled under Mr. Munch's firm grasp. In consequence, the rendition as an entity was an adventure of the ear and feast for the spirit.

Saturday night's Brandenburg excursion, on the other hand, was disappointing simply because the ensemble was not all one has come to expect of Boston's artistic pride and joy. The first concerto began with all its proper seasoning measured out, and it seemed, as it often has in the last three days, that Mr. Munch is presently of a more sanguine and ebullient disposition that he has been for some time, but then, suddenly, the playing turned rather commonplace and perfunctory. Nor was there any exceptional improvement in the second concerto which, as Bachians well know, is the trumpeter's piece hands down if he is able to get through it without swallowing his mouthpiece.

Lack Thrust

But Roger Voisin, the trumpeter, was far from being at his technical best and the remaining concertino members—Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin—lacked the thrust to carry the number off. As for the third concerto, it can be and has been performed in the worst tradition of choo-choo-train Bach with all rhythmic tugging, chugging and grunting that implies. Fortunately, this condition Mr. Munch assiduously avoided; the notes had air around them and the phrases were plastically bent to suit the whirlwind dramatic patterns that are the warp of the composer's design. Still, the orchestra sounded a bit scratchy, a bit at odds with itself. There was much of vigor but to the exclusion of sonority refinement.

By all the standards, the most substantial playing of the evening was to be heard in the fourth concerto, featuring Mrs. Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis as the solo flutes. In it, Bach's rapid figurations were ever lively and mobile, and the slow movement was especially beautiful in its chiseled intensities. The fact that the work was presented at the close of a concert dedicated to five numbers that were never intended to be given consecutively speaks nobly for both its rendition and its creator. So it is always with Bach. Even when you imagine the saturation point has been reached, he manages to prove that your receptive capacities are not nearly brimful as you think.

MONDAY, JULY 8, 1957. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Music: Bach Week-End

St. Matthew Passion Is Berkshire Feature

By ROSS PARMENTER

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 7—The first week-end of the Berkshire Festival was like a festival in itself—a Bach festival. And Charles Munch chose the programs so that they led the listeners by deepening stages into the composer at his most profound level.

The concertos and suites of the Friday night program introduced the secular Bach, a high-spirited composer of prodigal gifts who could write for the entertainment of princes and devise passages of brilliant solo display.

With the five Brandenburg Concertos of Saturday night, one heard the same baroque master writing more deeply meditative slow movements and experimenting more radically with differing instrumental combinations.

This afternoon showed that man bending all his gifts to dramatizing and illuminating the trial and death of Christ.

•

The work that closed the week-end was the festival's first presentation of the Passion According to St. Matthew. Because of its dimensions, the Passion was not given in the theatre-concert hall, as were two earlier concerts. Instead, it was given in the Shed. With a golden summer afternoon adding to its appeal, it attracted an audience of 3,470. This brought the total attendance for the week-end to 10,725.

Dr. Munch, however, did not lead the whole of the Passion. In order to keep the program within the accepted Sunday afternoon time span, he led the great opening double chorus and then leaped directly to part two, which was given virtually complete.

The omission of the more meditative part one, of course, was a serious loss. But, because of the familiarity of the story and of the work itself, most listeners could supply the missing part either from imagination or memory.

Because the chorus of the newly opened Berkshire Music Center has not yet been sufficiently trained, Dr. Munch recruited his choristers from the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society. The vocal soloists were singers familiar to Tanglewood: Adele Addison soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralato; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm and James Joyce, basses.

The thirty-nine-piece orchestra consisted of members of the Boston Symphony. Daniel Pinkham was at the harpsichord and Alfred Nash Patterson at the organ. Alfred Zichera played the viola da gamba.

•

Dr. Munch's tempos were admirably chosen. He brought excitement to the moments of dramatic intensity, but he also allowed the soloists plenty of time to sing without strain, and the slow chorales were beautifully sustained without ever being dragged.

Florence Kopleff

The chorus attacked the violent and taunting choruses with vigor, but on the whole it was best in the soft ones. Especially lovely was the one just after the crucifixion, which is generally translated "Be near me, Lord, when dying." The chorus, too, sang beautifully in the long closing farewell to Christ.

Mr. McCollum carried the long and exacting part of the evangelist with skill, being at his finest in high soft parts such as the description of Peter's denial of Christ. Miss Kopleff was a notable alto soloist who maintained a pure vocal line at the same time as she infused her tones with the deepest feeling. Miss Addison sang with especially touching sweetness in the aria "Aus Liebe." With the omission of part one, the part of Christ was much reduced but Mr. Pinkham sang it compassionately.

•

Having led the Fifth Brandenburg on Friday night, Dr. Munch conducted the First, Second, Third, Sixth and Fourth on Saturday night; the selection of this order meant the program ended with a brilliant finale, which would not have happened if the Sixth, for the three dark-hued string choirs, had been the closing work.

The viola players in the Sixth covered themselves with glory. They provided the most sensitively shaded and expressive playing of the evening. Elsewhere, the emphasis was more on rough-hewn vigor than on extreme tonal refinement. But Dr. Munch's approach was certainly justified and the concertos, with their fine rhythmic allegros and probing slow movements, held the audience enthralled.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 14 1957

Second Thoughts On Music

Bach Festival Continues To Increase in Popularity

Six Brandenburg Concertos, 'St. Matthew Passion' And Other Works Heard at Tanglewood; Adele Addison Among Soloists Commended

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The first week of performances at the Berkshire Music Festival proved a great success. Some 12,000 persons attended the chamber music concert; student orchestra concert and the three performances devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach and directed by Charles Munch.

The Paganini String Quartet opened proceedings with an impressive concert consisting of the String Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2 by Beethoven; the first quartet of Alberto Ginastera, a Brazilian composer; and Ravel's String Quartet in F major. One heard some fine ensemble playing by a group of musicians who have played together since 1946.

There was special interest in the Ginastera quartet, since the young man had been a student of composition at the Berkshire Summer School a few years ago. It proved to be a vivid, rhythmic work which called for extreme skill on the part of the players. It is still slightly derivative, but gives promise of things to come. The audience seemed fascinated with it. The Ravel quartet received an ethereal reading and the Beethoven opus was a masterpiece of grace and charm.

The Bach Program

The Bach festival has grown steadily in popularity since it was instituted by Serge Koussevitzky. The largest audience of the week, 4500, was on hand to hear opening program and it was amply repaid. We have never heard a finer, performance of the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 for Orchestra with piano, violin and flute. Lukas Foss plays Bach in an exemplary manner and Mr. Burgin and Doriot Anthony Dywer provided violin and flute playing of high caliber.

Dr. Munch and the reduced orchestra he uses for these performances seem to have a special affection for Bach's music, so the sum total of this performance was high. Another superb performance was that of the Suite No. 2 in B minor, for flute and strings. Mr. Dwyer has played this work several times at Tanglewood and always receives a personal ovation. Her fine musicianship, command of the instrument and her personal charm combine to make a performance arresting.

There was also an excellent performance of the Concerto in C minor for two pianos played by Lukas Foss and Seymour Lipkin. The concert opened with a gracious performance of Suite No. 3 in D major for orchestra.

Brandenburg Concertos

The second concert was given over to performances of the remaining five Brandenburg concertos. Because the Boston Symphony has such fine first-desk men, the infinite variety of these concertos was set forth in magnificent fashion. We shall not soon forget the beauty of the Adagio of the first concerto; the charm of the Andante of Concerto No. 2 or the finale of Concerto No. 4.

Richard Burgin was at his most persuasive as soloist and concertmaster and Rogert Voisin again provided dazzling virtuosity on the trumpet as did Mrs. Dwyer on the flute. What might have proven, in less expert hands, an uninteresting program, was so vital and varied that it held the attention from beginning to end.

"St. Matthew Passion"

The final program of the Bach festival was devoted to Part 2 of the "St. Matthew Passion." The chorus was made up of members of the Radcliffe Chorale and the Harvard Glee Club, all experienced singers of the work. The solo quartet included Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass. Miss Addison and Mrs. Gramm are known to Springfield and Miss Kopleff and Mrs. McCollum are to be heard with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra next season when Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" will be sung.

Mr. McCollum has a fine voice and his command of it is absolute. He sang the long and trying role of the Evangelist with remarkable technical fluency and a thorough understanding of text. Mr. Gramm is one of the finest of the young basses and oratorio is a fertile field for him. Miss Kopleff has a large voice and a personal warmth that meets the audience.

Miss Addison again revealed herself as a poised and sensitive artist, who made the most of the one opportunity provided in the second part of the "Passion." A fifth member, James Joyce, also held his own with this fine quartet. The chorus sang with vital tones and awareness of text. Mr. Munch appeared pleased with them, and well he might be, for their response to his demands was a tribute to their own conductor, G. Wallace Woodworth.

The music of Mozart will be featured this afternoon, when a program of great interest is scheduled. It will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra K. 546. Two concertos will follow, the Concerto for Bassoon, in B flat major, K. 191, and the Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K 495. Sherman Walt will be solo bassoonist and James Stagliano the horn soloist.

The final work on the program will be the "Sinfonia Concertante" for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, K. 297b. Soloists will include Messrs. Ralph Gomberg, oboe, Gino Cioffi, clarinet, and James Stagliano and Sherman Walt. The concert will begin at 2:30 p. m.

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL, Section II, July 11, 1957

TANGLEWOOD
July 5, 6, 7
By A. C. S.

Johann Sebastian Bach and his wealth of music lay in virtual obscurity from his death in 1750 until Mendelssohn rediscovered him in 1829. Since then, his compositions have gained ever greater popularity and, judging from the number of people who attended the first weekend of concerts in Lenox, his box office appeal has never been higher than at the present. All three concerts were devoted to the polyphonic master and all three were sold out.

Friday

A varied program was presented Friday evening: the 2nd and 3rd Suites, the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5, and the Concerto in C minor for Two Pianos. The Suite No. 2, which has become a staple at Tanglewood, featured Doriot Anthony Dwyer as flute soloist. As usual she played beautifully and was recalled to repeat the final Badinerie. The Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 also utilized the services of Mrs. Dwyer and Richard Burgin, violinist. The keyboard soloist was Lukas Foss who playing throughout, and especially in the great solo in the first movement, was wonderfully modulated and articulate. The Suite No. 3 and the Two-piano Concerto, which opened and closed the program respectively, seemed overly heavy to this listener and the choice of tempo might be considered "romantic" at best. Seymour Lipkin joined Mr. Foss at the other piano.

Saturday

The remaining five of the six Brandenburg Concerto comprised the program for Saturday evening. They were presented almost in order with the exception of the 4th, full of brilliance, which was chosen to conclude the concert. Perhaps the most telling performance was that of the 6th Brandenburg, where the violas with their vibrance really stole the show from the more brightly colored instruments featured in the remaining concert. One sensed again a more 19th century approach to the music (with the exception of the above mentioned 6th Concerto) than a purist would hope for.

Sunday

After two concerts devoted to secular works by the Baroque master, Charles Munch chose the second part of the massive Passion According To St. Matthew, to close the series. Members of the Boston Symphony made up the orchestra and Daniel Pinkham was harpsichordist, Alfred Nash Patterson was organist, and Alfred Zighera played the viola da gambba. The vocal soloists were Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Donald Gramm and James Joyce, basses. It seemed to this listener that Mr. McCollum, in the exacting role of narrator, had never sung to more advantage both from a vocal and interpretive viewpoint. The Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society gave ample evidence of the heights choral sing-

Review

anglewo

C. ROSENFELD

RST weekend of the Festival ended yesterday noon with a magnificent performance of Bach's "The Passion according to St. Matthew." The soloists were the small group of players from the Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch is directing two weekends of Bach music, assisted by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, trained by Wallace Woodworth.

accommodate the large chorus of singers participating and also to seat the large audience which attended, this great hall was used for the first time this season for a formal concert.

* * *

THE ENTIRE oratorio was sung, only the opening chorus and practically all of part two. Woodworth had his hundred-voice chorus of youthful voices in the balcony and through their singing a reflection of Munch's direction as they gave character to the music on a broad palette to every nuance they sang. There was an incisive vigor to their singing and, at other and proper times, deep devotion to the meaning, especially in the short choral interludes Bach places at significant moments, resting spots, through which the pilgrimage as though there are roadside invitations to wonder.

Much of the story is told by the Evangelist whose role was sung with great understanding and vocal amplitude by John McCollum. The orchestra and chorus are divided into two opposing and answering ensembles. The orchestra, in addition to its normal dispersion, employs a harpsichord, played by Daniel Pinkham, an organ, played by Alfred Nash Patterson and a viola da gamba. This latter instrument, now so rarely played, was masterfully used by Alfred Zighera to accompany the bass recitative "Komm suesses Kreuz," set by James Joyce. The viol consists of florid passages between sonorous chordal progressions, and Zighera penetrated both the instrument and the music with exceptional comprehension.

* * *

ONE of McCollum's most gratifying opportunities occurs in the recitativo "Mein Jesus schweigt" and the following aria "Geduld" which he sang with marked suavity and effectiveness in all registers. The second half of the "Passion" offers but little chance for the beautiful voice of Soprano Adele Addison, but she grasped her scant opportunities with her wonted control and used the opulence she has always shown since her student days at the Berkshire Music Center with her usual lofty understanding.

The concert master of the orchestra, Richard Burgin, has gracefully embellished solos while the chorus sings "Erbarme dich"; his counterpart in the second orchestra, Alfred Krips, has more pyrotechnical assignments when the second chorus sings "Gebt mir meinum Jesum" which he accomplished with distinction.

TIGHT BINDING

C122-3

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, MONDAY, JULY 8, 1957

All-Bach Week End Opens Berkshire Music Festival

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 7.—Generally speaking there are only two ways in which it is possible to emerge from an all-Bach week end—overwhelmed or overtired. The current first-week activities of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, however, have contrived to induce simultaneously both states, what with a performance yesterday afternoon in the Music Shed of the opening chorus and complete second part of "The Passion According to St. Matthew" and the presentation on Saturday night, in the Theater-Concert Hall, of a Brandenburg Concerto marathon that offered all but one of the composer's six works in this form. As ever, Charles Munch was on hand to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted, in response to the requirements of the individual numbers, by a veritable platoon of instrumental and vocal soloists.

Deep Delight

It made the head reel, for listening to Bach's music demands, by and large, such powers of attention not necessary to lavish on most other masters. He does not lull you like Schumann, wash over you like Bruckner or caress you like Debussy. Thus, given no cause for reverie or flights into personal fancy, there is no change but to concentrate and listen hard. And that, precisely is what a combined Saturday-Sunday audience of 8,000 did to their obvious satisfaction and deep delight.

Certainly a large share of that delight derived from yesterday's profoundly stirring account of the "Matthew Passion," a work that may boldly lay claim to being the greatest choral piece in the literature. It is true, of course, that the performance flew in the face of the most resolute purist tradition, but then it almost always does, a situation that seems to bother no one save the purists themselves. At any rate, the Joint Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society," a group confessedly too large to deal subtly with Bach's contrapuntal amenities, looked to the massed numbers, while a quintet of absolutely superb vocalists were in charge of the solos. They included Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm and James Joyce, bassos.

All of them, too, it might be said, are Bach singers whose traditions are born of the nineteenth rather than the eighteenth century, for they work on the broadest of all possible scales. I fail to see how they could do otherwise in a hall seating 6,000, nor would I want them to. The point is that the "Matthew Passion," as they read it, jarred the senses and pierced the heart, as did also the thoroughly admirable singing of the chorus. And if there are those who snicker that such an outlay of grandiose forces was unknown to Bach himself, let them be reminded that it is music's immediate effect, not its distant history, that in the final analysis counts for anything.

An Adventure

It would be sheer folly to single out among the singers one or two for a special word of praise—they were all that good. And the orchestra was throughout perfectly handled under Mr. Munch's firm grasp. In consequence, the rendition as an entity was an adventure of the ear and feast for the spirit.

Saturday night's Brandenburg excursion, on the other hand, was disappointing simply because the ensemble was not all one has come to expect of Boston's artistic pride and joy. The first concerto began with all its proper seasoning measured out, and it seemed, as it often has in the last three days, that Mr. Munch is presently of a more sanguine and ebullient disposition that he has been for some time, but then, suddenly the playing turned rather commonplace and perfunctory. Nor was there any exceptional improvement in the second concerto which, as Bachians well know, is the trumpeter's piece hands down if he is able to get through it without swallowing his mouthpiece.

Lack Thrust

But Roger Voisin, the trumpeter, was far from being at his technical best and the remaining concertino members—Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin—lacked the thrust to carry the number off. As for the third concerto, it can be and has been performed in the worst tradition of choo-choo-train Bach with all rhythmic tugging, chugging and grunting that implies. Fortunately, this condition Mr. Munch assiduously avoided; the notes had air around them and the phrases were plastically bent to suit the whirlwind dramatic patterns that are the warp of the composer's design. Still, the orchestra sounded a bit scratchy, a bit at odds with itself. There was much of vigor but to the exclusion of sonority refinement.

By all the standards, the most substantial playing of the evening was to be heard in the fourth concerto, featuring Mrs. Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis as the solo flutes. In it, Bach's rapid figurations were ever lively and mobile, and the slow movement was especially beautiful in its chiseled intensities. The fact that the work was presented at the close of a concert dedicated to five numbers that were never intended to be given consecutively speaks nobly for both its rendition and its creator. So it is always with Bach. Even when you imagine the saturation point has been reached he manages to prove that your receptive capacities are not nearly brimful as you think.

MONDAY, JULY 8, 1957, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Music: Bach Week-End

St. Matthew Passion Is Berkshire Feature

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 7—The first week-end of the Berkshire Festival was like a festival in itself—a Bach festival. And Charles Munch chose the programs so that they led the listeners by deepening stages into the composer at his most profound level.

The concertos and suites of the Friday night program introduced the secular Bach, a high-spirited composer of prodigal gifts who could write for the entertainment of princes and devise passages of brilliant solo display.

With the five Brandenburg Concertos of Saturday night, one heard the same baroque master writing more deeply meditative slow movements and experimenting more radically with differing instrumental combinations.

This afternoon showed that man bending all his gifts to dramatizing and illuminating the trial and death of Christ.

* *

The work that closed the week-end was the festival's first presentation of the Passion According to St. Matthew. Because of its dimensions, the Passion was not given in the theatre-concert hall, as were two earlier concerts. Instead it was given in the Shed. With a golden summer afternoon adding to its appeal, it attracted an audience of 5,470. This brought the total attendance for the week-end to 10,725.

Dr. Munch, however, did not lead the whole of the Passion. In order to keep the program within the accepted Sunday afternoon time span, he led the great opening double chorus and then leaped directly to part two, which was given virtually complete.

The omission of the more meditative part one, of course, was a serious loss. But, because of the familiary of the story and of the work itself, most listeners could supply the missing part either from imagination or memory.

Because the chorus of the newly opened Berkshire Music Center has not yet been sufficiently trained, Dr. Munch recruited his choristers from the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society. The vocal soloists were singers familiar to Tanglewood: Adele Addison soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralato; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm and James Joyce, basses.

The thirty-nine-piece orchestra consisted of members of the Boston Symphony. Daniel Pinkham was at the harpsichord and Alfred Nash Patterson at the organ. Alfred Zighera played the viola da gamba.

*

Dr. Munch's tempos were admirably chosen. He brought excitement to the moments of dramatic intensity, but he also allowed the soloists plenty of time to sing without strain, and the slow chorales were beautifully sustained without ever being dragged.

Florence Kopleff

The chorus attacked the violent and taunting choruses with vigor, but on the whole it was best in the soft ones. Especially lovely was the one just after the crucifixion, which is generally translated "Be near me, Lord, when dying." The chorus, too, sang beautifully in the long closing farewell to Christ.

Mr. McCollum carried the long and exacting part of the evangelist with skill, being at his finest in high soft parts such as the description of Peter's denial of Christ. Miss Kopleff was a notable alto soloist who maintained a pure vocal line at the same time as she infused her tones with the deepest feeling. Miss Addison sang with especially touching sweetness in the aria "Aus Liebe." With the omission of part one, the part of Christ was much reduced but Mr. Gramm sang it compassionately.

* *

Having led the Fifth Brandenburg on Friday night, Dr. Munch conducted the First, Second, Third, Sixth and Fourth on Saturday night; the selection of this order meant the program ended with a brilliant finale, which would not have happened if the Sixth, for the three dark-hued string choirs, had been the closing work.

The viola players in the Sixth covered themselves with glory. They provided the most sensitively shaded and expressive playing of the evening. Elsewhere, the emphasis was more on rough-hewn vigor than on extreme tonal refinement. But Dr. Munch's approach was certainly justified and the concertos, with their fine rhythmic allegros and probing slow movements, held the audience enthralled.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 14 1957

MONDAY, JULY 8, 1957, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Second Thoughts On Music

Bach Festival Continues To Increase in Popularity

Six Brandenburg Concertos, 'St. Matthew Passion' And Other Works Heard at Tanglewood; Adele Addison Among Soloists Commended

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The first week of performances at the Berkshire Music Festival proved a great success. Some 12,000 persons attended the chamber music concert; student orchestra concert and the three performances devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach and directed by Charles Munch.

The Paganini String Quartet opened proceedings with an impressive concert consisting of the String Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2 by Beethoven; the first quartet of Alberto Ginastera, a Brazilian composer; and Ravel's String Quartet in F major. One heard some fine ensemble playing by a group of musicians who have played together since 1946.

There was special interest in the Ginastera quartet, since the young man had been a student of composition at the Berkshire Summer School a few years ago. It proved to be a vivid, rhythmic work which called for extreme skill on the part of the players. It is still slightly derivative, but gives promise of things to come. The audience seemed fascinated with it. The Ravel quartet received an ethereal reading and the Beethoven opus was a masterpiece of grace and charm.

The Bach Program

The Bach festival has grown steadily in popularity since it was instituted by Serge Koussevitzky. The largest audience of the week, 4500, was on hand to hear opening program and it was amply repaid. We have never heard a finer, performance of the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 for Orchestra with piano, violin and flute. Lukas Foss plays Bach in an exemplary manner and Mr. Burgin and Doriot Anthony Dywer provided violin and flute playing of high caliber.

Dr. Munch and the reduced orchestra he uses for these performances seem to have a special affection for Bach's music, so the sum total of this performance was high. Another superb performance was that of the Suite No. 2 in B minor, for flute and strings. Mr. Dwyer has played this work several times at Tanglewood and always receives a personal ovation. Her fine musicianship, command of the instrument and her personal charm combine to make a performance arresting.

There was also an excellent performance of the Concerto in C minor for two pianos played by Lukas Foss and Seymour Lipkin. The concert opened with a gracious performance of Suite No. 3 in D major for orchestra.

Brandenburg Concertos

The second concert was given over to performances of the remaining five Brandenburg concertos. Because the Boston Symphony has such fine first-desk men, the infinite variety of these concertos was set forth in magnificent fashion. We shall not soon forget the beauty of the Adagio of the first concerto; the charm of the Andante of Concerto No. 2 or the finale of Concerto No. 4.

Richard Burgin was at his most persuasive as soloist and concertmaster and Rogert Voisin again provided dazzling virtuosity on the trumpet as did Mrs. Dwyer on the flute. What might have proven, in less expert hands, an uninteresting program, was so vital and varied that it held the attention from beginning to end.

"St. Matthew Passion"

The final program o the Bach festival was devoted to Part 2 of the "St. Matthew Passion." The chorus was made up of members of the Radcliffe Chorale and the Harvard Glee Club, all experienced singers of the work. The solo quartet included Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass. Miss Addison and Mrs. Gramm are known to Springfield and Miss Kopleff and Mrs. McCollum are to be heard with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra next season when Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" will be sung.

Mr. McCollum has a fine voice and his command of it is absolute. He sang the long and trying role of the Evangelist with remarkable technical fluency and a thorough understanding of text. Mr. Gramm is one of the finest of the young basses and America is a fertile field for him. Miss Kopleff has a large voice and a personal warmth that wins the audience.

Miss Addison again revealed herself as a poised and sensitive artist, who made the most of the one opportunity provided in the second part of the "Passion." A fifth member, James Joyce, bass, so, held his own with this fine quartet. The chorus sang with vital tones and awareness of text. Mr. Munch appeared pleased with them, and well he might be, for their response to his demands was a tribute to their own conductor, G. Wallace Woodworth.

The music of Mozart was featured this afternoon, when a program of great interest is scheduled. It will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra K. 546. Two concertos will follow, the Concerto for Bassoon, in B flat major, K. 191, and the Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K 495. Sherman Walt will be solo bassoonist and James Stagliano the horn soloist.

The final work on the program will be the "Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, K. 297b. Soloists will include Messrs. Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet, and Sherman Walt, Stagliano and Sherman Walt. The concert will begin at 2:30 p. m.

THE JACKSONVILLE JOURNAL, Section II, July 11, 1957

TANGLEWOOD
July 5, 6, 7
By A. C. S.

Johann Sebastian Bach and his wealth of music lay in virtual obscurity from his death in 1750 until Mendelssohn rediscovered him in 1829. Since then, his compositions have gained ever greater popularity and, judging from the number of people who attended the first weekend of concerts in Lenox, his box office appeal has never been higher than at the present. All three concerts were devoted to the polyphonic master and all three were sold out.

Friday

A varied program was presented Friday evening: the 2nd and 3rd Suites, the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5, and the Concerto in C minor for Two Pianos. The Suite No. 3, which has become a staple at Tanglewood, featured Doriot Anthony Dwyer as flute soloist. As usual she played beautifully and was recalled to repeat the final Badinerie. The Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 also utilized the services of Mrs. Dwyer and Richard Burgin, violinist. The keyboard soloist was Lukas Foss who playing throughout, and especially in the great solo in the first movement, was wonderfully modulated and articulate. The Suite No. 3 and the Two-piano Concerto, which opened and closed the program respectively, seemed overly heavy to this listener and the choice of tempo might be considered "romantic" at best. Seymour Lipkin joined Mr. Foss at the other piano.

Saturday

The remaining five of the six Brandenburg Concerto comprised the program for Saturday evening. They were presented almost in order with the exception of the 4th, full of brilliance, which was chosen to conclude the concert. Perhaps the most telling performance was that of the 6th Brandenburg, where the violas with their vibrance really stole the show from the more brightly colored instruments featured in the remaining concert. One senses again a more 19th century approach to the music (with the exception of the above mentioned 6th Concerto) than a purist would like for.

Sunday

After two concerts devoted to secular works by the Baroque master, Charles Munch chose the second part of the massive Passion According To St. Matthew, to close the series. Members of the Boston Symphony made up the orchestra and Daniel Pinkham was harpsichordist, Alfred Nash Patterson was organist, and Alfred Zighera played the viola da gambba. The vocal soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, Donald Gramm and James Joyce, basses. It seemed to this listener that Mr. McCollum, in the exacting role of narrator, had never sung to more advantage both from a vocal and interpretive viewpoint. The Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society gave ample evidence of the heights choral sing-

[1237]

Music Review

Eagle, July 8

Tanglewood Weekend Concerts

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST weekend of the Berkshire Festival ended yesterday afternoon with a magnificent performance of a major share of Bach's "The Passion According to St. Matthew." The performers were the small abridged group of players from the Boston Symphony Orchestra which Charles Munch is directing in these two weekends of Bach and Mozart, assisted by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, trained by G. Wallace Woodsworth.

To accommodate the large numbers of singers participating and also to seat the large audience which attended, the great Shed was used for the first time this season for a formal concert.

* * *

THE ENTIRE oratorio was not sung; only the opening chorus and practically all of part III. Woodsworth had his hundred-odd fresh, youthful voices in tip-top condition and through their instant reflection of Munch's demands they gave character and style on a broad palette to every note they sang. There was crisp and incisive vigor to their attacks and, at other and proper times, deep devotion to their singing, especially in the short modal interludes. Bach places at frequent resting spots throughout the pilgrimage as though they are roadside invitations to prayer.

Much of the story is told by the Evangelist whose role was sung with great understanding and vocal amplitude by John McCollum. The orchestra and chorus are divided into two opposing and answering ensembles. The orchestra, in addition to its normal dispersion, employs a harpsichord, played by Daniel Pinkham, an organ, played by Alfred Nash Patterson and a viola da gamba. This latter instrument, now so rarely played, was masterfully used by Alfred Zighera to accompany the bass solo "Komm suesses Kreuz," sung by James Joyce. The viol solo consists of florid passages between sonorous chordal progressions, and Zighera penetrated both the instrument and the music with exceptional comprehension.

* * *

ONE of McCollum's most gratifying opportunities occurs in the recitativo "Mein Jesus schweight" and the following aria "Geduld" which he sang with marked suavity and effectiveness in all registers. The second half of the "Passion" offers but little chance for the beautiful voice of soprano Adele Addison, but she grasped her scant opportunities with her wonted control and used the opulence she has always shown since her student days at the Berkshire Music Center with her usual lofty understanding.

The concert master of the first orchestra, Richard Burgin, has a gracefully embellished solo while the chorus sings "Erbarme dich"; his counterpart in the second orchestra, Alfred Krips, has a more pyrotechnical assignment when the second chorus sings "Gebt mir meinum Jesum" which he accomplished with deft distinction.

One of the James Joyce's most telling moments was the recitative "Am Abend," and the ensuing aria into which Munch allowed him to proceed after holding up the entire performance until a passing airplane had receded into the quiet distance. Florence Kopleff, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass, were valuable contributors to the small elite group of soloists.

* * *

MUNCH commanded his forces with a majestic domination, giving breadth and grandeur to the many moving choruses Bach has so abundantly supplied in this immortal work. His control was matched and abetted by the remarkably well trained choruses. In such dramatic but hazardous instances as the arresting shout of the chorus "Barabbam," the impact was theatrically spectacular.

* * *

SATURDAY evening Munch played all the Brandenburg concertos except the fifth which he had played on the preceding and opening program, playing three before intermission and two afterwards. The theater-concert hall was filled to the last seat and the crowds on the surrounding lawns and walks stretched far back under the sheltering trees.

The Brandenburgs provide vast scope in orchestral color as well as great variety in material because of Bach's device of altering the instrumentation in every one of the six concertos. The surface simplicity yields incalculable treasures if sufficient research and concentration are applied. This was not consistently apparent Saturday night, yet there were continual evidences of felicitous combinations of rhythmic decisions and tonal balances to delight the audience which, on such evenings, always includes a portion of Brandenburg aficionados.

* * *

THE FIRST Brandenburg closes with a minuet which employs three oboes, two horns and a bassoon as well as the usual strings, but, as he proceeds, Bach gives the trio to only two oboes and the bassoon, then a Polacca (here a denationalized Polish dance) is only for the strings. Still further on he adds a second trio, this time for the horns and the oboes, thus giving everyone his day at court. The artists of the orchestra made full use of their opportunities for display.

In this same concerto Bach wrote a solo part for a violino piccolo, an instrument of slightly smaller size than the conventional violin and pitched a third higher. Burgin played the solo with conviction and style but retained his usual instrument. In the second Brandenburg Bach called for another instrument now also obsolete, a trumpet in F. The solo trumpet of the orchestra, Roger Voisin, used a special high-pitched instrument to reach the lofty register Bach required. The tone is shrill and piercing but its achievement is a minor triumph. We are often so hypnotized by the marvels of Voisin's accomplishments that we fail to note that this is one of Bach's gayest moments. The trumpet's final four bars include a sustained high F which was hit hard, clear and clean.

* * *

THE THIRD concerto, for strings only, is a fiddler's holiday and the sonority of the miniature Boston orchestra was a great joy. Munch played the two-note adagio bridge as written and did not interpose another and foreign Bach excerpt as is the custom at other times.

After intermission came the sixth, for strings alone, but with even the violins left out. The viola timbre was utilized by Bach with telling effect and the viola section, divided into two sections, sparked by principal viola Joseph de Pasquale, played with a vibrancy that was not constantly evident during the evening. The rich tonal texture is one of Bach's most lovely works and it was beautifully played.

* * *

TO CLOSE, the fourth Brandenburg brought back two flutes to join the strings, Mrs. Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis. The violin solo here, again by concertmaster Burgin, was conspicuously well done. The solo in this concerto can emerge with less diversionary distractions than in the other solo opportunities and it was a genuine pleasure to hear the venerated violinist rise to the occasion so nobly. The final fugue is

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 8 1957

BACH FESTIVAL ENDS WITH FINE PERFORMANCE

Sp fed Union 7/8

Audience of 3470 Hears 'St. Matthew Passion' At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 7—The Bach festival concluded this afternoon with a towering performance of the "St. Matthew Passion," which drew an audience of 3470 people. The three week-end performances devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach drew a total audience of 10,725 people. Also during the past week, the initial chamber music concert by the Paganini string quartet drew 873 people and the first student orchestra concert drew 2300 people.

Superb Resources

Charles Munch chose to perform part two of the "St. Matthew Passion," plus the opening double chorus of part one. He had superb resources with which to work. The Radcliffe chorale and the Harvard Glee Club formed the chorus. The quintet of soloists included Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm and James Joyce, basses. Daniel Pinkham was harpsichordist; Alfred Nash Patterson, the organist and Alfred Zighera played the viola da gamba.

The chorus, a bit on the light side as far as the male singers were concerned, sang with spirit and gave sympathetic utterance to the lovely chorales. The bulk of the solo work is upon the tenor and John McCollum was equal to all demands. His voice is very fine and his command of it absolute. Miss Kopleff's voice is large and warm and she displayed fine musicianship. Miss Kopleff and Mr. McCollum will be heard in Springfield when the Springfield Symphony and Symphony Chorus perform Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis."

Donald Gramm, who sang last season for the Tuesday Morning Music Club in Springfield, sang with real style and vocal opulence and the same may be said of Mr. Joyce. Adele Addison sang her taxing solo exquisitely. She was a poised and beautiful artist.

The men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were in fine form and it was not their fault that Mr. Munch sometimes demanded more tone than was necessary. All in all, this was a very fine performance and a fitting climax to a Bach festival which has been marked by consistently splendid performances.

Next week and will be devoted to three performances of the works of Mozart and some wonderful music lies ahead. Wednesday night, the chamber music concert will feature Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz in piano duets by Schubert and Hindemith. They will also play for the performances of the Liebeslieder waltzes by Brahms which will be sung by a quartet made up of Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass.

Tanglewood Season Opens -

Thousands in the Berkshires For Three Programs of Bach

By Harold Rogers

Lenox, Mass.

Tanglewood, when one stops to think about it, runs counter to the pattern deemed necessary by most Americans for success.

There are no billboards along the roads, advertising its wares; only small, discreet signs pointing the way. There are no neon lights, flashing or otherwise. There are no public address systems hammering at the ear drums. There are no barkers, urging the public to buy programs, hotdogs or soda pop.

Yet thousands of Americans drive many miles every summer to congregate peaceably on an idyllic estate in the Berkshires. They have been doing so for 29 years. What is the commodity offered?

Good music. Nothing more.

What was the commodity this last weekend, the opening of the twentieth season at Tanglewood?

The music of Johann Sebastian Bach. Nothing more.

Yet nothing more was needed, for few music lovers need to be told that in the universality of Bach one finds all. Only two other composers could measure up to the rigorous test of having three consecutive concerts drawn from their works — Beethoven and Mozart. There may be one or two others, for special tastes. But Bach, Beethoven, and Mozart are indisputable. (This coming weekend will be Mozart's turn.)

The Bach concert Friday night was one of those rare occasions superlative from first to last. Charles Munch was in top form, as were his soloists. Opening with the Suite No. 3 in D major, he took his small orchestra of Boston Symphony players through the dances with a spirited zip and starchy vitality; and the favorite Air evoked a skybound mood of poignant serenity.

The three soloists for the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 were Luke Foss, pianist; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist; and Richard Burgin, violinist. Mr. Foss has long been known as a Bach player par excellence, and the verve, facility, and joy of his playing in this concerto was of the caliber called unforgettable, especially his stunning cadenza in the opening movement. The three soloists united in celestial discourse for the Adagio affettuoso, and the final Allegro came forth with coruscating brillance.

Since joining the Boston Symphony, Mrs. Dwyer has been making the Flute Suite No. 2 in B minor her very own; and she can't play it too often for this listener. It is also becoming a tradition for Dr. Munch to permit her an encore of the final Badinerie, that sprightly little tour de force that she dashes off with no apparent effort.

In the encore Dr. Munch drew a laugh as he set the tempo and then stopped conducting as he sat on one of the pianos parked close to the podium. Here he relaxed until time to bring the section to a close. Mrs. Dwyer received what was perhaps the largest ovation of her career—larger than her Symphony Hall ovations which have been considerable.

In the Concerto in C minor for Two Pianos, No. 1, Mr. Foss was joined by another fine pianist, Seymour Lipkin, for a flawless and sensitive performance, thus bringing an eminently satisfying evening to climactic conclusion.

It is unfortunate that one cannot continue writing in the same vein about the Saturday night program devoted to the remaining five Brandenburg Concertos. But while Dr. Munch appeared to be in the same fine fettle and was undoubtedly enjoying himself as much as he did the night before, he was unaccountably erratic. Four or five times he took a rallentando when his players apparently did not expect one, and the music disassembled like cascades of broken glass. But, if precision was sometimes wanting, a hearty spirit was not; the entire program was filled with good-natured entertainment.

Roger Voisin has played the piping high trumpet part in the No. 2 better in the past; and Mr. Burgin's violin playing throughout the evening left a slightly uncomfortable impression. It was not flat enough to be called flat, nor yet was it always exactly on pitch. It was tired playing. In the No. 4 the flute solos were beautifully inscribed by Mrs. Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis.

Dr. Munch devoted the Sunday afternoon concert to the Passion According to St. Matthew (opening chorus and Part II), which we heard at Easter in Symphony Hall. Even the same forces were reassembled, with the exception of Mack Harrell whose place was taken by Donald Gramm, an equally commendable baritone. There were the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, who were trained, of course, by G. Wallace Woodworth. And there were Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and James Joyce, bass.

It was a performance marked by sincere devotion and beauty of spirit.

James Abresch

Saramae Endich will be soprano soloist in a concert of chamber music Wednesday night at Tanglewood.

Eagle July 8

Music Review

Tanglewood Weekend Concerts

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST weekend of the Berkshire Festival ended yesterday afternoon with a magnificent performance of a major share of Bach's "The Passion According to St. Matthew." The performers were the small abridged group of players from the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch is directing these two weekends of Bach and Mozart, assisted by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, trained by G. Wallace Woodsworth.

To accommodate the large numbers of singers participating and also to seat the large audience which attended, the great shed was used for the first time this season for a formal concert.

* * *

THE ENTIRE oratorio was not sung; only the opening chorus and practically all of part III. Woodsworth had his hundred-odd fresh, youthful voices in tip-top condition and through their instant reflection of Munch's demands they gave character and style on a broad palette to every note they sang: There was crisp and incisive vigor to their attacks and, at other and proper times, deep devotion to their singing, especially in the short modal interludes Bach places at frequent resting spots throughout the pilgrimage as though they are roadside invitations to prayer.

Much of the story is told by the Evangelist whose role was sung with great understanding and vocal amplitude by John McCollum. The orchestra and chorus are divided into two opposing and answering ensembles. The orchestra, in addition to its normal dispersion, employs a harpsichord, played by Daniel Pinkham, an organ, played by Alfred Nash Patterson and a viola da gamba. This latter instrument, now so rarely played, was masterfully used by Alfred Zighera to accompany the bass solo "Komm suesses Kreuz," sung by James Joyce. The viol solo consists of florid passages between sonorous chordal progressions, and Zighera penetrated both the instrument and the music with exceptional comprehension.

* * *

ONE of McCollum's most gratifying opportunities occurs in the recitativo "Mein Jesus schweight" and the following aria "Geduld" which he sang with marked suavity and effectiveness in all registers. The second half of the "Passion" offers but little chance for the beautiful voice of soprano Adele Addison, but she grasped her scant opportunities with her wonted control and used the opulence she has always shown since her student days at the Berkshire Music Center with her usual lofty understanding.

The concert master of the first orchestra, Richard Burgin, has a gracefully embellished solo while the chorus sings "Erbarme dich"; his counterpart in the second orchestra, Alfred Krips, has a more pyrotechnical assignment when the second chorus sings "Gebt mir meinum Jesum" which he accomplished with deft distinction.

One of the James Joyce's most telling moments was the recitative "Am Abend," and the ensuing aria into which Munch allowed him to proceed after holding up the entire performance until a passing airplane had receded into the quiet distance. Florence Kopleff, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass, were valuable contributors to the small elite group of soloists.

* * *

MUNCH commanded his forces with a majestic domination, giving breadth and grandeur to the many moving choruses Bach has so abundantly supplied in this immortal work. His control was matched and abetted by the remarkably well trained choruses. In such dramatic but hazardous instances as the arresting shout of the chorus "Barabbam," the impact was theatrically spectacular.

* * *

SATURDAY evening Munch played all the Brandenburg concertos except the fifth which he had played on the preceding and opening program, playing three before intermission and two afterwards. The theater-concert hall was filled to the last seat and the crowds on the surrounding lawns and walks stretched far back under the sheltering trees.

The Brandenburgs provide vast scope in orchestral color as well as great variety in material because of Bach's device of altering the instrumentation in every one of the six concertos. The surface simplicity yields incalculable treasures if sufficient research and concentration are applied. This was not consistently apparent Saturday night, yet there were continual evidences of felicitous combinations of rhythmic decisions and tonal balances to delight the audience which, on such evenings, always include a portion of Brandenburg aficionados.

* * *

THE FIRST Brandenburg closes with a minuet which employs three oboes, two horns and a bassoon as well as the usual strings, but, as he proceeds, Bach gives the trio to only two oboes and the bassoon, then a Polacca (here a denationalized Polish dance) is only for the strings. Still further on he adds a second trio, this time for the horns and the oboes, thus giving everyone his day at court. The artists of the orchestra made full use of their opportunities for display.

In this same concerto Bach wrote a solo part for a violino piccolo, an instrument of slightly smaller size than the conventional violin and pitched a third higher. Burgin played the solo with conviction and style but retained his usual instrument. In the second Brandenburg Bach called for another instrument now also obsolete, a trumpet in F. The solo trumpet of the orchestra, Roger Voisin, used a special high-pitched instrument to reach the lofty register Bach required. The tone is shrill and piercing but its achievement is a minor triumph. We are often so hypnotized by the marvels of Voisin's accomplishments that we fail to note that this is one of Bach's gayest moments. The trumpet's final four bars include a sustained high F which was hit hard, clear and clean.

* * *

THE THIRD concerto, for strings only, is a fiddler's holiday and the sonority of the miniature Boston orchestra was a great joy. Munch played the two-note adagio bridge as written and did not interpose another and foreign Bach excerpt as is the custom at other times.

After intermission came the sixth, for strings alone, but with even the violins left out. The viola timbre was utilized by Bach with telling effect and the viola section, divided into two sections, sparked by prinoipal viola Joseph de Pasquale, played with a vibrancy that was not constantly evident during the evening. The rich tonal texture is one of Bach's most lovely works and it was beautifully played.

* * *

TO CLOSE, the fourth Brandenburg brought back two flutes to join the strings, Mrs. Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis. The violin solo here, again by concertmaster Burgin, was conspicuously well done. The solo in this concerto can emerge with less diversionary distractions than in the other solo opportunities and it was a genuine pleasure to hear the venerated violinist rise to the occasion so nobly. The final fugue is a rousing piece and in the coda has three highly dramatic caesuras which are intensely exciting. Munch took full advantage of these eloquent silences and deserves a premium for his Bach stops.

BACH FESTIVAL ENDS WITH FINE PERFORMANCE

Spfd Union 7/8

Audience of 3470 Hears 'St. Matthew Passion' At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 7—The Bach festival concluded this afternoon with a towering performance of the "St. Matthew Passion," which drew an audience of 3470 people. The three week-end performances devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach drew a total audience of 10,725 people. Also during the past week, the initial chamber music concert by the Paganini string quartet drew 873 people and the first student orchestra concert drew 2300 people.

Superb Resources

Charles Munch chose to perform part two of the "St. Matthew Passion," plus the opening double chorus of part one. He had superb resources with which to work. The Radcliffe chorale and the Harvard Glee Club formed the chorus. The quintet of soloists included Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm and James Joyce, basses. Daniel Pinkham was harpsichordist; Alfred Nash Patterson, the organist and Alfred Zighera played the viola da gamba.

The chorus, a bit on the light side as far as the male singers were concerned, sang with spirit and gave sympathetic utterance to the lovely chorales. The bulk of the solo work is upon the tenor and John McCollum was equal to all demands. His voice is very fine and his command of it absolute. Miss Kopleff's voice is large and warm and she displayed fine musicianship. Miss Kopleff and Mr. McCollum will be heard in Springfield when the Springfield Symphony and Symphony Chorus perform Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis."

Donald Gramm, who sang last season for the Tuesday Morning Music Club in Springfield, sang with real style and vocal opulence and the same may be said of Mr. Joyce. Adele Addison sang her taxing solo exquisitely. She was a poised and beautiful artist.

The men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were in fine form and it was not their fault that Mr. Munch sometimes demanded more tone than was necessary. All in all, this was a very fine performance and a fitting climax to a Bach festival which has been marked by consistently splendid performances.

Next week end will be devoted to three performances of the works of Mozart and some wonderful music lies ahead. Wednesday night, the chamber music concert will feature Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz in piano duets by Schubert and Hindemith. They will also play for the performances of the Liebeslieder waltzes by Brahms which will be sung by a quartet made up of Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass.

...ood Season Opens -

...the Berkshires For Three Programs of Bach

By Harold Rogers

Lenox, Mass.

Tanglewood, when one stops to think about it, runs counter to the pattern deemed necessary by most Americans for success.

There are no billboards along the roads, advertising its wares; only small, discreet signs pointing the way. There are no neon lights, flashing or otherwise. There are no public address systems hammering at the ear drums. There are no barkers, urging the public to buy programs, hotdogs or soda pop.

Yet thousands of Americans drive many miles every summer to congregate peaceably on an idyllic estate in the Berkshires. They have been doing so for 20 years. What is the commodity offered?

Good music. Nothing more.

What was the commodity this last weekend, the opening of the twentieth season at Tanglewood?

The music of Johann Sebastian Bach. Nothing more.

Yet nothing more was needed, for few music lovers need to be told that in the universality of Bach one finds all. Only two other composers could measure up to the rigorous test of having three consecutive concerts drawn from their works — Beethoven and Mozart. There may be one or two others, for special tastes. But Bach, Beethoven, and Mozart are indisputable. (This coming weekend will be Mozart's turn.)

The Bach concert Friday night was one of those rare occasions superlative from first to last. Charles Munch was in top form, as were his soloists. Opening with the Suite No. 3 in D major, he took his small orchestra of Boston Symphony players through the dances with a spirited zip and starchy vitality; and the favorite Air evoked a skybound mood of poignant serenity.

The three soloists for the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 were Luke Foss, pianist; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist; and Richard Burgin, violinist. Mr. Foss has long been known as a Bach player par excellence, and the verve, facility, and joy of his playing in this concerto was of the caliber called unforgettable, especially his stunning cadenza in the opening movement. The three soloists united in celestial discourse for the Adagio affettuoso, and the final Allegro came forth with coruscating brillance.

Since joining the Boston Symphony, Mrs. Dwyer has been making the Flute Suite No. 2 in B minor her very own; and she can't play it too often for this listener. It is also becoming a tradition for Dr. Munch to permit her an encore of the final Badinerie, that sprightly little tour de force that she dashes off with no apparent effort.

In the encore Dr. Munch drew a laugh as he set the tempo and then stopped conducting as he sat on one of the pianos parked close to the podium. Here he relaxed until time to bring the section to a close. Mrs. Dwyer received what was perhaps the largest ovation of her career—larger than her Symphony Hall ovations which have been considerable.

In the Concerto in C minor for Two Pianos, No. 1, Mr. Foss was joined by another fine pianist, Seymour Lipkin, for a flawless and sensitive performance, thus bringing an eminently satisfying evening to climactic conclusion.

It is unfortunate that one cannot continue writing in the same vein about the Saturday night program devoted to the remaining five Brandenburg Concertos. But while Dr. Munch appeared to be in the same fine fettle and was undoubtedly enjoying himself as much as he did the night before, he was unaccountably erratic. Four or five times he took a rallentando when his players apparently did not expect one, and the music disassembled like cascades of broken glass. But if precision was sometimes wanting, a hearty spirit was not; the entire program was filled with good-natured entertainment.

Roger Voisin has played the piping high trumpet part in the No. 2 better in the past; and Mr. Burgin's violin playing throughout the evening left a slightly uncomfortable impression. It was not flat enough to be called flat, nor yet was it always exactly on pitch. It was tired playing. In the No. 4 the flute solos were beautifully inscribed by Mrs. Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis.

Dr. Munch devoted the Sunday afternoon concert to the Passion According to St. Matthew (opening chorus and Part III) which we heard at Easter in Symphony Hall. Even the same forces were reassembled, with the exception of Mack Harrell whose place was taken by Donald Gramm, an equally commendable baritone. There were the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, who were trained, of course, by G. Wallace Woodworth. And there were Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and James Joyce, bass.

It was a performance marked by sincere devotion and beauty of spirit.

James Abresch

Saramae Endich will be soprano soloist in a concert of chamber music Wednesday night at Tanglewood.

[1247]

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, JULY 6, 1957

PIANIST: Seymour Lipkin, who was heard last evening at the Berkshire Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

JUL 6 – 1957

Tanglewood's On, Audience Same, Music Traditional

By EVANS CLINCHY

Lenox, Mass. — Neither time nor the erosions of critical suggestion, it would seem, have had any effect on the hugely successful Berkshire Music Festival here at Tanglewood.

The opening weekend up here in the hills is traditionally devoted to the music of Bach and, I'm afraid, to a very select canon. Generally speaking, Tanglewood itself and the opening weekend programs have changed little from last year. Or the year before that and the year before that.

* * *

AS FOR the physical setting and the audience, the sacred traditions are quite intact. The grounds are still green and pastoral, the people, the same.

The music, too, displays the same veneration of the established tradition.

What requires a word or two here is the fact that Bach's orchestra output is not limited to six Brandenburg Concerts, Four Suites and a few choral works. Yet season after season, we hear all six Brandenburgs and at least one or two of the suites. Bach did write other things too.

Last night for example the Fifth Brandenburg was presented with the harpsichord part played on the piano by Lukas Foss as only he can play it. He knows how to take the adapted music, provide it with a strong, flawless rhythmic foundation and then build the singing, twisting melodies upon this solid ground. His performance of the cadenza in the first movement is surely worth hearing year after year, even if such a statement tends to weaken my argument

We also were given brisk, hearty readings under Charles Munch's lively hand of the Third and Second Suites. The Second gave Mr. Munch and his orchestra the chance to show off enormously talented lady flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer. Mrs. Dwyer, whose bob and weave is equalled only by that of Willie Pep, did such a splendid job that the final badinerie movement had to be repeated.

* * *

THE ONLY PIECE that might be called a novelty was the Double Concerto in C Minor performed as a two piano work by Mr. Foss and Seymour Lipkin. The performance was reasonably successful, but it might even be nice some time to hear this admirable work in its violin and oboe form.

It is conceivable that the Boston Symphony is also equipped musically to perform one or more of the harpsichord concertos, the violin pieces, single or double, perhaps the Triple Concerto or the Double C Major Harpsichord. We might even give Daniel Pinkham, who rendered fine-grained support on the harpsichord last night, a chance at a solo.

Does all this mean that Tanglewood is becoming stodgy, solidified into little more than a musical tourist trap? Not yet, perhaps, but the danger exists.

PROGRAM OF BACH HEARD AT LENOX

Munch Conducts the First Symphonic Concert of the 20th Summer Season

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 5—The Berkshire Festival's twentieth season at Tanglewood has been opening by degrees. On Sunday the Berkshire Music Center began its sessions. The first chamber music concert was on Wednesday and tonight there was the first symphonic concert.

However, it was not one of the big concerts by the full Boston Symphony in the big fan-shaped shed. Following the custom established by the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1945, it was a Bach program by a chamber orchestra in the 1,200-seat theatre-concert hall.

Because the evening gave promise of being so lovely, the concert attracted an audience of 2,755. But the overflow audience on the lawn had rather a damp time. A brief downpour just before the start of the program drenched the ground. However, the storm passed quickly and, after darkness fell, there were bright stars and a brilliant half-moon in the sky.

The opening week-end is to be devoted to Bach. For his first concert Charles Munch fittingly chose four of Bach's most light-hearted and festal works. They were the Second and Third Orchestral Suites, the Fifth "Brandenburg" Concerto and the C Minor Concerto for Two Pianos.

In addition to their intrinsic worth, the works gave solo opportunities to four talented instrumentalists. Lukas Foss, pianist-composer, and Oriot Anthony Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, both had two chances to shine. They shared the spotlight in the "Brandenburg" with Richard Burgin, the Boston's concertmaster.

Mrs. Dwyer was heard again in the Second Suite, which is almost a flute concerto. And Mr. Foss was heard again when he joined Seymour Lipkin in the Concerto for Two Pianos.

The Third Suite opened the program and Mr. Munch led it in a performance that was virile and rhythmically strong, but also a shade heavy in spirit and coarse in texture.

The "Brandenburg" that followed had more buoyancy. Mr. Foss' long solo in the first movement was especially notable. In the adagio affettuoso for the three soloists without accompaniment he, Mrs. Dwyer and Mr. Burgin played so tenderly and expressively that they held the audience in a silence deep enough for one to hear the leaf obligato provided by the rustling trees surrounding the open sides of the hall.

Repeat Performance

Mrs. Dwyer played in the Second Suite with clarity of articulation, beauty of tone, subtlety of phrasing and, in the closing badinerie, with so much infectious joyousness that the movement had to be repeated.

Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Foss also played the Double Piano Concerto with remarkable spirit. They had so much mutual confidence that each could let himself play freely and decisively in the two swift movements. And in the intervening adagio they played with a melting lyricism. In all movements, too, their tones were so well matched that they suggested a team that had been playing together a long time.

In all the works with soloists Mr. Munch provided reticent accompaniments, and he beamed paternally on the young artists as the audience expressed its delight in their playing.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

JUL 6 1957

'57 Festival Opens At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. July 5 (Special) — Amidst the intermittent showers, which, along with music, will be Tanglewood's contribution to the International Geophysical Year, the orchestral concerts of the 1957 Berkshire Music Festival began here tonight.

For the next xsiweekends, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play a total of eighteen programs, each Friday, Saturday and Sunday and arranged as a package deal. This weekend it is Bach, next Mozart, and after that Tschaikowsky, Berlioz, Brahms and Beethoven will have their fling, with a lesser array of other composers flung in for good measure.

Brilliant Performance

The Bach and Mozart events are being held chiefly in the Tanglewood Music-Hall Theater, one of the more rustic pavilions of the local layout, of which the raw, unvarnished sidings and open plumbing ort well with rusticity established by the murmuring pines and the hemlocks. This year the management has decided to augment the idyllic atmosphere with inside fireflies. They coursed the aisle during the performance tonight and added to the decors immeasurably.

Perhaps all of the winking little lights were not wah-wah-taysee, little firely. Possibly a number of them were sparks thrown off by the brilliant performance of Lukas Foss, who played the long solo stretch in the Fifth Brandenburg Concerto with such pianistic flair and elan that the audience noisily dmeanded he rise and take bows twice between movements, which is a kind of letting down of the back hair not generally given into by those bred up with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Certainly Mr. Foss was the best part of the first half of tonight's performance. The evening had opened with a hit-or-miss account of the Suite No. 3 in D Major, and members of the audience who were sitting up to the plimsoll line (or is it down?) in puddles left by the deluge that hit just at concert time, must have felt they were sodden to no great purpose. The orchestra was at sixes and sevens, and Mr. Munch seemed to have neither men or music.

Fine Musician

But happily, as the evening progressed, it became steadily better. Richard Vurgin, violin, Doriot Anthony, flute and Mr. Foss tucked into the concerto quite handsomely, and the music began to sound. Apparently spurred by the skills of this concertino, the other musicians steadied off. The evening was jelling.

I was unable to hear the final C Minor Concerto for two pianos, in which Mr. Foss and Seymour Lipkin were engaged. But the preceding work on the program, the B Minor Suite No. 2 for flute and strings, was for me superlative enough a finale.

Miss Anthony positively gleamed as she went through long array of movements, one after the other with increasing virtuosity and loveliness until she tossed off the concluding badinerie with an excitement which brought the audience up standing. What a musician, what a stylist!

It was in this work, too, that Mr. Munch and the orchestra shone. Here they achieved perfection of playing and beauty of spirit in their celebrated tradition. This was total quality all the way around. Mr. Munch's Bach is elegant and alert music, though in the suave French rather than in the emotionally deeper German temper. It is cool and silvery, and not very highly colored. This is not my favorite kind of Bach, but it is interesting and engaging if not especially moving. To hear it is like seeing the works of a finely-made watch go round. It fascinates, and that is satisfaction of a kind, I suppose.

The music hall, which seats some 1,200 persons, was filled to its unplaned rafters, and another 1,500 sat outside, apparently rapt in emotions of music-listening that kept them warm, in addition to their blankets.

T.H.P.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1957

Tanglewood Hall Sold Out For Week End of Bach

By Jay S. Harrison

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

Boston Symphony Chambr Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloists, Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, pianists; Richard Burgin, violinist; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist. The program: Suite No. 3 in D major, for Orchestra; Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 in D major, for Orchestra with Piano, Flute and Violin; Supite No. 2 in B minor, for Flute and Strings; Concerto in C minor, for Two Pianos, No. 1...Bach.

LENOX, Mass., July 6.—The interest of Bach fans are usually divided when the chips are down concerning their hero. Some intellectualize about his life and times, others marvel at his inexhaustible genius and technical ingenuity, and o third group, while listening to his music, is content merely to bask in the presence of a great creative mind. But these factors, so far as Bach's continuing reputation is concerned, are essentially unimportant. What really counts is this: he makes money at the box office.

Why else, for example, would the Berkshire Music Festival begin last night its twentieth season at Tanglewood with a week end devoted entirely to the works of the Cantor of Leipzig? Of course, the fact that it has on hand a host of specialists in matters Bachian is not to be likely discounted; but as a profit-making institution Tanglewood is perfectly willing to help fill the public's voracious appetite for the divine Johann, the wisdom of its policy being best indicated by the fact that the Theater-Concert Hall, in which the event took place, was sold out to the doors.

Not a ticket buyer, I suspect, despite a sudden rain that drenched late comers and held the audience on the lawn to a minimum, had cause for disappointment. What the listeners heard was good Bach, lots of it, and played to the hilt.

The Suite No. 3, with which Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened the program, was throughout elegant and notable for its lack of greasy exaggeration in phraseology and dynamic. In addition, the maestro's reading was more exact and regular in rhythm than I recall it from previous performances, though this regularity did not in the least precludes resilience and flexibility. Indeed, the rubbery bounce and energy of it all was as infectious as the laugh of a child. To Mr. Munch's enormous credit, may also be added that he is fully aware that the baroque was an era of unmixed orchestral color, precisely as the Nineteenth Century was era of color blending. And thus the individual sonority planes of the score each stood out brightly for their own sake and were not submerged in a welter of homogeneous sound.

It was the presence of Lukas Foss that galvanized the Fifth Brandenburg Concerto into the spectacular achievement it quickly became. And it was spectacular, even though some of the work's implied poetry was scuttled in the process of allowing Mr. Foss to overpower his concertino colleagues, Richard Burgin and Doriot Anthony Dwyer. Nonetheless, his sense of style, his impeccable musicianship and his nimble fingers frequently caused deserved gasps of admiration throughout the hall.

No less marked in its dexterity was Mrs. Dwyer's account of the B Minor Suite for which Mr. Munch supplied an orchestral accompaniment of leaf silver depth and texture. Actually, Mrs. Dwyer is not a flutist of the high-powered school, her tendencies leaning toward gentility of statement and aristocracy of phrase. Her instincts, furthermore, are ever right, as she clearly appreciates that the grand manner is not for her and therefore avoids an artistic pose that would ill suit her temperament. What she gave us, in all, was a gracious, charming, alert suite which, when it was over, brought the audience to its feet.

In response to the applause, Mrs. Dwyer finally took a deep, deep breath and encored the concluding Badinerie.

The evening closed with a superb perform ance of the Concerto in C Minor for two pianos, played by Mr. Foss and Seymour Lipkin, and it is hard to imagine any two gentlemen not professionally allied as duo-pianists doing as well. The reading had spunk, pace and power. It was vital, too, and rich in keyboard color. More important still—and this was the clew to listening pleasures received—it was at once carefully rehearsed and yet as spontaneous as tomorrow's news.

NEW YORK POST, SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1957

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

All-Bach Opens Berkshire Festival

Lenox, Mass., July 6—Bach came through undaunted here Friday night at the opening of the Berkshire Festival, despite a downpour of uninhibited rain directly preceding the concert. In addition to the sold-out 1,200-seat theater-concert hall, more than 1,500 music lovers overflowed onto the grass outside to hear a chamber complement of the Boston Symphony perform two suites, a Brandenburg Concerto and the C Minor Concerto for Two Pianos.

The event found Charles Munch and his ensemble at their most relaxed and vigorous best. Among the soloists, the strongest asset was the Bostonians' personable lady solo flutist, Oriot Anthony Dwyer, whose spirited playing of the Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings brought forth such applause that she responded with an encore, a repetition of the rollicking movement.

Her remarkable performance of the same piece last year occasioned the same procedure. The only difference this season was that Munch displayed such confidence in her and his orchestra that during most of the encore he sat down on the piano lid and ostensibly rested, except for an occasional hand gesture during almost the entire selection. Needless to say, the audience relished such startling behavior on the part of the French maestro and almost upset the applecart through their chuckles.

Lukas Foss came in a close second with his playing of the solo-piano part in the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 and for his contribution in the first piano part of the concerto. He was sensitive and forthright in his approach to both works, coming through with strong accents and a dynamic, rhythmic pulse, yet not neglecting the more subtle aspects of tone color. Seymour Lipkin also performed expertly at the second piano for the concerto. The audience throughout was militant in its enthusiasm for what was, in this listener's opinion, one of the best concerts of Bach's music ever performed here by Munch and his orchestra.

Sunday afternoon's program, consisting of Part II of The St. Matthew Passion, will take place in the Music Shed, allowing 6,000 to sit inside with unlimited room outside on the grass, weather permitting. The Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society will collaborate together with soloists. These latter include soprano Adele Addison and contralto Florence Kopleff.

The current all-Bach week-end will be followed next week, beginning Friday night, by three all-Mozart concerts. Opening night and the Sunday matinee, July 14, will be in the smaller hall, while Saturday night, July 13, the concert of three Mozart symphonies will take place in the shed.

C1257

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 7, 1957

4500 APPLAUD BACH CONCERTOS AT TANGLEWOOD

Composer's Genius Revealed in Performance of Boston Symphony

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 6. There are probably many people to whom the thought of listening to five of the Brandenburg concertos on a single program would be appalling, but tonight some 4500 people did just that and sat fascinated as the results of Bach's genius was unfolded for them through the medium of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Charles Munch.

Infinite Variety

The charm of the six Brandenburg concertos lies in their infinite variety, both in the various combinations of instruments and in the manner they are juxtaposed, discussed and treated. Thus in Concerto No. 1, one listens to the traditional three movements and then, quite unexpected, Bach adds a minute with three trios, the second of which is a polonaise. In the second concerto one finds as soloists the trumpet, flute, oboe and violin, along with string orchestra.

So it goes, giving listening proof that the concertos may be looked upon as an experiment in various instrumental combinations.

Mr. Munch led his expert forces through concertos in a direct and straight-forward manner. The first concerto went less well than the rest, for there were technical lapses and not the perfection of ... one heard in the ... works.

Soloists Excellent

As for the soloists, they were, ... exemplary, few ... tors have at their hand ... solo ... Roger Voisin, ... Dwyer, Anthony Dwyer, ... Gombert, ... Richard Burgin ... string ... violinist ... I have seldom ... Mr. Burgin play with ... mastery of tone, of Mr. Voisin with greater brilliance. ... were ... the adagio ... first ... the exquisite ... dance of the second and ... fourth. The last ... of the ... who ... music ... ...

C1257

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 7, 1957

4500 APPLAUD BACH CONCERTOS AT TANGLEWOOD

Composer's Genius Revealed in Performance of Boston Symphony

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 6. There are probably many people to whom the thought of listening to five of the Brandenburg concertos on a single program would be appalling, but tonight some 4500 people sat fascinated and sat fascinated as the results of Bach's genius were unfolded for them through the medium of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Charles Munch.

Infinite Variety

The charm of the six Brandenburg concertos lies in their infinite variety, both in the various combinations of instruments and in the way they are juxtaposed, distributed and treated. Thus in Concerto No. 1, one listens to the traditional three movements and then, quite unexpected, Bach adds a minute with three trios, the second of which is a polonaise. In the second concerto one finds as soloists the trumpet, flute, oboe and violin, along with the string orchestra.

So it goes, giving listening proof that the concertos may be looked upon as an experiment in various instrumental combinations.

Mr. Munch led his expert forces through concertos in a direct and straight-forward manner. The first concerto went less well than the rest, for there were technical lapses and not the perfection of one heard in the

Soloists Excellent

they were, ... exception, few ... hand so ... Roger Voisin, ... Doriot Anthony Dwyer, ... Gombert, ... Burgin, ... Pappoutsakis, ... Pinkham, ... and Burgin ... concerto ... Dwyer ... Mr. Munch's ... ance. ... adagio ... exquisite ... and ... The ... of ... the ... Dwyer ... Mr. Voisin ... the ... Bach ... Mozart ... Lukas ... Mr. Munch ... Foss ... Mr. Burgin ... Dwyer ... Mr. Burgin ... Alfred Zighera ... Gamba.

Festival to Conclude

... the Berkshire Festival ... Tanglewood ... Festival ... Boston Symphony ... Radcliffe Choral Society ... Harvard Glee Club ... concert ... crowded audience, ... which ranged from a Palestrina ... Stabat Mater" for mixed voices, to contemporary madrigals by Harvard undergraduate Thomas Beveridge, one was impressed by the expertness of these youthful singers, their grasp of texts, their ... of color and their ... of the discipline imposed ... Munch as was heard ... could not have been ...

... of Palestrina's ... was particularly ... two choirs blended ... evidence of a feel... Mr. Beveridge ... madrigals to ... Joyce and Gio... communi... the texts in a ... The Radcliffe ... with complete ... vocal polish.

Clearly Enunciated

... singers were at ... "Come ... Follow the ... by Arne in 1790 ... moments ... clearly enun... heard again a ... it was smooth, ... musical. ... Mr. Thompson's "The Wind... written for the Har... in 1955. It is a ... technically, and ... vocally.

... concluded with ... singing in choruses ... Thompson's "Mass ... Spirit" and the tradi... young song of the Berk... School, Mr. Thomp...

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,866

JUL 6 1957

MUSIC OF BACH AT TANGLEWOOD OF RARE BEAUTY

First of Festival Concerts Heard by 2755 as Weather Clears

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 5—The annual Bach-Mozart Festival, a traditional part of the Berkshire Music Festival as devised by Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, opened tonight with conductor Charles Munch leading a reduced orchestra through some of Johann Sebastian Bach's most attractive music. The music of this master also will be heard Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Next week end will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

Fine Performance

The distinguished soloists tonight included Lucas Foss, pianist; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the orchestra, and concert master Richard Burgin. Finer performances this reviewer has never heard.

The program opened with a finely-proportioned performance of "Suite No. 3 in D Major for orchestra." There seems no doubt but that Bach had in mind the French "overtures" as conceived by Lulli when he wrote these suites for orchestra and labeled them overtures. He includes within the structure the graceful dances which the French demanded. Using imagination and daring to experiment, Bach has provided us with some exquisite examples of the medium. The suite in question has charm, vivacity and ever changing melodic content. It was, of course admirably played by the virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Mr. Munch's penetrating guidance. One will not soon forget the gentle lyricism of the "air."

During this week end, all the Brandenburg concertos will be heard, but tonight only one was programmed the splendid No. 5 in D Major. This is the only one of the six concertos to use the piano for its solo part. Lucas Foss was the pianist, and a mighty fine one. Place this young pianist before the instrument and ask him to play the music of Bach or Mozart and we believe you will hear no finer performance from any of his contemporaries. The solo part in the D Major concerto is demanding, the pianist is called upon to play almost constantly. In fact, before the end of the first movement he is given a cadenza of 65 bars. Mr. Munch directed a well balanced performance, one in which no detail was neglected. Mrs. Dwyer and Mr. Burgin fused their great talents which, combined with the rest, provided a splendid performance. The unaccompanied trio was sheer delight.

Proving Favorite

Among the first desk players of the Boston Orchestra, no one seems to be a greater favorite with audiences than Doriot Anthony Dwyer. Since joining the orchestra in 1952, she has built a secure place for herself within its ranks. She has had particular success with the audiences who come to the Bach-Mozart concerts and a personal ovation after a solo appearance is the rule. Mrs. Dwyer is a fabulous flutist. She has formidable technique and produces a most beautiful tone. Her musicianship seems faultless. Tonight she again dazzled the audience as she played with orchestra the "Suite No. 2 in B Minor." Soloist and orchestra became one in the effort to reveal every facet of this lovely music.

The concert concluded with a performance of the "Concerto in C Minor for two pianos, No. 1." In this work, Lukas Foss was joined by another very fine pianist, Seymour Lipkin, who this season, aside from his piano work, is assistant director of the student orchestra.

The string orchestra in this work has little to do, often acting as a figured bass accompaniment. In fact, it is eliminated entirely in the adagio, as it is in several of the slow movements of the Brandenburg concertos. Bach, aside from his six concerti for solo clavier, wrote concertos for two, three and four pianos. He often transcribed other materials, such as violin concertos, with what Schweitzer has characterized as "incredible haste and carelessness." However, it appears that the concerto in question was fresh material. Messrs. Foss and Lipkin provided some fine piano playing. There was grace and sturdiness and, through it all, a mutuality of thought and expression. The performance was a fitting conclusion to an evening of particularly brilliant performances of the music of Bach. This concert presages a splendid series.

Finally, a few statistics. There were 2755 persons in attendance, which means there were as many outside as inside. There was a brisk storm just prior to the concert, but soon the skies cleared and the moon shone benignly.

Tomorrow night the five remaining Brandenburg concertos will make up the program. Among the solo players will be Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gombert, oboe; Richard Burgin, violin, and James Pappoutskis, string bass.

Music Review

Eagle 7/6

Bach at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST orchestral concert of the Tanglewood season was played in the Theater-Concert Hall last night by a chamber-sized ensemble of the musicians from the principal desks of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

Following a custom now established for some years the first two weeks of the Berkshire Festivals are devoted to the classics: The three concerts of the first weekend to Bach, those of the second to Mozart. To see Munch seat himself nonchalantly on the edge of a piano, placed there for use in a subsequent number, and join with the rest of the 2,755 within and without the hall to watch and hear the adorable Doriot Anthony Dwyer repeat the final Badinerie of the B minor suite for flute and strings, was a sight few expected ever to see and which, in the general euphoria which always accompanies this particular piece under these conditions, was alone worth the price of admission.

* * *

MUNCH indulged in the luxury of stopping his baton waving another time during the evening: While his crack little band of string players did the famous aria in the D major suite. This is really chamber music, of course, and is certainly as well played by using experienced musicians' built-in radar as in obedience to a stick. This is the first time within our recollection that the musicians of the orchestra at Tanglewood have been paid this high compliment.

By dint of frequent playing and by reason of the excellence of each performance certain works of Bach at Tanglewood have become "specialties de la maison." The flute suite with Mrs. Dwyer is one and the fifth Brandenburg concerto with Lukas Foss is another. Last night Foss, with concertmaster Richard Burgin as solo violin, and Mrs. Dwyer as flute solo, repeated the success in this favorite they have always achieved.

* * *

FOSS DID the extravagant cadenza in the first movement with great facility and sweep. At each repetition he seems to give clearer meaning and more definite shape to the courante romp Bach gives the piano. Some might not object if he did not treat the entire work as a piano concerto. The slow movement in which the three soloists play without orchestral accompaniment was robbed completely of poise by the pianist's lack of adjustment with his fellow-soloists.

Munch set some wonderfully communicative tempi during the evening. The whole of the flute suite was especially happy in this respect and the gavottes and the bourrée in the D major suite were equally well-chosen. It was not clear why Munch gave such prominence, and later recognition, to the three trumpets in this latter work. Not that they are not worthy but they were continually beckoned to give more, not always to the benefit of the tonal balance. Indeed, it was not until the 'vivo' that the muddy overture was cleared and the strong, reliant strings asserted themselves in all their valiant sturdiness.

* * *

THE PROGRAM closed with a genuinely invigorating performance of the C minor concerto for two pianos in which Foss was joined by another Berkshire Music Center alumnus, Seymour Lipkin. This was playing divested of all veneer. It was taken at a comfortable pace and every detail was executed with a watchmaker's meticulous skill. The slow movement was not as reposeful as might have been, but the playing of these young artists was a fitting finale to a fine evening.

Thousands At Tanglewood For Weekend Concerts

With almost near-perfect weather over 10,000 devoted followers of Bach's music attended the first weekend series of the Boston Symphony's 20th season at Tanglewood in the Berkshires. Held in the Theatre-concert hall on Friday and Saturday evenings, the chamber orchestra of virtuoso players greeted their listeners with "old friends," some in new dress, but all alive with a deathless quality, a kaleidoscopic display of musical form and instrumental combinations, imbued with a breathless vitality and a purposeful exuberance evident in Charles Munch's carefully controlled but electric direction.

Friday's concert had a comfortable sense of fulfilment about it, from the opening familiar 3rd Suite in D major to the unexcelled concerto for two pianos which closed the program. In between Lukas Foss easily won his audience, at his initial appearance, in the fifth Brandenburg concerto, including solo violin and flute. His "trigger perfect" finger work, so admirably suited Bach's polyphony, changed to delicately tender tonality in the lyric passages. One felt a lack of complete rapport among the soloists, but this did not lessen one's enjoyment to any great degree. An almost fore-ordained pattern followed in the next favorite, the 2nd Suite in B minor, in which several provocative hasty exists by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, solo flutist, only served to enhance the audience insistence on a repetition of the Badinerie. After a much needed inhalation and a nod to Mr. Munch, who "gave way" by sitting comfortably on the piano, to the delight of all, Mrs. Dwyer and the orchestra with a little assistance towards the end from Mr. Munch, handled the encore with certainty and grace. Seymour Lipkin joined Mr. Foss for the last number, pianistically and orchestrally cohesive to near perfection, a musically fulsome finish to this progressively well-chosen program of the inimitable Bach.

Saturday afternoon the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society gave an interesting and eminenty enjoyable informal concert, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, in the Chamber Music Hall. A pleasant and informative and beautifully performed program included works by Palestrina, Weelkes, Byrd, Arne, modern and contemporary composers Randall Thompson, student composer Thomas Beveridge, and Russell Woolen.

Saturday evening consisted of five of the famous Brandenburg concertos, starting with marvelously complex first in F major, the 2nd with its sometimes unattainable high trumpet tones, the richly devised and executed 3rd completing the first half. To this listener, Richard Burgin, concertmaster, was unexcelled in this evening's performance, the concertos giving him prolonged and varied opportunity to display his agile and sure technique, intonation pefect. The 6th concerto, like the third, for strings only, but a complete contrast in color and instrumentation, in which Mr. Mayes' cello virtuosity was warmly noticed, shared the second half with the 4th concerto, James Pappasoutsakis playing second flute in the solo group of two flutes and violin.

The final concert on Sunday was held in the Big Shed, to enable more of the audience to better hear and see the performance of the opening chorus and Part II of St. Matthew's Passion. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, assisted the finely balanced chamber groups, and soloists, all directed by Charles Munch.

Secure in the good faith of their conductors, and with only one rehearsal on Saturday morning, the chorus and orchestra "adjusted" to each other during the first part of the opening chorus; from then on, only the music and its interpretation was important. John McCollum was most easily understood of all the soloists, diction-wise, including Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, whose voice retained an effortless flowing line, Donald Gramm, bass, and James Joyce, bass. The chorus and ensemble were at all times a plastic entity, the chorus control marvelous, the ebb and increase of volume exciting or deeply moving as the music depicted. Mr. Woodworth trains these young voices with full knowledge of their capacities, attaining marvelously diverse coloring and tonal effects, produced with an ease any professional group might well envy.

In the ensembles, Mr. Zighera was notable for his exact and moving performance on the indescribably beautiful "viola da Gamba." Also an important and integral part of all the concerts was the harpsichord, expertly played by Daniel Pinkham.

Throughout the performance, the inspiration of the Passion music sustained the direction of Mr. Munch who was restrained and sensitive in his interpretation. Indeed, happily at an appropriate point in the text, when silence could be prolonged, he held the audience and performers quietly waiting, while an airplane passed overhead. The final chorus, for which the sun disappeared behind a cloud, was particularly moving, spiritually, leaving one with a feeling of sad acceptance; applause seemed an anti-climax.

The next weekend series will be devoted to Mozart, a different kind of genius, and will include three symphonies, the E flat, G minor and C major. M. deB. P.

[120]

NEW YORK CITY

JULY 11, 1957

BACH IN THE BERKSHIRES

Last week-end at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., a most deeply moving and enthralling program of the works of Johann Sebastian Bach was presented in an order which could not possibly have been more effectively chosen.

On Friday evening July 5, the following works were heard: Suite No. 3, in D Major, for Orchestra, Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 in D Major for orchestra, with piano solo, flute and violin. Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings, and finally, the Concerto in C Minor for Two Pianos (Originally, and preferably harpsichords).

Though the Suite No. 3 in D Major was, on the whole, adequately interpreted, Mr. Munch, who in my opinion is not the best Bach interpreter, had a tendency to utilize maximum tempi in most of the movements. He also tends to pulsate a bit too obviously, which is definitely out of character when overly indulged in. The Gigue, especially, would have completed this grandiose composition more effectively had Mr. Munch used a slower tempo, avoiding, an excessive retard in the ending measures. The over-all effect, however, was emotionally stirring.

The fifth Brandenburg, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist, was a treat. The tempi were much more sensibly selected. Mr. Foss rendered poetic and acutely sensitive interpretation of his technically difficult keyboard part in the Concerto. Again, had he taken the fast movements just a bit more slowly, he would have been able to achieve perfection by allowing himself sufficient time to execute the ornaments clearly and concisely. Very few artists, unfortunately, pay enough attention to this extremely important aspect of Baroque music.

The Second Suite in B minor was really the "piece de resistance" of the evening. In the last movement, especially, the flautist Doriot Anthony Dwyer gave a thrilling and flawless rendition of her difficult solo part. This playing of the "Badinerie" brought the audience to their feet with shouts of "Brava" and applause that caused foundations to vibrate. This shouting and applauding finally brought the charming Miss Dwyer back to repeat the movement.

The Concerto for two pianos in C Minor had a similar effect. The soloists were Lukas Foss, first piano, and Seymour Lipkin, second piano. Harpsichords would have been preferable.

Saturday evening the Brandenburg Concerti, excluding the fifth, were offered in this order: Nos. 1, 2, 3, 6, and finally 4. The first movement of the Fourth Brandenburg in G Major was too fast, pulsated, and bouncy. But they were all very beautiful.

There are many more programs to be presented this season at the Berkshire Music Festival, and all music lovers should treat themselves to at least one week-end in the Beautiful Berkshires.

Gabriel Emert Redner

Bach and Mozart Series Win Greater Favor at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass.—Setting up a "Great Composers Series" for its 20th season, the Berkshire Festival became strictly traditional in adhering to Bach and Mozart for the first two weekends. The concerts were held in the Theatre-Concert Hall as usual, with two important exceptions when the nature of the program made playing in the Music Shed more feasible. This move also reflected the growth of the audiences for these concerts.

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony's chamber group began the Bach weekend on July 5 with such staples as the Suite No. 3, the "Brandenburg" Concerto No. 5, and the Suite No. 2. The Concerto No. 1 for Two Pianos, in C minor, deviated somewhat from this familiar path. Its more functional nature quickly revealed why it is heard less often.

Vigorous and Virile Bach

Mr. Munch approaches Bach with a vigor and a virility quite his own. As a result performances are sometimes coarse-grained. On the whole the interpretations of the weekend stimulated even the most critical. The Friday night concert became memorable for an almost impeccable performance of the Suite No. 2, in which Doriot Anthony Dwyer excelled on the flute; and the "Brandenburg" No. 5, in which Lukas Foss played the piano cadenza superbly. Mr. Foss and Seymour Lipkin played the two-piano concerto.

The largest crowd ever to attend these early concerts turned up for the Saturday program of the remaining five "Brandenburg" Concertos. Since only 1,200 of them could find seats in the hall, the remainder—some 3,300—sought vantage spots in the fringe seats outside or on the lawns. In quality the performances did not sustain the high level of the night before.

Moving on Sunday to the Music Shed for the "St. Matthew Passion" proved a wise idea. In spite of Mr. Munch's intimate approach and the relative small forces, the acoustics of the Shed compensated for its size. Only the opening chorus of Part I and all of Part II were given. The performance became a recreative experience as Mr. Munch conducted in all humility and with the deep-seated feeling that religious works engender in him. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society gave an exalted account of [illegible] and chorus work. John McCollum's singing of the [illegible] part was one of the finest performances [illegible] as the Evangelist. Adele Addison's pure soprano, Florence Kopleff's rich contralto, Donald Gramm's majestic bass, and James Joyce's [illegible] singing of several roles made the [illegible] most satisfying. This [illegible]

August, 1957

nated the weekend in every way. One question persisted, however; why was the work sung in German?

The Mozart weekend drew over 11,000 people, of whom 5,000 attended the program of the last three symphonies in the Music Shed. Of the two concertos in the Theatre-Concert Hall, that of Sunday proved the more varied and interesting. The program consisted of the unfamiliar Adagio and Fugue, K. 546; the Concerto for Bassoon, K. 191; the Concerto for Horn, K. 495; and the Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297B.

These works revealed not only Mozart's apt writing for wind instruments but also the continuous flow of his inspiration. Mr. Munch conducted them and all the rest of Mozart with characteristic vigor. In eschewing the fastidious, he presents him with refreshing vitality and considerable gaiety.

Soloists Drawn from Orchestra

All the soloists were members of the Boston Symphony. Sherman Walt played his bassoon with infectious spirit and thoroughly delighted the audience with his skillful performance. James Stagliano played the Horn Concerto expertly but unimaginatively. Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet, combined with him and Mr. Walt to give a stylistic and expressive account of the Sinfonia.

Tchaikovsky dominated the first of the big weekends, with the full Boston Symphony in the Music Shed. He was, however, linked with Stravinsky, to whom tribute was paid by having one work played on each of the weekend programs in honor of his recent 75th birthday. Almost 27,500 people attended.

Featured on the Friday program was the first United States performance of the original version of the Variations on a Rococo Theme for Cello. This has usually been played as edited by the cellist Fizenhagen, who introduced it after having made some "improvements". The restoration removes the repetition of two phrases of the theme, brings back an eighth variation, and presents the variations in the order Tchaikovsky first planned them. That all this was to the good came out in Samuel Mayes's sympathetic performance. He played it so beautifully that the work appeared more important than usual.

An impassioned performance of the Sixth Symphony found Mr. Munch quite attuned to its emotional content. The program opened with Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" in a highly rhythmic rendition, which cried out for choreographic representation.

Pierre Monteux took over the next concert, opening with Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" and concentrating on the Tchaikovsky Fifth and Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps". Since the latter work is peculiarly his, the performance of it was of course exemplary. Some 11,000 people must have sensed it would be.

Though Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and Violin Concerto gave the Sunday program considerable substance, it was Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" that caught attention. This had received its East Coast premiere at Ellenville just three days earlier under Leopold Stokowski. Under Mr. Munch it sounded quite different because he saw it as a devotional religious piece rather than as a tribute to St. Mark, patron saint of Venice. The audience found its austerity quite formidable, its performance especially good in the solos of John McCollum and Donald Gramm. The Festival Chorus sang satisfactorily.

Isaac Stern played the Tchaikovsky Concerto with a lyric grace thoroughly disarming. The brilliant pages of the work fared less well, but the performance as a whole was distinguished. The orchestra under Mr. Munch appeared quite in the vein.

The Berlioz weekend found Mr. Munch in his element. The Friday concert lined up "Harold in Italy", beautifully played by Joseph De Pasquale, and the "Fantastic" Symphony, stunningly played by Mr. Munch and the orchestra, with "The Corsair" Overture to introduce them.

"L'Enfance du Christ" Enchanting

Then came the first Tanglewood performance of "L'Enfance du Christ", which enchanted the audience. Mr. Munch accentuated the simplicity, the delicacy, and the purity of the music. As soloists Cesare Valletti, tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto: Gerard Souzay, baritone; and Donald Gramm, bass, served him well, as did the Festival Chorus.

An exceptional performance on Sunday of the excerpts from Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" by Mr. Monteux summed up the attention conferred on this composer. It should be said for him that he wears better and better. The remainder of program brought the contrasting elements of Hindemith's Overture to the opera "News of the Day" and his "Mathis der Maler", both of which received the same kind of special care Mr. Monteux is wont to give.

Attendance for this weekend fell short of 20,000. Though the weather might be blamed in part, the fact remains that the public has yet to warm up completely to Berlioz.

—Miles Kastendieck

couldn't see a thing except a blank partition right up against their faces. It is rumored that a transparent glassite substance may be used instead of the plywood now in place, and this should help matters.

The following night the concerts moved over to the Shed for the trio of Mozart's best symphonies (K. 543, 550, and 551). An audience that filled almost every seat and overflowed by the hundreds to the surrounding lawns heard Munch at his characteristic and enthusiastic best, particularly in the G minor, which was played with every element of clarity, verve, and zest. Indeed, the conductor's driving forward motion did get a little in the way of the flowing phrases in the Andant cantabile of the "Jupiter" and not to the music's best advantage.

The following afternoon the series returned to the smaller hall for the Adagio and Fugue in C minor (K. 546) for String Orchestra; the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major (K. 191), Sherm Walt, soloist; the Horn Concerto in E-flat major (K. 495), James Stagliano, soloist; and the Sinfonia Concertante, for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon (K. 297B), in which Ralph Gomberg, oboist, and Gino Cioffi, clarinetist, joined Messrs. Walt and Stagliano, to bring the week end to a fine conclusion.

JULES WOLFFERS

BERKSHIRE MUS[illegible] FE[illegible]

■ The growing [illegible] of chamber music i[illegible] is attested by the [illegible] taken place throug[illegible] opening concerts of [illegible] tival, held annual[illegible] Symphony Orchestr[illegible] rolling lawns in Len[illegible]

When started by [illegible]ky, the opening co[illegible] intimate sort of p[illegible] val proper. The re[illegible] ter-Concert Hall, [illegible] more than a thous[illegible] programs called "[illegible] certs, devoted alm[illegible] chamber works and[illegible] works by those t[illegible] the vast shed is u[illegible] larger-scale works[illegible] weeks before the[illegible] available for the[illegible] fare. This [illegible]s place the [illegible] week end [illegible] summer when th[illegible] was utilize[illegible] Sunday, July [illegible] the Bach St. Matthew Passion [illegible]ing Chorus and Part II, presc[illegible] an excellent reading by the H[illegible] Glee Club and Radcliffe Cho[illegible] ciety inspired by Munch's ent[illegible] for the work. The fine list of [illegible] included Adele Addison, soprano, [illegible]ence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Donald Gramm, bass, and James Joyce, bass. The instrumental soloists were Daniel Pinkham, harpsichord, Alfred Nash Patterson, organ and Alfred Zighera, viola da gamba.

In one respect Munch went back to an earlier pattern by devoting the entire week end to Bach, with the following week end made up exclusively of Mozart. The first week's opening concert, July 5, was particularly admired with the D major Orchestra Suite, the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5, the Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings, and the C minor Concerto for Two Pianos, all receiving clear and sparkling performance. The conductor showed even more than his usual verve and zest leading the orchestra in fine collaboration with soloists Lukas Foss, pianist, Richard Burgin, violinist, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, with Seymour Lipkin joining Foss in the two-piano finale.

Some letdown was noted the following day when the orchestra seemed unable always to follow the conductor's directions in every section of the remaining five Brandenburg Concertos. Perhaps all these, added to the rest of the week end's music, were just too much to rehearse in the limited time available. In any event, the concert as a whole was [illegible]

The following w[illegible] Munch once more in [illegible] ducting the [illegible] day, July 1[illegible] items as th[illegible] D Major (K[illegible] enade for [illegible] Bassoons [illegible] "Haffner" S[illegible] turn by th[illegible] and their pr[illegible]

Hugh Ross [illegible] termission w[illegible] Chorus doing nobly [illegible] gina Coeli" [illegible] Corpus" (K. 6[illegible] Major (K. 33[illegible] chestra respon[illegible] knowing directi[illegible] of soloists head[illegible] soprano, to whon[illegible] major assignments [illegible] jorie Campagna-P[illegible] Collum, tenor, and [illegible] bass, added the [illegible]

An innovation [illegible] was to partition [illegible] rather deep backsta[illegible] acoustics. The results [illegible] please all except possibly th[illegible] Center students whose p[illegible] it has always been to s[illegible] backstage area and thus get a [illegible] first-class picture of conductors at work. The students could hear well enough, but they

MUSICAL COURIER

August 1957

[1207]

NEW YORK TIMES

JULY 21, 1957

BACH IN THE BERKSHIRES

Last week-end at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., a most deeply moving and enthralling program of the works of Johann Sebastian Bach was presented in an order which could not possibly have been more effectively chosen.

On Friday evening July 5, the following works were heard: Suite No. 3, in D Major, for Orchestra, Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 in D Major for orchestra, with piano solo, flute and violin. Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings, and finally, the Concerto in C Minor for Two Pianos (Originally, and preferably harpsichords).

Though the Suite No. 3 in D Major was, on the whole, adequately interpreted, Mr. Munch, who in my opinion is not the best Bach interpreter, had a tendency to utilize maximum tempi in most of the movements. He also tends to pulsate a bit too obviously, which is definitely out of character when overly indulged in. The Gigue, especially, would have completed this grandiose composition more effectively had Mr. Munch used a slower tempo, avoiding, an excessive retard in the ending measures. The over-all effect, however, was emotionally stirring.

The fifth Brandenburg, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist, was a treat. The tempi were much more sensibly selected. Mr. Foss rendered poetic and acutely sensitive interpretation of his technically difficult keyboard part in the Concerto. Again, had he taken the fast movements just a bit more slowly, he would have been able to achieve perfection by allowing himself sufficient time to execute the ornaments clearly and concisely. Very few artists, unfortunately, pay enough attention to this extremely important aspect of Baroque music.

The Second Suite in B minor was really the "piece de resistance" of the evening. In the last movement, especially, the flautist Doriot Anthony Dwyer gave a thrilling and flawless rendition of her difficult solo part. This playing of the "Badinerie" brought the audience to their feet with shouts of "Brava" and applause that caused foundations to vibrate. This shouting and applauding finally brought the charming Miss Dwyer back to repeat the movement.

The Concerto for two pianos in C Minor had a similar effect. The soloists were Lukas Foss, first piano, and Seymour Lipkin, second piano. Harpsichords would have been preferable.

Saturday evening the Brandenburg Concerti, excluding the fifth, were offered in this order: Nos. 1, 2, 3, 6, and finally 4. The first movement of the Fourth Brandenburg in G Major was too fast, pulsated, and bouncy. But they were all very beautiful.

There are many more programs to be presented this season at the Berkshire Music Festival, and all music lovers should treat themselves to at least one week-end in the Beautiful Berkshires.

Gabriel Emert Reuter

Bach and Mozart Series Win Greater Favor at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass.—Setting up a "Great Composers Series" for its 20th season, the Berkshire Festival became strictly traditional in adhering to Bach and Mozart for the first two weekends. The concerts were held in the Theatre-Concert Hall as usual, with two important exceptions when the nature of the program made playing in the Music Shed more feasible. This move also reflected the growth of the audiences for these concerts.

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony's chamber group began the Bach weekend on July 5 with such staples as the Suite No. 3, the "Brandenburg" Concerto No. 5, and the Suite No. 2. The Concerto No. 1 for Two Pianos, in C minor, deviated somewhat from this familiar path. Its more functional nature quickly revealed why it is heard less often.

Vigorous and Virile Bach

Mr. Munch approached Bach with a vigor and a virility quite his own. As a result performances are sometimes coarse-grained. On the whole the interpretations of the weekend stimulated even the most critical. The Friday night concert became memorable for an almost impeccable performance of the Suite No. 2, in which Doriot Anthony Dwyer excelled on the flute; and the Brandenburg No. 5, in which Lukas Foss played the piano cadenza superbly, Mr. Foss and Seymour Lipkin played the two-piano concerto.

The largest crowd ever to attend these early concerts turned up for the Saturday program of the remaining five "Brandenburg" Concertos. Since only 1,200 of them could find seats in the hall, the remainder—some 3,300—sought vantage spots in the fringe seats outside or on the lawns. In quality the performances did not sustain the high level of the night before.

Moving on Sunday to the Music Shed for the "St. Matthew Passion", proved a wise idea. In spite of Mr. Munch's intimate approach and the relative small forces, the acoustics of the Shed compensated for its size. Only the opening chorus of Part I and all of Part II were given. The performance became a recreative experience as Mr. Munch conducted in all humility and with the deep-seated feeling that religious works engender in him. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, with an excellent reading of the [illegible] added acclaim to the [illegible] of the first performance [illegible] in the Shed. [illegible] soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Donald Gramm, bass, and [illegible] soloists [illegible] of several soloists [illegible] satisfying [illegible] couldn't see a thing except a blank partition right up against their faces. It is rumored that a transparent glass-ite substance may be used instead of the plywood now in place and this should help matters.

The following night the concerts moved over to the Shed for the trio of Mozart's best symphonies (K. 543, 550, and 551). An audience that filled almost every seat and overflowed by the hundreds to the surrounding lawns heard Munch at his characteristic and enthusiastic best, particularly in the G minor, which was played with every element of clarity, verve, and zest. Indeed, the conductor's driving forward motion did get a little in the way of the flowing phrases in the Andant cantabile of the "Jupiter" and not to the music's best advantage.

The following afternoon the series returned to the smaller hall for the Adagio and Fugue in C minor (K. 546) for String Orchestra; the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major (K. 191), Sherm Walt, soloist; the Horn Concerto in E-flat major (K. 495), James Stagliano, soloist; and the Sinfonia Concertante, for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon (K. 297B), in which Ralph Gomberg, oboist, and Gino Cioffi, clarinetist, joined Messrs. Walt and Stagliano, to bring the week end to a fine conclusion.

JULES WOLFFERS

12 MUSICAL AMERICA

August, 1957

nated the weekend in every way. One question persisted, however; why was the work sung in German?

The Mozart weekend drew over 11,000 people, of whom 5,000 attended the program of the last three symphonies in the Music Shed. Of the two concertos in the Theatre-Concert Hall, that of Sunday proved the more varied and interesting. The program consisted of the unfamiliar Adagio and Fugue, K. 546; the Concerto for Bassoon, K. 191; the Concerto for Horn, K. 495; and the Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297B.

These works revealed not only Mozart's apt writing for wind instruments but also the continuous flow of his inspiration. Mr. Munch conducted them and all the rest of Mozart with characteristic vigor. In eschewing the fastidious, he presents him with refreshing vitality and considerable gaiety.

Soloists Drawn from Orchestra

All the soloists were members of the Boston Symphony. Sherman Walt played his bassoon with infectious spirit and thoroughly delighted the audience with his skillful performance. James Stagliano played the Horn Concerto expertly but unimaginatively. Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet, combined with him and Mr. Walt to give a stylistic and expressive account of the Sinfonia.

Tchaikovsky dominated the first of the big weekends, with the full Boston Symphony in the Music Shed. He was, however, linked with Stravinsky, to whom tribute was paid by having one work played on each of the weekend programs in honor of his recent 75th birthday. Almost 27,500 people attended.

Featured on the Friday program was the first United States performance of the original version of the Variations on a Rococo Theme for Cello. This has usually been played as edited by the cellist Fizenhagen, who introduced it after having made some "improvements". The restoration removes the repetition of two phrases of the theme, brings back an eighth variation, and presents the variations in the order Tchaikovsky first planned them. That all this was to the good came out in Samuel Mayes's sympathetic performance. He played it so beautifully that the work appeared more important than usual.

An impassioned performance of the Sixth Symphony found Mr. Munch quite attuned to its emotional content. The program opened with Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" in a highly rhythmic rendition, which cried out for choreographic representation.

Pierre Monteux took over the next concert, opening with Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" and concentrating on the Tchaikovsky [illegible] Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps". Since the latter work is peculiarly his, the performance of it was of course exemplary. Some 11,000 people must have sensed it would be.

Though Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and Violin Concerto gave the Sunday program considerable substance, it was Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" that caught attention. This had received its East Coast premiere at Ellenville just three days earlier under Leopold Stokowski. Under Mr. Munch it sounded quite different because he saw it as a devotional religious piece rather than as a tribute to St. Mark, patron saint of Venice. The audience found its austerity quite formidable, its performance especially good in the solos of John McCollum and Donald Gramm. The Festival Chorus sang satisfactorily.

Isaac Stern played the Tchaikovsky Concerto with a lyric grace thoroughly disarming. The brilliant pages of the work fared less well, but the performance as a whole was distinguished. The orchestra under Mr. Munch appeared quite in the vein.

The Berlioz weekend found Mr. Munch in his element. The Friday concert lined up "Harold in Italy", beautifully played by Joseph De Pasquale, and the "Fantastic" Symphony, stunningly played by Mr. Munch and the orchestra, with "The Corsair" Overture to introduce them.

"L'Enfance du Christ" Enchanting

Then came the first Tanglewood performance of "L'Enfance du Christ", which enchanted the audience. Mr. Munch accentuated the simplicity, the delicacy, and the purity of the music. As soloists Cesare Valletti, tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Gerard Souzay, baritone; and Donald Gramm, bass, served him well, as did the Festival Chorus.

An exceptional performance on Sunday of the excerpts from Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" by Mr. Monteux summed up the attention conferred on this composer. It should be said for him that he wears better and better. The remainder of program brought the contrasting elements of Hindemith's Overture to the opera "News of the Day" and his "Mathis der Maler", both of which received the same kind of special care Mr. Monteux is wont to give.

Attendance for this weekend fell short of 20,000. Though the weather might be blamed in part, the fact remains that the public has yet to warm up completely to Berlioz.

—Miles Kastendieck

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FEST[illegible]

■ The growing popular [illegible]nce of chamber music in the [illegible]s is attested by the chang[illegible]e taken place through the [illegible]o opening concerts of the Be[illegible]- tival, held annually by [illegible] Symphony Orchestra on Ta[illegible] rolling lawns in Lenox, M[illegible]

When started by Serge K[illegible]zky, the opening concerts se[illegible]an intimate sort of prelude to the festival proper. The relatively small Theater-Concert Hall, seating somewhat more than a thousand persons, housed programs called "Bach-Mozart" concerts, devoted almost completely to chamber works and chamber orchestra works by these two composers. Now the vast shed is used on occasion for larger-scale works even in the opening weeks before the entire orchestra is available for the regular symphonic fare. This took place the open[illegible] week end this summer when the S[illegible] was utilized on Sunday, July 7, for the Bach St. Matthew Passion (Op[illegible]ing Chorus and Part II), presented [illegible] an excellent reading by the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society inspired by Munch's enthusiasm for the work. The fine list of soloists included Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Donald Gramm, bass, and James Joyce, bass. The instrumental soloists were Daniel Pinkham, harpsichord, Alfred Nash Patterson, organ and Alfred Zighera, viola da gamba.

In one respect Munch went back to an earlier pattern by devoting the entire week end to Bach, with the following week end made up exclusively of Mozart. The first week's opening concert, July 5, was particularly admired with the D major Orchestra Suite, the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5, the Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings, and the C minor Concerto for Two Pianos, all receiving clear and sparkling performance. The conductor showed even more than his usual verve and zest leading the orchestra in fine collaboration with soloists Lukas Foss, pianist, Richard Burgin, violinist, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, with Seymour Lipkin joining Foss in the two-piano finale.

Some letdown was noted the following day when the orchestra seemed unable always to follow the conductor's directions in every section of the remaining five Brandenburg Concertos. Perhaps all these, added to the rest of the week end's music, were just too much to rehearse in the limited time available. In any event, the concert as a whole was well worth the hearing.

The following week end saw Munch once more in complete command, conducting the first all-Mozart list, Friday, July 12, [illegible] such delectable items as the youthful Divertimento in D Major (K. 136), the impressive Serenade for Oboes, Clarinets, Horns, and Bassoons (in pairs) (K. 388), and the "Haffner" Symphony, all done to a turn by the splendid first desk men and their princi[illegible]

Hugh Ross took over after the intermission with the Festival Chorus doing nobly in its 1957 debut in "Regina Coeli" (K. 276), "Ave Verum Corpus" (K. 618), and the Mass in C Major (K. 337). Both chorus and orchestra responded well to the leader's knowing direction. An efficient group of soloists headed by Saramae Endich, soprano, to whom the score gave the major assignments, and including Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springman, bass, added the last touches.

An innovation tried at this concert was to partition the stage from the rather deep backstage to improve the acoustics. The results seemed to please all except possibly the Berkshire Center students whose prerogative it has always been to sit in the backstage area and thus get a really first-class picture of conductors at work. The students could hear well enough, but they

MUSICAL COURIER

August 1957

BLANK PAGE

C1273

place the openi nmer when the She Sunday, July 7, f
hew Passion (Ope art II), presented ing by the Harvar
adcliffe Choral S
Munch's enthusias fine list of soloist ison, soprano, Flo
ralto, John McCo
l Gramm, bass, an
. The instrumenta
al Pinkham, harp
l Patterson, orga
viola da gamba
Munch went bac
rn by devoting th
Bach with the fol
ade up exclusively rst week's opening
as particularly ad
D major Orchestra
nburg Concerto No r Flute and Strings Concerto for Two ng clear and spar
e. The conductor than his usual verve he orchestra in fine
soloists Lukas Foss
rgin, violinist, and wyer, flutist, with oining Foss in the s noted the follow-orchestra seemed follow the conducvery section of the denburg Concertos.

added to the rest
usic, were just too
n the limited time
ent, the concert as worth the hearing.
ek end saw Munch
ete command, con-ll-Mozart list. Fri-led such delectable ful Divertimento in he impressive Ser-arinets, Horns, and
(K. 388), and the ny, all done to a lid first-desk men aides.

over after the ine Festival Chorus
1957 debut in "Re-76), "Ave Verum
nd the Mass in C th chorus and or-vell to the leader's
An efficient group
y Saramae Endich,
he scores gave the nd including Mar-
to, alto, John Mc-
Fague Springman,
touches.

ed at this concert
e stage from the ge to improve the s seemed to please
he Berkshire Cenprerogative it has in the backstage really first-class at work. The stuenough, but they

COURIER

1957

Clark

SEYMOUR LIPKIN, left, and Ralph Berkowitz rehearse for their program of piano duets in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Wednesday evening at 8:30. The program features compositions by Hindemith, Schubert and Brahms.

Lipkin, Berkowitz Play Tonight At Benefit for Music Center

TANGLEWOOD — The second concert in the Berkshire Festival's chamber music series will be given tonight at 8:30 in the theater concert hall.

Proceeds of these concerts, which will continue for four successive Wednesdays, benefit the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school, the Berkshire Music Center. The performing artists, who all are closely associated with the school, are donating their fees to the same fund.

Tonight's Program

Tonight Seymour Lipkin of the conducting faculty and Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, will perform piano duets by Schubert and Hindemith in the first half of the program, including Variations on an Original Theme and the Fantasie in F minor by Schubert, and Hindemith's Sonata for Piano Four Hands.

In the second half of the program Lipkin and Berkowitz will join with Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, in the Brahms "Liebeslieder" Waltzes. They will close the program with the last waltz from the second set of "Liebeslieder." Miss Endich and Miss Kopleff are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center, as is Mr. McCollum. Mr. Gramm has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct three all-Mozart concerts over the weekend. On Friday evening he will share the program with Hugh Ross. The Saturday concert consisting of three great Mozart symphonies will be in the Music Shed. Seats for this concert are still available.

On Saturday morning, for the first time at Tanglewood, a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the small theater concert hall will be opened to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. Tickets are $1 and may be purchased on the morning of the rehearsal.

Two Lectures

Two more lectures in the new series on contemporary music will be presented today and Friday. Today's lecture will be by Irving Fine of the composition department, Friday's by Aaron Copland. The subject will be in each case "Music of the Twenties." These lectures are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, as is the concert by the student orchestra tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the Music Shed.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,157

JUL 7 1957

Music

Poister and Ridge in S.U. Faculty Recital

By E. V. W.

The Wednesday night chamber music concert in Berkshire Center Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood" will feature piano duets to be played by Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including compositions by Schubert and Hindemith and the Brahms "Lieberlieder" waltzes for piano duet and voices. The vocalists: Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, former Berkshire Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass-baritone.

These artists have generously donated their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the net proceeds of the Chamber Music Series. Florence Kopleff has friends in Syracuse, having performed here with the Robert Shaw Chorale. Donald Gramm was among soloists in the 1957 Bach Festival in Bethlehem, Pa.

DONALD GRAMM

Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony and director of the Orchestra's summer home, Berkshire Music Center, and Hugh Ross, head of the Center's Choral department, will share directing the all-Mozart program next Friday night, July 12.

Toccata, played by Prof. Poister

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 12 1957

Chamber Concert At Tanglewood

The second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood offered a delectable program to a small but highly appreciative audience.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, and Seymour Lipkin, faculty member, combined talents at one piano for three piano duets. The first, Schubert's Variations on an original theme, in A flat major, was given a meticulous reading and though the tonal and interpretative balance was not at all times satisfying, many of the variations were beautifully appealing, in particular, the minor one. The Hindemith Sonata which followed seemed more suited to both these artists and one followed the contrapuntal flowing line of the first movement, the precise, gay and rhythmic pattern of the second to the fully developed harmonic third with ease and much pleasure. The ineffably beautiful Fantasy in F minor of Schubert's closed the first half of the program, with Mr. Berkowitz assuming the treble position, making the dynamic balance more telling. For some reason, consciously or unconsciously, Mr. Lipkin dramatized his playing with disturbing movements, the expending of which might better produce a deeper tone and a more sympathetic musical phrasing. Schubert's melodies cry for warmth and singing tone; one felt too much force in the dynamics which might well be caused by the peculiarities of the piano used. However, it is always a pleasure to hear the works of this "well-spring" of songs.

The piece de resistance of the evening occupied the latter half of the program, Brahms' Liebesleider Waltzes, performed by Sara Mae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. Their voices were superbly suited to these incomparable love songs; the harmonic richness encompassing each was a "heady" portion as served by these well-matched singers. The blending of voices, whether in duet, trio or quartet form, was such that only a delicately attuned ear could distinguish one from the other. The piano duet accompaniment as played by Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Berkowitz was a restrained and finished background. It was only with the utmost control one kept from swaying with these infectious and stirring melodies. The audience were quite unrestrained in their applause, and longed for an encore, but none was forthcoming, perhaps it would have been too much.—M. deB. B.

PIANISTS HEARD AT TANGLEWOOD IN DUET WORKS

1200 Present for Performance by Lipkin and Berkowitz

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 10 — It is to be hoped that pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz have started a resurgence of interest in the performance of piano duets. This seems highly possible for their playing of duets by Schubert and Hindemith held an audience of 1200 tonight from the first note to the last.

Home Atmosphere

This was an intimate friendly concert which might easily have taken place in one's home. Lipkin and Berkowitz are not a piano team but the musicality of both, as well as their technical abilities, provided performances which were quite remarkable for balance of tone, articulate phrasing and a variety of color.

They opened the program with the "Variations of an Original Theme, in A Flat Major," by Schubert, and closed their portion of the program with Schubert's "Fantasy in F Minor, Op. 103." Between these two charming works was placed the "Sonata" (1928) by Hindemith.

The imagination and beauty of Schubert's compositions is always in evidence, and tonight the pianists fell under the spell and provided lovely and communicative performances.

Rythmic Work

The Hindemith "Sonata" is one of his most listenable works. It is strong, highly rhythmic and, at times, melodious. Messrs. Lipkin and Berkowitz provided a finely proportioned and detailed performance.

The concluding portion of the program was given over to a performance of Brahms' "Liebesleider Waltzes, Op. 52" and the quartet, "Zum Schluss," from the Neue Liebeslieder, Op. 103.

The singing quartet consisted of Saramae Endich, soprano, making her first appearance of the season; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. With four such fine voices and admirable musicians, the lovely melodies were beautifully sung. It seemed that Miss Kopleff and Mr. Gramm were most familiar with the songs.

Many Emotions

Brahms runs the gamut of emotions in these songs and the singers were wonderfully subtle in their delivery. There were moments when the four-hand accompaniment was over heavy, but for the better part of the cycle, the balance was excellent.

Friday night the Mozart Festival will open under the direction of Charles Munch.

The program will include the "Divertimento in D Major for Strings, K. 136"; "Serenade in C Minor," K. 388"; the "Haffner Symphony;" "Regina Coeli," for chorus and solo voice and orchestra; "Ave, Verum Corpus," for chorus and string orchestra; and the "Mass in C Major, K. 337."

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1957

erkshire Eagle, Thu

Review

glewood C

AY C. ROSENFELD

SECOND program of music at Tanglewood ved in the theater-con- last night by pianists Lipkin and Ralph Ber- nd a vocal quartet con- of Saramae Endich, so- Florence Kopleff, alto; Collum, tenor, and Don- mm, bass.

rahms Liebeslieder waltz- given after intermission has music been playe stage with more gusto it. Exactly the right ele- combined, both in th nd at the keyboard, t e audience a memorabl lling evening. The entir ok was performed an chluss" from the second rlier set, despite the t waltz rhythm, mo monotonous, and the gra finement and contrasti tion provide wide

VERSES in the first a Georg Daumer and a lly in a genial Vienne nd some of them are u dly touching. The "Zu " verse, from Goethe, more somber and t rhythm is allowed to fa in some degree, but a penetrating close to ing songs, which we ith tremendous appeal ably the factor which ge rformance its cardinal s the youthful assura hich the entire little plunged into the ac ngs. Brahms gives e st solos and then combi in every conceivable co n. It was absolutely l singing and it would h difficult to determine d to enjoy it more, or the enthralled a

SIC for piano duet i these days, yet Schu others, wrote a moder de shelf for this medi it of interest and muc deep and endearing cha tender beseeching plea minor Fantasy, Opus

Reporter Dispatch, White Plains, N. Y., Tues., July 16, 1957

at NE

SEYMOU AT

FESTIVA

No sett season. U season pu its leading with arti sisted by counties. Putnam have pu artists to audiences and crea

The re EMPERO Limon, Markevit opening ists fro compan ski, sch 20th, s repeat ard St

Music Review

Tanglewood Chamber Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND program of chamber music at Tanglewood was played in the theater-concert hall last night by pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz and a vocal quartet consisting of Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

The Brahms Liebeslieder waltzes were given after intermission. Rarely has music been played on that stage with more gusto and spirit. Exactly the right elements combined, both in the voices and at the keyboard, to afford the audience a memorable and thrilling evening. The entire first book was performed and "Zum Schluss" from the second. The earlier set, despite the unbroken waltz rhythm, never grows monotonous, and the grace and refinement and contrasting exhilaration provide wide variety.

* * *

THE VERSES in the first set are by Georg Daumer and are generally in a genial Viennese vein, and some of them are unexpectedly touching. The "Zum Schluss" verse, from Goethe, is a bit more sombre and the dance rhythm is allowed to fade away in some degree, but it makes a penetrating close to the preceding songs, which were sung with tremendous appeal.

Probably the factor which gave the performance its cardinal virtue was the youthful assurance with which the entire little ensemble plunged into the score of songs. Brahms gives each vocalist solos and then combines them in every conceivable combination. It was absolutely delightful singing and it would have been difficult to determine who seemed to enjoy it more, the artists or the enthralled audience.

* * *

MUSIC for piano duet is a rarity these days, yet Schubert, among others, wrote a moderately wide shelf for this medium. All of it of interest and much of it of deep and endearing charm. The tender beseeching plea of the F minor Fantasy, Opus 103, once impressed on one's mind, never will leave and becomes a permanent and gentle personal theme song. The two artists at the keyboard played it with quiet elegance and felicitous restraint. Their delicacy, in its place was less labored than it had been in the opening Schubert, the Variations on an original theme, in A flat major, Opus 35.

Schubert's music for piano four hands is little explored these days, so much so that these examples have become almost novelties, and one wonders why such lovable music is neglected. The fantasy is dedicated to the Countess Karoline Esterhazy although Schubert declared that the dedication was not necessary as all his work was dedicated to her. It is part of the work he produced in the exhausted state of his last 11 feverish months.

* * *

BETWEEN the two Schubert works Lipkin and Berkowitz played Hindemith's sonata, a 20-year-old work, in three movements, in which their ensemble was noticeably better than in the more obvious classic. The rhythmic complexity, especially the center "lebhaft," has a jazzy flavor in which a daring spontaneity replaced their Schubertian caution. If one were inclined to analyze music for this combination, the query posed above would answer itself. The employment of most of the limits of the piano, even by such masters of their metier as Schubert and Hindemith, lacks the color and diversity, for instance, that Bach saw, and heard, in the Brandenburgs when he never used the same instrumental combination twice. Lipkin and Berkowitz alternated seats as the evening progressed, and their individual sensitivity gave distinction to their half of the evening.

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

SEYMOUR LIPKIN, PIANIST AT TANGLEWOOD

FESTIVALS, MUSIC, DANCE

No setback to Ellenville this season. Undaunted by the pre-season publicity given to one of its leading bank citizens the town with artistic jet-propulsion, assisted by civic leaders of six counties, Ulster, Sullivan, Orange, Putnam, Dutchess and Greene have pulled a hefty staff of artists to their Empire hills. And audiences, too, with their pluck and creations.

* * *

The repeat of the dance-drama EMPEROR JONES with Jose Limon, the appearance of Igor Markevitch on the podium the opening week as well as the soloists from the Royal Danish Ballet company and Leopold Stokowski, scheduled for the 18th and 20th, show sharp planning. A repeat performance of the Richard Strauss opera, a full stage production, goes on Friday evening. ELEKTRA was staged by Leopold Sachse, a long time associate of the composer, and Leopold Halasz conducts.

* * *

The above is just part of New York State's Empire Festival and altogether some 70,000 people will be drawn to the site this summer. The full four weeks will be brought to a conclusion on Sunday afternoon, July 28th. During that last week Elaine Malbin will star in MADAME BUTTERFLY, with Halasz again on the podium.

* * *

Up in the Berkshires, at Tanglewood, the concerts are in full flow. Charles Munch, Music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has defended a stand taken for uninhibited exchange of music and musicians from all points of the world. In an address there he stressed a "general free exchange among all contemporaries. These exchanges in the world of art are now so well developed American orchestras go everywhere and European orchestras come here." "It signifies," he added, "great progress in the relations of peoples and in the development of good will and mutual respect."

* * *

And as for the dance, it is Ted Shawn who is working in his 25th anniversary of varied presentation up at Jacob's Pillow, in Lee, Mass. The all-summer dance program has pulled some plums for this Silver Jubilee. Now in its third week you will find Erik Bruhn, an alumni of the Royal Danish Ballet dancing with Sonia Arovia. Also Iva Ketchell, whose one woman show made a hit on Broadway last winter, in a presentation of mimetic dances. Destine of Haiti with a large company is showing his colorful Caribbean dances. And there's a picture of what is hapening on the Eastern seaboard in the world of cliffs and lifts.

C129]

WESTCHESTER GROUP NEWSPAPERS

Memo from Charles K. Freeman

Theatre News Tear-Sheet

Appearing in:

YONKERS HERALD STATESMAN

MT. VERNON DAILY ARGUS

NEW ROCHELLE STANDARD-STAR

WHITE PLAINS REPORTER DISPATCH

PORT CHESTER DAILY ITEM

MAMARONECK DAILY TIMES

TARRYTOWN DAILY NEWS

OSSINING CITIZEN REGISTER

PEEKSKILL EVENING STAR

BRONXVILLE REPORTER

****

Reporter Dispatch, White Plains, N. Y., Tues., July 16, 1957

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

SEYMOUR LIPKIN, PIANIST AT TANGLEWOOD

FESTIVALS, MUSIC, DANCE

No setback to Ellenville this season. Undaunted by the pre-season publicity given to one of its leading bank citizens the town with artistic jet-propulsion, assisted by civic leaders of six counties, Ulster, Sullivan, Orange, Putnam, Dutchess and Greene have pulled a hefty staff of artists to their Empire hills. And audiences, too, with their pluck and creations.

* * *

The repeat of the dance-drama EMPEROR JONES with Jose Limon, the appearance of Igor Markevitch on the podium the opening week as well as the soloists from the Royal Danish Ballet company and Leopold Stokowski scheduled for the 18th and 20th, show sharp planning. A repeat performance of the Richard Strauss opera, a full stage production, goes on Friday evening. ELEKTRA was staged by Leopold Sachse, a long time associate of the composer, and Leopold Halasz conducts.

* * *

The above is just part of New York State's Empire Festival and altogether some 70,000 people will be drawn to the site this summer. The full four weeks will be brought to a conclusion on Sunday afternoon, July 28th. During that last week Elaine Malbin will star in MADAME BUTTERFLY, with Halasz again on the podium.

* * *

Up in the Berkshires, at Tanglewood, the concerts are in full flow. Charles Munch, Music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has defended a stand taken for uninhibited exchange of music and musicians from all points of the world. In an address there he stressed a "general free exchange among all contemporaries. These exchanges in the world of art are now so well developed American orchestras go everywhere and European orchestras come here." "It signifies," he added, "great progress in the relations of peoples and in the development of good will and mutual respect."

* * *

And as for the dance, it is Ted Shawn who is working in his 25th anniversary of varied presentation up at Jacob's Pillow, in Lee, Mass. The all-summer dance program has pulled some plums for this Silver Jubilee. Now in its third week you will find Erik Bruhn, an alumni of the Royal Danish Ballet dancing with Sonia Arovia. Also Iva Ketchell, whose one woman show made a hit on Broadway last winter, in a presentation of mimetic dances. Destine of Haiti with a large company is showing his colorful Caribbean dances. And there's a picture of what is hapening on the Eastern seaboard in the world of cliffs and lifts.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1957

Music Review

Tanglewood Chamber Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND program of chamber music at Tanglewood was played in the theater-concert hall last night by pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz and a vocal quartet consisting of Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

The Brahms Liebeslieder waltzes were given after intermission. Rarely has music been played on that stage with more gusto and spirit. Exactly the right elements combined, both in the voices and at the keyboard, to afford the audience a memorable and thrilling evening. The entire first book was performed and "Zum Schluss" from the second. The earlier set, despite the unbroken waltz rhythm, never grows monotonous, and the grace and refinement and contrasting exhilaration provide wide variety.

* * *

THE VERSES are by Georg Daumer and are generally in a genial Viennese vein, and some of them are unexpectedly touching. The "Zum Schluss" verse, from Goethe, is a bit more sombre and the dance rhythm is allowed to fade away in some degree, but it makes a penetrating close to the preceding songs, which were sung with tremendous appeal.

Probably the factor which gave the performance its cardinal virtue was the youthful assurance with which the entire little ensemble plunged into the score of songs. Brahms gives each vocalist solos and then combines them in every conceivable combination. It was absolutely delightful singing and it would have been difficult to determine who seemed to enjoy it more, the artists or the enthralled audience.

* * *

MUSIC for piano duet is a rarity these days, yet Schubert, among others, wrote a moderately wide shelf for this medium, all of it of interest and much of it of deep and endearing charm. The tender beseeching plea of the F minor Fantasy, Opus 103, once impressed on one's mind, never will leave and becomes a permanent and gentle personal theme song. The two artists at the keyboard played it with quiet elegance and felicitous restraint. Their delicacy, in its place was less labored than it had been in the opening Schubert, the Variations on an original theme, in A flat major, Opus 35.

Schubert's music for piano four hands is little explored these days, so much so that these examples have become almost novelties, and one wonders why such lovable music is neglected. The fantasy is dedicated to the Countess Karoline Esterhazy although Schubert declared that the dedication was not necessary as all his work was dedicated to her. It is part of the work he produced in the exhausted state of his last 11 feverish months.

* * *

BETWEEN the two Schubert works Lipkin and Berkowitz played Hindemith's sonata, a 20-year-old work, in three movements, in which their ensemble was noticeably better than in the more obvious classic. The rhythmic complexity, especially the center "lebhaft," has a jazzy flavor in which a daring spontaneity replaced their Schubertian caution. If one were inclined to analyze music for this combination, the query posed above would answer itself. The employment of most of the limits of the piano, even by such masters of their metier as Schubert and Hindemith, lacks the color and diversity, for instance, that Bach saw, and heard, in the Brandenburgs when he never used the same instrumental combination twice. Lipkin and Berkowitz alternated seats as the evening progressed, and their individual sensitivity gave distinction to their half of the evening.

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

SEYMOUR LIPKIN, PIANIST AT TANGLEWOOD

FESTIVALS, MUSIC, DANCE

No setback to Ellenville this season. Undaunted by the pre-season publicity given to one of its leading bank citizens the town with artistic jet-propulsion, assisted by civic leaders of six counties, Ulster, Sullivan, Orange, Putnam, Dutchess and Greene have pulled a hefty staff of artists to their Empire hills. And audiences, too, with their pluck and creations.

* * *

The repeat of the dance-drama EMPEROR JONES with Jose Limon, the appearance of Igor Markevitch on the podium the opening week as well as the soloists from the Royal Danish Ballet company and Leopold Stokowski, scheduled for the 18th and 20th, show sharp planning. A repeat performance of the Richard Strauss opera, a full stage production, goes on Friday evening. ELEKTRA was staged by Leopold Sachse, a long time associate of the composer, and Leopold Halasz conducts.

* * *

The above is just part of New York State's Empire Festival and altogether some 70,000 people will be drawn to the site this summer. The full four weeks will be brought to a conclusion on Sunday afternoon, July 28th. During that last week Elaine Malbin will star in MADAME BUTTERFLY, with Halasz again on the podium.

* * *

Up in the Berkshires, at Tanglewood, the concerts are in full flow. Charles Munch, Music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has defended a stand taken for uninhibited exchange of music and musicians from all points of the world. In an address there he stressed a "general free exchange among all contemporaries. These exchanges in the world of art are now so well developed American orchestras go everywhere and European orchestras come here." "It signifies," he added, "great progress in the relations of peoples and in the development of good will and mutual respect."

* * *

And as for the dance, it is Ted Shawn who is working in his 25th anniversary of varied presentation up at Jacob's Pillow, in Lee, Mass. The all-summer dance program has pulled some plums for this Silver Jubilee. Now in its third week you will find Erik Bruhn, an alumni of the Royal Danish Ballet dancing with Sonia Arovia. Also Iva Ketchell, whose one woman show made a hit on Broadway last winter, in a presentation of mimetic dances. Destine of Haiti with a large company is showing his colorful Caribbean dances. And there's a picture of what is hapening on the Eastern seaboard in the world of cliffs and lifts.

WESTCHESTER GROUP NEWSPAPERS

Memo from Charles K. Freeman

Theatre News Tear-Sheet

Appearing in:

YONKERS HERALD STATESMAN

MT. VERNON DAILY ARGUS

NEW ROCHELLE STANDARD—STAR

WHITE PLAINS REPORTER DISPATCH

PORT CHESTER DAILY ITEM

MAMARONECK DAILY TIMES

TARRYTOWN DAILY NEWS

OSSINING CITIZEN REGISTER

PEEKSKILL EVENING STAR

BRONXVILLE REPORTER

****

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

SEYMOUR LIPKIN, PIANIST AT TANGLEWOOD

FESTIVALS, MUSIC, DANCE

No setback to Ellenville this season. Undaunted by the pre-season publicity given to one of its leading bank citizens the town with artistic jet-propulsion, assisted by civic leaders of six counties, Ulster, Sullivan, Orange, Putnam, Dutchess and Greene have pulled a hefty staff of artists to their Empire hills. And audiences, too, with their pluck and creations.

* * *

The repeat of the dance-drama EMPEROR JONES with Jose Limon, the appearance of Igor Markevitch on the podium the opening week as well as the soloists from the Royal Danish Ballet company and Leopold Stokowski, scheduled for the 18th and 20th, show sharp planning. A repeat performance of the Richard Strauss opera, a full stage production, goes on Friday evening. ELEKTRA was staged by Leopold Sachse, a long time associate of the composer, and Leopold Halasz conducts.

* * *

The above is just part of New York State's Empire Festival and altogether some 70,000 people will be drawn to the site this summer. The full four weeks will be brought to a conclusion on Sunday afternoon, July 28th. During that last week Elaine Malbin will star in MADAME BUTTERFLY, with Halasz again on the podium.

* * *

Up in the Berkshires, at Tanglewood, the concerts are in full flow. Charles Munch, Music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has defended a stand taken for uninhibited exchange of music and musicians from all points of the world. In an address there he stressed a "general free exchange among all contemporaries. These exchanges in the world of art are now so well developed American orchestras go everywhere and European orchestras come here." "It signifies," he added, "great progress in the relations of peoples and in the development of good will and mutual respect."

* * *

And as for the dance, it is Ted Shawn who is working in his 25th anniversary of varied presentation up at Jacob's Pillow, in Lee, Mass. The all-summer dance program has pulled some plums for this Silver Jubilee. Now in its third week you will find Erik Bruhn, an alumni of the Royal Danish Ballet dancing with Sonia Arovia. Also Iva Ketchell, whose one woman show made a hit on Broadway last winter, in a presentation of mimetic dances. Destine of Haiti with a large company is showing his colorful Caribbean dances. And there's a picture of what is hapening on the Eastern seaboard in the world of cliffs and lifts.

Reporter Dispatch, White Plains, N. Y., Tues., July 16, 1957

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1957

TIGHT BINDING

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 10 1957

5 Performances Set This Week At Music Center

Five performances and demonstrations will be given this week at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Tomorrow evening, the student orchestra will perform in the Music Shed. On Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall, the student instrumentalists will present a program of chamber music. The first weekly Composers' Forum will be given on Sunday evening at 8.30 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall. On Friday afternoon at 3.15 in the Chamber Music Hall, the Seminar in Contemporary Music will be continued. All of these programs are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Student conductors who will lead the student orchestra on Thursday evening in a program of works by Weber, Mozart, Villa-Lobos and Sibelius are Fernand Graton of Montreal, Wyn Morris of South Wales, and Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland. Eleazar de Cervalho, the Brazilian conductor who is head of the orchestral conducting department of the Music Center this summer, will conclude the concert by leading the student orchestra in a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 2.

The Chamber Music Concert on Sunday morning will feature works by Mozart, Mendelssohn and Brahms. At the Composers' Forum on Sunday evening, visiting Fromm Fellowship musicians will perform works written by composition students David Ward-Steinmann, Michael Kassler, Pohlman Mallalieu, Egil Hovland and William Smith.

BUSY SCHEDULE AT MUSIC CENTER

Lenox, July 6—During the coming week the 15th session of the Berkshire Music Center will be in full operation. Friends of the school who make a voluntary contribution to its support are invited to the following student performances:

Sunday morning chamber music by Dept. 1 students (10 a. m., July 7 and 14, Chamber Music Hall).

Sunday evening composer's forum by Dept. 3 students (8:30 p. m., July 14, Chamber Music Hall).

Symphony concert by the student orchestra of Dept. 1 (8:30 p. m., Thursday, July 11, Music Shed); and a series of illustrated lectures by the Berkshire Music Center faculty in connection with the Fromm Seminar in Contemporary Music (3:15 p. m.).

Wednesday, July 10, Friday, July 12, Chamber Music Hall). The Wednesday lecture will be by Irving Fine of the composition faculty; the Friday lecture by Aaron Copland, head of the composition department.

Information and a calendar of events open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center, in addition to full programs for the Berkshire Festival season are available on request from Tanglewood, Lenox.

Music Center Sets 4 Concerts At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 11, 1957—

Four performances and demonstrations will be given during the current week of activity at the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox. Tonight the student orchestra will perform in the Music Shed.

On Sunday morning, in the Chamber Music Hall at 10, the student instrumentalists will present a program of chamber music. The first weekly Composers' Forum will be given on Sunday evening at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. On Friday afternoon at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall, the Seminar in Contemporary Music will be presented. All of these programs are open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Student Leaders

Student conductors who will lead the student orchestra on Thursday evening in a program of works by Weber, Mozart, Villa-Lobos and Sibelius are Fernand Graton of Montreal, Canada; Wyn Morris of South Wales, Great Britain, and Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland. Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor who heads the orchestral conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center this summer, will conclude the concert by leading the student orchestra in a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 2.

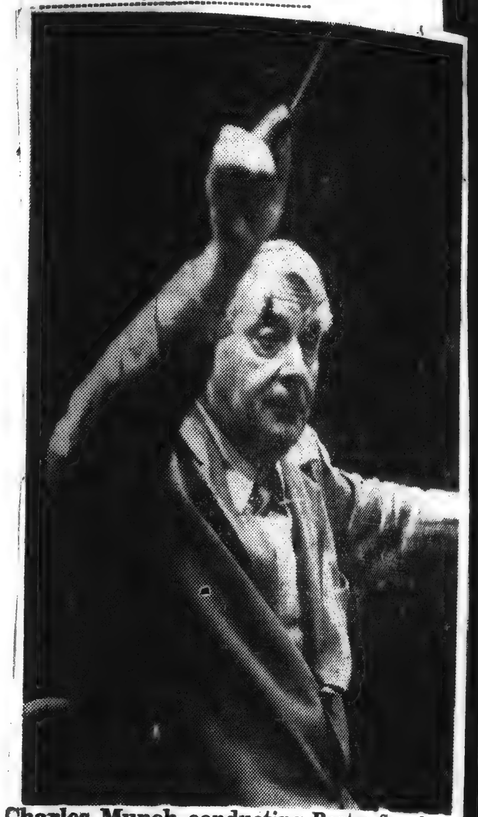
The Chamber Music concert on Sunday morning will feature works by Mozart, Mendelssohn and Brahms. At the Composers' Forum on Sunday evening, visiting Fromm Fellowship musicians will perform works written by composition students David Ward-Steinmann, Michael Kassler, Pohlman Mallalieu, Egil Hovland and William Smith.

The seminar in Modern Music Friday will be led by Aaron Copland, who will speak on "Music of the Twenties: the new Shibboleths." The lectures will be illustrated by Fromm Fellowship players.

C130

RICHMOND, VA.
TIMES-DISPATCH
Circ. D. 127,209 - S. 178,348

JUL 14 1957



Charles Munch conducting Boston Symphony

The Full Score

Mozart Week End At Tanglewood

By John White

This is Mozart week end at Tanglewood. At the Boston Symphony's summer place in the country outside Lenox, Mass., the musicians are making money, the students are studying, and the tourists are walking the green lawns for a vacation with music. For three days this week they are pretending the Mozart bicentennial is still going on, at least long enough for several hours of Mozart's music for the thousands of listeners who travel up and down New England for this most famous of American festivals. The Mozart cycle includes three concerts under the baton of Charles Munch with the three last symphonies, concertos for bassoon and horn, the great Sinfonia Concertante, and a sprinkling of serenades.

This summer's Berkshire Festival from July 3 to August 11 is taking composers in turn for several series of sturdy, conservative programs. The Berkshire idea does not lean toward odd or unusual programs or single festival themes—unlike the German town that looked hard for an "unfestivaled" German composer and finally chose Verdi. The playing of the marvelous Boston Symphony, the cool weather, the pastoral landscape, and the excellent school of the Berkshire Music Center seem to be attractions enough for the festival's following.

Play for Bach

Last week belonged to Bach. Munch played all six Brandenburg Concertos, two suites, and the second part of the St. Matthew Passion with the Harvard and Radcliffe Glee Clubs, and Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm, and John McCollum among the soloists.

Tchaikovsky and Stavinsky will take turns next week in three all-Russian programs—on Friday and "Pathetique" Symphony and Rococo Variations, and Stravinsky's ballet "Card Game." On Saturday the Fifth Symphony and Etravinsky's "Rite of Spring" under Pierre Monteux.

The concert on July 21 is dedicated to the festival's founder, Serge Koussevitzky, with probably the most interesting program of the entire summer. It includes Stravinsky's recent "Caticum Sacrum." This controversial work was composed in Stravinsky's newly evolved tone-row style for St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice, and has not been at all widely heard in this country.

Berlioz' Music

On July 26 and 27 Munch will be in his finest element with two all-Berlioz programs, and the second of these will be one of Berloz's finest works, the oratorio "The Childhood of Christ." This combination of superlatives should make another high point of the season, especially since Munch's sympathy and communicativeness with Berlioz scores have been largely responsible for this composer's renaissance in recent Valletti, Kopleff, Gramm, Cesare Valletti, and Gerald Souzay will have solo roles.

The following week ends go to Brahms and Beethoven, with a mighty finale of Beethoven's Ninth on August 11. Carl Schuricht will conduct two of the Beethoven evenings.

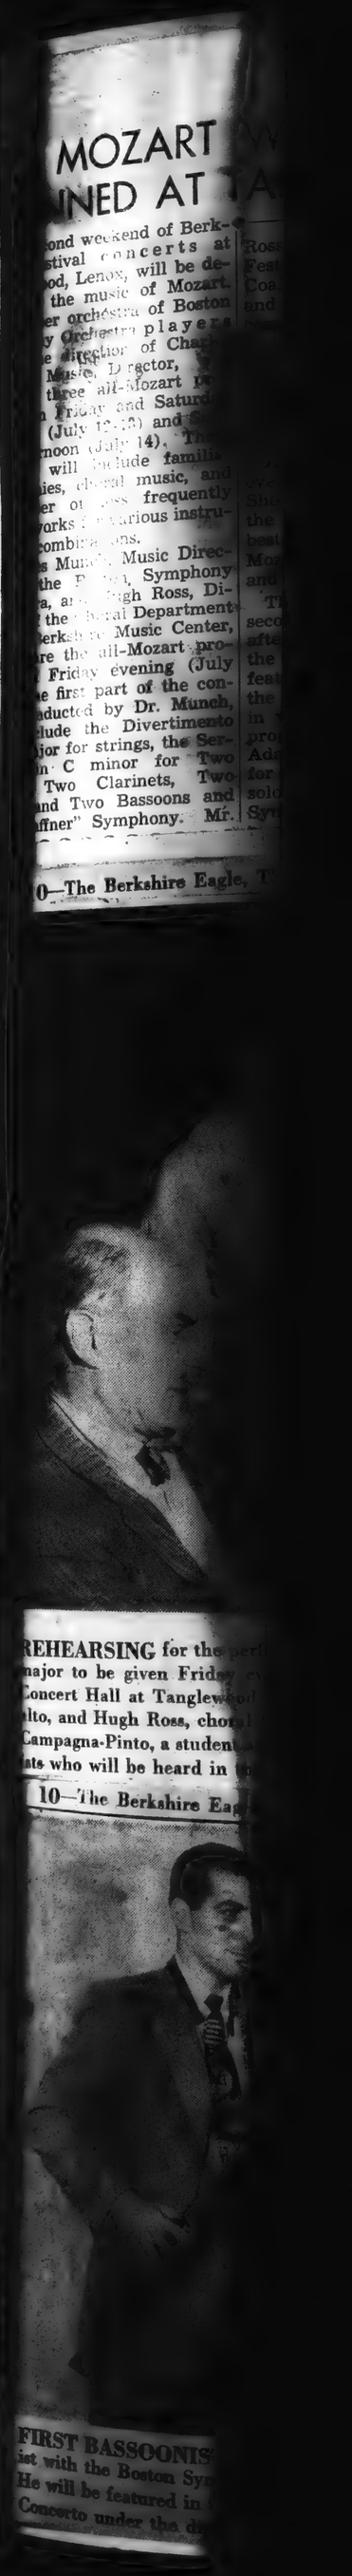
A scattering of 20th century composers will be added during the last weeks: Boris Blacher, Werner Egk, Honegger, Hindemith, Barber, Piston, and Copland. It is always interesting to record the modern composers who Count" in Berkshire counting for arrivval in this acid group pany is considerably more meaningful than any number of performances in other parts of the country.

Munch's Tanglewood programs have been very conservative for several years, and it is unlikely that he will take risks with new music. The advance guard is represented, however, with two chamber music concerts sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation and the student orchestra, chorus, and opera groups will do their share to keep the proceedings from becoming stodgy. In all, there are 48 concerts to choose from during the entire six weeks.



MOZART
NED AT
ond weekend of Berk-stival concerts at od, Lenox, will be de-
the music of Mozart.
er orchestra of Boston
y Orchestra players
e direction of Cha Music, Director, three all-Mozart pr
n Friday and Satur
(July 12-13) and rnoon (July 14). Th will include famili
ies, choral music, and er of less frequently works for various instru-combinations.
s Munch, Music Direc-
the Boston Symphony
a, and Hugh Ross, Di-
the Choral Department
erkshire Music Center, re the all-Mozart pro-Friday evening (July
e first part of the con-nducted by Dr. Munch, lude the Divertimento jor for strings, the Ser-n C minor for Two
Two Clarinets, Two nd Two Bassoons and ffner" Symphony. Mr.

0—The Berkshire Eagle, T

REHEARSING for the per major to be given Friday Concert Hall at Tanglewood lto, and Hugh Ross, chor Campagna-Pinto, a student sts who will be heard in

10—The Berkshire Eag

FIRST BASSOONIS
ist with the Boston Sym
He will be featured in Concerto under the di

ALL MOZART WEEKEND IS PLANNED AT TANGLEWOOD

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, Music Director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston, Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, Director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coali" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major (Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

Clark

REHEARSING for the performance of Mozart's Mass in C major to be given Friday evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood are Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, and Hugh Ross, choral director of Music Center. Miss Campagna-Pinto, a student at Tanglewood, is one of the soloists who will be heard in the concert, directed by Mr. Ross.

FIRST BASSOONIST Sherman Walt will appear as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon. He will be featured in the performance of Mozart's Bassoon Concerto under the direction of Conductor Charles Munch.

Second Tanglewood Wee Features Mozart's Mus

Springfield Repub. 7/7/57

Charles Munch to Conduct Three Symphonies S urday Night in Music Shed; Bach's 'St. M thew Passion' Scheduled This Afternoon

Lenox, July 6 — The second week end of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Piano Duets

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on July 10 an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for piano four hands by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941), and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert.

Both Lipkin and Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood.

The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, base, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons.

All the artists appearing in this concert will donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Mozart Program

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

Concert Next Sunday

The closing concert of the second festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theater-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E flat major.

The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt. Programs for the ond week:

Wednesday, July 10, 8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Chamber Music
Variations on an Original Theme, Op. 35 ..... Sch
Sonata for Piano Four Hands ..... Hinde
Fantasie in F minor, Op. 103 ..... Sch
Liebeslieder Waltzes, Op. 52, for duet and voices "Zum Schluss" the Neue Liebeslieder, Op. 65 Br
Pianists:
Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkow
Singers:
Saramae Endich, soprano
Florence Kopleff, alto
John McCollum, tenor
Donald Gramm, bass
Friday, July 12, 8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Chamber Orchestra
Divertimento in D major, for St K. 136 .....
Serenade in C minor, K. 388 .....
Symphony in D major, "Haffner," K. 385 .....
(Conductor, Charles Munch)
"Regina coeli" for chorus, solo and orchestra, K. 276 .....
"Ave verum corpus," motet for c and string orchestra, K. 618 ...
Mass in C major, K. 337 .....
(conductor, Hugh Ross)
Soloists:
Saramae Endich, soprano
Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto
John McCollum, tenor
Fague Springmann, baritone
Saturday, July 13, 8:30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Conducted by Charles Munch)
Symphony in E flat major, K. 543 .....
Symphony in G minor, K. 550 .....
Symphony in C major, "Jupiter" K. 551 .....
Sunday, July 14, 3:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Conducted by Charles Munch)
Adagio and Fugue in C minor for St Orchestra, K. 546 .....
Concerto for Bassoon in B flat m K. 191 (Sherman Walt) .....
Concerto for Horn in E flat m K. 495 (James Stagliano) .....
Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clar Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b ....
Ralph Gomberg oboe
Gino Cioffi, clarinet
James Stagliano, horn
Sherman Walt, bassoon

This week end's opening f val concerts by the chamber chestra of Boston Symphony chestra members under the di tion of Charles Munch are de ed to the music of Bach, wit performance tomorrow in the sic Shed of Part II of the Matthew Passion" with the H vard Glee Club and Radc Choral Society, G. Wallace W worth, conductor. The soloi are Adele Addison, soprano; Flor ence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 5 1957

The second week of the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will include a program of piano duets by pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berowitz, Wednesday evening, July 10, at 8:30, with music by Schubert, Hindemith and Brahms. Friday evening, July 12, Charles Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony in works by Mozart, including the Haffner Symphony. Hugh Ross will direct the chorus, solo voices and orchestra in Mozart's "Regina Coeli" and the "Ave verum corpus". These two concerts will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall as will the Sunday afternoon concert with Dr. Munch conducting a Mozart program of the chamber orchestra Saturday's performance will be held in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m. with an all-Mozart program conducted by Dr Munch. Scheduled for this Friday, Saturday and Sunday are all-Bach programs with Dr Munch conducting.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

JUL 6 - 1957

Mozart Works To Be Featured At Tanglewood July 12-13-14

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on July 10 an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941), and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert. Both Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons. All the artists appearing in this concert have generously offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Charles Munch, and Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clairents, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, Bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

The third weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts, the first of the series by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the famour Tanglewood Music Shed, will place special emphasis on the music of Tchaikovsky and will salute the 75th birthday this summer of Igor Stravinsky. Conductors will be Charles Munch (July 19-21) and Pierre Monteux (July 20). Isaac Stern will be heard in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto (July 21) and Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations (July 19). Tchaikovsky's 5th and 6th Symphonies and his "Romeo and Juliet" Overture will also appear on the programs of the third weekend. The third Chamber Music Concert in the series, on Wednesday evening, July 17, will welcome the Beaux Arts Trio back to Tanglewood for their third visit.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 135,309

JUL 7 1957

All-Mozart Weekend At Tanglewood

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch will perform three all-Mozart programs Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Friday, the first part of the concert will include the Divertimento in D Major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Hugh Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C Major.

Three Last Symphonies

Saturday evening Dr. Munch will conduct the three last symphonies of Mozart in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

Sunday afternoon the program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

ALL MOZART WEEKEND IS PLANNED AT TANGLEWOOD

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, Music Director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

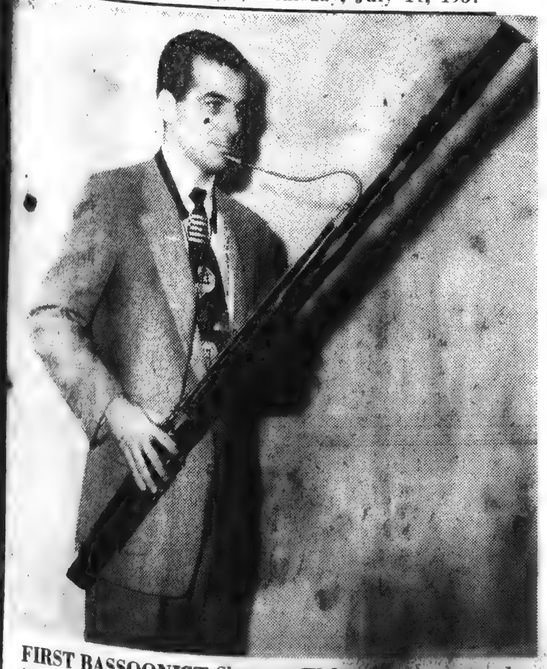
Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston, Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, Director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coali" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major (Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

Clark

REHEARSING for the performance of Mozart's Mass in C major to be given Friday evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood are Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, and Hugh Ross, choral director of Music Center. Miss Campagna-Pinto, a student at Tanglewood, is one of the soloists who will be heard in the concert, directed by Mr. Ross.



FIRST BASSOONIST Sherman Walt will appear as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon. He will be featured in the performance of Mozart's Bassoon Concerto under the direction of Conductor Charles Munch.

Second Tanglewood Wee Features Mozart's Mus

Charles Munch to Conduct Three Symphonies S urday Night in Music Shed; Bach's 'St. M thew Passion' Scheduled This Afternoon

Lenox, July 6 — The second week end of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar, symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Piano Duets

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on July 10 an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for piano four hands by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941), and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert.

Both Lipkin and Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood.

The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Koploff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, base, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons.

All the artists appearing in this concert will donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Mozart Program

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

Concert Next Sunday

The closing concert of the second festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theater-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E flat major.

The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt. Programs for the ond week:

Wednesday, July 10, 8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Chamber Music

Variations on an Original Theme, Op. 35 ..... Sch
Sonata for Piano Four Hands ..... Hinde
Fantasie in F minor, Op. 103 . Sch
Liebeslieder Waltzes, Op. 52, for duet and voices "Zum Schluss" the Neue Liebeslieder, Op. 65 Br

Pianists:
Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkow

Singers:
Saramae Endich, soprano
Florence Kopleff, alto
John McCollum, tenor
Donald Gramm, bass

Friday, July 12, 8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Chamber Orchestra

Divertimento in D major, for St K. 136 ..... M
Serenade in C minor, K. 388 ..... M
Symphony in D major, "Haffner," K. 385 ..... M

(Conductor, Charles Munch)

"Regina coeli" for chorus, solo and orchestra, K. 276 ..... M
"Ave verum corpus," motet for c and string orchestra, K. 618 ... M
Mass in C major, K. 337 ..... M

(conductor, Hugh Ross)

Soloists:
Saramae Endich, soprano
Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto
John McCollum, tenor
Fague Springmann, baritone

Saturday, July 13, 8:30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Conducted by Charles Munch)

Symphony in E flat major, K. 543 ..... Mo
Symphony in G minor, K. 550 .. Mo
Symphony in C major, "Jupiter" K. 551 ..... Mo

Sunday, July 14, 2:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Conducted by Charles Munch)

Adagio and Fugue in C minor for St Orchestra, K. 546 ..... Mo
Concerto for Bassoon in B flat ma K. 191 (Sherman Walt) ..... Mo
Concerto for Horn in E flat ma K. 495 (James Stagliano) .... Mo
Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clar Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b .... Mo

Ralph Gomberg, oboe
Gino Cioffi, clarinet
James Stagliano, horn
Sherman Walt, bassoon

This week end's opening fe val concerts by the chamber chestra of Boston Symphony chestra members under the di tion of Charles Munch are de ed to the music of Bach, wit performance tomorrow in the sic Shed of Part II of the Matthew Passion" with the H vard Glee Club and Radc Choral Society, G. Wallace W worth, conductor. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopoff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

JUL 6 - 1957

Mozart Works To Be Featured At Tanglewood July 12-13-14

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concverts in the Theatre-Concert hall on July 10 an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941), and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert. Both Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festvial concerts in the past two or three seasons. All the artists appearing in this concert have generously offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Charles Munch, and Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The frist part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clairents, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

The third weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts, the first of the series by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the famour Tanglewood Music Shed, will place special emphasis on the music of Tchaikovsky and will salute the 75th birthday this summer of Igor Stravinsky. Conductors will be Charles Munch (July 19-21) and Pierre Monteux (July 20). Isaac Stern will be heard in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto (July 21) and Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations (July 19). Tchaikovsky's 5th and 6th Symphonies and his "Romeo and Juliet" Overture will also appear on the programs of the third weekend. The third Chamber Music Concert in the series, on Wednesday evening, July 17, will welcome the Beaux Arts Trio back to Tanglewood for their third visit.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 5 1957

The second week of the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will include a program of piano duets by pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berowitz, Wednesday evening, July 10, at 8:30, with music by Schubert, Hindemith and Brahms. Friday evening, July 12, Charles Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony in works by Mozart, including the Haffner Symphony. Hugh Ross will direct the chorus, solo voices and orchestra in Mozart's "Regina coeli", and the "Ave verum corpus". These two concerts will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall, as will the Sunday afternoon concert, with Dr Munch conducting a Mozart program of the chamber orchestra Saturday's performance will be held in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m. with an all-Mozart program conducted by Dr Munch. Scheduled for this Friday, Saturday and Sunday are all-Bach programs with Dr Munch conducting.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 135,309

JUL 7 1957

All-Mozart Weekend At Tanglewood

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch will perform three all-Mozart programs Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Friday, the first part of the concert will include the Divertimento in D Major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Hugh Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C Major.

Three Last Symphonies

Saturday evening Dr. Munch will conduct the three last symphonies of Mozart in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

Sunday afternoon the program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL, Section II, July 11, 1957

ALL MOZART WEEKEND IS PLANNED AT TANGLEWOOD

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, Music Director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, Director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coali" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major (Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

10—The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 11, 1957

Clark

REHEARSING for the performance of Mozart's Mass in C major to be given Friday evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood are Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, and Hugh Ross, choral director of Music Center. Miss Campagna-Pinto, a student at Tanglewood, is one of the soloists who will be heard in the concert, directed by Mr. Ross.

10—The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 11, 1957

FIRST BASSOONIST Sherman Walt will appear as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon. He will be featured in the performance of Mozart's Bassoon Concerto under the direction of Conductor Charles Munch.

Second Tanglewood Week Features Mozart's Music

Charles Munch to Conduct Three Symphonies Saturday Night in Music Shed; Bach's 'St. Matthew Passion' Scheduled This Afternoon

Lenox, July 6 — The second week end of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Piano Duets

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on July 10 an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for piano four hands by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941), and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert.

Both Lipkin and Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood.

The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Koploff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, base, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons.

All the artists appearing in this concert will donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Mozart Program

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

Concert Next Sunday

The closing concert of the second festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theater-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E flat major.

The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt. Programs for the second week:

Wednesday, July 10, 8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Chamber Music

Variations on an Original Theme, Op. 35 ..... Schubert
Sonata for Piano Four Hands ..... Hindemith
Fantasie in F minor, Op. 103 .. Schubert
Liebeslieder Waltzes, Op. 52, for piano duet and voices "Zum Schluss" from the Neue Liebeslieder, Op. 65 Brahms
Pianists:
Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkowitz
Singers:
Saramae Endich, soprano
Florence Kopleff, alto
John McCollum, tenor
Donald Gramm, bass

Friday, July 12, 8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Chamber Orchestra

Divertimento in D major, for Strings, K. 136 ..... Mozart
Serenade in C minor, K. 388 .... Mozart
Symphony in D major, "Haffner," K. 385 ..... Mozart
(Conductor, Charles Munch)
"Regina coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, K. 276 ..... Mozart
"Ave verum corpus," motet for chorus and string orchestra, K. 618 ... Mozart
Mass in C major, K. 337 ..... Mozart
(conductor, Hugh Ross)
Soloists:
Saramae Endich, soprano
Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto
John McCollum, tenor
Fague Springmann, baritone

Saturday, July 13, 8:30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Conducted by Charles Munch)
Symphony in E flat major, K. 543 ..... Mozart
Symphony in G minor, K. 550 .. Mozart
Symphony in C major, "Jupiter" K. 551 ..... Mozart

Sunday, July 14, 2:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Conducted by Charles Munch)
Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546 ..... Mozart
Concerto for Bassoon in B flat major, K. 191 (Sherman Wait) ..... Mozart
Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K. 495 (James Stagliano) .... Mozart
Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b .... Mozart
Ralph Gomberg oboe
Gino Cioffi, clarinet
James Stagliano, horn
Sherman Walt, bassoon

This week end's opening festival concerts by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra members under the direction of Charles Munch are devoted to the music of Bach, with a performance tomorrow in the Music Shed of Part II of the "St. Matthew Passion" with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Koploff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 5 1957

The second week of the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will include a program of piano duets by pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berowitz, Wednesday evening, July 10, at 8:30, with music by Schubert, Hindemith and Brahms. Friday evening, July 12, Charles Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony in works by Mozart, including the Haffner Symphony. Hugh Ross will direct the chorus, solo voices and orchestra in Mozart's "Regina coeli", and the "Ave verum corpus". These two concerts will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall, as will the Sunday afternoon concert, with Dr Munch conducting a Mozart program of the chamber orchestra Saturday's performance will be held in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m. with an all-Mozart program conducted by Dr Munch. Scheduled for this Friday, Saturday and Sunday are all-Bach programs, with Dr Munch conducting.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

JUL 6 - 1957

...s To Be Featured ...d July 12-13-14

...nd of Berk... ...s at Tangle... ...devoted to ... A chamber ... Symphony ...der the di... ...rch, music ... three all... Friday and July 12-13) ... (July 14). ...include fam... ...oral music, ... frequently ...ious instru... ...e series of ...g chamber ...he Theatre... ...10 an un... ...iano duets ...the pianists Ralph Berk... ...bert's Var... Theme, the ...r Hands by ...mposer in ...wood in its ...and 1941), ...minor also Lipkin and ...members of ...kshire Mus... Symphony's ...sic at Tan... half of the ...hms' "Lieb... piano duet by a quar... known at Endich, so... ff, alto, and ...r, are for... Center stu... ...amm, bass, number of ...certs in the ...ons. All the ...his concert ...red to do... Tanglewood ...akubasz and ... Fund of ...e, of Abbe... Center Falls, have ...e net pro... ...n the Provi... music ser... are at thei... ...s born June... and Hugh ... the former... choral de... yoke. ...hire Music ...una Richar... all-Mozart ...aughter, Mrs... ning (July ...d daughter... the con... ...idge St. ar... ...timento in ...yme Shores... the Seren... ...wo Oboes, ...Horns and ...ders of Elm... "Haffner" ...et Jacques o... ...ill present ...turned after...

...and a ... veil, whi... ...s caught ...e. An ... of stepha... ...er book s... ...nster, wh... ...nor, wore ... crystalet... She carrie... ...uet of ye... ...iragons an... ...ations. Mi... was bride... attired ... ...emi-coloni... ...elight ros... ...llow sna... ...s Catherin... ...rview. Sh... dress wit... ...all coloni... ...ellow swee... ...te feathere... ...ed Mr. Bo... The ushe... ...er of Fai... ...isemble wa... grandmoth... ...f the bride... ...d white ac... pale pin... ...rip to Ne... ...I live at 29... ...g Mrs. Bou... cotton dres... ...es. ..., the brid... ...m Holyok... ...l. She is ...lyoke Foo... ...carpenter ...ter, Vt. H... ...lyoke Trad...

New Yor... Sox doub...

...akubasz and ... Fund of ...e, of Abbe... Center Falls, have ...e net pro... ...n the Provi... music ser... are at thei... ...s born June... and Hugh ... the former... choral de... ...yoke. ...hire Music ...una Richar... all-Mozart ...aughter, Mrs... ning (July ...d daughter... the con... ...idge St. ar... ...timento in ...yme Shores... the Seren... ...wo Oboes, ...Horns and ...ders of Elm... "Haffner" ...et Jacques o... ...ill present ...turned after...

...the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

The third weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts, the first of the series by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the famour Tanglewood Music Shed, will place special emphasis on the music of Tchaikovsky and will salute the 75th birthday this summer of Igor Stravinsky. Conductors will be Charles Munch (July 19-21) and Pierre Monteux (July 20). Isaac Stern will be heard in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto (July 21) and Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations (July 19). Tchaikovsky's 5th and 6th Symphonies and his "Romeo and Juliet" Overture will also appear on the programs of the third weekend. The third Chamber Music Concert in the series, on Wednesday evening, July 17, will welcome the Beaux Arts Trio back to Tanglewood for their third visit.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 135,309

JUL 7 1957

All-Mozart Weekend At Tanglewood

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch will perform three all-Mozart programs Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Friday, the first part of the concert will include the Divertimento in D Major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Hugh Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C Major.

Three Last Symphonies

Saturday evening Dr. Munch will conduct the three last symphonies of Mozart in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

Sunday afternoon the program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,742
JUL 7 1957

[152]

Mozart Works to Be Played At Tanglewood This Week

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 6—The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs next Friday and Saturday evenings and next Sunday afternoon. These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music and, a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the theater-concert hall this week an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's "Variations on an Original Theme," the "Sonata for Piano Four Hands" by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941), and the "Fantasie in F Minor" also by Schubert.

Both Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's Summer school of music at Tanglewood. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood: Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kapleff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons.

All the artists appearing in this concert have generously offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 181,704
JUL 7 - 1957

Mozart to Be Featured At Berkshire Festival

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra will focus its attention on the works of Mozart in the coming weekend's concert at the Berkshire Festival.

The Mozart concerts at Tanglewood start Friday and will be performed mainly by the Symphony's chamber orchestra.

The full orchestra will launch its weekend programs in the Shed on Aug. 19, with Tschaikovsky as the chosen composer. Sharing honors with him will be Igor Stravinsky.

Composers whose works will be emphasized on subsequent weekends will be Berlioz, Brahms and Beethoven.

Rounding out the Bach concerts this afternoon in the Shed will be Part II of the St. Matthew Passion, conducted by Charles Munch. Taking part will be the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopnor, day will be a two-part program. The first will be conducted by Munch, and include Divertimento in D Major for Strings; Serenade in C Minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons; and the "Haffner" Symphony. Hugh Ross will then take over, presenting the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli," "Ave verum corpus" and the Mass in C Major. Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, baritone, will be the soloists.

Saturday night Munch will conduct Mozart's three last symphonies, the E Flat, G Minor, and "Jupiter." Sunday afternoon the orchestra will give a program consisting of the Adagio and Fugue in C Minor for String Orchestra, Bassoon Concerto with Sherman Walt as soloist; Horn Concerto with James Stagliano, and Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Stagliano and Walt.

This week's programs also include the second of the Wednesday evening series of chamber concerts which will present piano duets by Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school. They will play Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme and Fantasie in F Minor, and Hindemith's Sonata for Piano Four Hands.

They will also perform Brahms' "Liebeslieder" Waltzes for piano duet and voices. The soloists will be Saramae Endich, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm, who have offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 5 1957

Tanglewood Concerts To Feature Mozart

Second Week's Festival Programs Listed

The program for the second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes the following concerts:

Wednesday, July 10, 8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall; Variations on an Original Theme, Schubert; Sonata for Piano Four Hands, Hindemith; Fantasie in F Minor, Opus 103, Schubert; piano duets by Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz; Liebeslieder Waltzes, Opus 52, for piano duet and voices, Brahms; "Zum Schluss" from the Nue Liebeslieder, Opus 65, Brahms.

Friday, July 12, 8:30 p.m., Theatre Concert Hall, the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch: Mozart's Divertimento in D major for Strings, K 136; Serenade in C minor, K 388; Symphony in D major, "Haffner" K 385; "Regina coeli," for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, K 276; "Ave verum corpus," motet for chorus and string orchestra, K 618; Mass in C major, K 337, Mozart, conducted by Hugh Ross.

Saturday, July 13, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch: Mozart's Symphony in E Flat major, K 543; Symphony in G minor, K 550; Symphony in C major, "Jupiter," K 551.

Sunday, July 14, 2:30 p.m. Theatre Concert Hall, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr Munch conducting: Mozart's Adagio and Fugue in C minor for Strings Orchestra, K 546; Concerto for Basson in B flat major, K 191; Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K 495; Sinfonia concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K 297b.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1957.

Clemens Kalischer

IN TANGLEWOOD—Charles Munch conducts Mozart this week at Berkshire Festival.

Music

Benny Goodman, clarinetist, will be the guest artist with the Berkshire Quartet on Sunday afternoon, July 14, at 4 o'clock at Music Mountain, Falls Village. The program includes the Quartet in F by Mozart; Quartet No. 2, Bernhard Heiden, and Weber's Clarinet Quintet. Next Sunday, July 21, Janna Dawson, pianist, will be featured in Schumann's Piano Quintet. Works by Haydn and Walton are also scheduled.

At the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass, Friday evening, July 12, Charles Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony in works by Mozart, including the Haffner Symphony. Hugh Ross will direct the chorus, solo voices and orchestra in Mozart's "Regina coeli", and the "Ave verum corpus". These two concerts will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall, as will the Sunday afternoon concert, with Dr Munch conducting a Mozart program of the chamber orchestra Saturday's performance will be held in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m. with an all-Mozart program conducted by Dr Munch. Scheduled for this Friday, Saturday and Sunday are all-Bach programs. with Dr Munch conducting.

Starlight Festival of Chamber Music Concerts will be held in the Yale Art Gallery Sculpture Terrace, the York Street entrance, July 23, August 6. Concerts start at 8:30 p.m. The season's program includes Schubert Piano Trio, Mozart Obeo Quartet, Riley Obeo Quartet, Bach Brandenberg Concerto No. 4, Brahms Horn Trio, Franck Violin Sonata, Vivaldi Concerto for Lute and Strings. Tickets may be obtained by writing Starlight Festival, Inc., Box 6065, Hamden, Conn.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
JUL 11 1957

Hugh Ross will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus in a Mozart concert at Tanglewood Friday evening.

MILLBROOK
ROUND TABLE
July 4, 1957

Second Week End of Festival Concerts Will Feature Music of Mozart

The second week end of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon.

Tickets are still available at the Tanglewood box office for the concerts of July 12 and 13, and general admission to the grounds to enable overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns is sold on the day of each performance.

NEWTOWN BEE, FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1957

Tanglewood Concerts To Feature Mozart

Second Week's Festival Programs Listed

The program for the second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes the following concerts:

Wednesday, July 10, 8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall; Variations on an Original Theme, Schubert; Sonata for Piano Four Hands, Hindemith; Fantasie in F Minor, Opus 103, Schubert; piano duets by Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz; Liebeslieder Waltzes, Opus 52, for piano duet and voices, Brahms; "Zum Schluss" from the Nue Liebeslieder, Opus 65, Brahms.

Friday, July 12, 8:30 p.m., Theatre Concert Hall, the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch: Mozart's Divertimento in D major for Strings, K 136; Serenade in C minor, K 388; Symphony in D major, "Haffner" K 385; "Regina coeli," for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, K 276; "Ave verum corpus," motet for chorus and string orchestra, K 618; Mass in C major, K 337, Mozart, conducted by Hugh Ross.

Saturday, July 13, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch: Mozart's Symphony in E Flat major, K 543; Symphony in G minor, K 550; Symphony in C major, "Jupiter," K 551.

Sunday, July 14, 2:30 p.m. Theatre Concert Hall, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr Munch conducting: Mozart's Adagio and Fugue in C minor for Strings Orchestra, K 546; Concerto for Basson in B flat major, K 191; Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K 495; Sinfonia concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K 297b.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502
JUL 1957

Mozart at Tanglewood

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs next Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,742
JUL 7 1957

[102]

Mozart Works to Be Played At Tanglewood This Week

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 6—The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs next Friday and Saturday evenings and next Sunday afternoon. These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music and, a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the theater-concert hall this week an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's "Variations on an Original Theme," the "Sonata for Piano Four Hands" by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941), and the "Fantasie in F Minor" also by Schubert.

Both Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's Summer school of music at Tanglewood. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood: Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kapleff, alto; and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons.

All the artists appearing in this concert have generously offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 181,704
JUL 7 - 1957

Mozart to Be Featured At Berkshire Festival

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra will focus its attention on the works of Mozart in the coming weekend's concert at the Berkshire Festival.

The Mozart concerts at Tanglewood start Friday and will be performed mainly by the Symphony's chamber orchestra.

The full orchestra will launch its weekend programs in the Shed on Aug. 19, with Tschaikovsky as the chosen composer. Sharing honors with him will be Igor Stravinsky.

Composers whose works will be emphasized on subsequent weekends will be Berlioz, Brahms and Beethoven.

Rounding out the Bach concerts this afternoon in the Shed will be Part II of the St. Matthew Passion, conducted by Charles Munch. Taking part will be the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

Opening the Mozart series Friday will be a two-part program. The first will be conducted by Munch, and include Divertimento in D Major for Strings; Serenade in C Minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons; and the "Haffner" Symphony. Hugh Ross will then take over, presenting the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli," "Ave verum corpus" and the Mass in C Major. Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, baritone, will be the soloists.

Saturday night Munch will conduct Mozart's three last symphonies, the E Flat, G Minor, and "Jupiter." Sunday afternoon the orchestra will give a program consisting of the Adagio and Fugue in C Minor for String Orchestra, Bassoon Concerto with Sherman Walt as soloist; Horn Concerto with James Stagliano, and Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Stagliano and Walt.

This week's programs also include the second of the Wednesday evening series of chamber concerts which will present piano duets by Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school. They will play Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme and Fantasie in F Minor, and Hindemith's Sonata for Piano Four Hands.

They will also perform Brahms' "Liebeslieder" Waltzes for piano duet and voices. The soloists will be Saramae Endich, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm, who have offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 5 1957

Tanglewood Concerts To Feature Mozart

Second Week's Festival Programs Listed

The program for the second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes the following concerts:

Wednesday, July 10, 8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall; Variations on an Original Theme, Schubert; Sonata for Piano Four Hands, Hindemith; Fantasie in F Minor, Opus 103, Schubert; piano duets by Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz; Liebeslieder Waltzes, Opus 52, for piano duet and voices, Brahms; "Zum Schluss" from the Nue Liebeslieder, Opus 65, Brahms.

Friday, July 12, 8:30 p.m., Theatre Concert Hall, the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch: Mozart's Divertimento in D major for Strings, K 136; Serenade in C minor, K 388; Symphony in D major, "Haffner" K 385; "Regina coeli," for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, K 276; "Ave verum corpus," motet for chorus and string orchestra, K 618; Mass in C major, K 337, Mozart, conducted by Hugh Ross.

Saturday, July 13, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch: Mozart's Symphony in E Flat major, K 543; Symphony in G minor, K 550; Symphony in C major, "Jupiter," K 551.

Sunday, July 14, 2:30 p.m. Theatre Concert Hall, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr Munch conducting: Mozart's Adagio and Fugue in C minor for Strings Orchestra, K 546; Concerto for Basson in B flat major, K 191; Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K 495; Sinfonia concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K 297b.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1957.

Clemens Kalischer

IN TANGLEWOOD—Charles Munch conducts Mozart this week at Berkshire Festival.

The program includes ... Quartet in F by Mozart; Quartet No. 2, Bernhard Heiden, and Weber's Clarinet Quintet. Next Sunday, July 21, Janna Dawson, pianist, will be featured in Schumann's Piano Quintet. Works by Haydn and Walton are also scheduled.

At the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass, Friday evening, July 12, Charles Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony in works by Mozart, including the Haffner Symphony. Hugh Ross will direct the chorus, solo voices and orchestra in Mozart's "Regina coeli", and the "Ave verum corpus". These two concerts will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall, as will the Sunday afternoon concert, with Dr Munch conducting a Mozart program of the chamber orchestra Saturday's performance will be held in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m. with an all-Mozart program conducted by Dr Munch. Scheduled for this Friday, Saturday and Sunday are all-Bach programs. with Dr Munch conducting.

Starlight Festival of Chamber Music Concerts will be held in the Yale Art Gallery Sculpture Terrace, the York Street entrance, July 23, August 6. Concerts start at 8:30 p.m. The season's program includes Schubert Piano Trio, Mozart Oboe Quartet, Riley Oboe Quartet, Bach Brandenberg Concerto No. 4, Brahms Horn Trio, Franck Violin Sonata, Vivaldi Concerto for Lute and Strings. Tickets may be obtained by writing Starlight Festival, Inc., Box 6065, Hamden, Conn.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
JUL 11 1957

Hugh Ross will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus in a Mozart concert at Tanglewood Friday evening.

MILLBROOK
ROUND TABLE
July 4, 1957

Second Week End of Festival Concerts Will Feature Music of Mozart

The second week end of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon.

Tickets are still available at the Tanglewood box office for the concerts of July 12 and 13, and general admission to the grounds to enable overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns is sold on the day of each performance.

NEWTOWN BEE, FRIDAY, JULY 6, 1957

Tanglewood Concerts To Feature Mozart

Second Week's Festival Programs Listed

The program for the second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes the following concerts:

Wednesday, July 10, 8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall; Variations on an Original Theme, Schubert; Sonata for Piano Four Hands, Hindemith; Fantasie in F Minor, Opus 103, Schubert; piano duets by Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz; Liebeslieder Waltzes, Opus 52, for piano duet and voices, Brahms; "Zum Schluss" from the Nue Liebeslieder, Opus 65, Brahms.

Friday, July 12, 8:30 p.m., Theatre Concert Hall, the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch: Mozart's Divertimento in D major for Strings, K 136; Serenade in C minor, K 388; Symphony in D major, "Haffner" K 385; "Regina coeli," for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, K 276; "Ave verum corpus," motet for chorus and string orchestra, K 618; Mass in C major, K 337, Mozart, conducted by Hugh Ross.

Saturday, July 13, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch: Mozart's Symphony in E Flat major, K 543; Symphony in G minor, K 550; Symphony in C major, "Jupiter," K 551.

Sunday, July 14, 2:30 p.m. Theatre Concert Hall, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr Munch conducting: Mozart's Adagio and Fugue in C minor for Strings Orchestra, K 546; Concerto for Basson in B flat major, K 191; Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K 495; Sinfonia concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K 297b.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518 809 - Sat. 172 502
JUL 8 1957

Mozart at Tanglewood

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs next Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
JUL 7 1957

D

Second Tanglewood Week Features Mozart's Music

Charles Munch to Conduct Three Symphonies Saturday Night in Music Shed; Bach's 'St. Matthew Passion' Scheduled This Afternoon

[illegible] 6 — The second [illegible] of Berkshire Festival [illegible] Tanglewood, will be [illegible] the music of Mozart. [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). The concerts will include favorite symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Piano Duets

A [illegible] second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on July 10 an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for piano four hands by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941), and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert.

Both Lipkin and Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood.

The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopoff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, base, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons.

All the artists appearing in this concert will donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Mozart Program

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

Concert Next Sunday

The closing concert of the second festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theater-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E flat major.

The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt. Programs for the second week:

Wednesday, July 10, 8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Chamber Music

Variations on an Original Theme, Op. 35 ..... Schubert
Sonata for Piano Four Hands ..... Hindemith
Fantasie in F minor, Op. 103 .. Schubert
Liebeslieder Waltzes, Op. 52, for piano duet and voices "Zum Schluss" from Neue Liebeslieder, Op. 65 Brahms

Piano:
Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkowitz
Singers:
Saramae Endich, soprano
Florence Kopleff, alto
John McCollum, tenor
Donald Gramm, bass

Friday, July 12, 8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Chamber Orchestra

Divertimento in D major for Strings, K. 136 ..... Mozart
Serenade in C minor, K. [illegible] ..... Mozart
Symphony in D major, "Haffner," K. 385 ..... Mozart
(Conductor, Charles Munch)
"Regina coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, K. 276 ..... Mozart
"Ave verum corpus," motet for chorus and string orchestra, K. 618 ... Mozart
Mass in C major, K. 337 ..... Mozart
(conductor, Hugh Ross)

Soloists:
Saramae Endich, soprano
Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto
John McCollum, tenor
Fague Springmann, baritone

Saturday, July 13, 8:30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Conducted by Charles Munch)

Symphony in E flat major, K. 543 ..... Mozart
Symphony in G minor, K. 550 .. Mozart
Symphony in C major, "Jupiter" K. 551 ..... Mozart

Sunday, July 14, 2:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Conducted by Charles Munch)

Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546 ..... Mozart
Concerto for Bassoon in B flat major, K. 191 (Sherman Walt) ..... Mozart
Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K. 495 (James Stagliano) .... Mozart
Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b ... Mozart
Ralph Gomberg oboe
Gino Cioffi, clarinet
James Stagliano, horn
Sherman Walt, bassoon

This week end's opening festival concerts by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra members under the direction of Charles Munch are devoted to the music of Bach, with a performance tomorrow in the Music Shed of Part II of the "St. Matthew Passion" with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Koploff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Amenia, N. Y. Harlem Valley Times & Millerton Telegram
JUL 11 1957

MOZART'S WORKS SET AT TANGLEWOOD

Mozart's music will be featured at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for the second weekend. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday nights, July 12-13, and Sunday afternoon, July 14.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
JUL 7 1957

To Be Tanglewood Soloist

JAMES STAGLIANO

James Stagliano, First Horn in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will be the soloist in Mozart's Concerto for Horn in E flat on the program in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood one week from this afternoon. The orchestra will be conducted by Charles Munch and it will be an all-Mozart program.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535
JUL 12 1957

MOZART MUSIC THIS WEEK END IN BERKSHIRES

Tanglewood Concerts Tonight, Tomorrow Night, Sunday Afternoon

Lenox, July 12—Three all-Mozart concerts will be presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, music director, tonight, tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Tonight's concert at 8.30 in the theater-concert hall will open the second week of the 20th season of Berkshire Festival concerts. Dr. Munch will conduct the first half of the program consisting of the Divertimento in D major for Strings, K. 136; the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns, and Two Bassoons, K. 388; and the "Haffner" Symphony. Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus and members of the Boston Symphony in the second half of the concert.

His program will include the "Regina Coeli", K. 276, for Chorus, Soloists and Orchestra, the "Ave Verum Corpus" for Chorus and String Orchestra, K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337. The soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass. Miss Endich and Mr. McCollum are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center and have appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood. Miss Campagna-Pinto, who is a student in the choral department of the school this summer, makes her first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this concert. She is a native of Hingham, and has often appeared with the Chorus Pro Musica in Boston under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson. Mr. Springmann, also making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is on the faculty of the University of Maryland. He sang on the Fourth of July for the President and the vice-president with the Marine Band in Washington, D. C., and has appeared with the National Symphony Orchestra and on radio and television.

Popular Series

Due to the great demand for tickets for the Bach-Mozart series, two of the concerts this season have been scheduled for performance in the Music Shed, enabling many more people to obtain reserved seats for the concert. Tomorrow's concert will be the second of the series to be held in the Shed, and Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably the best known, Mozart Symphonies—in E-flat, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The concert on Sunday afternoon closes the second week end of Berkshire Festival concerts. Beginning at 2.30, the program will again be presented in the theater-concert hall and will be devoted to Mozart works for various combinations of solo instruments which are less often heard. Dr. Munch will open the program with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546. Two principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in concertos: Sherman Walt in the Concerto for Bassoon, K. 191, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn, K. 495. The program will close with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe,, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b. The soloists will be Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

Public Rehearsal

For the first time at Tanglewood, a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the theater-concert hall will be open to the public tomorrow morning, July 13, at 10. Admission is $1 and proceeds will go to the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The rehearsal will be conducted by Charles Munch.

Gazette
EAST HARTFORD
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 4,725
JUL 18 1957

Goings On

Tanglewood Musical series at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, 2:30 p.m. Sunday. Charles Munch and Boston Symphony. Tickets $6 to $15 for series, $4 and $5 for individual concerts. Phone Lenox (Mass.) 600.

Play: Roger the Sixth, with Dorothy Lamour. At Ivoryton Playhouse, 8:30 p.m.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 194,784
JUL 12 1957

BACH-MOZART

All-Mozart concerts will be presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, music director, tonight, tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon, the second weekend of Bach-Mozart concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 12, 1957

Mozart Series Opens Tonight At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — The second weekend of the Bach-Mozart series of concerts at Tanglewood opens tonight and continues tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon with three all-Mozart concerts presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 in the theater-concert hall will open the second week of the 20th season of Berkshire Festival concerts. Dr. Munch will conduct the first half of the program consisting of the Divertimento in D major for Strings, K. 136; the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns, and two bassoons, K. 388, and the "Haffner" Symphony. Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center and conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York and the Cecilia Societies of New York and Boston, will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus and members of the Boston Symphony in the second half of the concert. His program will include the "Regina Coeli," K. 276, for chorus, soloists and orchestra, the "Ave Verum Corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337.

Various Soloists

The soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, bass. Miss Endich and Mr. McCollum are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center and have appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood. Miss Campagna-Pinto, a student in the choral department of the school this summer, makes her first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this concert. She is a native of Hingham and has often appeared with the Chorus Pro Musica in Boston under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson. Mr. Springmann, also making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is on the faculty of the University of Maryland. He sang on the 4th of July for the President and the Vice President with the Marine Band in Washington, D.C., and has appeared with the National Symphony Orchestra and on radio and television.

Due to the great demand for tickets for the Bach-Mozart series, two of the concerts this season have been scheduled for performance in the Music Shed, enabling many more people to obtain reserved seats for the concert. Tomorrow's concert will be the second of the series to be held in the Shed, and Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably the best known, Mozart Symphonies—in E-flat, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The concert on Sunday afternoon closes the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts. Beginning at 2:30, the program will again be presented in the theater-concert hall and will be devoted to Mozart works for various combinations of solo instruments which are less often heard.

C133

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

[134]

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

JUL 12 1957

Boston Symphony Orchestra At Tanglewood Tonight

Special to The Telegram

LENOX — Three all-Mozart concerts will be presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, tonight tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall will open the second week of the 20th season of Berkshire Festival concerts. Dr. Munch will conduct the first half of the program consisting of the Divertimento in D major for Strings, K. 136; the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns, and two bassoons, K. 388; and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Berkshire Chorus

Hugh Ross, director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus and members of the Boston Symphony in the second half of the concert. His program will include the "Regina Coeli", K. 276, for chorus, soloists and orchestra, the "Ave Verum Corpus" for Chorus and String Orchestra, K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337.

Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, bass. Miss Endich and McCollum are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center and have appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

Miss Campagno-Pinto, a student in the choral department of the school this summer, makes her first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this concert. She is a native of Hingham. Springmann, also making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is on the faculty of the University of Maryland. He sang on the Fourth of July for the President and the Vice President with the Marine Band in Washington, D. C., and has appeared with the National Symphony Orchestra and on radio and television.

Tomorrow's concert will be the second of the series in the shed, and Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably the best known, Mozart Symphonies — in E-flat, G. minor and C major ("Jupiter").

Mozart Works

The concert Sunday afternoon closes the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts. Beginning at 2:30, the program will again be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall and will be devoted to Mozart works for various combinations of solo instruments which are less often heard.

For the first time at Tanglewood, a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theatre-Concert Hall will be open to the public tomorrow at 10 a. m. It will be conducted by Charles Munch.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 12 1957

All-Mozart Concerts Open This Evening At Music Festival

Three all-Mozart concerts will be presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, music director, tonight, tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Tonight's Concert

Tonight's concert at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will open the second week of the 20th season of Berkshire Festival concerts. Dr. Munch will conduct the first half of the program consisting of the Divertimento in D major for Strings, K. 136; the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons, K. 388; and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center and conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York and the Cecilia Societies of New York and Boston, will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus and members of the Boston Symphony in the second half of the concert. His program will include the "Regina Coeli," K. 276, for Chorus, Soloists and Orchestra, the "Ave Verum Corpus" for Chorus and String Orchestra, K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337.

The soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass. Miss Endich and Mr. McCollum are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center and have appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood. Miss Campagna- Pinto, who is a student in the choral department of the school this summer, makes her first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this concert. She is a native of Hingham, and has often appeared with the Chorus Pro Musica in Boston under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson. Mr. Springman, also making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is on the faculty of the University of Maryland. He sang on the Fourth of July for the President and the vice-president with the Marine Band in Washington, D. C., and has appeared with the National Symphony Orchestra and on radio and television.

Big Ticket Demand

Due to the great demand for tickets for the Bach-Mozart series, two of the concerts this season have been scheduled for performance in the music shed, enabling many more people to obtain reserved seats for the concert. Tomorrow's concert will be the second of the series to be held in the shed, and Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably the best known, Mozart Symphonies—in E-flat, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The concert on Sunday afternoon closes the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts. Beginning at 2:30, the program will again be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall and will be devoted to Mozart works for various combinations of solo instruments which are less often heard. Dr. Munch will open the program with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546. Two principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in concertos: Sherman Walt in the Concerto for Bassoon, K. 191, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn, K. 495. The program will close with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b. The soloists will be Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

For the first time at Tanglewood, a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theater-Concert Hall will be open to the public on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Proceeds will go to the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The rehearsal will be conducted by Charles Munch.

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,931

JUL 13 1957

MARJORIE CAMPAGNA-PINTO of Hingham, alto, was soloist in a performance of Mozart's Mass in C Major last night, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. Mrs. Campagna-Pinto is shown with Hugh Ross who directed the Boston Symphony Orchestra with soloists and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 16 1957

Boston Symphony Launches All-Mozart Concert Series

The first of three all-Mozart concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was held Sunday evening in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Dr. Munch conducted the first half, beginning with the Divertimento in D major for strings only. A sparsely textured composition, it is one of Mozart's earliest and reflects his youthful style, clean, simple rippling lines, delicately tender at times. Dr. Munch guided the flawless strings with surety and smoothness.

A seldom heard Serenade for eight winds, two each of oboes, clarinets, bassoons and horns, was not at all times effortless; the phrasing was marvelously rounded and deftly handled by these expert musicians, the bassoons and horns really outstanding. Dr. Munch conducted with great concern, but one wonders whether in performance it is best played without a leader.

The Haffner Symphony in D major concluded the first half. Composed under pressure in a short time, first as a Serenade, it is a stirring work. Precise, almost martial in its beginning, it was played with all the changes of mood indicated by the composer, Dr. Munch inspiring the players with his absorbed attention to detail. The menuet was alternately vigorous and gentle, the whole a delight. The finale amazingly swift, was true Mozart, witty and captivating from beginning to end.

The second half of the program was conducted by Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center. Members of the Boston Symphony assisted the Berkshire Festival Chorus, and soloists Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springman, bass.

The exultant "Regina Coeli" K276 introduced the many fine voices of this year's Festival chorus, followed by the moving, simple "Ave Vernium Corpus." Certainly these programs are chosen for the music's worth and our listening pleasure, so that considering the varied degrees of the participants' ability and familiarity with the music selected, one must not be too critical of balance, integration, detail which was really quite good, or any phase of the resultant performance.

Mozart's brief Mass in C major K337 closed the evening's program. Orchestrated without violins, the addition of an organ provided unusual color, especially in the lovely Agnus Dei, in which Miss Endich's richly endowed voice was heard in solo with strings and woodwinds. The Gloria is especially remembered and the unusual Benedictus with its acrid and doleful treatment. Mr. Ross' sympathetic handling of each section produced amazingly good results. The final "Dona nobis pacem" brought a storm of applause from the apparently satisfied audience.

— M. deB. B.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 11 1957

ALL MOZART WEEKEND IS PLANNED AT TANGLEWOOD

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, Music Director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, Director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Hugh Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coali" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major (Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

TANGLEWOOD
July 5, 6, 7
By A. C. S.

Johann Sebastian Bach and his wealth of music lay in virtual obscurity from his death in 1750 until Mendelssohn rediscovered him in 1829. Since then, his compositions have gained ever greater popularity and, judging from the number of people who attended the first weekend of concerts in Lenox, his box office appeal has never been higher than at the present. All three concerts were devoted to the polyphonic master and all three were sold out.

Friday

A varied program was presented Friday evening: the 2nd and 3rd Suites, the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5, and the Concerto in C minor for Two Pianos. The Suite No. 2, which has become a staple at Tanglewood, featured Doriot Anthony Dwyer as flute soloist. As usual she played beautifully and was recalled to repeat the final Badinerie. The Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 also utilized the services of Mrs. Dwyer and Richard Burgin, violinist. The keyboard soloist was Lukas Foss who playing throughout, and especially in the great solo in the first movement, was wonderfully modulated and articulate. The Suite No. 3 and the Two-piano Concerto, which opened and closed the program respectively, seemed overly heavy to this listener and the choice of tempo might be considered "romantic" at best. Seymour Lipkin joined Mr. Foss at the other piano.

Saturday

The remaining five of the six Brandenburg Concerto comprised the program for Saturday evening. They were presented almost in order with the exception of the 4th, full of brilliance, which was chosen to conclude the concert. Perhaps the most telling performance was that of the 6th Brandenburg, where the violas with their vibrance really stole the show from the more brightly colored instruments

(Continued on Page 16)

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

JUL 16 1957

Berkshire Fete Features Mozart

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoon. These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall tonight an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1957

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

JUL 12 1957

[134]

Boston Symphony Orchestra At Tanglewood Tonight

Special to The Telegram

LENOX — Three all-Mozart concerts will be presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, tonight tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall will open the second week of the 20th season of Berkshire Festival concerts. Dr. Munch will conduct the first half of the program consisting of the Divertimento in D major for Strings, K. 136; the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns, and two bassoons, K. 388; and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Berkshire Chorus

Hugh Ross, director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus and members of the Boston Symphony in the second half of the concert. His program will include the "Regina Coeli", K. 276, for chorus, soloists and orchestra, the "Ave Verum Corpus" for Chorus and String Orchestra, K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337.

Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, bass. Miss Endich and McCollum are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center and have appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

Miss Campagna-Pinto, a student in the choral department of the school this summer, makes her first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this concert. She is a native of Hingham. Springmann, also making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is on the faculty of the University of Maryland. He sang on the Fourth of July for the President and the Vice President with the Marine Band in Washington, D. C., and has appeared with the National Symphony Orchestra and on radio and television.

Tomorrow's concert will be the second of the series in the shed, and Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably the best known, Mozart Symphonies — in E-flat, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

Mozart Works

The concert Sunday afternoon closes the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts. Beginning at 2:30, the program will again be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall and will be devoted to Mozart works for various combinations of solo instruments which are less often heard.

For the first time at Tanglewood, a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theatre-Concert Hall will be open to the public tomorrow at 10 a. m. It will be conducted by Charles Munch.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 12 1957

All-Mozart Concerts Open This Evening At Music Festival

Three all-Mozart concerts will be presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, music director, tonight, tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Tonight's Concert

Tonight's concert at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will open the second week of the 20th season of Berkshire Festival concerts. Dr. Munch will conduct the first half of the program consisting of the Divertimento in D major for Strings, K. 136; the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons, K. 388; and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center and conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York and the Cecilia Societies of New York and Boston, will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus and members of the Boston Symphony in the second half of the concert. His program will include the "Regina Coeli," K. 276, for Chorus, Soloists and Orchestra, the "Ave Verum Corpus" for Chorus and String Orchestra, K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337.

The soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass. Miss Endich and Mr. McCollum are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center and have appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood. Miss Campagna-Pinto, who is a student in the choral department of the school this summer, makes her first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this concert. She is a native of Hingham, and has often appeared with the Chorus Pro Musica in Boston under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson. Mr. Springman, also making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is on the faculty of the University of Maryland. He sang on the Fourth of July for the President and the vice-president with the Marine Band in Washington, D. C., and has appeared with the National Symphony Orchestra and on radio and television.

Big Ticket Demand

Due to the great demand for tickets for the Bach-Mozart series, two of the concerts this season have been scheduled for performance in the music shed, enabling many more people to obtain reserved seats for the concert. Tomorrow's concert will be the second of the series to be held in the shed, and Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably the best known, Mozart Symphonies—in E-flat, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The concert on Sunday afternoon closes the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts. Beginning at 2:30, the program will again be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall and will be devoted to Mozart works for various combinations of solo instruments which are less often heard. Dr. Munch will open the program with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546. Two principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in concertos: Sherman Walt in the Concerto for Bassoon, K. 191, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn, K. 495. The program will close with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b. The soloists will be Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

For the first time at Tanglewood, a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theater-Concert Hall will be open to the public on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Proceeds will go to the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The rehearsal will be conducted by Charles Munch.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 11 1957

ALL MOZART WEEKEND IS PLANNED AT TANGLEWOOD

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, Music Director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, Director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons, the "Haffner" Symphony.

Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coali" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major (Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

TANGLEWOOD
July 5, 6, 7
By A. C. S.

Johann Sebastian Bach and his wealth of music lay in virtual obscurity from his death in 1750 until Mendelssohn rediscovered him in 1829. Since then, his compositions have gained ever greater popularity and, judging from the number of people who attended the first weekend of concerts in Lenox, his box office appeal has never been higher than at the present. All three concerts were devoted to the polyphonic master and all three were sold out.

Friday

A varied program was presented Friday evening: the 2nd and 3rd Suites, the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5, and the Concerto in C minor for Two Pianos. The Suites, which are a staple at Tanglewood, featured Doriot Anthony Dwyer as flute soloist. As usual she played beautifully and was recalled to repeat the final Badinerie. The Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 also utilized the services of Mrs. Dwyer and Richard Burgin, violinist. The keyboard soloist was Lukas Foss who playing throughout, and especially in the great solo in the first movement, was wonderfully modulated and articulate. The Suite No. 3 and the Two-piano Concerto, which opened and closed the program respectively, seemed overly heavy to this listener and the choice of tempi might be considered "romantic" at best. Seymour Lipkin joined Mr. Foss at the other piano.

Saturday

The remaining five of the six Brandenburg Concerto comprised the program for Saturday evening. They were presented almost in order with the exception of the 4th, full of brilliance, which was chosen to conclude the concert. Perhaps the most telling performance was that of the 6th Brandenburg, where the violas with their vibrance really stole the show from the more brightly colored instruments

(Continued on Page 16)

Telegram (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,931

JUL 13 1957

MARJORIE CAMPAGNA-PINTO of Hingham, alto, was soloist in a performance of Mozart's Mass in C Major last night, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. Mrs. Campagna-Pinto is shown with Hugn Ross who directed the Boston Symphony Orchestra with soloists and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 16 1957

Boston Symphony Launches All-Mozart Concert Series

The first of three all-Mozart concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was held Sunday evening in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Dr. Munch conducted the first half, beginning with the Divertimento in D major for strings only. A sparsely textured composition, it is one of Mozart's earliest and reflects his youthful style, clean, simple rippling lines, delicately tender at times. Dr. Munch guided the flawless strings with surety and smoothness.

A seldom heard Serenade for eight winds, two each of oboes, clarinets, bassoons and horns, was not at all times effortless; the phrasing was marvelously rounded and deftly handled by these expert musicians, the bassoons and horns really outstanding. Dr. Munch conducted with great concern, but one wonders whether in performance it is best played without a leader.

The Haffner Symphony in D major concluded the first half. Composed under pressure in a short time, first as a Serenade, it is a stirring work. Precise, almost martial in its beginning, it was played with all the changes of mood indicated by the composer, Dr. Munch inspiring the players with his absorbed attention to detail. The menuet was alternately vigorous and gentle, the whole a delight. The finale amazingly swift, was true Mozart, witty and captivating from beginning to end.

The second half of the program was conducted by Hugh Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center. Members of the Boston Symphony assisted the Berkshire Festival Chorus, and soloists Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springman, bass.

The exultant "Regina Coeli" K276 introduced the many fine voices of this year's Festival Chorus, followed by the movingly simple "Ave Vernum Corpus." Certainly these programs are chosen for the music's worth and our listening pleasure, so that, considering the varied degrees of the participants' ability and familiarity with the music selected, one must not be too critical of balance, integration, diction (which was really quite clear), or any phase of the resultant performance.

Mozart's brief Mass in C major K337 closed the evening's program. Orchestrated without violas, the addition of an organ provided unusual color, especially in the lovely Agnus Dei, in which Miss Endich's richly endowed voice was heard in solo, with strings and woodwinds. The Gloria is especially remembered, and the unusual Benedictus with its acrid and doleful treatment. Mr. Ross' sympathetic handling of each section produced amazingly good results. The final "Dona nobis pacem" brought a storm of applause from the apparently satisfied audience.

— M. deB. B.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

JUL 16 1957

Berkshire Fete Features Mozart

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall tonight an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowits, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert.

C1357

Mozart Concerts To Start Tonight At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 11—Three all-Mozart concerts will be presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, music director, Friday, Saturday and Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Friday night's concert at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will open the second week of the 20th season of Berkshire Festival concerts. Dr. Munch will conduct the first half of the program consisting of the Divertimento in D major for strings, K. 136; the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns, and two bassoons, K. 388; and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Hugh Ross will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus and members of the Boston Symphony in the second half of the concert. His program will include the "Regina Coeli," K. 276, for chorus, soloists and orchestra, the "Ave Verum Corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337. The soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass.

Because of the great demand for tickets for the Bach-Mozart series, two of the concerts have been scheduled for performance in the Music Shed. Saturday's concert will be the second of the series to be held in the Shed, and Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably the best known, Mozart Symphonies—in E-flat, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The concert on Sunday afternoon beginning at 2.30 will be presented in the Theater-Concert Hall and will be devoted to Mozart works for various combinations of solo instruments which are less often heard. Dr. Munch will open the program with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, K. 546. Two principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in concertos: Sherman Walt in the Concerto for Bassoon, K. 191, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn, K. 495. The program will close with the Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, K. 297b. The soloists will be Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

For the first time at Tanglewood, a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theater-Concert Hall will be open to the public on Saturday morning, at 10. Admission is $1, and proceeds will go to the orchestra's pension fund. The rehearsal will be conducted by Charles Munch.

Student events of the week end will include the third in the series of lectures in the Seminar on Contemporary Music at 3.15 in the Chamber Music Hall Friday. Aaron Copland will discuss "Music of the twenties" with musical illustrations. A concert of chamber music on Sunday morning at 10, and a composer's forum, featuring performances of works by composition students of the Berkshire Music Center on Sunday evening at 8.30, both in the Chamber Music Hall, will round out the student schedule. All these events are open to Friends of the Berk-

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1957

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUL 7 1957

Week's Programs At the Festivals

Berkshire

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30, Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Passion According to St. Matthew (Opening Chorus and Part II) (Soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; James Joyce, bass; Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor).

Wednesday, 8:30, Soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, pianists; Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. Variations on an Original Theme, Op. 35, Schubert; Sonata for Piano Four Hands, Hindemith; Fantasie in F minor, Op. 103, Schubert; Liebeslieder Waltzes, Op. 52, for Piano duet and voices; "Zum Schluss" from the Neue Liebeslieder, Op. 65, Brahms.

Friday, 8:30, Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Divertimento in D major, for Strings, K. 136; Serenade in C minor, K. 388; Symphony in D major, "Haffner," K. 385; "Regina coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, K. 276; "Ave verum corpus," motet for chorus and string orchestra, K. 618; Mass in C major, K. 337 (Hugh Ross conducting; soloists, Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, baritone), Mozart.

Saturday, 8:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Symphony in E flat major, K. 543; in G minor, K. 550; in C major, "Jupiter," K. 551, Mozart.

Sunday, July 14, 2:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546; Concerto for Bassoon in B flat major, K. 191 (Sherman Walt); Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K. 495 (James Stagliano); Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b (Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon), Mozart.

Empire State

Ellenville, N. Y.

Today, 3:30 Symphony of the Air, Igor Markevitch conducting; soloists, Uta Graf, soprano; Maureen Forrester, contralto; Rudolph Petrak, tenor; Norman Scott, bass, and the American Concert Choir and Shawangunk Chorale, Margaret Hillis conducting. Alto Rhapsody, Brahms; Symphony No. 9, Beethoven.

Today, 8:30 [illegible] Ballet Soloists.

Thursday, Saturday, 8:30 Strauss' "Elektra," [illegible], Virginia Copeland (Elektra), [illegible] (Chrysothemis); Elisabeth [illegible] (Clytemnestra), Marcel [illegible] (Aegisthus), Michael Bo[illegible] Hall Conducting [illegible] the Air.

Friday [illegible] July 14, [illegible] Symphony of the Air, Reiter Villa-Lobos conducting, Prelude and Fugue No. 6 for Organ, Bach—Villa-Lobos; Overture to King Stephan, Beethoven; Caixinha De Boas Festas (The Little Box of Christmas Presents) (first performance in the United States); "Emperor Jones" ballet, Villa-Lobos.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 9 1957

Festival Weekend To Be Devoted To Music of Mozart

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

All-Mozart Programs

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wenesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith, composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941, and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert.

Both Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons. All the artists appearing in this concert have generously offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Munch and Ross

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening. The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

First-Desk Musicians

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon again in the Theater-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, hon and bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

Tickets are still available at the Tanglewood box office for the concerts of July 10 and 13, and general admission to the grounds to enable overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns is sold on the day of each performance.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 6 1957

Second Week Of Tanglewood Concerts Listed

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on July 10 an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941), and the Fantasie in F Minor of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons. All the artists appearing in this concert have generously offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Huge Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C. minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

Berkshire Festival Enters Second Week

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, Music Director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13 and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

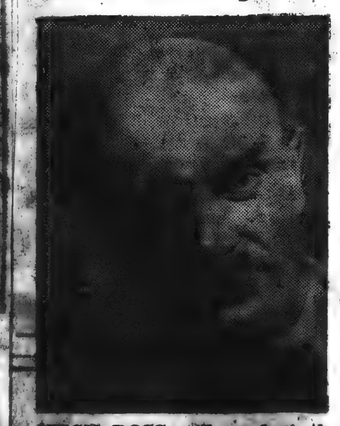
At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall tomorrow night an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith, and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert. Both Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts.

SARAMAE ENDICH

Information and a calendar of events open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center, in addition to full programs for the Berkshire Festival season are available on request from Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

THE NEWS, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SUNDAY, JULY 14, 1957

Conducts at Tanglewood



HUGH ROSS will conduct the Boston Symphony and Berkshire Festival Chorus and soloists in a concert featuring choral works of Mozart, on Friday evening, July 12, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The program includes "Regina Coeli" and "Ave verum corpus" from Mozart's Mass in C Minor.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 104,254

JUL 7 1957

Mozart Dates At Berkshires

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon, July 14.

C1357

Mozart Concerts To Start Tonight At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 11—Three all-Mozart concerts will be presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, music director, Friday, Saturday and Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Friday night's concert at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will open the second week of the 20th season of Berkshire Festival concerts. Dr. Munch will conduct the first half of the program consisting of the Divertimento in D major for strings, K. 136; the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns, and two bassoons, K. 388; and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Hugh Ross will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus and members of the Boston Symphony in the second half of the concert. His program will include the "Regina Coeli," K. 276, for chorus, soloists and orchestra, the "Ave Verum Corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337. The soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass.

Because of the great demand for tickets for the Bach-Mozart series, two of the concerts have been scheduled for performance in the Music Shed. Saturday's concert will be the second of the series to be held in the Shed, and Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably the best known, Mozart Symphonies—in E-flat, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The concert on Sunday afternoon beginning at 2.30 will be presented in the Theater-Concert Hall and will be devoted to Mozart works for various combinations of solo instruments which are less often heard. Dr. Munch will open the program with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, K. 546. Two principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in concertos: Sherman Walt in the Concerto for Bassoon, K. 191, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn, K. 495. The program will close with the Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, K. 297b. The soloists will be Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

For the first time at Tanglewood, a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theater-Concert Hall will be open to the public on Saturday morning, at 10. Admission is $1 and proceeds will go to the orchestra's pension fund. The rehearsal will be conducted by Charles Munch.

Student events of the week end will include the third in the series of lectures in the Seminar on Contemporary Music at 3.15 in the Chamber Music Hall Friday. Aaron Copland will discuss "Music of the twenties" with musical illustrations. A concert of chamber music on Sunday morning at 10, and a composer's forum, featuring performances of works by composition students of the Berkshire Music Center on Sunday evening at 8.30, both in the Chamber Music Hall, will round out the student schedule. All these events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1957

Week's Programs At the Festivals

Berkshire

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30, Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Passion According to St. Matthew (Opening Chorus and Part II) (Soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; James Joyce, bass; Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor).

Wednesday, 8:30, Soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, pianists; Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. Variations on an Original Theme, Op. 35, Schubert; Sonata for Piano Four Hands, Hindemith; Fantasie in F minor, Op. 103, Schubert; Liebeslieder Waltzes, Op. 52, for Piano duet and voices; "Zum Schluss" from the Neue Liebeslieder, Op. 65, Brahms.

Friday, 8:30, Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Divertimento in D major, for Strings, K. 136; Serenade in C minor, K. 388; Symphony in D major, "Haffner," K. 385; "Regina coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, K. 276; "Ave verum corpus," motet for chorus and string orchestra, K. 618; Mass in C major, K. 337 (Hugh Ross conducting; soloists, Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, baritone), Mozart.

Saturday, 8:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Symphony in E flat major, K. 543; in G minor, K. 550; in C major, "Jupiter," K. 551, Mozart.

Sunday, July 14, 2:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546; Concerto for Bassoon in B flat major, K. 191 (Sherman Walt); Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K. 495 (James Stagliano); Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b (Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon), Mozart.

Empire State

Ellenville, N. Y.

Today, 3:30 Symphony of the Air, Igor Markevitch conducting; soloists, Uta Graf, soprano; Maureen Forrester, contralto; Rudolph Petrak, tenor; Norman Scott, bass, and the American Concert Choir and Shawangunk Choraliers, Margaret Hillis conducting. Alto Rhapsody, Brahms; Symphony No. 9, Beethoven.

Today, 8:30 [illegible] Polish Ballet Soloists.

Thursday, [illegible]day, 8:30, Strauss' "Elektra," [illegible], Virginia Copeland (Elektra); [illegible] Pearl (Chrysothemis); Elisabeth [illegible] (Klytemnastra); Marcello [illegible] (Agisthus); [illegible] Bostelmann; [illegible] Lorlo Hall conducting. [illegible] of the Air.

Friday [illegible], July 1[illegible] Symphony of the Air, Nestor Vila [illegible] conducting, Prelude and Fugue [illegible] for Organ, Bach—Villa-Lobos; Overture to King Stephan, Beethoven; Caixinha De Boas Festas (The Little Box of Christmas Presents) (first performance in the United States); "Emperor Jones" ballet, Villa-Lobos.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 9 1957

Festival Weekend To Be Devoted To Music of Mozart

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

All-Mozart Programs

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wenesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith, composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941, and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert.

Both Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons. All the artists appearing in this concert have generously offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Munch and Ross

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening. The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

First-Desk Musicians

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon again in the Theater-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

Tickets are still available at the Tanglewood box office for the concerts of July 10 and 13, and general admission to the grounds to enable overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns is sold on the day of each performance.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 6 1957

Second Week Of Tanglewood Concerts Listed

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on July 10 an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941), and the Fantasie in F. Minor of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of soloists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts in the past two or three seasons. All the artists appearing in this concert have generously offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center which benefits from the net proceeds of the chamber music series.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Huge Ross, director of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C. minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

Berkshire Festival Enters Second Week

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, Music Director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13 and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

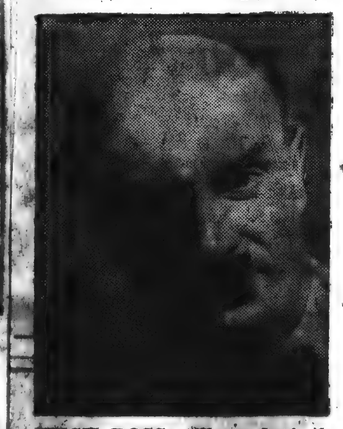
At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall tomorrow night an unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith, and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert. Both Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Berkowitz are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music at Tanglewood. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices performed by a quartet of solists well known at Tanglewood. Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, and John McCollum, tenor, are former Berkshire Music Center students, and Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts.

SARAMAE ENDICH

Information and a calendar of events open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center, in addition to full programs for the Berkshire Festival season are available on request from Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

THE ECHO, HAMILTON, NEW YORK, TUESDAY, JULY 9, 1957

Conducts at Tanglewood



HUGH ROSS will conduct the Boston Symphony and Berkshire Festival Chorus and soloists in a concert featuring the works of Mozart, on Friday evening, July 12, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The program includes "Regina Coeli" and "Ave verum corpus" from the Mass in C Minor.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 104,254

JUL 7 1957

Mozart Dates At Berkshires

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon, July 14.

[130]

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550

JUL 4 1957

Second Week of Berkshire Music To Feature Mozart

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 12-13, and Sundaay afternoon, July 14. These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on July 10 aan unusual program of piano duets will be presented by the pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith (composer in residence at Tanglewood in its first two seasons, 1940 and 1941) and the Fantasie in F minor also by Schubert. The second half of the program will be Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices.

Dr. Munch and Hugh Ross, director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening. The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna - Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert on Saturday evening in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best-known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon, again in the Theater-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works.

Tickets are still available at the Tanglewood box office for the concerts and general admission to the grounds to enable overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns is sold on the day of each performance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 6 1957

Mozart Music Scheduled For July 12 and 13

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players, under the direction of Charles Munch, will perform three Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 12-13) and Sunday afternoon (July 14). These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

At the second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on July 10 a program of piano duets will be presented by Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, including Schubert's Variations on an Original Theme, the Sonata for Piano Four Hands by Paul Hindemith, and the Fantasie in F minor by Schubert.

The second half of the program will consist of Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voices, performed by Saramae Endich, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

* * *

Dr. Munch, director of the Boston Symphony, and Hugh Ross, director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the Mozart program of Friday evening (July 12). The first part of the concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include the Divertimento in D major for Strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns, and Two Bassoons, and the "Haffner" Symphony.

Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices, and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major. Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano, Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, bass.

At the concert Saturday evening (July 13) in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last symphonies of Mozart, the E-flat major, G minor, and C major ("Jupiter").

The concert on Sunday afternoon (July 14), again in the Theater-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony in various Mozart works. The program will open with the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon, with Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Mr. Stagliano, and Mr. Walt as soloists.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for July 12 and 13, and general admission to the grounds to enable visitors to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns is sold on the day of each performance.

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 42,535

JUL 12 1957

Radio's Best Today

COUNTERSPY: A slick con man is used by agents to track down a clever counterfeiter; WNAC (680), 8:05.

BASEBALL: Red Sox vs. Detroit Tigers, at Detroit; WHDH (850), 9:10

BOXING: Lulu Perez vs. Harold Gomes, 10 round lightweight bout, Tapco Recreation hall, Euclid, O.; WNAC (680), 10.

Frequency Modulation

VIOLIN CONCERTO (Menotti); Marrosek Dances (Kodaly), WXHR (96.9) 2.

MENDELSSOHN: Octet, Opus 20; Trio for Violin, 'Cello and Piano, Opus 9 (Beethoven) WXHR (96.9), 3.

PANORAMA: Janet Baker Carr presents Sherman Walt, bassoon, James Stallagno, of Boston Symphony Orchestra who will perform as soloist in the All-Mozart program this week-end at Tanglewood; WXHR (96.9), 6

EZIO PINZA sings Verdi and Mozart Arias, WBUR (90.9), 6:30.

BEETHOVEN: Concerto in D; Gehot: Quartet in D Major, WRUR (90.9), 7.

MUSIC FROM BROADWAY: Paul McGrane's Bearcats are featured in selections from "The Boy Friend," musical spoof of the 1920's; WCRB (102.5), 7.

W. SCHUMAN: Aredendum; Chausson: Poem of Love and the Sea, WXHR (96.9) 7.

RASZA: Theme, Variations and Finale, Bartok: Divertimento, WXHR (96.9) 8.

VIOLIN CONCERTO: Opus 8, No. 9, (Torelli); Concerto Grosso No. 2 (Bloch); Sinfonia India (Chavez); Pictures at an Exhibition (Moussorgsky-Ravel); Piano Concerto No. 15 (Mozart), WCRB (102.5) 8.

LITTLE ORCHESTRA SOCIETY, conducted by Thomas Scherman, presents the incidental music to "Peer Gynt" by Harold Saeverud, featuring actress Peggy Wood, WGBH (89.7), 9.

FOLK MUSIC OF THE WORLD: German Folk Songs, WXHR (96.9), 10.

MUSIC FROM OTHER LANDS, Russian Folk Songs sung by Zobulon, WGBH (89.7), 11.

GLAZUNOV: Concert Waltz, Turina: Canto a Sevilla

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,404

JUL 12 1957

Tanglewood Series To Feature Mozart

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, July 12—Three all-Mozart concerts will be presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, music director, tonight, tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 in the Theater-Concern Hall, will open the second week of the 20th season of Berkshire Festival concerts. Dr. Munch will conduct the first half of the program consisting of the Divertimento in D major for Strings, K. 136; the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons, K. 388; and the "Haffner" Symphony. Hugh Ross, director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center and conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York and the Cecilia Societies of New York and Boston, will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus and members of the Boston Symphony in the second half of the concert. His program will include the "Regina Coeli," K. 276, for Chorus, Soloists and Orchestra, the "Ave Verum Corpus" for Chorus and String Orchestra, K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337.

Soloists Listed

The soloists will be Saramee Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass. Miss Endich and Mr. McCollum are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center and have appeared in a number of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood. Miss Campagna-Pinto, who is a student in the choral department of the school this summer, makes her first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this concert. She is a native of Hingham, Mass., and has often appeared with the Chorus Pro Musica in Boston under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson. Mr. Springmann, also making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is on the faculty of the University of Maryland. He sang on the Fourth of July for the president and vice president with the Marine Band in Washington, D. C.

Due to the great demand for tickets for the Bach-Mozart series, two of the concerts this season have been scheduled for performance in the Music Shed, enabling many more people to obtain reserved seats for the concert. Tomorrow's concert will be the second of the series to be held in the Shed and Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably the best known, Mozart Symphonies—in E-flat, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The concert on Sunday afternoon closes the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts. Beginning at 2:30, the program will again be presented in the Theater-Concert Hall and will be devoted to Mozart works for various combinations of solo instruments which are less often heard. Dr. Munch will open the program with Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546. Two principal players for the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in concertos: Sherman Walt in the Concerto for Bassoon, K. 191, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn, K. 495. The program will close with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b. The soloists will be Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

Open to Public

For the first time at Tanglewood, a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theater-Concern Hall will be open to the public on Saturday, at 10 a. m. Admission is $1 and proceeds will go to the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The rehearsal will be conducted by Charles Munch.

Student events of the weekend will include the third in the series of lectures in the Seminar on Contemporary Music at 3:15 p. m. in the Chamber Music Hall today. Aaron Copland will discuss "Music of the Twenties" with musical illustrations. A concert of Chamber Music on Sunday at 10 a. m. and a Composer's Forum, featuring performances of works by composition students of the Berkshire Music Center at 8:30 p. m., both in the Chamber Music Hall, will round out the student schedule. All these events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

JUL 12 1957

Berkshire Festival In Second Week

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to the music of Mozart

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Charles Munch, Music Director, will perform three all-Mozart programs tonight and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, choral department director of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of tonight.

Dr. Munch, will conduct the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, "Ave verum corpus" for chorus and string orchestra, and the Mass in C major.

Soloists will be Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, bass.

Saturday evening in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

* * *

THE SUNDAY afternoon concert, again in the Theater-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Mozart works: the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra, followed by solo appearances of two Boston Symphony principals, Sherman Walt in the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major, and James Stagliano in the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major. The program closes with the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, with Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano and Sherman Walt.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553

JUL 7 1957

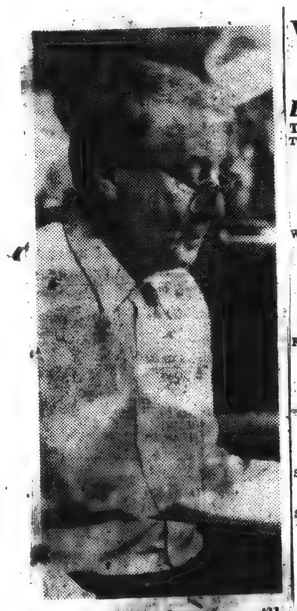
Mozart Featured At Berkshire Festival

The music of Mozart will be featured in the next three concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players at the Berkshire Festival this coming weekend. Charles Munch and Hugh Ross will share the podium on Friday evening when the program will feature the "Haffner" Symphony and the Mass in C major. Three Mozart Symphonies—E-flat major (K. 543), G minor (K. 550), and C major (K. 551), will make up the program on Saturday evening. Sunday afternoon's concert will include: Adagio and Fugue in C minor for strings; Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major (soloist—Sherman Walt); Concerto for Horn in E-flat major (soloist—James Stagliano); Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon. The two previously named soloists will be joined by two other Boston musicians, Gino Cioffi and Ralph Gomberg for the solo roles.

This week's second concert of the Chamber Music series on Wednesday evening will feature pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both faculty members of the Berkshire Music Center. The two artists will be heard in Hindemith's Sonata for Piano Four Hands and in the Liebeslieder Waltzes of Brahms.

Wednesday afternoon's third event in the Norfolk Music School series will include: Boccherini's Sonata in C major for cello and piano; Schubert's Duo for violin and piano; Brahms Trio in C minor, Opus 101. The performers are to be Bruce Simonds, Howard Boatwright, Luigi Silva and Arthur Hague.

HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1957



Charles Munch, who will conduct this week's Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

Week's Programs At the Festivals

Berkshire

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30, Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Passion According to St. Matthew (Opening Chorus and Part II) (Soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; James Joyce, bass; Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor).

Wednesday, 8:30, Soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, pianists; Saramee Endich, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. Variations on an Original Theme, Op. 35, Schubert; Sonata for Piano Four Hands, Hindemith; Fantasie in F minor, Op. 103, Schubert; Liebeslieder Waltzes, Op. 52, for Piano duet and voices; "Zum Schluss" from the Neue Liebeslieder, Op. 65, Brahms.

Friday, 8:30, Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Divertimento in D major, for Strings, K. 136; Serenade in C minor, K. 388; Symphony in D major, "Haffner," K. 385; "Regina coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra, K. 276; "Ave verum corpus" motet for chorus and string orchestra, K. 618; Mass in C major, K. 337 (Hugh Ross conducting; soloists, Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Fague Springmann, baritone), Mozart.

Saturday, 8:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, conductor, Symphony in E flat major, K. 543; in G minor, K. 550; Mozart in C major, "Jupiter," K. 551, Mozart.

Sunday, July 14, 2:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546; Concerto for Bassoon in B flat major, K. 191 (Sherman Walt); Concerto for Horn in E flat major, K. 495 (James Stagliano); Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b (Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon), Mozart.

Empire State

Ellenville, N. Y.

Today, 3:30 Symphony of the Air, Igor Markevitch conducting; soloists, Uta Graf, soprano; Maureen Forrester, contralto; Rudolph Petrak, tenor; Norman Scott, bass, and the American Concert Choir and Shawangunk Chorallers, Margaret Hillis conducting. Alto Rhapsody, Brahms; Symphony No. 9, Beethoven.

Today, 8:30 Royal Danish Ballet Soloists.

Thursday and Saturday, 8:30 Strauss' "Elektra," soloists, Virginia Copeland (Elektra); Ellen Faull (Chrysothemis); Elisabeth Koman (Klytemnestra); Marcel Cordes (Orestes); Michael di Giovanni (Aegisthus); Laszlo Halasz conducting. Sunday, 3:30, Symphony of the Air.

Friday and Sunday, July 14, 8:30, Symphony of the Air, Heitor Villa-Lobos conducting. Prelude and Fugue No. 6 for Organ, Bach—Villa-Lobos; Overture to King Stephan, Beethoven; Caixinha De Boas Festas (The Little Box of Christmas Presents) (first performance in the United States); "Emperor Jones" ballet, Villa-Lobos.

C137

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 44,806
JUL 9 1957

Tanglewood Festival to Feature Mozart

Music of Mozart will be featured at the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., under the direction of Charles Munch.

* * *

A CHAMBER orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players will present the programs Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The second in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts will be presented tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall by pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz.

Tomorrow evening's program will include the Schubert "Variations on an Original Theme," the "Sonata for piano, four hands" by Paul Hindemith; and the "Fantasie in F minor" also by Schubert.

The second half of tomorrow's program will be given over to the Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzes" for piano duet and voice. The solo quartet includes Saramae Endich, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. All artists appearing on this program have offered to donate their fees to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH and Hugh Ross will share the all - Mozart program of Friday evening. Dr. Munch will include the "Divertimento in D major for strings," the "Serenade in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons" and the "Haffner" symphony in his portion of the program. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra; "Ave verum corpus," for chorus and string orchestra, and the "Mass in C major." Soloists will be Miss Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass.

The Saturday evening concert will be presented in the Music Shed and will be made up of the three last symphonies of Mozart, in E flat, G minor and C major. Dr. Munch will conduct.

* * *

THE CLOSING concert of the week on Sunday will be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall and will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Mozart works. Included will be the "Adagio and Fugue in C minor" for string orchestra followed by solo appearances of Sherman Walt in the "Bassoon Concerto in B-flat major" and James Stagliano in the "Concerto for Horn in E flat major." The program will close with the "Sinfonie Concertante" for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon with soloists Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Stagliano and Walt.

Tickets for the concerts are on sale at the Tanglewood box office and general admission to the grounds is sold on the day of each performance.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER

Tanglewood

A Weekend of Mozart

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts Tanglewood, Lenox, will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players will perform three all-Mozart programs on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 12-13, and Sunday afternoon, July 14. These concerts will include familiar symphonies, choral music, and a number of less frequently played works for various instrumental combinations.

Saramae Endich
Soprano Soloist

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, Director of the Choral Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the all-Mozart program of Friday evening, July 12. The first part of the concert, will include the Divertimento in D major for strings, the Serenade in C minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons and the "Haffner" Symphony. Mr. Ross will present the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voices and orchestra.

At the concert on Saturday evening, July 13, in the Music Shed Dr. Munch will conduct the three last, and probably best- known, symphonies of Mozart, in E flat major, G minor and C major ("Jupiter").

The closing concert of the second Festival week on Sunday afternoon, July 14, again in the Theatre-Concert Hall, will feature first-desk musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various Mozart works.

VALHALLA, N. Y.
ROUND NOTES
Circ. W. 1,000
JUL 12 1957

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 119,412
JUL 14 1957

TANGLEWOOD—The great music shed at Tanglewood seats 6,000 and often has an overflow audience on the surrounding lawns of 8,000 on a Sunday afternoon. The full Boston Symphony Orchestra of more than 100 men will be heard in a series of four weekend concerts, conducted by Charles Munch, in the shed, beginning July 19 through August 11th. The orchestra plays Friday and Saturday nights, at 8:30 and Sunday afternoons, at 2:30 P. M.

C1397

Music — Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 13, 1957

Mozart at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE THREE concerts of the second weekend at Tanglewood which are to be devoted to Mozart started last night. Charles Munch led the chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the instrumental first half and Hugh Ross took over after intermission in three works, all of which enlisted voices.

Ross had a quartet of soloists—Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass—in the "Regina coeli" and, later, in the C major Mass (K.337). If anyone fears that religious music in concert is too narrow and dull, he should have been at this concert. Ross, within the bounds of good taste and musical dignity, inspired his selected voices to heights of expressiveness. The "Regina" had vivid impact and it was a master stroke to place the simple but moving "Ave" before the more dramatic Mass. This is a short single movement for chorus and strings only. Ross compounded its effectiveness by understatement and generated an awe which raised the performance to an exalted mood.

* * *

HIS QUARTET of soloists was decidedly well adapted for their assignment. Miss Endich had the only substantial solo, and she again proved to have remarkable control of her voice and highly musical sense to apply it. Ross has rarely brought a chorus to surpass his achievements of last night. This was not merely precision singing. It was vocal art at its finest. Attacks were immediately followed by restraint and substained passages were spun out with extremely flexible phrasing.

Munch, to start, played the D major "Divertimento," for strings only (K.136) and then allowed some of his wind virtuosi to take the spotlight in the C minor "Serenade," with two each of oboes, horns, clarinets and bassoons. They all joined forces, adding trumpets and tympani, in the "Haffner" symphony (K.385).

* * *

THE MUSICIANS of the orchestra responded to Munch's wishes with a remarkable demonstration of technical brilliance, but Mr. Munch seemed to be trying for a speed record. We have never heard the first and last movements of the "Haffner" played so fast. Yet the slow movement has grace and poise and the minuet a nice appreciation of character and there was differentiation between the menuetto and the trio in which the oboes and the bassoons produce such a wonderful sonority.

The wind instrument "Serenade" did not fulfill its potentialities. There is tonal wealth and tempo adjustments in this which were not fully explored. The "Divertimento" was happier. This is extremely youthful Mozart but, in addition to its thematic lavishness, he interplays the instruments with uncanny skill and delightful counterpoint and, fortunately, there were Boston Orchestra men to play it.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 13 1957

Mozart Concert At Tanglewood Praised

Flawless Performance Is Given Friday Night

One of the purest readings of Mozart that this reviewer remembers hearing was given last Friday night by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Dr Charles Munch conducting, at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Clarity, precision nad delicacy were evident in every passage performed by the orchestra, while the chorus and soloists, in the motet and Mass conducted by Hugh Ross, were superb in both execution and interpretation.

The concert opened with the Divertimento in D major for Strings, K.136, and a sparkling, airy performance it was. This was followed by the Serenade in C minor, K.388, and the Symphony in D major, the "Haffner," stunningly executed.

The Serenade, written for two bassoons, two oboes, two horns and two clarinets, was a delight, rippling with typical melodic Mozart phrases, and performed with great spirit. Sustained applause followed Dr Munch's masterly conducting of the symphony.

After the intermission, the Berkshire Festival Chorus, soloists and orchestra performed the "Regina Coeli," K 276; the "Ave Verum, Corpus," K 618 was sung by the chorus with the orchestra. The concert ended with the Mass in C major K337 for chorus, soloists and orchestra. The perfect balance of voices and instruments brought out all the richness and spirituality of Mozart's beautiful religious music.

The mild July evening in the incomparable setting at Tanglewood added immeasurably to the concert's enchantment, with the usual groups sitting on blankets or lawn chairs on the clipped green lawn, and the Theatre Concert Hall well-filled. Even the loss of her purse, Friday, hasn't dampened this reviewer's enthusiasm for the Berkshire Festival as the outstanding summer's entertainment in this area.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, JULY 13, 1957

MOZART WORKS EXCITING TO 2700 AT TANGLEWOOD

Both Instrumental, Vocal Music of Salzburg Master Offered

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, July 12—Approximately 2700 people spent an exciting evening listening to the instrumental and vocal music of Mozart. Tonight's program was the first of the week-end concerts which will be devoted to the music of the Salzburg master.

Play of Color Constant

Charles Munch started proceedings with a briskly paced, finely detailed performance of the "Divertimento in D Major for Strings," K136. Each movement of this ingratiating work is a gem and the music came through with a freshness and variety of color that marks the playing of the Boston strings. Mozart's "Serenade in C Minor for two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons," K388, is one of his finest achievements and lucky indeed is the conductor who has such fine instrumentalist as the players tonight to perform it. The play of color was constant and the work was strong rhthmically and forceful throughout.

The instrumental portion of the program concluded with as fine a performance of the "Symphony in D Major" (Haffner) as we have heard in years. Mr. Munch was very much in form tonight and engendered excitement. The opening allegro and final presto were virtuoso affirmations. There was a lovely exposition of the andante and the minuetto was earthy and vigorous.

Hugh Ross took over the second portion of the program. At first hearing, the festival chorus seems to be the best we have heard here in at least three years. The singers are youthful and enthusiastic, and the chorus is well balanced and has some particularly good top voices, male and female. The "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voice and orchestra, brought forth a fine quartet, consisting of John McCollum, tenor; Sarame Endich, soprano, and two newcomers, Marjorie Compagna-Pinto, a very fine alto, and Fague Springmann, an excellent bass.

Motet Beauty Unmatched

For sheer beauty, no performance equaled the motet for chorus and string orchesta, "Ave, Verum Corpus." The singers seemed inspired and provided exquisite legato singing and some admirable phrasing. The work, itself, is one of the most enchanting to come from the pen of the master.

The program concluded with a vital performance of the "Mass in C Major." This work is written for ritual use and is really a masse brevis, lasting only 20 minutes. With its framework, Mozart has put a wealth of beauty and sincerity. The work is largely for chorus, the solo quartet having occasional alternate phrases. Miss Endich was particularly effective in the gentle and touching "Agnus Dei."

Saturday night, in the music shed, Mr. Munch will direct performances of the three last and most familiar symphonies of Mozart those in D Flat Major, G Minor and C Major (Jupiter).

Tanglewood Concert Of Mozart Works Is Heard by 2,700

An audience of about 2,700 at Tanglewood, Lenox, last evening heard the first of the three concerts to be devoted to the works of Mozart this weekend.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted a small ensemble of Boston Symphony players in the first part of the program which included the Divertimento in D Major for Strings, the Serenade in C Minor for Two Clarinets, and the Symphony in D Major, commonly called the Haffner Symphony. Then Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, took over the podium and directed the Festival Chorus and accompanying orchestra in performances of the "Regina Coeli" and the Mass in C Major.

The Mozart programs will continue this evening and tomorrow afternoon to conclude the two preliminary weekends of Bach-Mozart concerts before the Festival moves to the Tanglewood Music Shed for the four series of 12 major concerts of the 1957 season.

"DRY ROT AND BEETLES"

London, July 12 (AP)—The House of Lords reported yesterday that "dry rot and beetles" have been discovered at 10 Downing St., official residence of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. Lord Mancroft said a committee would have to be appointed to study the condition of the official house and recommend some remedial action "to preserve this historic building and make it suitable for its present purpose."

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 14 1957

THREE MOZART WORKS PLAYED AT TANGLEWOOD

5175 Hear Fine Performance of Composer's Last Symphonies

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 13—Tonight, on the second of three programs devoted to the music of Mozart, Charles Munch played the last three symphonies, all written during a single summer.

5175 Attend

They were the "Lyrical E-Flat," the "Passionate G-Major" and the serene "Jupitor."

In spite of variable weather, an estimated 5175 persons were in the music shed to listen to such performances of these works as only the Boston Symphony players can give them. There was much fine playing heard during the Bach concerts and equally fine have been the performances of Mozart's music. Mr. Munch and whose imagination it never had in previous symphonies.

(See TANGLEWOOD)
(Page Seven .A)

Mozart never named his C-Major symphony the "Jupitor." It was so named more than a century ago and one J. B. Cramer, pianist and teacher has been suspected the culprit. In this serene and forthright work, we find no presence of a Jupitor and are inclined more to the premise of the late Philip Hale who found the work "intensely human in its loveliness and its gaiety."

Plenty of Gaiety

Mr. Munch seems to have found these characteristics in the symphony, for there was plenty of gaiety that was not always of the ethereal quality. Indeed, it was earth-bound gaiety. There was also impressive breadth and depth to be found in his reading and there was a responsive and flexible orchestra to realize his feelings.

Throughout this concert, we felt that what Mr. Munch was seeking was a clear and carefully detailed and conceived interpretation of each of the three symphonies. It seemed to us that he was eminently successful in the realization of his quest.

Less Familiar Works

This afternoon three less familiar works will be heard. These are a "Concerto for Bassoon in B-Flat Major" (K. 191), the "Concerto for Horn, in E-Flat Major," (K. 495) and the "Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon," (K. 279B). The concert will open with the "Adagio and Fugue in C Minor for String Orchestra," (K. 546).

The soloists will be Sherman Walt, bassoon; James Stagliano horn, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet and Ralph Gomberg, oboe.

Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 9,264

JUL 18 1957

make a big fuss! They have always worked for everything they do.

"Before Field day the band worked out till dark on Wednesday night. The day before an officer told me that they were still having trouble marching at close order, but they won."

The summer business is going strong in Lenox, Mass., if the gang that showed up for a Mozart session at the Little Theatre in Tanglewood Sunday is any indication. After a pleasant, speedy drive along the Massachusetts Turnpike, we paid a couple of dollars to the Authority, housed in its gray toll gate office and entered the coolness of the Berkshire hills, leaving trusty lusty auto on a grassy parking lot.

Seeking a place out of the sun, we found that most others had the same idea, so we joined them in the shade of several trees to one side of the lawn used by people who do not need reserved seats.

The first selection, played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, was softer than a lullaby, so we slept. It was Concerto for Bassoon in B flat major, with Sherman Walt soloing.

We woke up for the Concerto for horn in E flat major, found a drink of water during the intermission, and listened attentively during the Sinfonia concertante for oboe, clarinet and bassoon, because it was louder.

A small boy teasing his smaller sister on a blanket provided a fascinating sideshow, while a music lover kept turning about to see what the commotion was.

An old grade-school chum and family appeared after the concert so we gave them a big hello, and left for points East.

THE POST OFFICE Department publishes commemorative stamps at frequent intervals.

Usually, they print 120 million stamps, which leaves some for general use after the stamp collectors finish buying them up. A four cent commemorative picturing the American Flag was brought out for the Fourth of July and only 40 million were printed. According to Donald P. Steele local postmaster, the Boston Office had to call in the police when so many collectors showed up at the stamp windows to snap up the rare stamps.

Gloucester got its share a few days late, and they were all sold out by 9 a.m. the day they went on sale. At first, they were sold in sheet lots, but the demand was so great they had to tear the sheets in half. Dealers in rare stamps were all over New England trying to corner the market.

Apparently some local collector were miffed, because the stamps were sold out before they trekked to the window. Some of Gloucester's early birds must not have been from Gloucester that day.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,140

JUL 18 1957

C Minor Mass Is Highlight In July 12 Berkshire Festival

The Berkshire Festival chorus and soloists gave a magnificent performance of the Mozart C Minor Mass at the July 12 concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

Under the direction of Hugh Ross, the orchestra and chorus combined for a beautiful and reverent performance of the great work in the Theatre-Concert Hall there. Soloists for the event were Saramae Endich, soprano, who is to be commended for her lovely performance, particularly in the Angus Dei solo; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, who presented a fine performance in the Credo; the always-excellent John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass.

Hugh Ross also conducted the orchestra and chorus in "Regina Coeli" K. 276, and the simple and beautiful "Ave Verum Corpus" K. 618.

Prior to intermission, the Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, presented the Mozart Divertimento in D Major, K. 136; Serenade in C. Minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons, K. 388, an intriguing and well-done piece; and the ever popular Symphony in D Major K. 385, the "Haffner" Symphony. Dr. Munch was loudly applauded for his work on the podium, and returned to face the audience several times.

July 13

Dr. Munch again won a vigorous accolade from the crowd on the following night, with his dynamic leadership of the exciting Symphony in C Major, K. 551, the "Jupiter" Symphony. The first programmed work was the Symphony in E flat major, K. 543, and both the orchestra and Dr. Munch really dug into this one with zest and esprit. In the Symphony in G. Minor, K. 550, we feel conductor and orchestra illustrated a considerable degree of empathy with Mozart's work, with Munch taking command of the musicians to lead them to new heights of achievement.

Coming Events

On Friday, the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will present Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes," Tchaikovsky's Roccoco Variations for Cello and Orchestra featuring Samuel Mayes and the "Pathetique" symphony.

On Saturday, Pierre Monteux as guest conductor will lead the orchestra in Mendelssohn's "Fingals Cave Overture," the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 5 and Stravinsky's "Le Sacre du Printemps."

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. will see a Music Shed performance of Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, and the Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum" in the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, with Charles Munch [illegible] Friday and Saturday at 8:30 [illegible]

C19]

Music — rkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 13, 1957

Mozart at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE THREE concerts of the second weekend at Tanglewood which are to be devoted to Mozart started last night. Charles Munch led the chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the instrumental first half and Hugh Ross took over after intermission in three works, all of which enlisted voices.

Ross had a quartet of soloists—Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass—in the "Regina coeli" and, later, in the C major Mass (K.337). If anyone fears that religious music in concert is too narrow and dull, he should have been at this concert. Ross, within the bounds of good taste and musical dignity, inspired his selected voices to heights of expressiveness. The "Regina" had vivid impact and it was a master stroke to place the simple but moving "Ave" before the more dramatic Mass. This is a short single movement for chorus and strings only. Ross compounded its effectiveness by understatement and generated an awe which raised the performance to an exalted mood.

* * *

HIS QUARTET of soloists was decidedly well adapted for their assignment. Miss Endich had the only substantial solo, and she again proved to have remarkable control of her voice and highly musical sense to apply it. Ross has rarely brought a chorus to surpass his achievements of last night. This was not merely precision singing. It was vocal art at its finest. Attacks were immediately followed by restraint and substained passages were spun out with extremely flexible phrasing.

Munch, to start, played the D major "Divertimento," for strings only (K.136) and then allowed some of his wind virtuosi to take the spotlight in the C minor "Serenade," with two each of oboes, horns, clarinets and bassoons. They all joined forces, adding trumpets and tympani, in the "Haffner" symphony (K.385).

* * *

THE MUSICIANS of the orchestra responded to Munch's wishes with a remarkable demonstration of technical brilliance, but Mr. Munch seemed to be trying for a speed record. We have never heard the first and last movements of the "Haffner" played so fast. Yet the slow movement has grace and poise and the minuet a nice appreciation of character and there was differentiation between the menuetto and the trio in which the oboes and the bassoons produce such a wonderful sonority.

The wind instrument "Serenade" did not fulfill its potentialities. There is tonal wealth and tempo adjustments in this which were not fully explored. The "Divertimento" was happier. This is extremely youthful Mozart but, in addition to its thematic lavishness, he interplays the instruments with many skill and delightful counterpoint and, fortunately, there were Boston Orchestra men to play it.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, JULY 13, 1957

MOZART WORKS EXCITING TO 2700 AT TANGLEWOOD

Both Instrumental, Vocal Music of Salzburg Master Offered

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, July 12—Approximately 2700 people spent an exciting evening listening to the instrumental and vocal music of Mozart. Tonight's program was the first of the week-end concerts which will be devoted to the music of the Salzburg master.

Play of Color Constant

Charles Munch started proceedings with a briskly paced, finely detailed performance of the "Divertimento in D Major for Strings," K136. Each movement of this ingratiating work is a gem and the music came through with a polish and variety of color that marks the playing of the Boston strings. Mozart's "Serenade in C Minor for two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons," K388, is one of his finest achievements and lucky indeed is the conductor who has such fine instrumentalist as the players tonight to perform it. The play of color was constant and the work was strong rhthmically and forceful throughout.

The instrumental portion of the program concluded with as fine a performance of the "Symphony in E Major" (Haffner) as we have heard in years. Mr. Munch was very much in form tonight and engendered excitement. The opening allegro and final presto were virtuoso affirmations. There was a lovely exposition of the andante and the minuetto was earthy and vigorous.

Hugh Ross took over the second portion of the program. At first hearing, the festival chorus seems to be the best we have heard here in at least three years. The singers are youthful and enthusiastic, and the chorus is well balanced and has some particularly good top voices, male and female. The "Regina Coeli" for chorus, solo voice and orchestra, brought forth a fine quartet, consisting of John McCollum, tenor; Sarame Endich, soprano, and two newcomers, Marjorie Compagna-Pinto, a very fine alto, and Fague Springmann, an excellent bass.

Motet Beauty Unmatched

For sheer beauty, no performance equaled the motet for chorus and string orchesta, "Ave, Verum Corpus." The singers seemed inspired and provided exquisite legato singing and some admirable phrasing. The work, itself, is one of the most enchanting to come from the pen of the master.

The program concluded with a vital performance of the "Mass in C Major." This work is written for ritual use and is really a masse brevis, lasting only 20 minutes. With its framework, Mozart has put a wealth of beauty and sincerity. The work is largely for chorus, the solo quartet having occasional alternate phrases. Miss Endich was particularly effective in the gentle and touching "Agnus Dei."

Saturday night, in the music shed, Mr. Munch will direct performances of the three last and most familiar symphonies of Mozart those in D Flat Major, G Minor and C Major (Jupiter).

"DRY ROT AND BEETLES"

London, July 12 (AP)—The House of Lords reported yesterday that "dry rot and beetles" have been discovered at 10 Downing St., official residence of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. Lord Mancroft said a committee would have to be appointed to study the condition of the official house and recommend some remedial action "to preserve this historic building and make it suitable for its present purpose."

JAZZ
CROSS ROADS
Every Sunday
3 TO 8 P.M.
At The Van Horn Club

HILL 'N' DALE
Huntington Rd. Rte. 20
Russell, Mass.
CHOICE LIQUORS
Chicken & Spaghetti
$1.60 at the

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,140
JUL 18 1957

C Minor Mass Is Highlight In July 12 Berkshire Festival

The Berkshire Festival chorus and soloists gave a magnificent performance of the Mozart C Minor Mass at the July 12 concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

Under the direction of Hugh Ross, the orchestra and chorus combined for a beautiful and reverent performance of the great work in the Theatre-Concert Hall there. Soloists for the event were Saramae Endich, soprano, who is to be commended for her lovely performance, particularly in the Angus Dei solo; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, who presented a fine performance in the Credo; the always-excellent John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass.

Hugh Ross also conducted the orchestra and chorus in "Regina Coeli" K. 276, and the simple and beautiful "Ave Verum Corpus" K. 618.

Prior to intermission, the Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, presented the Mozart Divertimento in D Major, K. 136; Serenade in C. Minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons, K. 388, an intriguing and well-done piece; and the ever popular Symphony in D Major K. 385, the "Haffner" Symphony. Dr. Munch was loudly applauded for his work on the podium, and returned to face the audience several times.

July 13

Dr. Munch again won a vigorous accolade from the crowd on the following night, with his dynamic leadership of the exciting Symphony in C Major, K. 551, the "Jupiter" Symphony. The first programmed work was the Symphony in E flat major, K. 543, and both the orchestra and Dr. Munch really dug into this one with zest and esprit. In the Symphony in G. Minor, K. 550, we feel conductor and orchestra illustrated a considerable degree of empathy with Mozart's work, with Munch taking command of the musicians to lead them to new heights of achievement.

Coming Events

On Friday, the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will present Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes." Tchaikovsky's Roccoco Variations for Cello and Orchestra featuring Samuel Mayes and the "Pathetique" symphony.

On Saturday, Pierre Monteux as guest conductor will lead the orchestra in Mendelssohn's "Fingals Cave Overture," the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 5 and Stravinsky's "Le Sacre du Printemps."

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. will see a Music Shed performance of Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, and the Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum" in the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, with Charles Munch conducting. The Friday and Saturday performances are at 8:30 p.m. at Tanglewood, located in Lenox, Mass.

L. F. M.

THE NEWS-TIMES, FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1957

Mozart Concert At Tanglewood Praised

Flawless Performance Is Given Friday Night

One of the purest readings of Mozart that this reviewer remembers hearing was given last Friday night by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Dr Charles Munch conducting, at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Clarity, precision nad delicacy were evident in every passage performed by the orchestra, while the chorus and soloists, in the motet and Mass conducted by Hugh Ross, were superb in both execution and interpretation.

The concert opened with the Divertimento in D major for Strings, K.136, and a sparkling, airy performance it was. This was followed by the Serenade in C minor, K.388, and the Symphony in D major, the "Haffner," stunningly executed.

The Serenade, written for two bassoons, two oboes, two horns and two clarinets, was a delight, rippling with typical melodic Mozart phrases, and performed with great spirit. Sustained applause followed Dr Munch's masterly conducting of the symphony.

After the intermission, the Berkshire Festival Chorus, soloists and orchestra performed the "Regina Coeli," K 276; the "Ave Verum, Corpus," K 618 was sung by the chorus with the orchestra. The concert ended with the Mass in C major K337 for chorus, soloists and orchestra. The perfect balance of voices and instruments brought out all the richness and spirituality of Mozart's beautiful religious music.

The mild July evening in the incomparable setting at Tanglewood added immeasurably to the concert's enchantment, with the usual groups sitting on blankets or lawn chairs on the clipped green lawn, and the Theatre Concert Hall well-filled. Even the loss of her purse, Friday, hasn't dampened this reviewer's enthusiasm for the Berkshire Festival as the outstanding summer's entertainment in this area.

Transcript (e)
ORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 13 1957

Tanglewood Concert Of Mozart Works Is Heard by 2,700

An audience of about 2,700 at Tanglewood, Lenox, last evening heard the first of the three concerts to be devoted to the works of Mozart this weekend.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted a small ensemble of Boston Symphony players in the first part of the program which included the Divertimento in D Major for Strings, the Serenade in C Minor for Two Clarinets, and the Symphony in D Major, commonly called the Haffner Symphony. Then Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, took over the podium and directed the Festival Chorus and accompanying orchestra in performances of the "Regina Coeli" and the Mass in C Major.

The Mozart programs will continue this evening and tomorrow afternoon to conclude the two preliminary weekends of Bach-Mozart concerts before the Festival moves to the Tanglewood Music Shed for the four series of 12 major concerts of the 1957 season.

(Continued From Page 1A)

appears relaxed and happy this season and his relaxation is communicated to the players.

The dissimilarity of the three symphonies makes them an admirable choice for a program devoted to symphonies. There is no record that Mozart heard these works during the three years that remained of his life. Neither is there any indication that, like so many of his works, they were written on commission, when he was under great strain. They seemed to be the spontaneous affirmations of one overflowing with music.

Splendor of Imagination

There is clarity, light and splendor of imagination in the E-Flat symphony, just as there is tension and contrasting delicacy and brilliance in the movements of the G. Major symphony.

Mr. Munch read these two symphonies with fine clarity and simplicity of approach which permitted full realization of their incomparable beauties, placed with lavish hand by a composer who had attained a technical mastery and whose imagination soared as it never had in previous symphonies.

Mozart never named his C-Major symphony the "Jupitor." It was so named more than a century ago and one J. B. Cramer, pianist and teacher has been suspected the culprit. In this serene and forthright work, we find no presence of a Jupitor and are inclined more to the premise of the late Philip Hale who found the work "intensely human in its loveliness and its gaiety."

Plenty of Gaiety

Mr. Munch seems to have found these characteristics in the symphony, for there was plenty of gaiety that was not always of the ethereal quality. Indeed, it was earth-bound gaiety. There was also impressive breadth and depth to be found in his reading and there was a responsive and flexible orchestra to realize his feelings.

Throughout this concert, we felt that what Mr. Munch was seeking was a clear and carefully detailed and conceived interpretation of each of the three symphonies. It seemed to us that he was eminently successful in the realization of his quest.

Less Familiar Works

This afternoon three less familiar works will be heard. These are a "Concerto for Bassoon in B-Flat Major" (K. 191), the "Concerto for Horn, in E-Flat Major," (K. 495) and the "Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon," (K. 279B). The concert will open with the "Adagio and Fugue in C Minor for String Orchestra," (K. 546).

The soloists will be Sherman Walt, bassoon; James Stagliano horn, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet and Ralph Gomberg, oboe.

make a big fuss! ...esh Produce
...ways worked for ev... RRIES do.
"Before Field da... Juicy LB 3 worked out till dark... RMELOI day night. The day b... cer told me that th... 8 LBS AND OVER EA. 7
having trouble marc... ATOES order, but they won." 10 LB BAG 6
The summer busin... Specials!
strong in Lenox, M... PPLE P gang that showed up ... CAROL session at the Little ... EA.
Tanglewood Sunday i...
ation. After a pleas...
drive along the Ma...
Turnpike, we paid a...
dollars to the Authori...
in its gray toll gate ...
entered the coolness of ...
shire hills, leaving tr...
auto on a grassy parkin...
Seeking a place out o... we found that most of...
the same idea, so we joi...
in the shade of several...
one side of the lawn used...
ple who do not need ...
seats.
The first selection, pl...
the Boston Symphony O... conducted by Charles Mun...
softer than a lullaby, so w...
It was Concerto for Bas...
B flat major, with Sherma...
soloing.
We woke up for the C...

Lowell Sun

New York Journal-American
14-Mon., July 15, 1957 ★

C139

AT TANGLEWOOD:

Bach Plays 2d Fiddle to Mozart

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 15.—Mozart outdrew Bach over 1,000 strong in the second weekend of the Berkshire Festival. The program of Mozart's three last symphonies given in the Music Shed on Saturday brought out an audience of over 5,000.

The more choice chamber music heard in the theatre-concert hall yesterday afternoon found 3,500 people taking advantage of perfect weather and a delightful program.

The variety of this program lay not only in the works but also in the soloists. There were four of them, all members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and all performers on wind instruments.

Vitality and Gaiety

The music consisted of the unfamiliar "Adagio and Fugue" K546, the Concerto for Bassoon K191, the Concerto for Horn K495, and the Sinfonia Concertante K297-B. These works revealed as much of the continuous frow of Mozart's inspiration as of his delight in writing for these wind instruments.

Charles Munch conducted. He approached Mozart with characteristics vigor. This was no lavender and old-lace concept of Mozart, but one that constantly expressed vitality and gaiety where it could. It was the refreshing character of Mozart's music that dominated.

The bassoon concerto and E Sinfonia captivated the audience most. In the former Sherman Walt entered so thoroughly into the spirit of the piece and played the bassoon with such obvious skill and pleasure that his performance proved irresistible.

Finest Manner

Unable to restrain delight after the cadenza of the first movement, people applauded immediately at the end of the movement.

Playing the solo parts in the Sinfonia were Rayph Gomberg, oboe, Gino Cioffi, clarinet, James Stagliano, horn, and Walt. Their concerted as well as their individual playing brought a special quality to the performance. This was Mozart playing in the finest manner, sensitive to his style and to his writing for these instruments.

Stagliano played the horn concerto skilfully, but the performance as a whole did not quite touch the imagination. The "Adagio and Fugue" served well as a beginning piece, more rough-toned in sound than perhaps Mozart would have approved.

Feature Kirchner At Bronx Funland

Claude Kirchner, star of the WOR-TV kiddie programs, "Scrub Club" and "Terrytoon Circus", will entertain his young fans at Bronx Funland, Bruckner blvd. and White Plains rd., today. Kirchner will put on a show with "Lolly the Clown" starting at 2 p.m.

The show will feature magic tricks, comedy and lolly-pops for all kids.

IRE GAZETTE, NORTHAMPTON, MASS., TUESDAY, JU

Boston Symphony Launches All-Mozart Concert Series

7/16

The first of three all-Mozart concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was held Sunday evening in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Dr. Munch conducted the first half, beginning with the Divertimento in D major for strings only. A sparsely textured composition, it is one of Mozart's earliest and reflects his youthful style, clean, simple rippling lines, delicately tender at times. Dr. Munch guided the flawless strings with surety and smoothness.

A seldom heard Serenade for eight winds, two each of oboes, clarinets, bassoons and horns, was not at all times effortless; the phrasing was marvelously rounded and deftly handled by these expert musicians, the bassoons and horns really outstanding. Dr. Munch conducted with great concern, but one wonders whether in performance it is best played without a leader.

The Haffner Symphony in D major concluded the first half. Composed under pressure in a short time, first as a Serenade, it is a stirring work. Precise, almost martial in its beginning, it was played with all the changes of mood indicated by the composer, Dr. Munch inspiring the players with his absorbed attention to detail. The menuet was alternately vigorous and gentle, the whole a delight. The finale amazingly swift, was true Mozart, witty and captivating from beginning to end.

The second half of the program was conducted by Hugh Ross, director of the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center. Members of the Boston Symphony assisted the Berkshire Festival Chorus, and soloists Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springman, bass.

The exultant "Regina Coeli" K276 introduced the many fine voices of this year's Festival Chorus, followed by the movingly simple "Ave Vernum Corpus." Certainly these programs are chosen for the music's worth and our listening pleasure, so that, considering the varied degrees of the participants' ability and familiarity with the music selected, one must not be too critical of balance, integration, diction (which was really quite clear), or any phase of the resultant performance.

Mozart's brief Mass in C major K337 closed the evening's program. Orchestrated without violas, the addition of an organ provided unusual color, especially in the lovely Agnus Dei, in which Miss Endich's richly endowed voice was heard in solo, with strings and woodwinds. The Gloria is especially remembered, and the unusual Benedictus with its acrid and doleful treatment. Mr. Ross' sympathetic handling of each section produced amazingly good results. The final "Dona nobis pacem" brought a storm of applause from the apparently satisfied audience.

— M. deB. B.

The Lowell Sun Saturday July 20 1957

MUSIC

Thousands Treated to Fine Concerts at Berkshire Festival

By ALFRED W. BURKE

TANGLEWOOD—Over the past two week-ends the thousands in attendance at this year's Berkshire Festival, were treated to some of the finest concerts ever recorded in America's fast growing musical history. The first Saturday, an evening of Bach, brought to those present the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth, of the magnificent Brandenburg line.

This was an evening not only of superb entertainment, but another of the countless proofs that players of the Boston Symphony both individually, and in ensemble, are the finest in the world of instrumental performance. On this occasion one can in brief say that "they had it."

The entire program as conducted by Charles Munch was a tremendous success in the artistic sense. It seems that somehow he approaches a performance somewhat different than in years past.

In each of the Concerti the individual sections unfolded each passage with a touch of individuality while still making it a part of the entire motif structure.

There was sureness. This did much to retain both the styling of Bach and the intended simplicity of the work. One experienced a tonal effect, color in harmonic blend and a medium of interpretive expression that enabled the different pieces to live again.

The individual solo list was impressive both in name and performance. Richard Burgin, the most brilliant first chair man in symphonic history, Roger Bolsin Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ralph Gomberg, and James Pappoutsakis did much in recording another immortal evening of Berkshire history.

On Sunday "The Passion According to St. Matthew" with soloists Adele Addision, soprano; Florence Kopieff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, Donald Gramm, bass and James Joyce, bass; assisted by the Harvard and Radcliffe Choral groups provided another inspiring program.

Aiding splendidly as individual instrumentalists were Daniel Pinkham, harpsichord, Alfred Nash Patterson, organ and Alfred Zighera, viola da gamba.

Music from the pen of Mozart made up the program for last Saturday evening. The E Flat Major, the G Minor, K, 550 and the C Major (Jupiter) made up the pattern. Charles Munch again scored a major victory for himself.

However, he possesses that wonderful trait of understanding just how a conductor achieves such a peak. As always, he was most sincere in his desire to share the glories that were his with the orchestra membership.

Mozart is all too often taken for granted. Though one hears these symphonies done often, and at times quite well, it remains for the Boston orchestra to paint the true picture. This trait of making a man's music live again seems to be the lot of this group on every occasion.

It would be difficult to pick which of the three went off best. We are more than partial to Mozart. However, to us the opening, in E Flat carried the evening's honors.

Sunday afternoon, again an occasion marked Mozart brought to the stage a line of first class solo artists. Hearing the seldom done Concerto for Bassoon, Concerto for Horn and Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn and basoon made the afternoon another in the memorable line.

Sherman Walt, bassoon; James Stagliano, horn; Gino Cioffi, clarinet were the incomparable artists listed. The audience showered waves and waves of applause during the entire concert. As a brief example—how often does one hear applause between movements of a symphony or concerto?

This, probably more than anythink else, proved the quality of the days happenings. The rare combine of music and Tanglewood seem to be making all of this a habit for which the entire world can be well proud of.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 15 1957

Music of Mozart Attracts Over 11,327 to Tanglewood

Three concerts of music by Mozart attracted 11,327 persons to Tanglewood in Lenox over the weekend.

In Full Swing

This week the Berkshire Music Festival moves into full swing with concerts by the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big Shed. The programs Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon will be devoted to music by Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

For the Mozart program Saturday night and yetsterday afternoon Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony's smaller chamber orchestra. The Saturday program included the "Symphony in E Flat," "Symphony in G Minor" and "Symphony in C Major." Works performed yesterday were "Adagio and Fuge in C Minor," "Bassoon Concerto," with Sherman Walt as soloist; "Horn Concerto K.495," with James Stagliano as soloist, and "Sinfonia Concertante, K.279B."

On Wednesday of this week the third in the series of chamber music concerts will be held in the theater-concert hall. Performing will be the Beaux Arts Trio.

Munch Friday

Mr. Munch will be on the podium Friday night, when the program will include "Jeu de Cartes" by Stravinsky and "Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra" and "Symphony No. 6" by Tchaikovsky. Samuel Mayes will be the cello soloist.

Pierre Monteux, former conductor of the Boston Symphony, will manage a guest appearance with the orchestra Saturday night.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052
JUL 16 1957

Superb Performance Given Of Seldom Heard Works

A near-record crowd of 3,502 music devotees attended the last concert of the Bach-Mozart series held Sunday in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. Seldom heard works for chamber orchestra and solo brass and woodwind instruments were given superb performances.

The un-Mozartian and vigorous Adagio and Fugue in C minor for strings opened the program. A darkly colored composition, serious throughout, it was an excellent opportunity to the principal string groups in perfect unison and fascinating fugal play. Sherman Walt, principal bassoonist, with the concerto in B flat major K191, displayed his flawless facility with his instrument's varying possibilities in music lilting, tender, and humorous.

Following came the more familiar horn concerto in E flat major K495, expertly handled by James Stagliano, who had composed the cadenza for the first movement. The pianissimo trill and runs of this most difficult of wind instruments were amazingly clear and true, only the very last phrases a bit muffled, due in part to the warmth of the afternoon and the almost ceaseless flow of music.

After intermission (one cellist hurried on after Dr. Munch and was applauded by the audience), the captivating Sinfonia concertante for oboe, clarinet, bassoon and horn with orchestral accompaniment held one's attention from beginning to end. The punctuated and particular phrasing, so necessary for Mozart's music, was evident at all times, the oboe and clarinet were outstanding in their solo parts, and melded as one in exquisite duets, the quartet, together a finely drawn and distinctive entity.

In this small and select group of virtuoso musicians, the tremendous pride in their fellow members and complete dedication to their leader, Dr. Munch, is constantly evident. As soloists the tendency is never to take the lead, but rather one feels a sort of empathy established between Dr. Munch and his men, resulting of course, in accomplished perfection.

There seems almost a paternal concern for the soloist as Dr. Munch sublimates the orchestra so that even the soloist's pianissimos are heard over the sudden dynamic changes. In the melting warmth of the afternoon, even a sympathetic and encouraging smile was seen to spread from Dr. Munch to his players. (The new backboard must be an unwelcome deterrent of any breezes that use to waft across the stage).

The audience applauded with undiminished vigor this highly interesting program which seemed to come to completion all too soon. On Wednesday evening the Beaux Arts piano trio will be heard in works by Haydn, Casadesus, and Beethoven. The first of the Shed concerts with the full complement of the Boston Symphony will take place on Friday evening with music by Stravinsky and Tschaikovsky. — M. deB. B.

Mon. July 15 1957 Eve. American

Large Crowds At Concerts In Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 15—With the first two week ends of the music of Bach and Mozart safely tucked away the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra here at Tanglewood goes into high gear this week with the first of the four weeks of performances in the large music shed under the direction of Charles Munch and guest conductors.

The Mozart programs concluded yesterday afternoon before a large Sunday audience which included "Concerto for Bassoon, in B Flat Major," "Concerto for Horn, in E flat major," and the "Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoon" presented a zart such as me to expect aturday night
5,125 included
braham Ribicoff who had od for a restin the Berkm which inmphony in E ony in G. min-uding "Sym-Jupiter."
stic audience,
e of the con-
stra.
-called "little ing the first h week season
w more than rnor and his rchestra seats right side of come away axation as the iter. He asked rams of Con-Mountain at governor ince festival at miles from told of the ces of the which we had erformance a
music shed
vening and aturday eve-noon will be ively to the nd Tchaikov-
g's perform-e orchestra of the guest onteux, with ting the full and Sunday concert will evitzky Me-will present
soloist.
S. M.

C139

New York Journal-American
14-Mon., July 15, 1957

AT TANGLEWOOD:

Bach Plays 2d Fiddle to Mozart

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 15.—Mozart outdrew Bach over 1,000 strong in the second weekend of the Berkshire Festival. The program of Mozart's three last symphonies given in the Music Shed on Saturday brought out an audience of over 5,000.

The more choice chamber music heard in the theatre-concert hall yesterday afternoon found 3,500 people taking advantage of perfect weather and a delightful program.

The variety of this program lay not only in the works but also in the soloists. There were four of them, all members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and all performers on wind instruments.

Vitality and Gaiety

The music consisted of the unfamiliar "Adagio and Fugue" K546, the Concerto for Bassoon, K191, the Concerto for Horn K495, and the Sinfonia Concertante K297-B. These works revealed as much of the continuous frow of Mozart's inspiration as of his delight in writing for these wind instruments.

Charles Munch conducted. He approached Mozart with characteristics vigor. This was no lavender and old-lace concept of Mozart, but one that constantly expressed vitality and gaiety where it could. It was the refreshing character of Mozart's music that dominated.

The bassoon concerto and E Sinfonia captivated the audience most. In the former Sherman Walt entered so thoroughly into the spirit of the piece and played the bassoon with such obvious skill and pleasure that his performance proved irresistible.

Finest Manner

Unable to restrain delight after the cadenza of the first movement, people applauded immediately at the end of the movement.

Playing the solo parts in the Sinfonia were Rayph Gomberg, oboe, Gino Cioffi, clarinet, James Stagliano, horn, and Walt. Their concerted as well as their individual playing brought a special quality to the performance. This was Mozart playing in the finest manner, sensitive to his style and to his writing for these instruments.

Stagliano played the horn concerto skilfully, but the performance as a whole did not quite touch the imagination. The "Adagio and Fugue" served well as a beginning piece, more rough-toned in sound than perhape Mozart would have approved.

Feature Kirchner At Bronx Funland

Claude Kirchner, star of the WOR-TV kiddie programs, "Scrub Club" and "Terrytoon Circus", will entertain his young fans at Bronx Funland, Bruckner blvd. and White Plains rd., today. Kirchner will put on a show with "Lolly the Clown" starting at 2 p.m.

The show will feature magic tricks, comedy and lolly-pops for all kids.

IRE GAZETTE, NORTHAMPTON, MASS., TUESDAY, JU

Boston Symphony Launches 7/16 All-Mozart Concert Series

The first of three all-Mozart concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was held Sunday evening in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Dr. Munch conducted the first half, beginning with the Divertimento in D major for strings only. A sparsely textured composition, it is one of Mozart's earliest and reflects his youthful style, clean, simple rippling lines, delicately tender at times. Dr. Munch guided the flawless strings with surety and smoothness.

A seldom heard Serenade for eight winds, two each of oboes, clarinets, bassoons and horns, was not at all times effortless; the phrasing was marvelously rounded and deftly handled by these expert musicians, the bassoons and horns really outstanding. Dr. Munch conducted with great concern, but one wonders whether in performance it is best played without a leader.

The Haffner Symphony in D major concluded the first half. Composed under pressure in a short time, first as a Serenade, it is a stirring work. Precise, almost martial in its beginning, it was played with all the changes of mood indicated by the composer, Dr. Munch inspiring the players with his absorbed attention to detail. The menuet was alternately vigorous and gentle, the whole a delight. The finale amazingly swift, was true Mozart, witty and captivating from beginning to end.

The second half of the program was conducted by Hugh Ross, director of the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center. Members of the Boston Symphony assisted the Berkshire Festival Chorus, and soloists Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springman, bass.

The exultant "Regina Coeli" K276 introduced the many fine voices of this year's Festival Chorus, followed by the movingly simple "Ave Vernum Corpus." Certainly these programs are chosen for the music's worth and our listening pleasure, so that, considering the varied degrees of the participants' ability and familiarity with the music selected, one must not be too critical of balance, integration, diction (which was really quite clear), or any phase of the resultant performance.

Mozart's brief Mass in C major K337 closed the evening's program. Orchestrated without violas, the addition of an organ provided unusual color, especially in the lovely Agnus Dei, in which Miss Endich's richly endowed voice was heard in solo, with strings and woodwinds. The Gloria is especially remembered, and the unusual Benedictus with its acrid and doleful treatment. Mr. Ross' sympathetic handling of each section produced amazingly good results. The final "Dona nobis pacem" brought a storm of applause from the apparently satisfied audience.

— M. deB. B.

The Lowell Sun Saturday July 20 1957

MUSIC

Thousands Treated to Fine Concerts at Berkshire Festival

By ALFRED W. BURKE

TANGLEWOOD—Over the past two week-ends the thousands in attendance at this year's Berkshire Festival, were treated to some of the finest concerts ever recorded in America's fast growing musical history. The first Saturday, an evening of Bach, brought to those present the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth, of the magnificent Brandenburg line.

This was an evening not only of superb entertainment, but another of the countless proofs that players of the Boston Symphony both individually, and in ensemble, are the finest in the world of instrumental performance. On this occasion one can in brief say that "they had it."

The entire program as conducted by Charles Munch was a tremendous success in the artistic sense. It seems that somehow he approaches a performance somewhat different than in years past.

In each of the Concerti the individual sections unfolded each passage with a touch of individuality while still making it a part of the entire motif structure.

There was sureness. This did much to retain both the styling of Bach and the intended simplicity of the work. One experienced a tonal effect, color in harmonic blend and a medium of interpretive expression that enabled the different pieces to live again.

The individual solo list was impressive both in name and performance. Richard Burgin, the most brilliant first chair man in symphonic history, Roger Boisin Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ralph Gomberg, and James Pappoutsakis did much in recording another immortal evening of Berkshire history.

On Sunday "The Passion According to St. Matthew" with soloists Adele Addision, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum tenor, Donald Gramm, bass and James Joyce, bass; assisted by the Harvard and Radcliffe Choral groups provided another inspiring program.

Aiding splendidly as individual instrumentalists were Daniel Pinkham, harpsichord, Alfred Nash Patterson, organ and Alfred Zighera, viola da gamba.

Music from the pen of Mozart made up the program for last Saturday evening. The E Flat Major, the G Minor, K, 550 and the C Major (Jupiter) made up the pattern. Charles Munch again scored a major victory for himself.

However, he possesses that wonderful trait of understanding just how a conductor achieves such a peak. As always, he was most sincere in his desire to share the glories that were his with the orchestra membership.

Mozart is all too often taken for granted. Though one hears these symphonies done often, and at times quite well, it remains for the Boston orchestra to paint the true picture. This trait of making a man's music live again seems to be the lot of this group on every occasion.

It would be difficult to pick which of the three went off best. We are more than partial to Mozart. However, to us the opening, in E Flat carried the evening's honors.

Sunday afternoon, again an occasion marked Mozart brought to the stage a line of first class solo artists. Hearing the seldom done Concerto for Bassoon, Concerto for Horn and Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn and basoon made the afternoon another in the memorable line.

Sherman Walt, bassoon; James Stagliano, horn; Gino Cioffi, clarinet were the incomparable artists listed. The audience showered waves and waves of applause during the entire concert. As a brief example—how often does one hear applause between movements of a symphony or concerto?

This, probably more than anything else, proved the quality of the days happenings. The rare combine of music and Tanglewood seem to be making all of this a habit for which the entire world can be well proud of.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 15 1957

Music of Mozart Attracts Over 11,327 to Tanglewood

Three concerts of music by Mozart attracted 11,327 persons to Tanglewood in Lenox over the weekend.

In Full Swing

This week the Berkshire Music Festival moves into full swing with concerts by the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big shed. The programs Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon will be devoted to music by Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

For the Mozart program Saturday night and yetsterday afternoon Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony's smaller chamber orchestra. The Saturday program included the "Symphony in E Flat," "Symphony in G Minor" and "Symphony in C Major." Works performed yesterday were "Adagio and Fuge in C Minor," "Bassoon Concerto," with Sherman Walt as soloist; "Horn Concerto K.495," with James Stagliano as soloist, and "Sinfonia Concertante K.279B."

On Wednesday of this week the third in the series of chamber music concerts will be held in the theater-concert hall. Performing will be the Benux Arts Trio.

Munch Friday

Mr. Munch will be on the podium Friday night, when the program will include "Jeu de Cartes" by Stravinsky and "Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra" and "Symphony No: 6" by Tchaikovsky. Samuel Mayes will be the cello soloist.

Pierre Monteux, former conductor of the Boston Symphony, will make a guest appearance with the orchestra Saturday night.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 1[illegible]

On Uni[illegible]

By STATE 4-H STAFF
Co-operative Extension Service,
University of Massachusetts

The week of July 8 to 12 has been one of great activity for 4-H Club members on the campus of the University of Massachusetts. They opened with State 4-H Achievement Day, which included ten statewide activities: tractor operator's contest, dairy judging school, dress revue judging, egg grading contest, aricultural demonstrations which included such activities as poultry production and marketing, vegetable production and marketing, dairy, livestock, electricity and safety.

Home economics demonstrations included breadmaking, vegetable use, dairy foods, poultry foods, shopping for food, clothing, home furnishings and health, talent judging, assembly for all State Achievement Day participants, which included a public speaking contest and announcement of placings. The culmination of the day's activities was an achievement night program at which there were over 175 participants with an audience of 500.

The State 4-H Junior Leaders' Conference opened with supper at the University Commons on Monday, July 8, with a total enrollment of 166 delegates, 11 local 4-H Club leaders, 20 county club leaders and 21 university staff members in charge. The group was divided into 14 workshops as follows: tops in your teens, under the leadership of Ruth Totman; safe or sorry, Woodbridge Brown; song leadership, Beatrice V. Fitts; game leadership, Rodger Leathers; 4-H Club meetings that click, Harley A. Leland; vocations and careers, Eleanor Fillmore and Robert J. Morrissey; inspirational ceremonies, Horace M. Jones; for my club, my com-

Mon. July 15-1957 Springfield Union American

Large Crowds At Concerts In Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 15—With the first two week ends of the music of Bach and Mozart safely tucked away the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra here at Tanglewood goes into high gear this week with the first of the four weeks of performances in the large music shed under the direction of Charles Munch and guest conductors.

The Mozart programs concluded yesterday afternoon before a large Sunday audience which included "Concerto for Bassoon, in B Flat Major," "Concerto for Horn, in E flat major," and the "Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoon" presented a week - end of Mozart such as music-lovers have come to expect here annually. The Saturday night concert audience of 5,125 included Connecticut's Gov. Abraham Ribicoff and Mrs. Ribicoff who had motored to Tanglewood for a restful evening of music in the Berkshires in a program which included Mozart's "Symphony in E flat major," "Symphony in G. minor" and the concluding "Symphony in C major, "Jupiter."

It was an enthusiastic audience, warm in its applause of the conductor and the orchestra.

For one of the so-called "little concerts" given during the first two weeks of the sixth week season it was enough to draw more than 5,100.

Connecticut's governor and his first lady, sitting in orchestra seats in section four on the right side of the music shed, had come away for an evening of relaxation as the governor told this writer. He asked about the music programs of Connecticut's own Music Mountain at Falls Village. The governor inquired about the dance festival at Jacob's Pillow a few miles from Tanglewood and was told of the successful performances of the Royal Danish Ballet which we had seen in a brilliant performance a few hours before.

Programs in the music shed beginning Friday evening and continuing through Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon will be devoted almost exclusively to the music of Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky. Saturday evening's performance will present the orchestra under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, with Charles Munch conducting the full Boston Friday night and Sunday afternoon. Sunday's concert will be the annual Koussevitzky Memorial Concert and will present Isaac Stern as violin soloist.

S. M.

[140]

Music Review

Mozart at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE MOZART weekend at Tanglewood — the second week of the Berkshire Festival — ended yesterday afternoon with a program in the theater-concert hall that was a holiday for wind instruments. Charles Munch led the small select ensemble chosen from the Boston Symphony orchestra in three concertos in which wind instrumentalists were soloists. Except for the opening adagio and fugue for strings only, (K546), it was a rare opportunity for four of the principal wind instrument players to have their day at court.

It is often a common and hasty conception to assume that the wind instruments in the lower registers are clumsy and not maneuverable. Sherman Walt, the orchestra's first bassoonist, and James Stagliano, his peer in the French horns, disabused any who may have held this mistaken idea by their performances yesterday of the Mozart concertos for their respective instruments.

* * *

WALT PLAYED with an extremely round and ingratiating tone and an elegance of style. He leaped with incredible agility and shaped every phrase with consummate mastery and musicianly insight, and, in the slow movement, gave warm and caressing refinement to the delightful music.

Stagliano was equally deserving of the cordial reception he, too, received. His tone was muffled at times, but his colleagues in the orchestra gave him excellent support and allowed his smooth facility to rise effortless above their restrained accompaniment.

The program, and the Mozart Festival, ended with the Sinfonia Concertante (K 297b) in which both of the previous soloists were joined by their confreres Ralph Gomberg, principal oboe, and Gino Cioffi, principal clarinet, in the lively three-movement high-spirited galop.

* * *

THIS WAS played with no less ability and spontaneity than the music which had preceded it, except that there had been a reasonable modicum of "E flat" on the program by that time and this listener's ears were a bit surfeited. He could not fail, however, to note the virtuosity of both Mr. Gomberg and Mr. Cioffi as occassions presented themselves, and to note as well the suave flow of their more mellifluous passages.

The only music on the program in which winds were not employed was the C minor adagio and fugue. The initial and tremendous deep C with which the 'celli responded to Munch's demand presaged an imposing performance which was fulfilled during the short introductory adagio but which was dissipated and squandered in the ensuing fugue. The wonderful, compact string ensemble played the adagio with impressive tonal depth and Munch gave it massively broad strokes, but the 'celli were denied the opportunity at the start of the fugue of which they are conspicuously able, and the fast and unwarranted tempo made a scramble of what might well and easily have been a majestic procession.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Munch gave his symphonic program in the great Shed. The chamber orchestra was placed well to the rear of the Shell and the tone was projected to the unusually large audience of 5,125 with perfect amplitude.

They played the big last three symphonies, numbers 39, 40 and 41, consecutively, all the product of a few months application in 1788. In general, they follow a basic formula in structure and framework. Only the first of Saturday's program, the E flat, (K543) introduces the opening allegro with a slow, stately introduction. All the others proceed immediately to the main business at hand.

Even the instrumentation conforms to a pattern, the only deviations being the omission of oboes in the first, of trumpets in the second, the G minor (K550), and of clarinets in the C major (K551), the final one on the program. But what a plethora of melody and fresh ideas, and how far afield did his modulations and colorings and rhythmic fancy take him.

* * *

MUNCH DRIVES the orchestra and demands the utmost of the players relentlessly, and some of the repose and poise is due to his dramatic sense and some in spite of him. No matter what the propelling force and motive, the lovely music made the evening seem extremely short. There might have been a moot point concerning the advisability of placing these three symphonies on the same program. Perhaps an earlier and "smaller" one might have afforded greater diversification. We can testify our attention was held every instant of the evening.

To state that there is a similarity between different Mozart symphonies does not imply that there is any similarity in development. The ideas are as individual and as far removed, one from the other, as the poles. The E flat first movement is a gentle appealing little song in 3/4 time; the G minor a whimsical small inquiry in 4/4 time and the C major, popularly called the "Jupiter," is a dominating gruff strut with a timid feminine response. Each definite character and each goes its own way thereafter with more invention and imagination than anyone before had ever used and which no one, in those respects, has since surpassed.

* * *

THE MODULATIONS must have been incredible in Mozart's day; they are still astonishing. The rhythmic vagaries and irregularities must have been nearly insurmountable for players of the caliber which existed nearly two centuries ago; they are still high hurdles and, when taken at the pace Munch consistently sets, are not exactly apple pie. The great capacity of the Boston orchestra men, individually and in ensemble, tends to obscure and belie the intricacies. Munch, for all his violent desire to get on, is forceful and aggressively incisive. Mozart's genius is nowhere better affirmed than in these, the apogee of his symphonic writing, and in this festival where so many of the attributes necessary for the valid presentation of his work are constantly present and available.

Music of Mozart Enjoyed by 3502 At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 14—Perfect weather and the music of Mozart combined to draw 3502 persons to Tanglewood this afternoon. Charles Munch had arranged a particularly interesting program consisting of the "Adagio and Fugue in C. Minor for string orchestra." the "Concerto for Basl soon, in B Flat Major"; the "Concerto for Horn, in E Flat Major" and the "Sinfonia Concertante for Obe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon."

Brilliant Response

Dr. Munch was particularly active during the performance of the adagio and fugue and received brilliant response from the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. From the first portentous chords of the adagio to the last note of the fugue one heard a performance rich in color and emotionally intense.

Aherman Walt was the soloist in the concerto for oboe and orchestra and he scored one of the finest personal triumphs we have witnessed here. It was well deserved for he drew beautiful tones from his instrument and displayed dazzling virtuosity in the cadenzas, written by J. Walter Gutter. The concerto is a warm, lyrical work melodious and graceful. The performance drew bravos from the audience and orchestra members.

James Stagliano, who has appeared with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, was soloist in the concerto for horn. Mr. Stagliano lacks the personal magnetism of Mr. Walt, so his smooth and ingratiating performance was less communicative. The final allegro was a sparkling performance while the Romanza was sweetly sentimental.

The final work on the program was the "Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon" and in addition to Messrs. Walt and Stagliano, it also included Ralph Gomberg, oboeist, and Gino Cioffi, clarinetist, as soloists. The work is a sort of concerto grosso through the setting of the solo quartet, which is a sort of concertino against the orchestral tutti. The quartet plays more as a group than as soloists for it is only in the adagio, where the melodic line is lengthened, that each soloist has an extended phrase accompanied by his fellows. Even the long cadenza, at the close, is not used for virtuoso display. The melodic material and its development is rich in texture and it seems that every combination of colors is used during the progress of the work. There are intricate and difficult variations, many of which give opportunity for technical display. Of the 10 variations, the eighth is particularly interesting as it provides a duet by the bassoon and an ornamental oboe in arpeggios.

The performance was exceptionally vital and was a fitting conclusion to this Mozart festival which has been outstanding for fine performances.

The week-end concerts have drawn a total of 11,327 persons to Tanglewood. The chamber music recital last Wednesday was attended by 1200 persons and the student orchestra a like number.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., MONDAY, JULY 15, 1957

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 42,535

JUL 20 1957

MUSIC

Thousands Treated to Fine Concerts at Berkshire Festival

By ALFRED W. BURKE

TANGLEWOOD—Over the past two week-ends the thousands in attendance at this year's Berkshire Festival, were treated to some of the finest concerts ever recorded in America's fast growing musical history. The first Saturday, an evening of Bach, brought to those present the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth, of the magnificent Brandenburg line.

This was an evening not only of superb entertainment, but another of the countless proofs that players of the Boston Symphony both individually, and in ensemble, are the finest in the world of instrumental performance. On this occasion one can in brief say that "they had it."

The entire program as conducted by Charles Munch was a tremendous success in the artistic sense. It seems that somehow he approaches a performance somewhat different than in years past.

In each of the Concerti the individual sections unfolded each passage with a touch of individuality while still making it a part of the entire motif structure.

There was sureness. This did much to retain both the styling of Bach and the intended simplicity of the work. One experienced a tonal effect, color in harmonic blend and a medium of interpretive expression that enabled the different pieces to live again.

The individual solo list was impressive both in name and performance. Richard Burgin, the most brilliant first chair man in symphonic history, Roger Boisin, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ralph Gomberg, and James Pappoutskis did much in recording another immortal evening of Berkshire history.

On Sunday "The Passion According to St. Matthew" with soloists Adele Addision, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, Donald Gramm, bass and James Joyce, bass; assisted by the Harvard and Radcliffe Choral groups provided another inspiring program.

Aiding splendidly as individual instrumentalists were Daniel Pinkham, harpsichord, Alfred Nash Patterson, organ and Alfred Zighera, viola da gamba.

Music from the pen of Mozart made up the program for last Saturday evening. The E Flat Major, the G Minor, K. 550 and the C Major (Jupiter) made up the pattern. Charles Munch again scored a major victory for himself.

However, he possesses that wonderful trait of understanding just how a conductor achieves such a peak. As always, he was most sincere in his desire to share the glories that were his with the orchestra membership.

Mozart is all too often taken for granted. Though one hears these symphonies done often, and at times quite well, it remains for the Boston orchestra to paint the true picture. This trait of making a man's music live again seems to be the lot of this group on every occasion.

It would be difficult to pick which of the three went off best. We are more than partial to Mozart. However, to us the opening, in E Flat carried the evening's honors.

Sunday afternoon, again an occasion marked Mozart brought to the stage a line of first class solo artists. Hearing the seldom done Concerto for Bassoon, Concerto for Horn and Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn and basoon made the afternoon another in the memorable line.

Sherman Walt, bassoon; James Stagliano, horn; Gino Cioffi, clarinet were the incomparable artists listed. The audience showered waves and waves of applause during the entire concert. As a brief example—how often does one hear applause between movements of a symphony or concerto?

This, probably more than any think else, proved the quality of the days happenings. The rare combine of music and Tanglewood seem to be making all of this a habit for which the entire world can be well proud of.

TOWN TIMES (WATERTOWN, CONN.), JULY 18, 1957

C Minor Mass Is Highlight In July 12 Berkshire Festival

The Berkshire Festival chorus and soloists gave a magnificent performance of the Mozart C Minor Mass at the July 12 concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

Under the direction of Hugh Ross, the orchestra and chorus combined for a beautiful and reverent performance of the great work in the Theatre-Concert Hall there. Soloists for the event were Saramae Endich, soprano, who is to be commended for her lovely performance, particularly in the Angus Dei solo; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, who presented a fine performance in the Credo; the always-excellent John McCollum, tenor; and Fague Springmann, bass.

Hugh Ross also conducted the orchestra and chorus in "Regina Coeli" K. 276, and the simple and beautiful "Ave Verum Corpus" K. 618.

Prior to intermission, the Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, presented the Mozart Divertimento in D Major, K. 136; Serenade in C Minor for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns and Two Bassoons, K. 388, an intriguing and well-done piece; and the ever popular Symphony in D Major K. 385, the "Haffner" Symphony. Dr. Munch was loudly applauded for his work on the podium, and returned to face the audience several times.

July 13

Dr. Munch again won a vigorous accolade from the crowd on the following night, with his dynamic leadership of the exciting Symphony in C Major, K. 551, the "Jupiter" Symphony. The first programmed work was the Symphony in E flat major, K. 543, and both the orchestra and Dr. Munch really dug into this one with zest and esprit. In the Symphony in G. Minor, K. 550, we feel conductor and orchestra illustrated a considerable degree of empathy with Mozart's work, with Munch taking command of the musicians to lead them to new heights of achievement.

Coming Events

On Friday, the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will present Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes." Tchaikovsky's Roccoco Variations for Cello and Orchestra featuring Samuel Mayes and the "Pathetique" symphony.

On Saturday, Pierre Monteux as guest conductor will lead the orchestra in Mendelssohn's "Fingals Cave Overture," the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 5 and Stravinsky's "Le Sacre du Printemps."

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. will see a Music Shed performance of Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, and the Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum" in the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, with Charles Munch conducting. The Friday and Saturday performances are at 8:30 p.m. at Tanglewood, located in Lenox, Mass.

L. F. M.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 15 1957

Mozart Music at Tanglewood

Charles Munch and Hugh Ross on Podium

By Jules Wolffers
Lenox, Mass.

Back in the days when Serge Koussevitzky initiated the series of concerts for chamber orchestra as a sort of intimate prelude to the Berkshire Festival proper, these were called the Bach-Mozart concerts. Several changes have taken place since Charles Munch assumed the helm. As if to emphasize the increasing popularity of chamber music, the relatively small Theater-Concert Hall has been arranged to make the music accessible to outside listeners.

This past weekend an acoustic improvement resulted from the addition of a movable wall that closes off the stage from the rather deep backstage. Everyone seemed quite happy with the new arrangement, except possibly the Berkshire Music Center students who have been privileged to sit in this backstage area where they had an unrivaled view of the conductor.

The students now hear almost as well as ever, since there is plenty of room for the music to sound around and over the new partition. But visually the effect must be blank indeed. However, there is a ray of light. It is understood that if the experiment is a success, a transparent material will be used so that the students once again will be able to see as well as to hear.

Another change has been the growing use of the vast Shed for these chamber concerts, as well as for those employing the full orchestra. Some of the concerts are moved over bodily, as happened last Saturday night when almost every seat in the Shed was taken with several hundred more listeners on the lawns.

* * *

This summer, Mr. Munch has gone back to the Bach-Mozart pattern with three concerts devoted to each composer, Bach the opening weekend and Mozart this past Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. One hopes this pattern will be repeated in the future. Both composers offer an almost inexhaustible wealth of material, much of which is rarely performed. Skillfully mingling the familiar with the unfamiliar, Mr. Munch gave his hearers a veritable feast of Mozartiana.

Friday's program opened with the charming and graceful Divertimento in D major for Strings, K.136, written when the composer was 16. No matter how often one hears Mozart's youthful works, one always observes with a shock of astonishment how well he wrote during his childhood and adolescence. Played by the splendid Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians with zest and clarity, the Divertimento fairly sparkled under the conductor's appreciative enthusiasm.

The more mature Serenade in C minor, for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns, and Two Bassoons, K. 388, was also splendidly performed. This work achieves almost symphonic proportions and depth. There were times one had to count the musicians on stage to assure oneself that there were indeed only eight players involved.

Strings and winds were reunited for the Symphony in D major, the "Haffner," K. 385, done by conductor and musicians with all the felicity this light but great music deserves.

After the intermission Hugh Ross came on stage to conduct the Festival Chorus through three religious works accompanied by the orchestra and enlisting the services of Saramae Endich, soprano, Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springman, bass, all able and efficient soloists. The scores, however, drew most attention to the more extensive soprano contributions.

The "Regina Coeli," K. 276, "Ave, Verum Corpus," K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337, were performed in excellent style under the conductor's knowing and experienced direction.

Mr. Munch devoted Saturday's concert to that great and memorable trio of symphonies, all written in the single summer of the year 1788—the E-flat major, K. 543, the G minor, K. 550, and the C major, the so-called "Jupiter," K. 551.

* * *

If one were to choose among the three, it was the performance of the G minor which achieved the best results, although all were indeed well done. The conductor's forward-driving direction sometimes became a little impatient with the flowing Andante cantabile of the "Jupiter" and not to the music's advantage; but barring this occasional overeagerness, the concert was a tribute to conductor and to the players from start to finish.

Sunday's concert returned to the Theater-Concert Hall for the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546; the Concerto for Bassoon in B-flat major, K. 191, with Sherman Walt as soloist; the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major, K. 495, with James Stagliano as soloist; and the Sinfonia Concertante, for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon, K. 297B, with Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet, joining the Messrs. Stagliano and Walt, to bring the weekend to a close.

Second Thoughts On Music

Mozart Concerts Reveal Various Facets of His Art

Symphonies, Concerts, Mass Featured in Three Performances at Tanglewood; Lipkin and Berkowitz Heard in Two Schubert Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 20—The music of Mozart was well served by Charles Munch and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during last week end, which was devoted exclusively to the music of the Salzburg master. Indeed, the performances drew larger audiences than did the Bach concerts, with more than 11,000 people attending the three performances.

Many facets of the composer's art were revealed, but not a single inkling was given to show his work in opera, not even an overture. However, there was some fine singing accomplished by the Festival Chorus, particularly in the Motet "Ave Verum Corpus" and the Mass in C mavantage the fine voices of Sarjor which also employed to advantage Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, bass.

Mr. Munch opened the first concert with the enchanting "Divertimento in D major," for string orchestra, following this with a splendid reading of the "Serenade" in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons. This, in turn, was followed by a well planned performance of the "Haffner" symphony.

Three Symphonies

The second program of the Mozort cycle, and perhaps the most popular, was devoted to the last three symphonies and into these great works Mr. Munch and the orchestra put all their technical and interpretive skills. The result was magnificent. Performances were finely detailed, varied and touched with genius.

This final program, last Sunday, was, to this listener, the most interesting for it provided opportunity to hear works not often performed. For example, Sherman Walt was soloist in the Concerto for bassoon, in B flat major, and his performance won him one of the finest personal triumphs we have witnessed here. It was fully deserved. He draws a beautiful tone from his instrument, no matter what the register. He has a fabulous technique and interpretive sensitivity. The concerto is a lovely work, lyrical and of rich texture.

Another interesting work was the Concerto for horn in E flat major. This was played by James Stagliano, who played with our Springfield Symphony Orchestra a few years ago. Mr. Stagliano is a fine musician and gave the music its due.

Mr. Munch opened the program with a solid performance of the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra. The concluding number was the lengthy and sometimes exciting "Sinfonia Concertante" for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon. In this work, Messrs. Walt and Stagliano were joined by Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet. The work is a concerto grosso, with the solo quartet an integral part of the whole. Only rarely do the soloist have extended passage where virtuosity may be revealed.

Chamber Music Concert

The second chamber music concert was a gem. It was made up of piano duets and Brahms' "Liebeslieder" Waltzes, Op. 52 and the finale of "Neuer Liebeslieder" Waltzes, Op. 65. The solo quartet included Miss Endich, Florence Kopleff, Mr. McCollum and Donald Gramm.

When two fine pianists like Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz get together, the results are always interesting. They joined forces in two seldom-heard Schubert works for four hands, the "Variations on an Original Theme," in A flat major and the "Fantasy" in F minor. For added interest they chose Hindemith's "Sonata 1938." While it was evident that the pianist had not played together for any length of time, their playing was marked by an intimate enjoyment which reached the audience. The same may be noted of the soloists in the waltzes. Messrs. Berkowitz and Lipkin were admireable pianists in the Brahms opus.

Afternoon Concert

This afternoon at 2.30 Mr. Munch and the full complement of Boston players will play the annual concert in memory of will include the first performance here of Stravinsky's controversial Serge Koussevitzky. The program new work "Canticum Sacrum;" Tchaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and the same composer's violin concerto, played by Isaac Stern.

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS. JULY 21 1957

NEWS OF MUSIC

Mozart Fans Pack Hall at Tanglewood

By JAMES G. DEANE

LENOX, Mass.—Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, who enjoyed only fleeting popular esteem in his brief lifetime, would have been gratified by the show of public regard which was tendered his music a few days ago in the verdant Berkshire Hills.

Last week end was a Mozart week end at Tanglewood, the famous summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor Charles Munch and his men devoted three full concerts to works of the most celebrated of Salzburg's sons.

From the standpoint of public reaction, the triple-header could hardly have been more successful. Two of the programs, in the rustic, enclosed theater-concert hall seating 1,200, were far more than sellouts, with more rapt enthusiasts clustered on the green lawn outside than within. The third, held in the giant open-air shed, drew more than 5,000 persons.

The enthusiasm was apparent in attentiveness and applause, as well as at the boxoffice. One might accurately say, in Broadway parlance, that the week-end was a smash.

Limited Orchestra Used

The three great final symphonies which Mozart dashed off in an incredibly short few weeks near the end of his career made up the program played in the shed. Dr. Munch used a reduced orchestra (there were only two, instead of the BSO's regular eight, double-basses).

The Munch style of Mozart, to judge at least by one Berkshire newspaper reviewer, does not appeal to everyone. His interpretations tended to extreme briskness, thus being quite different from what one is used to hearing from conductors of the Viennese school, such as Bruno Walter. A hearer might have been reminded of Toscanini, except for a Munch habit—which the late maestro would certainly have frowned upon—of perceptibly slowing things at certain almost predictable points.

This habit, along with a general air of slightly nervous tension, was in evidence in both the E flat and G minor symphonies. As the "Jupiter," things seemed more even and relaxed. Perhaps this was traceable partly to an incident just before the start, when two youthful music lovers returned late to front-row seats and drew a slightly ironic but smiling bow from the conductor, which in turn drew a large laugh from the audience.

Many Lounged Outside

Even with the small-sized orchestra the quality of the shed's acoustics was apparently sufficient to carry the beguiling Mozartian harmonies out to the hundreds of hearers lounging comfortably on blankets on the tree-bordered grounds. At the end many hearers cheered.

For experienced Mozart-listeners the other two concerts held more interest. The first opened with a little three-movement work for strings in D, 136 in the Koechel catalogue, dating from Mozart's teens and sometimes labeled a symphony, sometimes a divertimento and sometimes a quartet. (It was apparently designed to meet whatever instrumental circumstances happened to crop up.) The work sounds like that of a 16-year-old, but in this case of course a very talented one, and the Boston players performed it lustrously.

Next on the program came the much later, and superb, C minor serenade, K. 388, in which the BSO's famous wind section took the spotlight, and after this the "Haffner" symphony, which also was originated as a serenade rather than a Beethovenian, formal symphony. The eight performers gave a model demonstration of ensemble in the wind serenade, dwelling, however, on its felicities more than on the underlying somber elements. The "Haffner" went, rather unfortunately, at breakneck speed, giving less opportunity than one would have liked to savor it fully.

Three Church Works

In the second half of the program a student chorus from the Berkshire Music Center was heard under Hugh Ross in three church works—the "Regina Coeli" K. 276, the familiar "Ave Verum Corpus" and the Mass in C, K. 337. The mass, last of 17 written in Salzburg, is a striking, though not lengthy, score in which jubilation is tempered with more profound emotions. The student singers showed splendid vigor and discipline. An electronic organ, the only kind available, was often scarcely audible, a misfortune since the organ occupies a place of special prominence in this work. Dr. Munch chose to omit trombones indicated in the manuscript.

Saramae Endich, an alumnus of the music center, sang the soprano solo in the Agnus Die prettily. The other vocal soloist — Majorie Campagna-Pinto, John McCollum and Fague Springmann—had relatively little individually to do but did that competently.

Standout Solo Work

The spectacular solo performances came at the second indoor concert. Sherman Walt managed to coax remarkably cultivated sounds out of a rather uncultivated device, the bassoon, in the concerto for that instrument. James Stagliano, the BSO's well-known first hornist, chalked up an even more notable victory over mechanical obstacles in the rollicking final horn concerto. And both these accomplished gentlemen joined with oboist Ralph Gomberg and clarinetist Gino Cioffi in the final tour de force, the wonderful wind Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297b.

In these works there was none of the hurry and tenseness that often seemed present in the purely orchestral works of the shed concert. The accompaniments were crisp and crystalline, and there was a fine rapport between orchestra and soloists. The performances drew prolonged applause.

The C minor adagio and fugue, at the outset of the program, gave the string players their chance to shine, and [illegible] for a few tentative [illegible] they took full advantage of the opportunity. [illegible] too, seemed to

ing a portion of the Matthew Passion which also was given in the shed. This week end the full orchestra, including players who for the first two weeks were back in Boston giving the traditional open-air Esplanade Concerts, has moved into the shed full time for the remainder of the season's major events.

Subsequent Plans

Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky are the central creative figures at the moment. Next week end the hero will be Berlioz, with the feature a Saturday night performance of the rarely heard Biblical oratorio, "L'Enfance du Christ." Subsequent week ends will be devoted to music primarily of Brahms and Beethoven.

This is the first Tanglewood season in which concerts of the Bach-Mozart cycle have expanded into the shed. The growing pressure of numbers which has been instrumental in bringing this about is welcome, of cource, to the festival's financial backers. Manager Thomas D. Perry credits part of this growth to the opening of a new toll road linking the Berkshires with Boston, from where, oddly enough, only a minority of Tanglewood enthusiasts have come in the past.

Now, with hours slashed off driving time, Tanglewood officials expect a steadily rising stream of Bay State concertgoers.

But it is also evident that zart has something to do h it. And maybe the ltiplying Mozart lovers inspire even more gran- se Mozartian celebrations the summers to come.

DOVER, N. J.
LAKE LAND NEWS
Circ. W. 6,728

JUL 18 1957

MAIN STREET

The Annual Picnic of the Deutscher Schul Gesang Verein, Inc., will be held at Germania Park, Sunday. The doors open at 12 noon. A band concert will be given by the Dover Gutter Band and hot meals will be served. Everyone is welcome.

Dover Moose Lodge 541, will hold its 4th annual Kiddies' Party, Sunday at the Moose Lodge, 431 E. Blackwell St. Free rides and refreshments will be provided.

Harold Flinn, editor of the popular column "Music Makers," is taking a vacation holiday. He writes that Saturday night he attended the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., for an all-Mozart program. He is visiting at the Music Inn.

[141]

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 15 1957

Mozart Music at Tanglewood

Charles Munch and Hugh Ross on Podium

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

Back in the days when Serge Koussevitzky initiated the series of concerts for chamber orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, those were called Mozart concerts. Several changes have taken place since Charles Munch assumed the baton. As if to emphasize the growing popularity of chamber music, the relatively small Theater-Concert Hall has been replaced to make the music accessible to outside listeners.

The past weekend an acoustic improvement resulted from the addition of a movable wall that closes off the stage from the rather deep backstage. Everyone seemed quite happy with the new arrangement, except possibly the Berkshire Music Center students who have been privileged to sit in this backstage area where they had an unrivaled view of the conductor.

The students now hear almost as well as ever, since there is plenty of room for the music to sound around and over the new partition. But visually the effect must be blank indeed. However, there is a ray of light. It is understood that if the experiment is a success, a transparent material will be used so that the students once again will be able to see as well as to hear.

Another change has been the growing use of the vast Shed for these chamber concerts, as well as for those enploying the full orchestra. Some of the concerts are moved over bodily, as happened last Saturday night when almost every seat in the Shed was taken with several hundred more listeners on the lawns.

* * *

This summer, Mr. Munch has gone back to the Bach-Mozart pattern with three concerts devoted to each composer, Bach the opening weekend and Mozart this past Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. One hopes this pattern will be repeated in the future. Both composers offer an almost inexhaustible wealth of material, much of which is rarely performed. Skillfully mingling the familiar with the unfamiliar, Mr. Munch gave his hearers a veritable feast of Mozartiana.

Friday's program opened with the charming and graceful Divertimento in D major for Strings, K.136, written when the composer was 16. No matter how often one hears Mozart's youthful works, one always observes with a shock of astonishment how well he wrote during his childhood and adolescence. Played by the splendid Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians with zest and clarity, the Divertimento fairly sparkled under the conductor's appreciative enthusiasm.

The more mature Serenade in C minor, for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns, and Two Bassoons, K. 388, was also splendidly performed. This work achieves almost symphonic proportions and depth. There were times one had to count the musicians on stage to assure oneself that there were indeed only eight players involved.

Strings and winds were reunited for the Symphony in D major, the "Haffner," K. 385, done by conductor and musicians with all the felicity this light but great music deserves.

After the intermission Hugh Ross came on stage to conduct the Festival Chorus through three religious works accompanied by the orchestra and enlisting the services of Saramae Endich, soprano, Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springman, bass, all able and efficient soloists. The scores, however, drew most attention to the more extensive soprano contributions.

The "Regina Coeli," K. 276, "Ave, Verum Corpus," K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337, were performed in excellent style under the conductor's knowing and experienced direction.

Mr. Munch devoted Saturday's concert to that great and memorable trio of symphonies, all written in the single summer of the year 1788—the E-flat major, K. 543, the G minor, K. 550, and the C major, the so-called "Jupiter," K. 551.

* * *

If one were to choose among the three, it was the performance of the G minor which achieved the best results, although all were indeed well done. The conductor's forward-driving direction sometimes became a little impatient with the flowing Andante cantabile of the "Jupiter" and not to the music's advantage; but barring this occasional overeagerness, the concert was a tribute to conductor and to the players from start to finish.

Sunday's concert returned to the Theater-Concert Hall for the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546; the Concerto for Bassoon in B-flat major, K. 191, with Sherman Walt as soloist; the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major, K. 495, with James Stagliano as soloist; and the Sinfonia Concertante, for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon, K. 297B, with Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet, joining the Messrs. Stagliano and Walt, to bring the weekend to a close.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. REPUBLICAN. SUNDAY JULY 21 1957

Second Thoughts On Music

Mozart Concerts Reveal Various Facets of His Art

Symphonies, Concerts, Mass Featured in Three Performances at Tanglewood; Lipkin and Berkowitz Heard in Two Schubert Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 20—The music of Mozart was well served by Charles Munch and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during last week end, which was devoted exclusively to the music of the Salzburg master. Indeed, the performances drew larger audiences than did the Bach concerts, with more than 11,000 people attending the three performances.

Many facets of the composer's art were revealed, but not a single inkling was given to show his work in opera, not even an overture. However, there was some fine singing accomplished by the Festival Chorus, particularly in the Motet "Ave Verum Corpus" and the Mass in C-maVantage the fine voices of Sarjor which also employed to adamae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, bass.

Mr. Munch opened the first concert with the enchanting "Divertimento in D major," for string orchestra, following this with a splendid reading of the "Serenade" in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons. This, in turn, was followed by a well planned performance of the "Haffner" symphony.

Three Symphonies

The second program of the Mozort cycle, and perhaps the most popular, was devoted to the last three symphonies and into these great works Mr. Munch and the orchestra put all their technical and interpretive skills. The result was magnificent. Performances were finely detailed, varied and touched with genius.

The final program, last Sunday, was, to this listener, the most interesting for it provided opportunity to hear works not often performed. For example, Sherman Walt was soloist in the Concerto for bassoon, in B flat major and his performance won him one of the finest personal triumphs we have witnessed here. It was fully deserved. He draws a beautiful tone from his instrument, no matter what the register. He has a fabulous teshnique and interpretive sensitivity. The concerto is a lovely work, lyrical and of rich texture.

Another interesting work was the Concerto for horn in E flat major. This was played by James Stagliano, who played with our Springfield Symphony Orchestra a few years ago. Mr. Stagliano is a fine musician and gave the music its due.

Mr. Munch opened the program with a solid performance of the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra. The concluding number was the lengthy and sometimes exciting "Sinfonia Concertante" for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon. In this work, Messrs. Walt and Stagliano were joined by Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet. The work is a concerto grosso, with the solo quartet an integral part of the whole. Only rarely do the soloist have extended passage where virtuosity may be revealed.

Chamber Music Concert

The second chamber music concert was a gem. It was made up of piano duets and Brahms' "Liebeslieder" Waltzes, Op. 52 and the finale of "Neuer Liebeslieder" Waltzes, Op. 65. The solo quartet included Miss Endich, Florence Kopleff, Mr. McCollum and Donald Gramm.

When two fine pianists like Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz get together, the results are always interesting. They joined forces in two seldom-heard Schubert works for four hands, the "Variations on an Orignal Theme," in A flat major and the "Fantasy" in F minor. For added interest they chose Hindemith's "Sonata 1938." While it was evident that the pianist had not played together for any length of time, their playing was marked by an intimate enjoyment which reached the audience. The same may be noted of the soloists in the waltzes. Messrs Berkowitz and Lipkin were admireable pianists in the Brahms opus.

Afternoon Concert

This afternoon at 2.30 Mr. Munch and the full complement of Boston players will play the annual concert in memory of will include the first performance here of Stravinsky's controversial Serge Koussevitzky. The program new work "Canticum Sacrum;" Tchaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and the same composer's violin concerto, played by Isaac Stern.

NEWS OF MUSIC

Mozart Fans Pack Hall at Tanglewood

By JAMES G. DEANE

LENOX, Mass.—Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, who enjoyed only fleeting popular esteem in his brief lifetime, would have been gratified by the show of public regard which was tendered his music a few days ago in the verdant Berkshire Hills.

Last week end was a Mozart week end at Tanglewood, the famous summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor Charles Munch and his men devoted three full concerts to works of the most celebrated of Salzburg's sons.

From the standpoint of public reaction, the triple-header could hardly have been more successful. Two of the programs, in the rustic, enclosed theater-concert hall seating 1,200, were far more than sellouts, with more rapt enthusiasts clustered on the green lawn outside than within. The third, held in the giant open-air shed, drew more than 5,000 persons.

The enthusiasm was apparent in attentiveness and applause, as well as at the boxoffice. One might accurately say, in Broadway parlance, that the week-end was a smash.

Limited Orchestra Used

The three great final symphonies which Mozart dashed off in an incredibly short few weeks near the end of his career made up the program played in the shed. Dr. Munch used a reduced orchestra (there were only two, instead of the BSO's regular eight, double-basses).

The Munch style of Mozart, to judge at least by one Berkshire newspaper reviewer, does not appeal to everyone. His interpretations tended to extreme briskness, thus being quite different from what one is used to hearing from conductors of the Viennese school, such as Bruno Walter. A hearer might have been reminded of Toscanini, except for a Munch habit—which the late maestro would certainly have frowned upon—of perceptibly slowing things at certain almost predictable points.

This habit, along with a general air of slightly nervous tension, was in evidence in both the E flat and G minor symphonies. In the "Jupiter," things seemed more even and relaxed. Perhaps this was traceable partly to an incident just before the start, when two youthful music lovers returned late to front-row seats and drew a slightly ironic but smiling bow from the conductor, which in turn drew a large laugh from the audience.

Many Lounged Outside

Even with the small-sized orchestra the quality of the shed's acoustics was apparently sufficient to carry the beguiling Mozartian harmonies out to the hundreds of hearers lounging comfortably on blankets on the tree-bordered grounds. At the end many hearers cheered.

For experienced Mozart-listeners the other two concerts held more interest. The first opened with a little three-movement work for strings in D, 136 in the Koechel catalogue, dating from Mozart's teens and sometimes labeled a symphony, sometimes a divertimento and sometimes a quartet. (It was apparently designed to meet whatever instrumental circumstances happened to crop up.) The work sounds like that of a 16-year-old, but in this case of course a very talented one, and the Boston players performed it lustrously.

Next on the program came the much later, and superb, C minor serenade, K. 388, in which the BSO's famous wind section took the spotlight, and after this the "Haffner" symphony, which also was originated as a serenade rather than a Beethovenian, formal symphony. The eight performers gave a model demonstration of ensemble in the wind serenade, dwelling, however, on its felicities more than on the underlying somber elements. The "Haffner" went, rather unfortunately, at breakneck speed, giving less opportunity than one would have liked to savor it fully.

Three Church Works

In the second half of the program a student chorus from the Berkshire Music Center was heard under Hugh Ross in three church works—the "Regina Coeli" K. 276, the familiar "Ave Verum Corpus" and the Mass in C, K. 337. The mass, last of 17 written in Salzburg, is a striking, though not lengthy, score in which jubilation is tempered with more profound emotions. The student singers showed splendid vigor and discipline. An electronic organ, the only kind available, was often scarcely audible, a misfortune since the organ occupies a place of special prominence in this work. Dr. Munch chose to omit trombones indicated in the manuscript.

Saramae Endich, an alumnus of the music center, sang the soprano solo in the Agnus Die prettily. The other vocal soloist — Majorie Campagna-Pinto, John McCollum and Fague Springmann—had relatively little individually to do but did that competently.

Standout Solo Work

The spectacular solo performances came at the second indoor concert. Sherman Walt managed to coax remarkably cultivated sounds out of a rather uncultivated device, the bassoon, in the concerto for that instrument. James Stagliano, the BSO's well-known first hornist, chalked up an even more notable victory over mechanical obstacles in the rollicking final horn concerto. And both these accomplished gentlemen joined with oboist Ralph Gomberg and clarinetist Gino Cioffi in the final tour de force, the wonderful wind Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297b.

In these works there was none of the hurry and tenseness that often seemed present in the purely orchestral works of the shed concert. The accompaniments were crisp and crystalline, and there was a fine rapport between orchestra and soloists. The performances drew prolonged applause.

The C minor adagio and fugue, at the outset of the program, gave the string players their chance to shine, and even for a few tentative moments they took full advantage of the opportunity. Dr. Munch, too, seemed to sense the profundities of this remarkable, though brief, work.

Three all-Bach concerts inaugurated this summer's festival, one of them featuring a portion of the Matthew Passion which also was given in the shed. This week end the full orchestra, including players who for the first two weeks were back in Boston giving the traditional open-air Esplanade Concerts, has moved into the shed full time for the remainder of the season's major events.

Subsequent Plans

Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky are the central creative figures at the moment. Next week end the hero will be Berlioz, with the feature a Saturday night performance of the rarely heard Biblical oratorio, "L'Enfance du Christ." Subsequent week ends will be devoted to music primarily of Brahms and Beethoven.

This is the first Tanglewood season in which concerts of the Bach-Mozart cycle have expanded into the shed. The growing pressure of numbers which has been instrumental in bringing this about is welcome, of cource, to the festival's financial backers. Manager Thomas D. Perry credits part of this growth to the opening of a new toll road linking the Berkshires with Boston, from where, oddly enough, only a minority of Tanglewood enthusiasts have come in the past.

Now, with hours slashed off driving time, Tanglewood officials expect a steadily rising stream of Bay State concertgoers.

But it is also evident that Mozart has something to do with it. And maybe the multiplying Mozart lovers will inspire even more grandiose Mozartian celebrations in the summers to come.

MAIN STREET

The Annual Picnic of the Deutscher Schul Gesang Verein, Inc., will be held at Germania Park, Sunday. The doors open at 12 noon. A band concert will be given by the Dover Gutter Band and hot meals will be served. Everyone is welcome.

Dover Moose Lodge 541, will hold its 4th annual Kiddies' Party, Sunday at the Moose Lodge, 431 E. Blackwell St. Free rides and refreshments will be provided.

Harold Flemig, author of the popular column "Music Makers," is taking a vacation's holiday. He writes that Saturday night he attended the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., for an all-Mozart program. He is visiting at the Music Inn.

[141]

TIGHT BINDING

[141]

ed to Fine shire Festival

BURKE

wo week-ends the thousands in festival, were treated to some in America's fast growing an evening of Bach, brought hird, Fourth and Sixth, of the h Patterson, organ and Al- Zighera, viola da gamba.

usic from the pen of Mozart e up the program for last urday evening. The E Flat or, the G Minor, K. 550 and C Major (Jupiter) made up pattern. Charles Munch again ed a major victory for him.

owever, he possesses that rierful trait of understand- just how a conductor eves such a peak. As always, was most sincere in his desire hare the glories that were with the orchestra memberozart is all too often taken for ted. Though one hears these honies done often, and at quite well, it remains for Boston orchestra to paint the picture. This trait of making n's music live again seems the lot of this group on occasion.

would be difficult to pick of the three went off best. re more than partial to rt. However, to us the ng, in E Flat carried the g's honors.

day afternoon, again an oc- marked Mozart brought stage a line of first solo artists. Hearing eldom done Concerto for on, Concerto for Horn and nia Concertante, for oboe, et, horn and basoon made afternoon another in the rable line.

rman Walt, bassoon; James ano; horn; Gino Cioffi, t were the incomparable listed. The audience red waves and waves of se during the entire con- As a brief example—how does one hear applause be- movements of a sym- or concerto?

probably more than any- else, proved the quality of s happenings. The rare e of music and Tanglewood o be making all of this a for which the entire world well proud of.

), JULY 18, 1957

July 13

. Munch again won a vigor- accolade from the crowd on following night, with his dy- c leadership of the exciting phony in C Major, K. 551, the iter" Symphony. The first rammed work was the Sym- y in E flat major, K. 543, and the orchestra and Dr. Munch dug into this one with zest sprit. In the Symphony in G. , K. 550, we feel conductor rchestra illustrated a consid- degree of empathy with t's work, with Munch taking and of the musicians to lead to new heights of achieve-

Coming Events

Friday, the full Boston Sym- Orchestra under the direc- Charles Munch will present nsky's "Jeu de Cartes," ovsky's Roccoco Variations llo and Orchestra featuring Mayes and the "Pathe- ymphony.

Saturday, Pierre Monteux as conductor will lead the or- in Mendelssohn's "Fingals Overture," the Tchaikovsky ony No. 5 and Stravinsky's cre du Printemps."

uy at 2:30 p.m. will see a hed performance of Tchai- s "Romeo and Juliet" and Concerto with Isaac Stern, Stravinsky "Canticum Sa- n the Koussevitzky Memo- cert, with Charles Munch ng. The Friday and Sat- erformances are at 8:30 Tanglewood, located in Mass.

L. F. M.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 15 1957

Mozart Music at Tanglewood

Charles Munch and Hugh Ross on Podium

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

Back in the days when Serge Koussevitzky initiated the series of concerts for chamber orchestra as a sort of intimate prelude to the Berkshire Festival proper, these were called the Bach-Mozart concerts. Several changes have taken place since Charles Munch assumed the reins. As if to emphasize the growing popularity of chamber music, the relatively small Theater-Concert Hall has been arranged to make the music accessible to outside listeners.

This past weekend an acoustic improvement resulted from the addition of a movable wall that closes off the stage from the rather deep backstage. Everyone seemed quite happy with the new arrangement, except possibly the Berkshire Music Center students who have been privileged to sit in this backstage area where they had an unrivaled view of the conductor.

The students now hear almost as well as ever, since there is plenty of room for the music to sound around and over the new partition. But visually the effect must be blank indeed. However, there is a ray of light. It is understood that if the experiment is a success, a transparent material will be used so that the students once again will be able to see as well as to hear.

Another change has been the growing use of the vast Shed for these chamber concerts, as well as for those employing the full orchestra. Some of the concerts are moved over bodily, as happened last Saturday night when almost every seat in the Shed was taken with several hundred more listeners on the lawns.

♪ ♪ ♪

This summer, Mr. Munch has gone back to the Bach-Mozart pattern with three concerts devoted to each composer, Bach the opening weekend and Mozart this past Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. One hopes this pattern will be repeated in the future. Both composers offer an almost inexhaustible wealth of material, much of which is rarely performed. Skillfully mingling the familiar with the unfamiliar, Mr. Munch gave his hearers a veritable feast of Mozartiana.

Friday's program opened with the charming and graceful Divertimento in D major for Strings, K.136, written when the composer was 16. No matter how often one hears Mozart's youthful works, one always observes with a shock of astonishment how well he wrote during his childhood and adolescence. Played by the splendid Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians with zest and clarity, the Divertimento fairly sparkled under the conductor's appreciative enthusiasm.

The more mature Serenade in C minor, for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns, and Two Bassoons, K. 388, was also splendidly performed. This work achieves almost symphonic proportions and depth. There were times one had to count the musicians on stage to assure oneself that there were indeed only eight players involved.

Strings and winds were reunited for the Symphony in D major, the "Haffner," K. 385, done by conductor and musicians with all the felicity this light but great music deserves.

After the intermission Hugh Ross came on stage to conduct the Festival Chorus through three religious works accompanied by the orchestra and enlisting the services of Saramae Endich, soprano, Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springman, bass, all able and efficient soloists. The scores, however, drew most attention to the more extensive soprano contributions.

The "Regina Coeli," K. 276, "Ave, Verum Corpus," K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337, were performed in excellent style under the conductor's knowing and experienced direction.

Mr. Munch devoted Saturday's concert to that great and memorable trio of symphonies, all written in the single summer of the year 1788—the E-flat major, K. 543, the G minor, K. 550, and the C major, the so-called "Jupiter," K. 551.

♪ ♪ ♪

If one were to choose among the three, it was the performance of the G minor which achieved the best results, although all were indeed well done. The conductor's forward-driving direction sometimes became a little impatient with the flowing Andante cantabile of the "Jupiter" and not to the music's advantage; but barring this occasional overeagerness, the concert was a tribute to conductor and to the players from start to finish.

Sunday's concert returned to the Theater-Concert Hall for the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546; the Concerto for Bassoon in B-flat major, K. 191, with Sherman Walt as soloist; the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major, K. 495, with James Stagliano as soloist; and the Sinfonia Concertante, for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon, K. 297B, with Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet, joining the Messrs. Stagliano and Walt, to bring the weekend to a close.

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 21 1957

Second Thoughts On Music

Mozart Concerts Reveal Various Facets of His Art

Symphonies, Concerts, Mass Featured in Three Performances at Tanglewood; Lipkin and Berkowitz Heard in Two Schubert Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 20—The music of Mozart was well served by Charles Munch and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during last week end, which was devoted exclusively to the music of the Salzburg master. Indeed, the performances drew larger audiences than did the Bach concerts, with more than 11,000 people attending the three performances.

Many facets of the composer's art were revealed, but not a single inkling was given to show his work in opera, not even an overture. However, there was some fine singing accomplished by the Festival Chorus, particularly in the Motet "Ave Verum Corpus" and the Mass in C major which also employed to advantage the fine voices of Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, bass.

Mr. Munch opened the first concert with the enchanting "Divertimento in D major," for string orchestra, following this with a splendid reading of the "Serenade" in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons. This, in turn, was followed by a well planned performance of the "Haffner" symphony.

Three Symphonies

The second program of the Mozart cycle, and perhaps the most popular, was devoted to the last three symphonies and into these great works Mr. Munch and the orchestra put all their technical and interpretive skills. The result was magnificent. Performances were finely detailed, varied and touched with genius.

The final program, last Sunday, was, to this listener, the most interesting for it provided opportunity to hear works not often performed. For example, Sherman Walt was soloist in the Concerto for bassoon, in B flat major, and his performance won him one of the finest personal triumphs we have witnessed here. It was fully deserved. He draws a beautiful tone from his instrument, no matter what the register. He has a fabulous technique and interpretive sensitivity. The concerto is a lovely work, lyrical and of rich texture.

Another interesting work was the Concerto for horn in E flat major. This was played by James Stagliano, who played with our Springfield Symphony Orchestra a few years ago. Mr. Stagliano is a fine musician and gave the music its due.

Mr. Munch opened the program with a solid performance of the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra. The concluding number was the lengthy and sometimes exciting "Sinfonia Concertante" for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon. In this work, Messrs. Walt and Stagliano were joined by Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet. The work is a concerto grosso, with the solo quartet an integral part of the whole. Only rarely do the soloist have extended passage where virtuosity may be revealed.

Chamber Music Concert

The second chamber music concert was a gem. It was made up of piano duets and Brahms' "Liebeslieder" Waltzes, Op. 52 and the finale of "Neuer Liebeslieder" Waltzes, Op. 65. The solo quartet included Miss Endich, Florence Kopleff, Mr. McCollum and Donald Gramm.

When two fine pianists like Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz get together, the results are always interesting. They joined forces in two seldom-heard Schubert works for four hands, the "Variations on an Original Theme," in A flat major and the "Fantasy" in F minor. For added interest they chose Hindemith's "Sonata 1938." While it was evident that the pianist had not played together for any length of time, their playing was marked by an intimate enjoyment which reached the audience. The same may be noted of the soloists in the waltzes. Messrs Berkowitz and Lipkin were admireable pianists in the Brahms opus.

Afternoon Concert

This afternoon at 2.30 Mr. Munch and the full complement of Boston players will play the annual concert in memory of will include the first performance here of Stravinsky's controversial Serge Koussevitzky. The program new work "Canticum Sacrum;" Tchaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and the same composer's violin concerto, played by Isaac Stern.

E-4 THE SUNDAY STAR, Washington, D. C.
SUNDAY, JULY 21, 1957

NEWS OF MUSIC

Mozart Fans Pack Hall at Tanglewood

By JAMES G. DEANE

LENOX, Mass.—Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, who enjoyed only fleeting popular esteem in his brief lifetime, would have been gratified by the show of public regard which was tendered his music a few days ago in the verdant Berkshire Hills.

Last week end was a Mozart week end at Tanglewood, the famous summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor Charles Munch and his men devoted three full concerts to works of the most celebrated of Salzburg's sons.

From the standpoint of public reaction, the triple-header could hardly have been more successful. Two of the programs, in the rustic, enclosed theater-concert hall seating 1,200, were far more than sellouts, with more rapt enthusiasts clustered on the green lawn outside than within. The third, held in the giant open-air shed, drew more than 5,000 persons.

The enthusiasm was apparent in attentiveness and applause, as well as at the boxoffice. One might accurately say, in Broadway parlance, that the week end was a smash.

Limited Orchestra Used

The three great final symphonies which Mozart dashed off in an incredibly short few weeks near the end of his career made up the program played in the shed. Dr. Munch used a reduced orchestra (there were only two, instead of the BSO's regular eight, double-basses).

The Munch style of Mozart, to judge at least by one Berkshire newspaper reviewer, does not appeal to everyone. His interpretations tended to extreme briskness, thus being quite different from what one is used to hearing from conductors of the Viennese school, such as Bruno Walter. A hearer might have been reminded of Toscanini, except for a Munch habit—which the late maestro would certainly have frowned upon—of perceptibly slowing things at certain almost predictable points.

This habit, along with a general air of slightly nervous tension, was in evidence in both the E flat and G minor symphonies. In the "Jupiter," things seemed more even and relaxed. Perhaps this was traceable partly to an incident just before the start, when two youthful music lovers returned late to front-row seats and drew a slightly ironic but smiling bow from the conductor, which in turn drew a large laugh from the audience.

Many Lounged Outside

Even with the small-sized orchestra the quality of the shed's acoustics was apparently sufficient to carry the beguiling Mozartian harmonies out to the hundreds of hearers lounging comfortably on blankets on the tree-bordered grounds. At the end many hearers cheered.

For experienced Mozart-listeners the other two concerts held more interest. The first opened with a little three-movement work for strings in D, 136 in the Koechel catalogue, dating from Mozart's teens and sometimes labeled a symphony, sometimes a divertimento and sometimes a quartet. (It was apparently designed to meet whatever instrumental circumstances happened to crop up.) The work sounds like that of a 16-year-old, but in this case of course a very talented one, and the Boston players performed it lustrously.

Next on the program came the much later, and superb, C minor serenade, K. 388, in which the BSO's famous wind section got the spotlight, and after this the "Haffner" symphony, which also was originated as a serenade rather than a Beethovenian, formal symphony. The eight performers gave a model demonstration of ensemble in the wind serenade, dwelling, however, on its felicities more than on the underlying somber elements. The "Haffner" went, rather unfortunately, at breakneck speed, giving less opportunity than one would have liked to savor it fully.

Three Church Works

In the second half of the program a student chorus from the Berkshire Music Center was heard under Hugh Ross in three church works—the "Regina Coeli" K. 276, the familiar "Ave Verum Corpus" and the Mass in C, K. 337. The mass, last of 17 written in Salzburg, is a striking, though not lengthy, score in which jubilation is tempered with more profound emotions. The student singers showed splendid vigor and discipline. An electronic organ, the only kind available, was often scarcely audible, a misfortune since the organ occupies a place of special prominence in this work. Dr. Munch chose to omit trombones indicated in the manuscript.

Saramae Endich, an alumnus of the music center, sang the soprano solo in the Ave Verum Die prettily. The other vocal soloist — Majorie Campagna-Pinto, John McCollum and Fague Springmann—had relatively little individually to do but did that competently.

Standout Solo Work

The spectacular solo performances came at the second indoor concert. Sherman Walt managed to coax remarkably cultivated sounds out of a rather uncultivated device, the bassoon, in the concerto for that instrument. James Stagliano, the BSO's well-known first hornist, chalked up an even more notable victory over mechanical obstacles in the rollicking final horn concerto. And both these accomplished gentlemen joined with oboist Ralph Gomberg and clarinetist Gino Cioffi in the final tour de force, the wonderful wind Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297b.

In these works there was none of the hurry and tenseness that often seemed present in the purely orchestral works of the shed concert. The accompaniments were crisp and crystalline, and there was a fine rapport between orchestra and soloists. The performances drew prolonged applause.

The C minor adagio and fugue, at the outset of the program, gave the string players their chance to shine, and [illegible] for a few tentative moments they took full advantage of the opportunity. [illegible]

ing a portion of the Matthew Passion which also was given in the shed. This week end the full orchestra, including players who for the first two weeks were back in Boston giving the traditional open-air Esplanade Concerts, has moved into the shed full time for the remainder of the season's major events.

Subsequent Plans

Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky are the central creative figures at the moment. Next week end the hero will be Berlioz, with the feature a Saturday night performance of the rarely heard Biblical oratorio, "L'Enfance du Christ." Subsequent week ends will be devoted to music primarily of Brahms and Beethoven.

This is the first Tanglewood season in which concerts of the Bach-Mozart cycle have expanded into the shed. The growing pressure of numbers which has been instrumental in bringing this about is welcome, of course, to the festival's financial backers. Manager Thomas D. Perry credits part of this growth to the opening of a new toll road linking the Berkshires with Boston, from where, oddly enough, only a minority of Tanglewood enthusiasts have come in the past.

Now, with hours slashed off driving time, Tanglewood officials expect a steadily rising stream of Bay State concertgoers.

But it is also evident that zart has something to do h it. And maybe the ltiplying Mozart lovers inspire even more gran- se Mozartian celebrations the summers to come.

DOVER, N. J.
LAKE LAND NEWS
Circ. W. 6,728

JUL 18 1957

The Annual Picnic of the Deutscher Schul Gesang Verein, Inc., will be held at Germania Park, Sunday. The doors open at 12 noon. A band concert will be given by the Dover Gutter Band and hot meals will be served. Everyone is welcome.

Dover Moose Lodge 541, will hold its 4th annual Kiddies' Party, Sunday at the Moose Lodge, 431 E. Blackwell St. Free rides and refreshments will be provided.

Harold Flamm, editor of the popular column "Music Makers," is taking a busman's holiday. He writes that Saturday night he attended the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., for an all-Mozart program. He is visiting at the Music Inn.

TIGHT BINDING

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 15 1957

Mozart Music at Tanglewood

Charles Munch and Hugh Ross on Podium

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

Back in the days when Serge Koussevitzky initiated the series of concerts for chamber orchestra as a sort of intimate prelude to the Berkshire Festival proper, these were called the Bach-Mozart concerts. Several changes have taken place since Charles Munch assumed the reins. All to emphasize the growing popularity of chamber music, the relatively small Theater-Concert Hall has been arranged to make the music accessible to outside listeners.

This past weekend an acoustical improvement resulted from the addition of a movable wall that closes off the stage from the rather deep backstage. Everyone seemed quite happy with the new arrangement, except possibly the Berkshire Music Center students who have been privileged to sit in this backstage area where they had an unrivaled view of the conductor.

The students now hear almost as well as ever, since there is plenty of room for the music to sound around and over the new partition. But visually the effect must be blank indeed. However, there is a ray of light. It is understood that if the experiment is a success, a transparent material will be used so that the students once again will be able to see as well as to hear.

Another change has been the growing use of the vast Shed for these chamber concerts, as well as for those employing the full orchestra. Some of the concerts are moved over bodily, as happened last Saturday night when almost every seat in the Shed was taken with several hundred more listeners on the lawns.

♪ ♪ ♪

This summer, Mr. Munch has gone back to the Bach-Mozart pattern with three concerts devoted to each composer. Bach the opening weekend and Mozart this past Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. One hopes this pattern will be repeated in the future. Both composers offer an almost inexhaustible wealth of material, much of which is rarely performed. Skillfully mingling the familiar with the unfamiliar, Mr. Munch gave his hearers a veritable feast of Mozartiana.

Friday's program opened with the charming and graceful Divertimento in D major for Strings, K.136, written when the composer was 16. No matter how often one hears Mozart's youthful works, one always observes with a shock of astonishment how well he were going his childhood and adolescence. Played by the splendid Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians with zest and clarity, the Divertimento fairly sparkled under the conductor's appreciative enthusiasm.

The more mature Serenade in C minor, for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns, and Two Bassoons, K. 388, was also splendidly performed. This work achieves almost symphonic proportions and depth. There were times one had to count the musicians on stage to assure oneself that there were indeed only eight players involved.

Strings and winds were reunited for the Symphony in D major, the "Haffner," K. 385, done by conductor and musicians with all the felicity this light but great music deserves.

After the intermission Hugh Ross came on stage to conduct the Festival Chorus through three religious works accompanied by the orchestra and enlisting the services of Saramae Endich, soprano, Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springman, bass, all able and efficient soloists. The scores, however, drew most attention to the more extensive soprano contributions.

The "Regina Coeli," K. 276, "Ave, Verum Corpus," K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337, were performed in excellent style under the conductor's knowing and experienced direction.

Mr. Munch devoted Saturday's concert to that great and memorable trio of symphonies, all written in the single summer of the year 1788—the E-flat major, K. 543, the G minor, K. 550, and the C major, the so-called "Jupiter," K. 551.

♪ ♪ ♪

If one were to choose among the three, it was the performance of the G minor which achieved the best results, although all were indeed well done. The conductor's forward-driving direction sometimes became a little impatient with the flowing Andante cantabile of the "Jupiter" and not to the music's advantage; but barring this occasional overeagerness, the concert was a tribute to conductor and to the players from start to finish.

Sunday's concert returned to the Theater-Concert Hall for the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546; the Concerto for Bassoon in B-flat major, K. 191, with Sherman Walt as soloist; the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major, K. 495, with James Stagliano as soloist; and the Sinfonia Concertante, for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon, K. 297B, with Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet, joining the Messrs. Stagliano and Walt, to bring the weekend to a close.

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 21, 1957

Second Thoughts On Music

Mozart Concerts Reveal Various Facets of His Art

Symphonies, Concerts, Mass Featured in Three Performances at Tanglewood; Lipkin and Berkowitz Heard in Two Schubert Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 20—The music of Mozart was well served by Charles Munch and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during last week end, which was devoted exclusively to the music of the Salzburg master. Indeed, the performances drew larger audiences than did the Bach concerts, with more than 11,000 people attending the three performances.

Many facets of the composer's art were revealed, but not a single inkling was given to show his work in opera, not even an overture. However, there was some fine singing accomplished by the Festival Chorus, particularly in the Motet "Ave Verum Corpus" and the Mass in C major which also employed to advantage the fine voices of Saramae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, bass.

Mr. Munch opened the first concert with the enchanting "Divertimento in D major," for string orchestra, following this with a splendid reading of the "Serenade" in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons. This, in turn, was followed by a well planned performance of the "Haffner" symphony.

Three Symphonies

The second program of the Mozart cycle, and perhaps the most popular, was devoted to the last three symphonies and into these great works Mr. Munch and the orchestra put all their technical and interpretive skills. The result was magnificent. Performances were finely detailed, varied and touched with genius.

The final program, last Sunday, was, to this listener, the most interesting for it provided opportunity to hear works not often performed. For example, Sherman Walt was soloist in the Concerto for bassoon, in B flat major and his performance won him one of the finest personal triumphs we have witnessed here. It was fully deserved. He draws a beautiful tone from his instrument, no matter what the register. He has a fabulous technique and interpretive sensitivity. The concerto is a lovely work, lyrical and of rich texture.

Another interesting work was the Concerto for horn in E flat major. This was played by James Stagliano, who played with our Springfield Symphony Orchestra a few years ago. Mr. Stagliano is a fine musician and gave the music its due.

Mr. Munch opened the program with a solid performance of the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra. The concluding number was the lengthy and sometimes exciting "Sinfonia Concertante" for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon. In this work, Messrs. Walt and Stagliano were joined by Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet. The work is a concerto grosso, with the solo quartet an integral part of the whole. Only rarely do the soloist have extended passage where virtuosity may be revealed.

Chamber Music Concert

The second chamber music concert was a gem. It was made up of piano duets and Brahms' "Liebeslieder" Waltzes, Op. 52 and the finale of "Neuer Liebeslieder" Waltzes, Op. 65. The solo quartet included Miss Endich, Florence Kopleff, Mr. McCollum and Donald Gramm.

When two fine pianists like Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz get together, the results are always interesting. They joined forces in two seldom-heard Schubert works for four hands, the "Variations on an Original Theme," in A flat major and the "Fantasy" in F minor. For added interest they chose Hindemith's "Sonata 1938." While it was evident that the pianist had not played together for any length of time, their playing was marked by an intimate enjoyment which reached the audience. The same may be noted of the soloists in the waltzes. Messrs Berkowitz and Lipkin were admireable pianists in the Brahms opus.

Afternoon Concert

This afternoon at 2.30 Mr. Munch and the full complement of Boston players will play the annual concert in memory of will include the first performance here of Stravinsky's controversial Serge Koussevitzky. The program new work "Canticum Sacrum;" Tchaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and the same composer's violin concerto, played by Isaac Stern.

NEWS OF MUSIC

Mozart Fans Pack Hall at Tanglewood

By JAMES G. DEANE

LENOX, Mass.—Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, who enjoyed only fleeting popular esteem in his brief lifetime, would have been gratified by the show of public regard which was tendered his music a few days ago in the verdant Berkshire Hills.

Last week end was a Mozart week end at Tanglewood, the famous summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor Charles Munch and his men devoted three full concerts to works of the most celebrated of Salzburg's sons.

From the standpoint of public reaction, the triple-header could hardly have been more successful. Two of the programs, in the rustic, enclosed theater-concert hall seating 1,200, were far more than sellouts, with more rapt enthusiasts clustered on the green lawn outside than within. The third, held in the giant open-air shed, drew more than 5,000 persons.

The enthusiasm was apparent in attentiveness and applause, as well as at the boxoffice. One might accurately say, in Broadway parlance, that the week end was a smash.

Limited Orchestra Used

The three great final symphonies which Mozart dashed off in an incredibly short few weeks near the end of his career made up the program played in the shed. Dr. Munch used a reduced orchestra (there were only two, instead of the BSO's regular eight, double-basses).

The Munch style of Mozart, to judge at least by one Berkshire newspaper reviewer, does not appeal to everyone. His interpretations tended to extreme briskness, thus being quite different from what one is used to hearing from conductors of the Viennese school, such as Bruno Walter. A hearer might have been reminded of Toscanini, except for a Munch habit—which the late maestro would certainly have frowned upon—of perceptibly slowing things at certain almost predictable points.

This habit, along with a general air of slightly nervous tension, was in evidence in both the E flat and G minor symphonies. In the "Jupiter," things seemed more even and relaxed. Perhaps this was traceable partly to an incident just before the start, when two youthful music lovers returned late to front-row seats and drew a slightly ironic but smiling bow from the conductor, which in turn drew a large laugh from the audience.

Many Lounged Outside

Even with the small-sized orchestra the quality of the shed's acoustics was apparently sufficient to carry the beguiling Mozartian harmonies out to the hundreds of hearers lounging comfortably on blankets on the tree-bordered grounds. At the end many hearers cheered.

For experienced Mozart-listeners the other two concerts held more interest. The first opened with a little three-movement work for strings in D, 136 in the Koechel catalogue, dating from Mozart's teens and sometimes labeled a symphony, sometimes a divertimento and sometimes a quartet. (It was apparently designed to meet whatever instrumental circumstances happened to crop up.) The work sounds like that of a 16-year-old, but in this case of course a very talented one, and the Boston players performed it lustrously.

Next on the program came the much later, and superb, C minor serenade, K. 388, in which the BSO's famous wind section took the spotlight, and after this the "Haffner" symphony, which also was originated as a serenade rather than a Beethovenian, formal symphony. The eight performers gave a model demonstration of ensemble in the wind serenade, dwelling, however, on its felicities more than on the underlying somber elements. The "Haffner" went, rather unfortunately, at breakneck speed, giving less opportunity than one would have liked to savor it fully.

Three Church Works

In the second half of the program a student chorus from the Berkshire Music Center was heard under Hugh Ross in three church works—the "Regina Coeli" K. 276, the familiar "Ave Verum Corpus" and the Mass in C, K. 337. The mass, last of 17 written in Salzburg, is a striking, though not lengthy, score in which jubilation is tempered with more profound emotions. The student singers showed splendid vigor and discipline. An electronic organ, the only kind available, was often scarcely audible, a misfortune since the organ occupies a place of special prominence in this work. Dr. Munch chose to omit trombones indicated in the manuscript.

Saramae Endich, an alumnus of the music center, sang the soprano solo in the Agnus Die prettily. The other vocal soloist — Majorie Campagna-Pinto, John McCollum and Fague Springmann—had relatively little individually to do but did that competently.

Standout Solo Work

The spectacular solo performances came at the second indoor concert. Sherman Walt managed to coax remarkably cultivated sounds out of a rather uncultivated device, the bassoon, in the concerto for that instrument. James Stagliano, the BSO's well-known first hornist, chalked up an even more notable victory over mechanical obstacles in the rollicking final horn concerto. And both these accomplished gentlemen joined with oboist Ralph Gomberg and clarinetist Gino Cioffi in the final tour de force, the wonderful wind Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297b.

In these works there was none of the hurry and tenseness that often seemed present in the purely orchestral works of the shed concert. The accompaniments were crisp and crystalline, and there was a fine rapport between orchestra and soloists. The performances drew prolonged applause.

The C minor adagio and fugue, at the outset of the program, gave the string players their chance to shine, and except for a few tentative highlights they took full advantage of the opportunity. Dr. Munch too seemed to

ing a portion of the Matthew Passion which also was given in the shed. This week end the full orchestra, including players who for the first two weeks were back in Boston giving the traditional open-air Esplanade Concerts, has moved into the shed full time for the remainder of the season's major events.

Subsequent Plans

Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky are the central creative figures at the moment. Next week end the hero will be Berlioz, with the feature a Saturday night performance of the rarely heard Biblical oratorio, "L'Enfance du Christ." Subsequent week ends will be devoted to music primarily of Brahms and Beethoven.

This is the first Tanglewood season in which concerts of the Bach-Mozart cycle have expanded into the shed. The growing pressure of numbers which has been instrumental in bringing this about is welcome, of cource, to the festival's financial backers. Manager Thomas D. Perry credits part of this growth to the opening of a new toll road linking the Berkshires with Boston, from where oddly enough, only a minority of Tanglewood enthusiasts have come in the past.

Now, with hours slashed off driving time, Tanglewood officials expect a steadily rising stream of Bay State concertgoers.

But it is also evident that zart has something to do h it. And maybe the ltiplying Mozart lovers inspire even more granse Mozartian celebrations the summers to come.

DOVER, N. J.
LAKE LAND NEWS
Circ. W. 6,728

JUL 18 1957

The Annual Picnic of the Deutscher Schul Gesang Verein, Inc., will be held at Germania Park, Sunday. The doors open at 12 noon. A band concert will be given by the Dover Gutter Band and hot meals will be served. Everyone is welcome.

* * * *

Dover Moose Lodge 541, will hold its 4th annual Kiddies' Party, Sunday at the Moose Lodge, 431 E. Blackwell St. Free rides and refreshments will be provided.

* * * *

Harold Flester, author of the popular column "Music Makers," is taking a busman's holiday. He writes that Saturday night he attended the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., for an all-Mozart program. He is visiting at the Music Inn.

* * * *

), JULY 18, 1957

ed to Fine
shire Festival

BURKE

wo week-ends the thousands in festival, were treated to some in America's fast growing an evening of Bach, brought hird, Fourth and Sixth, of the h Patterson, organ and Al-Zighera, viola da gamba.

usic from the pen of Mozart
e up the program for last rday evening. The E Flat or, the G Minor, K. 550 and C Major (Jupiter) made up pattern. Charles Munch again ed a major victory for him.

wever, he possesses that derful trait of understand-just how a conductor eves such a peak. As always, as most sincere in his desire hare the glories that were with the orchestra memberozart is all too often taken for ted. Though one hears these honies done often, and at quite well, it remains for Boston orchestra to paint the picture. This trait of making n's music live again seems the lot of this group on occasion.

would be difficult to pick of the three went off best.
re more than partial to rt. However, to us the ng, in E Flat carried the ng's honors.
day afternoon, again an oc-marked Mozart brought stage a line of first solo artists. Hearing eldom done Concerto for on, Concerto for Horn and nia Concertante, for oboe, et, horn and basoon made fternoon another in the rable line.
rman Walt, bassoon; James ano, horn; Gino Cioffi, et were the incomparable listed. The audience red waves and waves of se during the entire con-
As a brief example—how does one hear applause be-movements of a symor concerto?
probably more than any-else, proved the quality of ys happenings. The rare
e of music and Tanglewood
o be making all of this a or which the entire world well proud of.

July 13
. Munch again won a vigoraccolade from the crowd on following night, with his dy-c leadership of the exciting hony in C Major, K. 551, the ter" Symphony. The first rammed work was the Sym-y in E flat major, K. 543, and the orchestra and Dr. Munch dug into this one with zest sprit. In the Symphony in G r, K. 550, we feel conductor rchestra illustrated a consid-degree of empathy with t's work, with Munch taking and of the musicians to lead to new heights of achieve-

Coming Events
Friday, the full Boston Sym-
Orchestra under the direc-
Charles Munch will present nsky's "Jeu de Cartes," ovsky's Roccoco Variations
llo and Orchestra featuring Mayes and the "Pathetiymphony.
Saturday, Pierre Monteux as conductor will lead the orin Mendelssohn's "Fingals Overture," the Tchaikovsky ony No. 5 and Stravinsky's ere du Printemps."
ay at 2:30 p.m. will see a Shed performance of Tchai-s "Romeo and Juliet" and Concerto with Isaac Stern, Stravinsky "Canticum San the Koussevitzky Memoncert, with Charles Munch
ng. The Friday and Sat-erformances are at 8:30
Tanglewood, located in Mass.

L. F. M.

r tender,
ver Man,
successes
addition,
her own
God Bless
Sings the nd tragic ave been y" to be ng, of her

sisted by o, Chuck
n Ditano deserves
ng a fine
d showed n his ac-unusual

TMENT

ake

rnished

-2183

$2.25
3.00
2.50*
2.50*
2.25*
3.50*
3.50
4.50
4.50

3.25

please

.75
dnight

TIGHT BINDING

TIGHT BINDING

ed to Fine shire Festival

BURKE

vo week-ends the thousands in estival, were treated to some in America's fast growing an evening of Bach, brought ird, Fourth and Sixth, of the h Patterson, organ and Al- Zighera, viola da gamba, usic from the pen of Mozart e up the program for last rday evening. The E Flat or, the G Minor, K. 550 and C Major (Jupiter) made up pattern. Charles Munch again ed a major victory for him.

owever, he possesses that erful trait of understand- just how a conductor ves such a peak. As always, as most sincere in his desire hare the glories that were with the orchestra member-zart is all too often taken for ed. Though one hears these honies done often, and at quite well, it remains for oston orchestra to paint the icture. This trait of making n's music live again seems the lot of this group on occasion.

vould be difficult to pick of the three went off best. e more than partial to t. However, to us the ng, in E Flat carried the g's honors.

day afternoon, again an oc- marked Mozart brought stage a line of first solo artists. Hearing eldom done Concerto for on, Concerto for Horn and ia Concertante, for oboe, t, horn and basoon made fternoon another in the rable line.

rman Walt, bassoon; James ano, horn; Gino Cioffi, t were the incomparable listed. The audience red waves and waves of se during the entire con- As a brief example—how does one hear applause be- movements of a sym- or concerto?

probably more than any- else, proved the quality of s happenings. The rare e of music and Tanglewood o be making all of this a or which the entire world well proud of.

), JULY 18, 1957

July 13

Munch again won a vigor- accolade from the crowd on following night, with his dy- c leadership of the exciting phony in C Major, K. 551, the ter" Symphony. The first ammed work was the Sym- in E flat major, K. 543, and the orchestra and Dr. Munch dug into this one with zest sprit. In the Symphony in G. K. 550, we feel conductor rchestra illustrated a consid- degree of empathy with t's work, with Munch taking and of the musicians to lead to new heights of achieve-

Coming Events

Friday, the full Boston Sym- Orchestra under the direc- Charles Munch will present sky's "Jeu de Cartes," ovsky's Roccoco Variations llo and Orchestra featuring Mayes and the "Pathe- ymphony.

aturday, Pierre Monteux as conductor will lead the or- in Mendelssohn's "Fingals Overture," the Tchaikovsky ony No. 5 and Stravinsky's re du Printemps."

y at 2:30 p.m. will see a hed performance of Tchai- s "Romeo and Juliet" and Concerto with Isaac Stern, Stravinsky "Canticum Sa- the Koussevitzky Memo- cert, with Charles Munch ng. The Friday and Sat- erformances are at 8:30 Tanglewood, located in Mass.

L. F. M.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 15 1957

Mozart Music at Tanglewood

Charles Munch and Hugh Ross on Podium

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

Back in the days when Serge Koussevitzky initiated the series of concerts for chamber orchestra as a sort of intimate prelude to the Berkshire Festival proper, these were called the Bach-Mozart concerts. Several changes have taken place since Charles Munch assumed the reins. As if to emphasize the growing popularity of chamber music, the relatively small Theater-Concert Hall has been arranged to make the music accessible to outside listeners.

This past weekend an acoustic improvement resulted from the addition of a movable wall that closes off the stage from the rather deep backstage. Everyone seemed quite happy with the new arrangement, except possibly the Berkshire Music Center students who have been privileged to sit in this backstage area where they had an unrivaled view of the conductor.

The students now hear almost as well as ever, since there is plenty of room for the music to sound around and over the new partition. But visually the effect must be blank indeed. However, there is a ray of light. It is understood that if the experiment is a success, a transparent material will be used so that the students once again will be able to see as well as to hear.

Another change has been the growing use of the vast Shed for these chamber concerts, as well as for those employing the full orchestra. Some of the concerts are moved over bodily, as happened last Saturday night when almost every seat in the Shed was taken with several hundred more listeners on the lawns.

* * *

This summer, Mr. Munch has gone back to the Bach-Mozart pattern with three concerts devoted to each composer. Bach the opening weekend and Mozart this past Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. One hopes this pattern will be repeated in the future. Both composers offer an almost inexhaustible wealth of material, much of which is rarely performed. Skillfully mingling the familiar with the unfamiliar, Mr. Munch gave his hearers a delectable feast of Mozartiana.

Friday's program opened with the charming and graceful Divertimento in D major for Strings, K.136, written when the composer was 16. No matter how often one hears Mozart's youthful works, one always observes with a shock of astonishment how well he wrote during his childhood and adolescence. Played by the splendid Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians with zest and clarity, the Divertimento fairly sparkled under the conductor's appreciative enthusiasm.

The more mature Serenade in C minor, for Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Horns, and Two Bassoons, K. 388, was also splendidly performed. This work achieves almost symphonic proportions and depth. There were times one had to count the musicians on stage to assure oneself that there were indeed only eight players involved.

Strings and winds were reunited for the Symphony in D major, the "Haffner," K. 385, done by conductor and musicians with all the felicity this light but great music deserves.

After the intermission Hugh Ross came on stage to conduct the Festival Chorus through three religious works accompanied by the orchestra and enlisting the services of Saramae Endich, soprano, Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springman, bass, all able and efficient soloists. The scores, however, drew most attention to the more extensive soprano contributions.

The "Regina Coeli," K. 276, "Ave, Verum Corpus," K. 618, and the Mass in C major, K. 337, were performed in excellent style under the conductor's knowing and experienced direction.

Mr. Munch devoted Saturday's concert to that great and memorable trio of symphonies, all written in the single summer of the year 1788—the E-flat major, K. 543, the G minor, K. 550, and the C major, the so-called "Jupiter," K. 551.

* * *

If one were to choose among the three, it was the performance of the G minor which achieved the best results, although all were indeed well done. The conductor's forward-driving direction sometimes became a little impatient with the flowing Andante cantabile of the "Jupiter" and not to the music's advantage; but barring this occasional overeagerness, the concert was a tribute to conductor and to the players from start to finish.

Sunday's concert returned to the Theater-Concert Hall for the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for String Orchestra, K. 546; the Concerto for Bassoon in B-flat major, K. 191, with Sherman Walt as soloist; the Concerto for Horn in E-flat major, K. 495, with James Stagliano as soloist; and the Sinfonia Concertante, for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon, K. 297B, with Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet, joining the Messrs. Stagliano and Walt, to bring the weekend to a close.

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 21, 1957

Second Thoughts On Music

Mozart Concerts Reveal Various Facets of His Art

Symphonies, Concerts, Mass Featured in Three Performances at Tanglewood; Lipkin and Berkowitz Heard in Two Schubert Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 20—The music of Mozart was well served by Charles Munch and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during last week end, which was devoted exclusively to the music of the Salzburg master. Indeed, the performances drew larger audiences than did the Bach concerts, with more than 11,000 people attending the three performances.

Many facets of the composer's art were revealed, but not a single inkling was given to show his work in opera, not even an overture. However, there was some fine singing accomplished by the Festival Chorus, particularly in the Motet "Ave Verum Corpus" and the Mass in C mavantage the fine voices of Sarjor which also employed to adamae Endich, soprano; Marjorie Campagna-Pinto, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Fague Springmann, bass.

Mr. Munch opened the first concert with the enchanting "Divertimento in D major," for string orchestra, following this with a splendid reading of the "Serenade" in C minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons. This, in turn, was followed by a well planned performance of the "Haffner" symphony.

Three Symphonies

The second program of the Mozart cycle, and perhaps the most popular, was devoted to the last three symphonies and into these great works Mr. Munch and the orchestra put all their technical and interpretive skills. The result was magnificent. Performances were finely detailed, varied and touched with genius.

The final program, last Sunday, was, to this listener, the most interesting for it provided opportunity to hear works not often performed. For example, Sherman Walt was soloist in the Concerto for bassoon, in B flat major and his performance won him one of the finest personal triumphs we have witnessed here. It was fully deserved. He draws a beautiful tone from his instrument, no matter what the register. He has a fabulous technique and interpretive sensitivity. The concerto is a lovely work, lyrical and of rich texture.

Another interesting work was the Concerto for horn in E flat major. This was played by James Stagliano, who played with our Springfield Symphony Orchestra a few years ago. Mr. Stagliano is a fine musician and gave the music its due.

Mr. Munch opened the program with a solid performance of the Adagio and Fugue in C minor for string orchestra. The concluding number was the lengthy and sometimes exciting "Sinfonia Concertante" for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon. In this work, Messrs. Walt and Stagliano were joined by Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Gino Cioffi, clarinet. The work is a concerto grosso, with the solo quartet an integral part of the whole. Only rarely do the soloist have extended passage where virtuosity may be revealed.

Chamber Music Concert

The second chamber music concert was a gem. It was made up of piano duets and Brahms' "Liebeslieder" Waltzes, Op. 52 and the finale of "Neuer Liebeslieder" Waltzes, Op. 65. The solo quartet included Miss Endich, Florence Kopleff, Mr. McCollum and Donald Gramm.

When two fine pianists like Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz get together, the results are always interesting. They joined forces in two seldom-heard Schubert works for four hands, the "Variations on an Original Theme," in A flat major and the "Fantasy" in F minor. For added interest they chose Hindemith's "Sonata 1938." While it was evident that the pianist had not played together for any length of time, their playing was marked by an intimate enjoyment which reached the audience. The same may be noted of the soloists in the waltzes. Messrs Berkowitz and Lipkin were admireable pianists in the Brahms opus.

Afternoon Concert

This afternoon at 2.30 Mr. Munch and the full complement of Boston players will play the annual concert in memory of will include the first performance here of Stravinsky's controversial Serge Koussevitzky. The program new work "Canticum Sacrum;" Tchaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and the same composer's violin concerto, played by Isaac Stern.

NEWS OF MUSIC

Mozart Fans Pack Hall at Tanglewood

By JAMES G. DEANE

LENOX, Mass.—Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, who enjoyed only fleeting popular esteem in his brief lifetime, would have been gratified by the show of public regard which was tendered his music a few days ago in the verdant Berkshire Hills.

Last week end was a Mozart week end at Tanglewood, the famous summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor Charles Munch and his men devoted three full concerts to works of the most celebrated of Salzburg's sons.

From the standpoint of public reaction, the triple-header could hardly have been more successful. Two of the programs, in the rustic, enclosed theater-concert hall seating 1,200, were far more than sellouts, with more rapt enthusiasts clustered on the green lawn outside than within. The third, held in the giant open-air shed, drew more than 5,000 persons.

The enthusiasm was apparent in attentiveness and applause, as well as at the boxoffice. One might accurately say, in Broadway parlance, that the week end was a smash.

Limited Orchestra Used

The three great final symphonies which Mozart dashed off in an incredibly short few weeks near the end of his career made up the program played in the shed. Dr. Munch used a reduced orchestra (there were only two, instead of the BSO's regular eight, double-basses).

The Munch style of Mozart, to judge at least by one Berkshire newspaper reviewer, does not appeal to everyone. His interpretations tended to extreme briskness, thus being quite different from what one is used to hearing from conductors of the Viennese school, such as Bruno Walter. A hearer might have been reminded of Toscanini, except for a Munch habit—which the late maestro would certainly have frowned upon—of perceptibly slowing things at certain almost predictable points.

This habit, along with a general air of slightly nervous tension, was in evidence in both the E flat and G minor symphonies. In the "Jupiter," things seemed more even and relaxed. Perhaps this was traceable partly to an incident just before the start, when two youthful music lovers returned late to front-row seats and drew a slightly ironic but smiling bow from the conductor, which in turn drew a large laugh from the audience.

Many Lounged Outside

Even with the small-sized orchestra the quality of the shed's acoustics was apparently sufficient to carry the beguiling Mozartian harmonies out to the hundreds of hearers lounging comfortably on blankets on the tree-bordered grounds. At the end many hearers cheered.

For experienced Mozart-listeners the other two concerts held more interest. The first opened with a little three-movement work for strings in D, 136 in the Koechel catalogue, dating from Mozart's teens and sometimes labeled a symphony, sometimes a divertimento and sometimes a quartet. (It was apparently designed to meet whatever instrumental circumstances happened to crop up.) The work sounds like that of a 16-year-old, but in this case of course a very talented one, and the Boston players performed it lustrously.

Next on the program came the much later, and superb, C minor serenade, K. 388, in which the BSO's famous wind section took the spotlight, and after this the "Haffner" symphony, which also was originated as a serenade rather than a Beethovenian, formal symphony. The eight performers gave a model demonstration of ensemble in the wind serenade, dwelling, however, on its felicities more than on the underlying somber elements. The "Haffner" went, rather unfortunately, at breakneck speed, giving less opportunity than one would have liked to savor it fully.

Three Church Works

In the second half of the program a student chorus from the Berkshire Music Center was heard under Hugh Ross in three church works—the "Regina Coeli" K. 276, the familiar "Ave Verum Corpus" and the Mass in C, K. 337. The mass, last of 17 written in Salzburg, is a striking, though not lengthy, score in which jubilation is tempered with more profound emotions. The student singers showed splendid vigor and discipline. An electronic organ, the only kind available, was often scarcely audible, a misfortune since the organ occupies a place of special prominence in this work. Dr. Munch chose to omit trombones indicated in the manuscript.

Saramae Endich, an alumnus of the music center, sang the soprano solo in the Agnus Die prettily. The other vocal soloist — Majorie Campagna-Pinto, John McCollum and Fague Springmann—had relatively little individually to do but did that competently.

Standout Solo Work

The spectacular solo performances came at the second indoor concert. Sherman Walt managed to coax remarkably cultivated sounds out of a rather uncultivated device, the bassoon, in the concerto for that instrument. James Stagliano, the BSO's well-known first hornist, chalked up an even more notable victory over mechanical obstacles in the rollicking final horn concerto. And both these accomplished gentlemen joined with oboist Ralph Gomberg and clarinetist Gino Cioffi in the final tour de force, the wonderful wind Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297b.

In these works there was none of the hurry and tenseness that often seemed present in the purely orchestral works of the shed concert. The accompaniments were crisp and crystalline, and there was a fine rapport between orchestra and soloists. The performances drew prolonged applause.

The C minor adagio and fugue, at the outset of the program, gave the string players their chance to shine, and except for a few tentative moments they took full advantage of the opportunity. Dr. Munch, too, seemed to sense the profundities of this remarkable, though brief, work.

Three all-Bach concerts inaugurated this summer's festival, one of them featuring a portion of the Matthew Passion which also was given in the shed. This week end the full orchestra, including players who for the first two weeks were back in Boston giving the traditional open-air Esplanade Concerts, has moved into the shed full time for the remainder of the season's major events.

Subsequent Plans

Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky are the central creative figures at the moment. Next week end the hero will be Berlioz, with the feature a Saturday night performance of the rarely heard Biblical oratorio, "L'Enfance du Christ." Subsequent week ends will be devoted to music primarily of Brahms and Beethoven.

This is the first Tanglewood season in which concerts of the Bach-Mozart cycle have expanded into the shed. The growing pressure of numbers which has been instrumental in bringing this about is welcome, of course, to the festival's financial backers. Manager Thomas D. Perry credits part of this growth to the opening of a new toll road linking the Berkshires with Boston, from where, oddly enough, only a minority of Tanglewood enthusiasts have come in the past.

Now, with hours slashed off driving time, Tanglewood officials expect a steadily rising stream of Bay State concertgoers.

But it is also evident that Mozart has something to do with it. And maybe the multiplying Mozart lovers will inspire even more grandiose Mozartian celebrations in the summers to come.

MAIN STREET

The Annual Picnic of the Deutscher Schul Gesang Verein, Inc., will be held at Germania Park, Sunday. The doors open at 12 noon. A band concert will be given by the Dover Gutter Band and hot meals will be served. Everyone is welcome.

* * *

Dover Moose Lodge 541, will hold its 4th annual Kiddies' Party, Sunday at the Moose Lodge, 431 E. Blackwell St. Free rides and refreshments will be provided.

* * *

Harold Flender, author of the popular column "Music Makers," is taking a batman's holiday. He writes that Saturday night he attended the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., for an all-Mozart program. He is visiting at the Music Inn.

* * *

TIGHT BINDING

[147]

The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, July 16, 1957—7

Ribicoffs at Tanglewood

Clark

Gov. and Mrs. Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut at the Berkshire Festival concert Saturday evening at Tanglewood.

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 44,706

JUL 14 1957

Ribicoffs Hear Concert At Tanglewood

Gov. and Mrs. Abraham Ribicoff took a holiday yesterday to go to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra present an all-Mozart program at Tanglewood in Lennox, Mass.

Gov. Ribicoff told Samuel Meyers, of Euclid Ave., that he tries "to make Saturday a day of rest." He asked Meyers about the program at Music Mountain, in Falls Village, and learned that Benny Goodman will be featured there today at 4. He expressed curiosity also about Jacob's Pillow, in Lee, Mass., where the Royal Danish ballet is performing.

For her 15-year-old daughter, Mrs. Ribicoff questioned Meyers about where and when jazz concerts are presented.

The governor and his wife were seated with a crowd of approximately 4,000 in the music shed to hear the orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, perform two of Mozart's symphonies, one in E-flat minor and the other in C major (the Jupiter symphony). The orchestra will give a different all-Mozart concert today, with addition of soloists.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
AGE DEFENDER
Circ. W. 23,902

JUL 13 1957

Nothing 'New' In New England But Roads; Beauty's The Same

This is the year for re-discovering New England, With the arrival of the "Mayflower II" to these shores, thousands of latter-day "pilgrims" are finding stimulus for revisiting the tidy, attractive states to the n ortheast. They will be joined, of course, by a host of first-time visitors eager to see w hat all the fuss is about.

Although New England has long been tailor-made for a two-week motoring vacation, the completion of the new Massachusetts Turnpike brings once remote areas within even easier reach of New Yorkers.

The two-week, 1,500-mile tour outlined here in the accompanying picture is notable for its variety of scenic and histori attractions, and because it provides for stopovers at some fine resorts and motels.

Ride-Walk

From New York, via the Merrit and Wilbur Cross parkways, the route passes through Sturbridge, Mass., for a visit to a bit of early America in the form of the reconstructed Old Sturbridge Village.

From there, it is only a short run (via the Mass. Turnpike) to the city of Boston Hikers can take the "Freedom Trail" from the Old State House to Fanueil Hall, Old North Church and Paul Revere's House.

By-passing Cape Cod, which is well worth a separate visit the tours heads to the delightful Cape Ann peninsula northeast of Boston, and thence to Gloucester (at the tip of the Cape,) and Salem, site of the famous "House of the Seven Gables".

North the tour follows the New Hampshire-Maine Turnpike into Augusta, and then via Maine 3 to Acadia National Park. Preserved as a public recreation area, the park is dominated by Cadillac Mountain, highest point on the Eastern seaboard. Nearby is the resort town of Bar Harbor.

Lush Forests

Heading for Central Maine, the motorist finds, boating, fishing and bathing a pleasure against the background of lush forests, and this scenic loop is carried into the White Mountains area of New Hampshire. From Gorham, the traveller can enjoy a top-of-the-world look, via cog railway to the summits of Mt. Washington and the Cannon Mountain. At the end of the loop is Twin Mountain, a favorite stop-over.

Crossing into Vermont, a stop should be made at Barre, "Granite Capital of the U.S.," where visitors may watch monuments being fashioned out of blocks of stone. At Burlington and adjacent Lake Champlain, there are opportunities for swimming and sight seeing before heading homeward on U. S. 7.

Final highlights of the tour comes in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, site of the amazingly popular Berkshire Music Festival, at anglewood in Lenox. Here, if you haven't already, you'll learn the wisdom of making sleeping reservations beforehand. In fact, do it now!!

Write 'Age'

age resort 3-30 nothing new 8

For information regarding guest homes, hotels and motels along the route of this New England tour, write to "Travel and Vacation Editor, New Rork Age,

MORRISTOWN, N. J.
RECORD
Circ. D. 12,663

JUL 18 1957

Music Makers

By HAROLD T. FLARTEY

News And Views About Music And The People Who Make It

Music Makers At Music Inn

LENOX, Mass.—Nestled in the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts amidst the murmuring pines and the hemlocks sets a most unique enterprise called "Music Inn." The rambling mansion, once the home of some wealthy scion is now made over into a hotel where music is the main theme. There's tennis, swimming, archery, badminton and a dozen other diversions, but music in ALL its facets is programmed during the summer season.

When we arrived, a bespectacled gent named Tom Lehrer was entertaining a capacity crowd in "The Music Barn." If you are the genius type of intellectual that reads "Mad" Comics, you will know at once that this is the chap from Harvard who is a do-it-yourself songwriter with a talent for writing, singing and playing most unusual songs. Page 14 and 15 of Oct. "Mad" depicts his "Hunting Song" and how he bagged all that the law would allow, "Two game wardens, seven hunters and a cow." This type of nonsense had 1,000 people in stitches most of Saturday afternoon.

The Music Barn, a few hundred feet from The Inn, also has rooms for guests. What was once the barnyard of the U shaped building is now covered with a stripped tent in which a thousand people can be seated.

• • •

Tanglewood Tales

Most of the customers for these concerts, recitals, or call them what you will, come from the surrounding countryside where they are gathered for the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, about a mile from Music Inn. We had a look in at Tanglewood Saturday night when The Boston Symphony under the baton of Charles Munch played an all Mozart program. If you have a doll and a blanket, you can make it real big here. Hundreds of couples were racked out on the lawn in front of the immense music shed, and you couldn't tell if they were dead or alive.

On Sunday night we enjoyed The Gerry Mulligan Quartet at "The Music Barn" with a S.R.O. crowd. Gerry was completely relaxed in the informal setting as he joked and pumped jazz from his baritone sax. Bob Brookmeyer's valve trombone added the second line and Joe Benjamine, bass and Dave Bailey, drums provided the rhythm. The capacity audience was appreciative and attentive. Some folks I talked to had no idea who Gerry Mulligan was.

• • •

Dignity And Charm

You will enjoy the friendly warmth and hospitality offered by the owners of this unique establishment, Stephanie and Pil Barber. In seven seasons they have developed "Music Inn" into a haven for music lovers without disturbing the dignity and quiet charm of the original buildings. Visitors may dine at "The Potting Shed," which was once just that. The gardner's quarters is now the kitchen and the potting shed is now the cocktail bar and dining room.

Guests of the inn, of course, dine in the large dining room where food is excellent and plentiful. In the large lobby you will hear classical music played from no less than 108 speakers banked in 12 rows, nine high at one end of the room. The level is so low you can talk easily above it, yet every note comes through crystal clear.

Future Sunday concerts feature Lionel Hampton, Duke Ellington, Woody Herman, The Modern Jazz Quartet and many others, so if you'd like to relax in an atmosphere charged with music, write to "Music Inn" Lenox, Mass., for rates. Better plan well in advance, a lot of people besides you and me know about this.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

JUL 14 1957

Munch Pioneers New Music Future

By MILES KASTENDIECK

AS THE Berkshire Festival has announced Great Composer weekends, the Berkshire Music Center has scheduled a Seminar in Contemporary Music. The Festival defends the past for its large public; the Center promotes the present and future for its students. Charles Munch has actually combined the two by scheduling certain contemporary composers during the Boston Symphony's weekends in the music shed at Tanglewood.

This procedure reflects his recent experience in Czechoslovakia. There he found "so great an interest in the music of the entire world and at the same time a desire to hear as much contemporary music as possible."

In referring to the orchestra's European trip last Summer, he recently told the students that "everywhere we found enormous and burning curiosity to know American music and musicians. In Moscow we played an extra concert because the Russian public wanted to hear all the American music we had with us."

Is it any wonder that he added wistfully: "And I think of the reproach aimed at us here because the B.S.O. plays so much new music on its programs?" It is time that we all brought ourselves up to date in music.

The seminar is sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation. It consists of lectures twice a week by composers on the Berkshire Music Center faculty, illustrated by Fromm Fellowship players. What is of general iterest is the summary that the course presents.

Busoni, Sciabine, Strauss, Debussy and Ravel, the early Stravinsky and early Schonberg form the background. Falla, Hindemith, Roussel and Stravinsky represent the "Neo-classic Phase" of the 'Twenties; Satie and Les Six, Jazz, Polytonality, and Gebrauchsmusik the "New Shiboleths." Schonberg, Berg and Webern form "The Vienese School."

One wonders how much people know about their activity of well over a quarter century ago.

Among the Americans represented in nationalistic trends are: Ives, Harris, Thomson, Villa-Lobos, Chavez, and Revueltas. The contemporaries of the "older generation" include: Sessions, Piston, Schuman, Barber, and Copland. One wonders what burning desire we have to hear their music in this country.

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, JULY 14, 1957

In Chamber Music Program Wednesday

The Beaux Arts Trio which made its official debut at the Berkshire Festival in 1955 and returned in 1956, will return to Tanglewood again to present a program of chamber music on Wednesday evening, July 17, at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater Concert Hall. The program features works by Haydn, R. Casadesus and Beethoven. Members of the ensemble are: Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano.

TIGHT BINDING

C1423

The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, July 16, 1957—7

Ribicoffs at Tanglewood

Clark

Gov. and Mrs. Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut at the Berkshire Festival concert Saturday evening at Tanglewood.

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 44,706

JUL 14 1957

Ribicoffs Hear Concert At Tanglewood

Gov. and Mrs. Abraham Ribicoff took a holiday yesterday to go to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra present an all-Mozart program at Tanglewood in Lennox, Mass.

Gov. Ribicoff told Samuel Meyers, of Euclid Ave., that he tries "to make Saturday a day of rest." He asked Meyers about the program at Music Mountain, in Falls Village, and learned that Benny Goodman will be featured there today at 4. He expressed curiosity also about Jacob's Pillow, in Lee, Mass., where the Royal Danish ballet is performing.

For her 15-year-old daughter, Mrs. Ribicoff questioned Meyers about where and when jazz concerts are presented.

The governor and his wife were seated with a crowd of approximately 4,000 in the music shed to hear the orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, perform two of Mozart's symphonies, one in E-flat minor and the other in C major (the Jupiter symphony). The orchestra will give a different all-Mozart concert today, with addition of soloists.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
AGE DEFENDER
Circ. W. 23,902

JUL 13 1957

Nothing 'New' In New England But Roads; Beauty's The Same

This is the year for re-discovering New England. With the arrival of the "Mayflower II" to these shores, thousands of latter-day "pilgrims" are finding stimulus for revisiting the tidy, attractive states to the n ortheast. They will be joined, of course, by a host of first-time visitors eager to see w hat all the fuss is about.

Although New England has long been tailor-made for a two-week motoring vacation, the completion of the new Massachusetts Turnpike brings once remote areas within even easier reach of New Yorkers.

The two-week, 1,500-mile tour outlined here in the accompanying picture is notable for its variety of scenic and historic attractions, and because it provides for stopovers at some fine resorts and motels.

Ride-Walk

From New York, via the Merrit and Wilbur Cross parkways, the route passes through Sturbridge, Mass., for a visit to a bit of early America in the form of the reconstructed Old Sturbridge Village.

From there, it is only a short run (via the Mass. Turnpike) to the city of Boston. Hikers can take the "Freedom Trail" from the Old State House to Faneuil Hall, Old North Church and Paul Revere's House.

By-passing Cape Cod, which is well worth a separate visit, the tours heads to the delightful Cape Ann peninsula northeast of Boston, and thence to Gloucester (at the tip of the Cape,) and Salem, site of the famous "House of the Seven Gables."

North the tour follows the New Hampshire-Maine Turnpike into Augusta, and then via Maine 3 to Acadia National Park. Preserved as a public recreation area, the park is dominated by Cadillac Mountain, highest point on the Eastern seaboard. Nearby is the resort town of Bar Harbor.

Lush Forests

Heading for Central Maine, the motorist finds, boating, fishing and bathing a pleasure against the background of lush forests, and this scenic loop is carried into the White Mountains area of New Hampshire. From Gorham, the traveller can enjoy a top-of-the-world look, via Cog railway to the summits of Mt. Washington and the Cannon Mountain. At the end of the loop is Twin Mountain, a favorite stop-over.

Crossing into Vermont, a stop should be made at Barre, "Granite Capital of the U.S.," where visitors may watch monuments being fashioned out of blocks of stone. At Burlington and adjacent Lake Champlain, there are opportunities for swimming and sight seeing before heading homeward on U. S. 7.

Final highlights of the tour comes in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, site of the amazingly popular Berkshire Music Festival, at anglewood in Lenox. Here, if you haven't already, you'll learn the wisdom of making sleeping reservations beforehand. In fact, do it now!!

Write 'Age'

Age resort 3-30 nothing new ..8

For information regarding guest homes, hotels and motels along the route of this New England tour, write to "Travel and Vacation Editor, New Rork Age,

MORRISTOWN, N. J.
RECORD
Circ. D. 12,663

JUL 18 1957

Music Makers

By HAROLD T. FLARTEY

News And Views About Music And The People Who Make It

Music Makers At Music Inn

LENOX, Mass.—Nestled in the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts amidst the murmuring pines and the hemlocks sets a most unique enterprise called "Music Inn." The rambling mansion, once the home of some wealthy scion is now made over into a hotel where music is the main theme. There's tennis, swimming, archery, badminton and a dozen other diversions, but music in ALL its facets is programmed during the summer season.

When we arrived, a bespectacled gent named Tom Lehrer was entertaining a capacity crowd in "The Music Barn." If you are the genius type of intellectual that reads "Mad" Comics, you will know at once that this is the chap from Harvard who is a do-it-yourself songwriter with a talent for writing, singing and playing most unusual songs. Page 14 and 15 of Oct. "Mad" depicts his "Hunting Song" and how he bagged all that the law would allow, "Two game wardens, seven hunters and a cow." This type of nonsense had 1,000 people in stitches most of Saturday afternoon.

The Music Barn, a few hundred feet from The Inn, also has rooms for guests. What was once the barnyard of the U shaped building is now covered with a stripped tent in which a thousand people can be seated.

• • •

Tanglewood Tales

Most of the customers for these concerts, recitals, or call them what you will, come from the surrounding countryside where they are gathered for the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, about a mile from Music Inn. We had a look in at Tanglewood Saturday night when The Boston Symphony under the baton of Charles Munch played an all Mozart program. If you have a doll and a blanket, you can make it real big here. Hundreds of couples were racked out on the lawn in front of the immense music shed, and you couldn't tell if they were dead or alive.

On Sunday night we enjoyed The Gerry Mulligan Quartet at "The Music Barn" with a S.R.O. crowd. Gerry was completely relaxed in the informal setting as he joked and pumped jazz from his baritone sax. Bob Brookmeyer's valve trombone added the second line and Joe Benjamine, bass and Dave Bailey, drums provided the rhythm. The capacity audience was appreciative and attentive. Some folks I talked to had no idea who Gerry Mulligan was.

• • •

Dignity And Charm

You will enjoy the friendly warmth and hospitality offered by the owners of this unique establishment, Stephanie and Pil Barber. In seven seasons they have developed "Music Inn" into a haven for music lovers without disturbing the dignity and quiet charm of the original buildings. Visitors may dine at "The Potting Shed," which was once just that. The gardner's quarters is now the kitchen and the potting shed is now the cocktail bar and dining room.

Guests of the inn, of course, dine in the large dining room where food is excellent and plentiful. In the large lobby you will hear classical music played from no less than 108 speakers banked in 12 rows, nine high at one end of the room. The level is so low you can talk easily above it, yet every note comes through crystal clear.

Future Sunday concerts feature Lionel Hampton, Duke Ellington, Woody Herman, The Modern Jazz Quartet and many others, so if you'd like to relax in an atmosphere charged with music, write to "Music Inn" Lenox, Mass., for rates. Better plan well in advance, a lot of people besides you and me know about this.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

JUL 14 1957

Munch Pioneers New Music Future

By MILES KASTENDIECK

AS THE Berkshire Festival has announced Great Composer weekends, the Berkshire Music Center has scheduled a Seminar in Contemporary Music. The Festival defends the past for its large public; the Center promotes the present and future for its students. Charles Munch has actually combined the two by scheduling certain contemporary composers during the Boston Symphony's weekends in the music shed at Tanglewood.

This procedure reflects his recent experience in Czechoslovakia. There he found "so great an interest in the music of the entire world and at the same time a desire to hear as much contemporary music as possible."

In referring to the orchestra's European trip last Summer, he recently told the students that "everywhere we found enormous and burning curiosity to know American music and musicians. In Moscow we played an extra concert because the Russian public wanted to hear all the American music we had with us."

Is it any wonder that he added wistfully: "And I think of the reproach aimed at us here because the B.S.O. plays so much new music on its programs?" It is time that we all brought ourselves up to date in music.

The seminar is sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation. It consists of lectures twice a week by composers on the Berkshire Music Center faculty, illustrated by Fromm Fellowship players. What is of general iterest is the summary that the course presents.

Busoni, Sciabine, Strauss, Debussy and Ravel, the early Stravinsky and early Schonberg form the background. Falla, Hindemith, Roussel and Stravinsky represent the "Neo-classic Phase" of the 'Twenties; Satie and Les Six,

Jazz, Polytonality, and Gebrauchsmusik the "New Shiboleths." Schonberg, Berg and Webern form "The Viennese School."

One wonders how much people know about their activity of well over a quarter century ago.

Among the Americans represented in nationalistic trends are: Ives, Harris, Thomson, Villa-Lobos, Chavez, and Revueltas. The contemporaries of the "older generation" include: Sessions, Piston, Schuman, Barber, and Copland. One wonders what burning desire we have to hear their music in this country.

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, JULY 14, 1957

In Chamber Music Program Wednesday

The Beaux Arts Trio which made its official debut at the Berkshire Festival in 1955 and returned in 1956, will return to Tanglewood again to present a program of chamber music on Wednesday evening, July 17, at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater Concert Hall. The program features works by Haydn, R. Casadesus and Beethoven. Members of the ensemble are: Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano.

C143

THE BEAUX ARTS TRIO, which made its official debut at the Berkshire Festival in 1955 and returned in 1956, will return to Tanglewood tomorrow night to present a program of chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30.

Tanglewood Attendance Is Up For Festival Chamber Concerts

TANGLEWOOD — Ideal weather and the new Massachusetts Turnpike have been credited with a boost in attendance at the Bach-Mozart concerts here thus for this summer.

The two Wednesday concerts of chamber music and the two week-end performances by the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra attracted 22,798 persons to Tanglewood. Two of the eight concerts have been given in the Music Shed. Last Saturday night's concert drew a crowd of 5,125 to the Shed, while the previous Saturday 4,500 turned out.

Tomorrow's Concert

The third in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts tomorrow night at 8:30 will feature the Beaux Arts Trio, which will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op.53 by Robert Casadesus.

The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

The members of the trio, Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello, make their third Tanglewood appearance at this concert. They made their official public debut at the Berkshire Festival in the summer of 1955 in an all-Beethoven program and appeared again in 1956. The trio has twice toured the United States and Canada, and played at Chicago's Ravinia Festival in 1956, a visit which they will repeat later this summer.

NBC Concertmaster

Mr. Guilet was born in France. He came to the United States in 1941 and toured extensively with the Guilet Quartet. In 1944 he was chosen as a member of the newly formed NBC Symphony, and in 1951 became its concertmaster, a position he still holds with the Symphony of the Air. His instrument is the "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius, dated 1712.

Mr. Greenhouse, for two years a pupil of Pablo Casals, has appeared in the major cities of Europe and America in recitals and with orchestra and chamber music ensembles. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684.

Mr. Pressler began his professional career in his adopted country of Israel, and since his first American tour has appeared with the orchestras of Philadelphia, New York, Cleveland and Indianapolis and the National Symphony in Washington, D.C. Mr. Pressler will be heard again at Tanglewood at the final concert in the Wednesday Chamber Music Series on Aug. 7, performing with the Zimberler Sinfonietta the Shostakovitch Concerto for Piano and Trumpet, with Roger Voisin, solo trumpet.

The three remaining concerts in the Wednesday evening chamber music series will be performed by the Kroll String Quartet July 24; Gerard Souzay, baritone, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano July 31, and the Zimbler Sinfonietta Aug. 7. Proceeds of these concerts go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Tickets may be obtained from the ticket office, Tanglewood

Music Review Eagle, Thursday, July 18, 1957—11

Beaux Arts Trio

by JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE THIRD program in the Wednesday evening series of chamber music at Tanglewood was played in the theater-concert hall last night by the Beaux Arts Trio, Menahem Pressler, piano, Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello.

Pressler is a brilliant pianist. He has everything: absolutely unlimited technical command of the instrument, the capacity to produce all manner of effects and contrasts with spotless articulation and perfected discipline. He has everything except musical consideration. He glanced at his colleagues at every trichotomous point in the progress of their program and succeeded in dovetailing their individual roles to rhythmical perfection, but he did not allow the violin and 'cello to be heard. Furthermore, for some inexplicable reason, the top of the piano was raised to its full opening, apparently to allow the piano to be heard even better.

* * *

IT WAS NOT until the third and last listed work on the program that Greenhouse's beautiful tone and phrasing became audible, but Beethoven was more cognizant than Haydn of voice leading, and his sense of knowing to which instrument to give their proper phrases is one of his unique attributes. He also provides a few hiatuses in the clouds of the piano through which the strings may shine.

The opening trio, the Haydn third in C minor, is practically a piano concerto. As such, Pressler deserves all-out encomiums. There is an old yarn about the pious Jew who hired a cabby to take him to synagogue. The horse was old so the driver asked the passenger to disembark on hills, both ascending and descending. Arriving at their destination, the passenger paid but asked "why did we bring the horse?" One might ask here why did Pressler bring the other instruments?

* * *

THE BEETHOVEN "Archduke," opus 97, in B flat major, is his greatest work for trio, and enthusiasts argue its place in all trio music. Reports of its first performance, in 1814, with the composer at the piano, all contain unfavorable references to the pianist whose hearing was so far gone and who was evidently unaware that he was so incapable at the keyboard. The Beaux Arts conception caught all the grandeur of the first allegro; the vivacity of the scherzo; the depth of feeling of the divine theme in the slow movement and exuberant gaiety of the finale.

There was not complete agreement between the two bowed instrument players. Guilet did not vibrate passing notes as did his cellist colleague and responsive phrases were given with different and individual bowing divisions. Due to Pressler, however, in most cases this did not matter.

* * *

THE CENTER offering of the evening was a first performance of a trio by Robert Casadesus, his second, marked opus 53. The famous pianist is little known generally as a composer although he lists a considerable catalogue of works, many for chamber music. This one is, first of all, a trio in the sense that it was "heard" for the particular ensemble. The first movement has an impetuous drive forward with youthful soaring release. The center slow movement is fashioned on a little old popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," a delightful and poignant little story, told with utmost simplicity. The final gallop is in the style of a tarantelle and the whole compact, short trio affords a predominantly gay and infectious enjoyment. There are no deep problems and the harmony is piquant and contemporary without being obscure.

The audience gave the trio rapturous applause. They felt it incumbent, therefore, to give their enthusiastic listeners a dividend. They chose Beethoven's opus 44 trio, a single movement consisting of 14 variations and of 25 minutes duration.

The musicians provided a fine reading, light, graceful and highly polished. The finale presto was dashed off in true bravura style.

Mr. Casadeus is a great pianist and it was quite natural that this trio had its emphasis on the piano. The opening movement is tempetuous with the pianist carrying on throughout at great rate. In fact, there were moments when violin or cello were scarcely audible. The second movement, based on the popular French song "Petit Bonhomme" was another matter. In this, the composer has written charming variants for violin and cello and the result is a movement of exceptional beauty, repose and charm.

The final movement is again tumultuous, with the piano predominant. The work is written with skill by a fine musician, but there is little creative novelty revealed.

Perfect Understanding

The concert concluded with a magnificent performance of a truly noble work, the "Trio in B Flat Major, Op. 97," familiarly known as "The Archduke."

This is music to challenge the imagination and skill of the performer. Its depth are bottomless, its heights limitless. It was evident that there was perfect understanding of the music by each member of the trio, an understanding so complete that every phrase was communicated with unabated clarity from first movement to the last.

Friday night, the first of the week-end concerts in the shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given under the direction of Charles Munch. Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tschaikowsky's "Variations on a Rococo theme for cello with orchestral accompaniment."

SPRINGFIELD

TRIO'S PROGRAM ... LEWOOD ...NIFICENT

... Players in ...emiere of ...s Work

... M. CLARK

...–The third in the ... chamber music ... the admirable ... to the theater-...ght. This is the ... year that the ... here.

...udience listened ... very fine pro-...luded the world ... No. 2, Op. 53" ...lesus. The work ... the trio.

...truments ... the Beaux Arts ...incidentally has ... Tuesday Morning ... Springfield, are ...er, piano; Daniel ...d Bernard Green-...olinist and cellist ...t Stradavarius in-

... has enormous ...tism. He seems ... note of whatever ... well turned phrase ...ing on a smile. ...blend in the en-...ded some very ...ught. Both Mr. ... Greenhouse are ...ers and veteran ...rs.

...opened with a de-...nance of Haydn's ...ajor, No. 3." The ...dinarily pianistic.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

JUL 17 1957

World Premiere in Berkshires, Tonight

In the third of the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the Beaux Arts Trio will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op. 53, by Robert Casadesus. The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat Major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

The members of the Trio, Menahem, Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello, make their third Tanglewood appearance at this concert.

Third Chamber Music Concert Tonight At 8:30

In the third of the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the Beaux Arts Trio will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op. 53, by Robert Casadesus.

The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat Major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

The members of the trio, Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello, make their third Tanglewood appearance at this concert. They made their official public debut at the Berkshire Festival in 1955 in an all-Beethoven program and appeared again in 1956. The trio has twice toured the United States and Canada, and played at Chicago's Ravinia Festival in 1956, a visit which they will repeat later this summer.

Mr. Guilet was born in France. He came to the United States in 1941 and toured extensively with

THE HARTFORD TIMES,
JULY 20, 1957

Casadesus Work Premieres Tonight

In the season's third Wednesday evening chamber music concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, the Beaux Arts Trio will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op. 53, by Robert Casadesus.

The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

...tender,
...er Man,
...successes
...addition,
...her own
...God Bless
...Sings the
...and tragic
...ave been
...ıy" to be
...ng, of her

...sisted by
...o, Chuck
...m Ditano
... deserves
...ng a fine
...d showed
...n his ac-
... unusual

...TMENT

...ake

...rnished

...-2183

$2.25
3.00
2.50*
2.50*
2.25*
3.50*
3.50
4.50
4.50

3.25

please

.75
...dnight

THE BEAUX ARTS TRIO, which made its official debut at the Berkshire Festival in 1955 and returned in 1956, will return to Tanglewood tomorrow night to present a program of chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30.

Tanglewood Attendance Is Up For Festival Chamber Concerts

TANGLEWOOD — Ideal weather and the new Massachusetts Turnpike have been credited with a boost in attendance at the Bach-Mozart concerts here thus for this summer.

The two Wednesday concerts of chamber music and the two week-end performances by the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra attracted 22,798 persons to Tanglewood. Two of the eight concerts have been given in the Music Shed. Last Saturday night's concert drew a crowd of 5,125 to the Shed, while the previous Saturday 4,500 turned out.

Tomorrow's Concert

The third in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts tomorrow night at 8:30 will feature the Beaux Arts Trio, which will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op.53 by Robert Casadesus.

The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

The members of the trio, Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello, make their third Tanglewood appearance at this concert. They made their official public debut at the Berkshire Festival in the summer of 1955 in an all-Beethoven program and appeared again in 1956. The trio has twice toured the United States and Canada, and played at Chicago's Ravinia Festival in 1956, a visit which they will repeat later this summer.

NBC Concertmaster

Mr. Guilet was born in France. He came to the United States in 1941 and toured extensively with the Guilet Quartet. In 1944 he was chosen as a member of the newly formed NBC Symphony, and in 1951 became its concertmaster, a position he still holds with the Symphony of the Air. His instrument is the "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius, dated 1712.

Mr. Greenhouse, for two years a pupil of Pablo Casals, has appeared in the major cities of Europe and America in recital and with orchestra and chamber music ensembles. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684.

Mr. Pressler began his professional career in his adopted country of Israel, and since his first American tour has appeared with the orchestras of Philadelphia, New York, Cleveland and Indianapolis and the National Symphony in Washington, D.C. Mr. Pressler will be heard again at Tanglewood at the final concert in the Wednesday Chamber Music Series on Aug. 7, performing with the Zimberler Sinfonietta the Shostakovitch Concerto for Piano and Trumpet, with Roger Voisin, solo trumpet.

The three remaining concerts in the Wednesday evening chamber music series will be performed by the Kroll String Quartet July 24; Gerard Souzay, baritone, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano July 31, and the Zimbler Sinfonietta Aug. 7. Proceeds of these concerts go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Tickets may be obtained from the ticket office, Tanglewood

Northampton Gazette

Third Chamber Music Concert Tonight At 8:30

In the third of the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the Beaux Arts Trio will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op. 53, by Robert Casadesus.

The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat Major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

The members of the trio, Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello, make their third Tanglewood appearance at this concert. They made their official public debut at the Berkshire Festival in 1955 in an all-Beethoven program and appeared again in 1956. The trio has twice toured the United States and Canada and played at Chicago's Ravinia Festival in 1956, a visit which they will repeat later this summer.

Mr. Guilet was born in France. He came to the United States in 1941 and toured extensively with the Guilet Quartet. In 1944 he was chosen as a member of the newly formed NBS Symphony, and in 1951 became its concertmaster, a position he still holds with the Symphony of the Air. His instrument is the "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius, dated 1712.

Mr. Greenhouse, for two years a pupil of Pablo Casals, has appeared in the major cities of Europe and America in recital and with orchestra and chamber music ensembles. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684.

Mr. Pressler began his professional career in his adopted country of Israel, and since his first American tour has appeared with the orchestras of Philadelphia, New York, Cleveland, Indianapolis and the National Symphony in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Pressler will be heard again at Tanglewood at the final concert in the Wednesday Chamber Music Series on Aug. 7, performing with the Zimbler Sinfonietta the Shostakovitch Concerto for Piano and Trumpet (Roger Voisin, solo trumpet), and will accompany the Sinfonietta on their forthcoming South American tour.

The three remaining concerts in the Wednesday evening Chamber Music series will be performed by the Kroll String Quartet (July 24); Gerard Souzay, baritone, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano (July 31); and the Zimbler Sinfonietta (Aug. 7). Proceeds of the concerts go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Tickets may be obtained from the ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox.

THE HARTFORD TIMES,
JULY 20, 1957

Casadesus Work Premieres Tonight

In the season's third Wednesday evening chamber music concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, the Beaux Arts Trio will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op. 53, by Robert Casadesus.

The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

Music Review Eagle, Thursday, July 18, 1957—11

Beaux Arts Trio

by JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE THIRD program in the Wednesday evening series of chamber music at Tanglewood was played in the theater-concert hall last night by the Beaux Arts Trio, Menahem Pressler, piano, Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello.

Pressler is a brilliant pianist. He has everything: absolutely unlimited technical command of the instrument, the capacity to produce all manner of effects and contrasts with spotless articulation and perfected discipline. He has everything except musical consideration. He glanced at his colleagues at every trichotomous point in the progress of their program and succeeded in dovetailing their individual roles to rhythmical perfection, but he did not allow the violin and 'cello to be heard. Furthermore, for some inexplicable reason, the top of the piano was raised to its full opening, apparently to allow the piano to be heard even better.

* * *

IT WAS NOT until the third and last listed work on the program that Greenhouse's beautiful tone and phrasing became audible, but Beethoven was more cognizant than Haydn of voice leading, and his sense of knowing to which instrument to give their proper phrases is one of his unique attributes. He also provides a few hiatuses in the clouds of the piano through which the strings may shine.

The opening trio, the Haydn third in C minor, is practically a piano concerto. As such, Pressler deserves all-out encomiums. There is an old yarn about the pious Jew who hired a cabby to take him to synagogue. The horse was old so the driver asked the passenger to disembark on hills, both ascending and descending. Arriving at their destination, the passenger paid but asked "why did we bring the horse?" One might ask here why did Pressler bring the other instruments?

* * *

THE BEETHOVEN "Archduke," opus 97, in B flat major, is his greatest work for trio, and enthusiasts argue its place in all trio music. Reports of its first performance, in 1814, with the composer at the piano, all contain unfavorable references to the pianist whose hearing was so far gone and who was evidently unaware that he was so incapable at the keyboard. The Beaux Arts conception caught all the grandeur of the first allegro; the vivacity of the scherzo; the depth of feeling of the divine theme in the slow movement and exuberant gaiety of the finale.

There was not complete agreement between the two bowed instrument players. Guilet did not vibrate passing notes as did his cellist colleague and responsive phrases were given with different and individual bowing divisions. Due to Pressler, however, in most cases this did not matter.

* * *

THE CENTER offering of the evening was a first performance of a trio by Robert Casadesus, his second, marked opus 53. The famous pianist is little known generally as a composer although he lists a considerable catalogue of works, many for chamber music. This one is, first of all, a trio in the sense that it was "heard" for the particular ensemble. The first movement has an impetuous drive forward with youthful soaring release. The center slow movement is fashioned on a little old popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," a delightful and poignant little story, told with utmost simplicity. The final gallop is in the style of a tarantelle and the whole compact, short trio affords a predominantly gay and infectious enjoyment. There are no deep problems and the harmony is piquant and contemporary without being obscure.

The audience gave the trio rapturous applause. They felt it incumbent, therefore, to give their enthusiastic listeners a dividend. They chose Beethoven's opus 44 trio, a single movement consisting of 14 variations and of 25 minutes duration.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

JUL 17 1957

TRIO'S PROGRAM LEWOOD NIFICENT

Players in emiere of is Work

M. CLARK

—The third in the chamber music the admirable to the theater-ght. This is the year that the here.

udience listened very fine pro-luded the world No. 2, Op. 53" esus. The work the trio.

truments the Beaux Arts incidentally has Tuesday Morning Springfield, are-ler, piano; Daniel d Bernard Green-olinist and cellist t Stradavarius in-

has enormous tism. He seems note of whatever well turned phrase ing on a smile. blend in the en-ded some very ight. Both Mr. Greenhouse are ers and veteran rs.

opened with a de-nance of Haydn's ajor, No. 3." The dinarily pianistic. The musicians provided a fine reading, light, graceful and highly polished. The finale presto was dashed off in true bravura style.

SPRINGFIELD

Mr. Casadeus is a great pianist and it was quite natural that this trio had its emphasis on the piano. The opening movement is tempetuous with the pianist carrying on throughout at great rate. In fact, there were moments when violin or cello were scarcely audible. The second movement, based on the popular French song "Petit Bonhomme" was another matter. In this, the composer has written charming variants for violin and cello and the result is a movement of exceptional beauty, repose and charm.

The final movement is again tumultuous, with the piano predominant. The work is written with skill by a fine musician, but there is little creative novelty revealed.

Perfect Understanding

The concert concluded with a magnificent performance of a truly noble work, the "Trio in B Flat Major, Op. 97" familiarly known as "The Archduke."

This is music to challenge the imagination and skill of the performer. Its depth are bottomless, its heights limitless. It was evident that there was perfect understanding of the music by each member of the trio, an understanding so complete that every phrase was communicated with unabated clarity from first movement to the last.

Friday night, the first of the week-end concerts in the shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given under the direction of Charles Munch. Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tschaikowsky's "Variations on a Rococo theme for cello with orchestral accompaniment."

World Premiere in Berkshires, Tonight

In the third of the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the Beaux Arts Trio will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op. 53, by Robert Casadesus. The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat Major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

The members of the Trio, Menahem, Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello, make their third Tanglewood appearance at this concert.

THE BEAUX ARTS TRIO, which made its official debut at the Berkshire Festival in 1955 and returned in 1956, will return to Tanglewood tomorrow night to present a program of chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30.

Tanglewood Attendance Is Up For Festival Chamber Concerts

TANGLEWOOD — Ideal weather and the new Massachusetts Turnpike have been credited with a boost in attendance at the Bach-Mozart concerts here thus for this summer.

The two Wednesday concerts of chamber music and the two week-end performances by the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra attracted 22,798 persons to Tanglewood. Two of the eight concerts have been given in the Music Shed. Last Saturday night's concert drew a crowd of 5,125 to the Shed, while the previous Saturday 4,500 turned out.

Tomorrow's Concert

The third in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts tomorrow night at 8:30 will feature the Beaux Arts Trio, which will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op.53 by Robert Casadesus.

The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

The members of the trio, Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello, make their third Tanglewood appearance at this concert. They made their official public debut at the Berkshire Festival in the summer of 1955 in an all-Beethoven program and appeared again in 1956. The trio has twice toured the United States and Canada, and played at Chicago's Ravinia Festival in 1956, a visit which they will repeat later this summer.

NBC Concertmaster

Mr. Guilet was born in France. He came to the United States in 1941 and toured extensively with the Guilet Quartet. In 1944 he was chosen as a member of the newly formed NBC Symphony, and in 1951 became its concertmaster, a position he still holds with the Symphony of the Air. His instrument is the "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius, dated 1712.

Mr. Greenhouse, for two years a pupil of Pablo Casals, has appeared in the major cities of Europe and America in recitals and with orchestra and chamber music ensembles. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684.

Mr. Pressler began his professional career in his adopted country of Israel, and since his first American tour has appeared with the orchestras of Philadelphia, New York, Cleveland and Indianapolis and the National Symphony in Washington, D.C. Mr. Pressler will be heard again at Tanglewood at the final concert in the Wednesday Chamber Music Series on Aug. 7, performing with the Zimberler Sinfonietta the Shostakovitch Concerto for Piano and Trumpet, with Roger Voisin, solo trumpet.

The three remaining concerts in the Wednesday evening chamber music series will be performed by the Kroll String Quartet July 24; Gerard Souzay, baritone, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano July 31, and the Zimbler Sinfonietta Aug. 7. Proceeds of these concerts go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Tickets may be obtained from the ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox.

Third Chamber Music Concert Tonight At 8:30

In the third of the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the Beaux Arts Trio will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op. 53, by Robert Casadesus.

The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

The members of the trio, Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello, make their third Tanglewood appearance at this concert. They made their official public debut at the Berkshire Festival in 1955 in an all-Beethoven program and appeared again in 1956. The trio has twice toured the United States and Canada, and played at Chicago's Ravinia Festival in 1956, a visit which they will repeat later this summer.

Mr. Guilet was born in France. He came to the United States in 1941 and toured extensively with the Guilet Quartet. In 1944 he was chosen as a member of the newly formed NBS Symphony, and in 1951 became its concertmaster, a position he still holds with the Symphony of the Air. His instrument is the "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius, dated 1712.

Mr. Greenhouse, for two years a pupil of Pablo Casals, has appeared in the major cities of Europe and America in recital and with orchestra and chamber music ensembles. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684.

Mr. Pressler began his professional career in his adopted country of Israel, and since his first American tour has appeared with the orchestras of Philadelphia, New York, Cleveland, Indianapolis and the National Symphony in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Pressler will be heard again at Tanglewood at the final concert in the Wednesday Chamber Music Series on Aug. 7, performing with the Zimbler Sinfonietta the Shostakovitch Concerto for Piano and Trumpet (Roger Voisin, solo trumpet), and will accompany the Sinfonietta on their forthcoming South American tour.

The three remaining concerts in the Wednesday evening Chamber Music series will be performed by the Kroll String Quartet (July 24); Gerard Souzay, baritone, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano (July 31); and the Zimbler Sinfonietta (Aug. 7). Proceeds of the concerts go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Tickets may be obtained from the ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox.

THE HARTFORD TIMES, JULY 20, 1957

Casadesus Work Premieres Tonight

In the season's third Wednesday evening chamber music concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, the Beaux Arts Trio will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op. 53, by Robert Casadesus.

The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

M

W
c w
c
A p
B
H u t p
c t
H
c a o t d
t d
t s t i a b

plus plus

First
51

Every

of [illegible] through which the strings may shine.

The opening trio, the Haydn third in C minor, is practically a piano concerto. As such, Pressler deserves all-out encomiums. There is an old yarn about the pious Jew who hired a cabby to take him to synagogue. The horse was old so the driver asked the passenger to disembark on hills, both ascending and descending. Arriving at their destination, the passenger paid but asked "why did we bring the horse?" One might ask here why did Pressler bring the other instruments?

* * *

THE BEETHOVEN "Archduke," opus 97, in B flat major, is his greatest work for trio, and enthusiasts argue its place in all trio music. Reports of its first performance, in 1814, with the composer at the piano, all contain unfavorable references to the pianist whose hearing was so far gone and who was evidently unaware that he was so incapable at the keyboard. The Beaux Arts conception caught all the grandeur of the first allegro; the vivacity of the scherzo; the depth of feeling of the divine theme in the slow movement and exuberant gaiety of the finale.

There was not complete agree-

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

JUL 17 1957

World Premiere in Berkshires, Tonight

In the third of the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the Beaux Arts Trio will present the world premiere of the Trio No. 2, Op. 53, by Robert Casadesus. The work is in three movements, the second based on a popular French song, "Petit Bonhomme," and is dedicated by the composer to the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will open with the Trio in C major, No. 3, by Haydn, and will close with Beethoven's Trio in B-flat Major, Op. 97, the "Archduke" Trio.

The members of the Trio, Menahem, Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin: and Bernard Greenhouse, cello, make their third Tanglewood appearance at this concert.

TRIO'S PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD IS MAGNIFICENT

Beaux Arts Players in World Premiere of Casadesus Work

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 17—The third in the current series of chamber music concerts brought the admirable Beaux Arts trio to the theater-concert hall tonight. This is the third consecutive year that the trio has played here.

A fair-sized audience listened attentively to a very fine program which included the world premier of "trio No. 2, Op. 53" by Robert Casadesus. The work was dedicated to the trio.

Fine Instruments

Members of the Beaux Arts Trio, which, incidentally has played for the Tuesday Morning Music Club of Springfield, are Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin and Bernard Greenhouse, cello. Violinist and cellist play magnificent Stradavarius instruments.

Mr. Pressler has enormous personal magnetism. He seems to enjoy every note of whatever he plays and a well turned phrase is sure of bringing on a smile. He has learned to blend in the ensemble and provided some very fine pianism tonight. Both Mr. Guilet and Mr. Greenhouse are superb performers and veteran ensemble players.

The program opened with a delectable performance of Haydn's "Trio in C Major, No. 3." The works is extraordinarily pianistic. The musicians provided a fine reading, light, graceful and highly polished. The finale presto was dashed off in true bravura style.

Mr. Casadeus is a great pianist and it was quite natural that this trio had its emphasis on the piano. The opening movement is tempetuous with the pianist carrying on throughout at great rate. In fact, there were moments when violin or cello were scarcely audible. The second movement, based on the popular French song "Petit Bonhomme" was another matter. In this, the composer has written charming variants for violin and cello and the result is a movement of exceptional beauty, repose and charm.

The final movement is again tumultuous, with the piano predominant. The work is written with skill by a fine musician, but there is little creative novelty revealed.

Perfect Understanding

The concert concluded with a magnificent performance of a truly noble work, the "Trio in B Flat Major, Op. 97" familiarly known as "The Archduke."

This is music to challenge the imagination and skill of the performer. Its depth are bottomless, its heights limitless. It was evident that there was perfect understanding of the music by each member of the trio, an understanding so complete that every phrase was communicated with unabated clarity from first movement to the last.

Friday night, the first of the week-end concerts in the shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given under the direction of Charles Munch. Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tschaikowsky's "Variations on a Rococo theme for cello with orchestral accompaniment."

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 18, 1957

[143]

r tender,
ver Man,
successes
addition,
her own
God Bless
Sings the nd tragic ave been y" to be ng, of her

sisted by
o, Chuck
n Ditano deserves
ng a fine
d showed n his ac-
unusual

TMENT

ake

rnished

-2183

$2.25
3.00
2.50*
2.50*
2.25*
3.50*
3.50
4.50
4.50

3.25

please

.75
dnight

TIGHT BINDING

[1447]

THE BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 14, 1957

First Week-End of Symphony Concerts at Tanglewood

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open on Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat Music Shed in Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon July 21 under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening, conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of the 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, on July 21, and Samuel Mayes, cello, Friday night. The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The Orchestra of 100 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach - Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Friday evening concert conducted by Charles Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the Orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique). Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work. The Variations were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in the order of the variations.

Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

The concert of Saturday evening, will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Regular Conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, Mr. Monteux has appeared frequently in recent years as guest conductor at Tanglewood and in Boston. He shared with Dr. Munch the concerts of the Orchestra's European tour in 1952, the transcontinental tour in 1952, and the European tour of last summer, conducting concerts in both Leningrad and Moscow, as well as in Edinburgh, London, Paris and Switzerland. Mr. Monteux' program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring" which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysees where the performance took place.

The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark.) The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross. The "Canticum Sacrum" was first performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice as part of the Venice Festival in September 1956.

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (August 3) and Beethoven (August 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture.

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday, July 19, at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its official debut in this same hall in the summer of 1955. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, Piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus, and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio is performed for the first time at this concert.

Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 18, 1957

First Berkshire Night Concert In Music Shed Tomorrow Night

TANGLEWOOD — The first in a series of Friday Berkshire Nights at Tanglewood will be tomorrow evening, the opening Berkshire Festival concert by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat music Shed.

1,200 Tickets Sold

Purpose of the Berkshire Nights is to give area residents who live within easy driving distance of Tanglewood a chance to spread out their concert-going over four weekends and to take advantage of a special series rate. About 1,200 tickets were sold during a drive in May conducted by a Berkshire committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Edward H. Cumpston Jr. Subscriptions were offered at a reduced rate of four tickets for the price of three.

Tomorrow night's concert at 8:30 will be conducted by Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra. Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, "Pathetique."

The concert Saturday evening at 8:30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Mr. Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Koussevitzky Memorial

Sunday afternoon's concert at 2:30 again will be under the direction of Dr. Munch, who dedicates this program to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, which will be remembered as a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky. Soloists John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday. First performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice in 1956, the work is dedicated to Venice and to St. Mark.

SAMUEL MAYES
Soloist Tomorrow

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the closing half of the program, performing the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. This will be the first of three appearances Mr. Stern will make at Tanglewood this summer.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center may attend several events by students and faculty of the school during the weekend. One of the series of lectures in the Seminar on Contemporary Music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon at 3:15.

Babbitt To Lecture

The Music Center's composer in residence, Milton Babbitt, will deliver the lecture, and musical illustrations will be performed by a group of musicians at Tanglewood this summer under a special program for study of contemporary music made possible by the generosity of the Fromm Music Foundation.

The Sunday morning Chamber Music concert at 10 o'clock and the Composer's Forum on Sunday evening at 8:30 will also be open to Friends.

JULY 19, 1957.

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE,

Shed Concerts Open Tonight

The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000 seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood. Tonight's concert at 8:30 will be conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra. Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow evening at 8:30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Mr. Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Sunday afternoon's concert at 2:30 will again be under the direction of Dr. Munch who dedi[cates] the [pro]gram to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, which will be remembered as a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky. Soloists John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday. First performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice in 1956, the work is dedicated to Venice and to St. Mark. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the closing half of the program, performing the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. This will be the first of three appearances Mr. Stern will make at Tanglewood this summer.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
JUL 24 1957

John Brook

Isaac Stern will be violin soloist at Tanglewood in the B[erkshire] Concerto Saturday night, Aug. 3, and the Beethoven C[oncerto] Friday night, Aug. 9. He will also give recitals at Cas[tle] Ipswich, on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411
JUL 19 1957

Berkshire Festival

The first week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6000-seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood, Lenox. Tonight's concert at 8:30 will be conducted by the Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra. Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow evening at 8:30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Mr. Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293
JUL 14 1957

Warren Clark Jr.

TANGLEWOOD REHEARSAL—Hugh Ross, upper right, prepares chorus and soloists Donald Gramm and John McCollum, standing, for their performance of Igor Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" next Sunday with Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch.

Berkshire Weekend Schedule Slated

The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000 seat Music Shed opens tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Director Charles Munch presenting music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra.

Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

Saturday at 8:30 p. m. Pierre Monteux will conduct Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

Dr. Munch will dedicate Sunday's program at 2:30 to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky.

* * *

SOLOISTS John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday.

(even) Haven't we mixed

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 19 1957

TIGHT BINDING

[1447]

THE BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 14, 1957

First Week-End of Symphony Concerts at Tanglewood

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open on Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon July 21 under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, on July 21, and Samuel Mayes, cello, Friday night. The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The Orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach - Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Friday evening concert conducted by Charles Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the Orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique). Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work. The Variations were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in the order of the variations.

Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

The concert of Saturday evening, will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Regular Conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, Mr. Monteux has appeared frequently in recent years as guest conductor at Tanglewood and in Boston. He shared with Dr. Munch the concerts of the Orchestra's European tour in 1952, the transcontinental tour in 1952, and the European tour of last summer, conducting concerts in both Leningrad and Moscow, as well as in Edinburgh, London, Paris and Switzerland. Mr. Monteux' program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 76th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring" which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysees where the performance took place.

The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality, Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark.) The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross. The "Canticum Sacrum" was first performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice as part of the Venice Festival in September 1956.

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (August 3) and Beethoven (August 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture.

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday, July 19, at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its official debut in this same hall in the summer of 1955. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, Piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus, and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio is performed for the first time at this concert.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

JUL 14 1957

Warren Clark Jr.

TANGLEWOOD REHEARSAL—Hugh Ross, upper right, prepares chorus and soloists Donald Gramm and John McCollum, standing, for their performance of Igor Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" next Sunday with Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch.

Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 18, 1957

First Berkshire Night Concert In Music Shed Tomorrow Night

TANGLEWOOD — The first in a series of Friday Berkshire Nights at Tanglewood will be tomorrow evening, the opening Berkshire Festival concert by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat music Shed.

1,200 Tickets Sold

Purpose of the Berkshire Nights is to give area residents who live within easy driving distance of Tanglewood a chance to spread out their concert-going over four weekends and to take advantage of a special series rate. About 1,200 tickets were sold during a drive in May conducted by a Berkshire committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Edward H. Cumpston Jr. Subscriptions were offered at a reduced rate of four tickets for the price of three.

Tomorrow night's concert at 8:30 will be conducted by Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra. Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, "Pathetique."

The concert Saturday evening at 8:30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Mr. Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Koussevitzky Memorial

Sunday afternoon's concert at 2:30 again will be under the direction of Dr. Munch, who dedicates this program to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, which will be remembered as a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky. Soloists John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday. First performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice in 1956, the work is dedicated to Venice and to St. Mark.

SAMUEL MAYES
Soloist Tomorrow

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the closing half of the program, performing the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. This will be the first of three appearances Mr. Stern will make at Tanglewood this summer.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center may attend several events by students and faculty of the school during the weekend. One of the series of lectures in the Seminar on Contemporary Music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon at 3:15.

Babbitt To Lecture

The Music Center's composer in residence, Milton Babbitt, will deliver the lecture, and musical illustrations will be performed by a group of musicians at Tanglewood this summer under a special program for study of contemporary music made possible by the generosity of the Fromm Music Foundation.

The Sunday morning Chamber Music concert at 10 o'clock and the Composer's Forum on Sunday evening at 8:30 will also be open to Friends.

Berkshire Weekend Schedule Slated

The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000 seat Music Shed opens tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Director Charles Munch presenting music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra.

Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

Saturday at 8:30 p. m. Pierre Monteux will conduct Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

Dr. Munch will dedicate Sunday's program at 2:30 to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky.

* * *

SOLOISTS John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday

(over)

JULY 19, 1957.

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE,

Shed Concerts Open Tonight

The first weekend of ... Festival concerts by the ... ton Symphony Orchestra in ... 6,000 seat Music Shed opens ... night at Tanglewood. Tonight's concert at 8:30 will be conducted by the orchestra's music ... Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and ... vinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" ... in Three Deals). Samuel ... first 'cellist of the Boston ... phony Orchestra, will be ... in the first United States ... formance of the original ... of Tchaikovsky's Rococo ... tions for Cello and Orche... Munch will close ... with Tchaikovsky's ... phony, the "Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow ... at 8:30 will be ... Pierre Monteux. His prog... include Mendelssohn's ... Cave" Overture, Tchai... Fifth Symphony, and, ... this weekend's tribute to ... birthday of Igor Stra... Rite of Spring." Mr. M... ducted the first perfo... this work in Paris in ... later introduced it in B... New York.

Sunday afternoon's ... 2:30 will again be ... rection of Dr. Munch ...

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
JUL 24 195

John Brook

Isaac Stern will be violin soloist at Tanglewood in the B... Concerto Saturday night, Aug. 3, and the Beethoven Co... Friday night, Aug. 9. He will also give recitals at Cast... Ipswich, on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411

JUL 1... 1957

Berk... ival

The first week-end of ... Festival concerts by the ... ton Symphony Orches... 6000-seat Music Shed ... at Tanglewood, ... concert at 8:30 will be ... by the Charles Munch ... present music of Tchaikovsky ... Stravinsky. The program ... with Stravinsky's "Card ... (Ballet in Three Deals). ... Mayes, first 'cellist of the ... Symphony Orchestra, will ... loist in the first United Sta... formance of the original ... of Tchaikovsky's Rococo ... tions of Cello and Orchestra ... Munch will close the pro... with Tchaikovsky's Sixth ... phon, "the Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow ev... at 8:30 will be conducted by ... Monteux. His program will ... Mendelssohn's ... Overture, Tchaik... h Symphony, and con... ek-ends tribute to ... hday of Igor Stravinsk... e of Spring." Mr. Monteux ... the first performa... ork in Paris in 19... troduced it in Bost...

...ORK, N. Y.
...RALD TRIBUNE
...D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

...ires t...

...INS ... afternoon in th... Sym- ... of the Norfo... e its ... of Yale Univ... sum- ... House in Norfo... end's ... ts at ... his is ...

Sembrich S...

The Marcell... morial Studio ... ing on Lake ... open up thro... Records of th... brich Memo... show that the ... studio has h... visitors since i... to the public ... after her dea...

Ellenville S...

Virginia Co... Elektra for th... Richard Stra... is repeated in ... Festival at ... next Friday n... American-bor... appeared in ... The first, ac... minder by P... the New Yor... Music Divisi... York-born Lu... 1921), who be... Weingartner'... Recommende... by Jean de R... Elektra in ... Vienna perfo... 24, 1908.

Mme. Ma... mainly in Eu... with the Bo... pany with ... ducting in 1...

Philip Mac... tone solos ... "Canticum ... Orff's "Carm... Leopold Sto... Ellenville Th... day nights, ... by the NB... for its secon... severe attack

...ner series in western ...setts; chamber music, ...ntals and jazz will also ...n this area during the ...weeks.

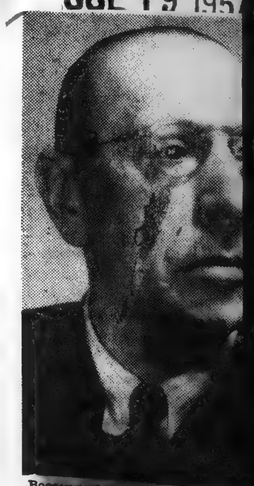
...mple of Music at South ..., near Pittsfield, will ...nt chamber music con... ...inning at 3 p.m., on ... July 19 and Aug. 9; ...s, July 20, 27 and Aug. ...undays, Sept. 22, 29 and ... The two Friday con... ...for youthful audiences. ...York Brass Ensemble ...Art Quintet will give ... opening programs.

...Mulligan's quartet and ...Baker Dancers will ap... ...night in the weekly jazz ...at the Music Barn near ...wood. The After Dinner ...Company will give a ...ple bill in the Music Barn ...5, 6 and 7, presenting ...works by Mark Bucci, ...arlo Menotti, Gerald ...ott and Meyer Kupfer... The company was formed ...nglewood eight summers ...ut these will be its first ... performances in this ...borhood.

...free Sunday afternoon ...f the Cummington School ... Arts at Cummington, ...continues through Aug. ...next three programs will ...oted to chamber music. ...ighboring northwestern ...ticut Benny Goodman will ...day with the Berkshire ...s in the weekly chamber ...eries at Music Mountain, ...Village, Conn. Bach can... ...will be sung Wednesday ... Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross ...and join in a performance of ...Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," ...climaxing the observance of the ...composer's birthday. First per... ...formed in St. Mark's Cathedral in ...Venice in 1956, the work is dedi... ...cated to Venice and to St. Mark. ...Isaac Stern will be soloist in the ...closing half of the program, per... ...forming the Tchaikovsky Violin ...Concerto. This will be the first of ...three appearances Mr. Stern will ...make at Tanglewood this summer.

...IOLINIST ... the Boston S... ...plays Brahm... ...ther appear...

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 19 1957



Bossey and Hawkes

Igor Stravinsky's 75th ... niversary ... celebra... Tanglewood ... week ... with performances of th... his works.

TIGHT BINDING

[144]

THE BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 14, 1957

First Week-End of Symphony Concerts at Tanglewood

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open on Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat Music Shed in Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon July 21 under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of the 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, on July 21, and Samuel Mayes, cello, Friday night. The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The Orchestra of 105 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach - Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Friday evening concert conducted by Charles Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the Orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique). Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work. The Variations were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in the order of the variations.

Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

The concert of Saturday evening, will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Regular Conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, Mr. Monteux has appeared frequently in recent years as guest conductor at Tanglewood and in Boston. He shared with Dr. Munch the concerts of the Orchestra's European tour in 1952, the transcontinental tour in 1952, and the European tour of last summer, conducting concerts in both Leningrad and Moscow, as well as in Edinburgh, London, Paris and Switzerland. Mr. Monteux' program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring" which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysees where the performance took place.

The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark.) The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross. The "Canticum Sacrum" was first performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice as part of the Venice Festival in September 1956.

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (August 3) and Beethoven (August 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture.

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday, July 19, at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its official debut in this same hall in the summer of 1955. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, Piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus, and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio is performed for the first time at this concert.

Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 18, 1957

First Berkshire Night Concert In Music Shed Tomorrow Night

TANGLEWOOD — The first in a series of Friday Berkshire Nights at Tanglewood will be tomorrow evening, the opening Berkshire Festival concert by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat music Shed.

1,200 Tickets Sold

Purpose of the Berkshire Nights is to give area residents who live within easy driving distance of Tanglewood a chance to spread out their concert going over four weekends and to take advantage of a special series rate. About 1,200 tickets were sold during a drive in May conducted by a Berkshire committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Edward H. Cumpston Jr. Subscriptions were offered at a reduced rate of four tickets for the price of three.

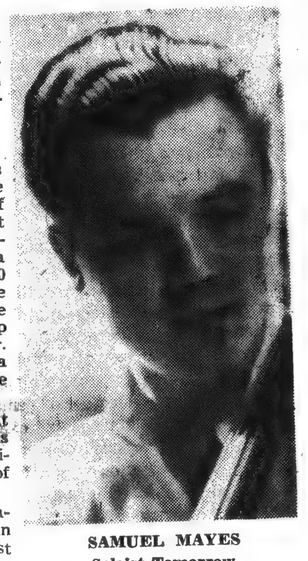
Tomorrow night's concert at 8:30 will be conducted by Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra. Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, "Pathetique."

The concert Saturday evening at 8:30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Mr. Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Koussevitzky Memorial

Sunday afternoon's concert at 2:30 again will be under the direction of Dr. Munch, who dedicates this program to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, which will be remembered as a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky. Soloists John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday. First performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice in 1956, the work is dedicated to Venice and to St. Mark.



SAMUEL MAYES
Soloist Tomorrow

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the closing half of the program, performing the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. This will be the first of three appearances Mr. Stern will make at Tanglewood this summer.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center may attend several events by students and faculty of the school during the weekend. One of the series of lectures in the Seminar on Contemporary Music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon at 3:15.

Babbitt To Lecture

The Music Center's composer in residence, Milton Babbitt, will deliver the lecture, and musical illustrations will be performed by a group of musicians at Tanglewood this summer under a special program for study of contemporary music made possible by the generosity of the Fromm Music Foundation.

The Sunday morning Chamber Music concert at 10 o'clock and the Composer's Forum on Sunday evening at 8:30 will also be open to Friends.

JULY 19, 1957.

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE,

Shed Concerts Open Tonight

The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000 seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood. Tonight's concert at 8:30 will be conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra. Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow evening at 8:30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Mr. Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Sunday afternoon's concert at 2:30 will again be under the direction of Dr. Munch who dedicates this program to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia which will be remembered as a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky. Soloists John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday. First performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice in 1956, the work is dedicated to Venice and to St. Mark. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the closing half of the program, performing the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. This will be the first of three appearances Mr. Stern will make at Tanglewood this sum-

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

JUL 14 1957

Warren Clark Jr.

TANGLEWOOD REHEARSAL—Hugh Ross, upper right, prepares chorus and soloists Donald Gramm and John McCollum, standing, for their performance of Igor Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" next Sunday with Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch.

Berkshire Weekend Schedule Slated

The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000 seat Music Shed opens tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Director Charles Munch presenting music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra.

Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

Saturday at 8:30 p. m. Pierre Monteux will conduct Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

Dr. Munch will dedicate Sunday's program at 2:30 to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky.

* * *

SOLOISTS John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday.

Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday. First performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice in 1956, the work is dedicated to Venice and to St. Mark. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the closing half of the program, performing the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. This will be the first of three appearances Mr. Stern will make at Tanglewood this sum-

John Brook

Isaac Stern will be violin soloist at Tanglewood in the Concerto Saturday night, Aug. 3, and the Beethoven C Friday night, Aug. 9. He will also give recitals at Cas Ipswich, on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411

JUL 18 1957

Berkshire Festival

The first week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6000-seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood, Lenox. Tonight's concert at 8:30 will be conducted by the Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra. Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow evening at 8:30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will in-

...YORK, N. Y.
...ALD TRIBUNE
D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

...7

...hires

...RKINS
...n Sym-
...make its
...e sum-
...k end's
...certs at
This is from the mer series in western
...usetts; chamber music,
...ditals and jazz will also in this area during the weeks.
...mple of Music at South
..., near Pittsfield, will
...ht chamber music con-
...ginning at 3 p.m., on July 19 and Aug. 9;
...ys, July 20, 27 and Aug.
...undays, Sept. 22, 29 and
The two Friday con-
...for youthful audiences.
...w York Brass Ensemble
...Art Quintet will give opening programs.
Mulligan's quartet and Baker Dancers will ap-
...night in the weekly jazz
...at the Music Barn near
...wood. The After Dinner
Company will give a
...ble bill in the Music Barn
...5, 6 and 7, presenting
...works by Mark Bucci,
...rlo Menotti, Gerald
...tt and Meyer Kupfer-
The company was formed
...glewood eight summers
...t these will be its first performances in this
...rhood.
...free Sunday afternoon
...the Cummington School
...ts at Cummington,
...inues through Aug.
three programs will
...to chamber music.
...ring northwestern
...nny Goodman will
...with the Berkshire
...he weekly chamber
...at Music Mountain,
... Conn. Bach can-sung Wednesday afternoon in th of the Norfo

of Yale Univ
House in Nort

Sembrich

The Marcel morial Studio
ing on Lake
open up thro
Records of th
brich Memo show that the studio has b visitors since to the public after her dea

Ellenville

Virginia Co
Elektra for th
Richard Stra is repeated in Festival at next Friday n
American-bor appeared in
The first, ac minder by P
the New Yor
Music Divisi
York-born Lu
1921), who be Weingartner' Recommende
by Jean de F
Elektra in Vienna perfo
24, 1908.
Mme. Ma mainly in Eu
with the Bo pany with ducting in 1
Philip Mac
tone solos
"Canticum
Orff's "Carm
Leopold Stok
Ellenville Th
day nights,
by the NB
for its secon severe attack

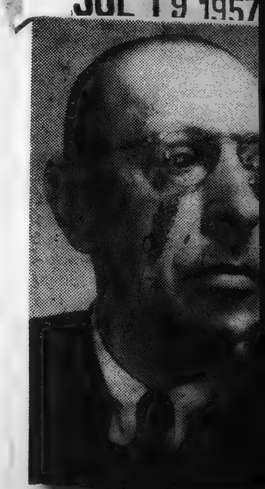
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 19 1957



...75th
...week
with performances of thre his works.

TIGHT BINDING

[45]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 14 1957

Berkshires to Hear Jazz

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will make its first appearances of the summer in the coming week end's Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox. This is the principal, but far from the only summer series in western Massachusetts: chamber music, opera, recitals and jazz will also be heard in this area during the next few weeks.

The Temple of Music at South Mountain, near Pittsfield, will house eight chamber music concerts beginning at 3 p.m., on Fridays, July 19 and Aug. 9; Saturdays, July 20, 27 and Aug. 3, and Sundays, Sept. 22, 29 and Oct. 6. The two Friday concerts are for youthful audiences. The New York Brass Ensemble and New Art Quintet will give the two opening programs.

Jerry Mulligan's quartet and the Lee Baker Dancers will appear tonight in the weekly jazz program at the Music Barn near Tanglewood. The After Dinner Opera Company will give a quadruple bill in the Music Barn on Aug. 5, 6 and 7, presenting short works by Mark Bucci, Gian-Carlo Menotti, Gerald Cockshott and Meyer Kupferman. The company was formed at Tanglewood eight summers ago, but these will be its first public performances in this neighborhood.

The free Sunday afternoon series of the Cummington School of the Arts at Cummington, Mass., continues through Aug. 11; the next three programs will be devoted to chamber music. In neighboring northwestern Conecticut Benny Goodman will play today with the Berkshire Quartet in the weekly chamber music series at Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn. Bach cantatas will be sung Wednesday afternoon in the weekly schedule of the Norfolk Music School of Yale University at Battell House in Norfolk.

* * *

Sembrich Studio

The Marcella Sembrich Memorial Studio at Bolton Landing on Lake George, N. Y., is open up through Labor Day. Records of the Marcella Sembrich Memorial Association show that the famous soprano's studio has had nearly 33,000 visitors since it was first opened to the public in 1937, two years after her death.

* * *

Ellenville Singers

Virginia Copeland, who sings Elektra for the third time when Richard Strauss' fourth opera is repeated in the Empire State Festival at Ellenville, N. Y., next Friday night, is the second American-born singer who has appeared in this exacting role. The first, according to a reminder by Philip L. Miller, of the New York Public Library's Music Division, was the New York-born Lucile Marcel (1887-1921), who became the late Felix Weingartner's third wife in 1911. Recommended to Weingartner by Jean de Reszke, she was the Elektra in the opera's first Vienna performance on March 24, 1908.

Mme. Marcel's career was mainly in Europe, but she sang with the Boston Opera Company with Weingartner conducting in 1912 and 1913.

Philip Maero, who sings baritone solos in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" and Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana" under Leopold Stokowski's direction at Ellenville Thursday and Saturday nights, has been signed up by the NBC Opera Company for its second tour this fall. A severe attack of polio threatened to end the ex-Marine World War II veteran's career two years ago, but he was encouraged to try a comeback by the Rev. Don Leonardo Pavone, pastor of the Roman Catholic Church of Our Lady of Fatima at Port Washington. The priest persuaded another of his parishioners, Perry Como, to give Mr. Maero a television appearance last year with successful results.

* * *

Festival in Brussels

"Decade de la Nouvelle Musique Américaine" is the title of an American Music festival to be held in Brussels in October, under the sponsorship of the Belgian Center of International Service. The repertory will range from orchestral, choral and operatic music to jazz and experimental electronic music. Belgian musicians will be heard under an American conductor, Alfred Wallenstein, and with American soloists.

An American committee headed by Howard Mitchell, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington, will recommend works to the Belgian committee which will make the final choice. The other members of Mr. Mitchell's committee are Dr. Howard Hanson, Norman Dello Joio, Roger Sessions, William Schuman, Oliver Daniel, Dr. Gustave Reese and Edward Downes, with David S. Cooper as executive secretary.

* * *

The Operatic World

Igor Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progres[s] ... had a widespr[ead] ice pre[miere] ... been h[eld] by the ... Daily T[elegraph] ... forman[ce] ... July 22, by the New Opera Company at Sadler's Wells. It has already been heard in Britain, however, at the Edinburgh Festival. Arthur Benjamin's Dickens-based opera, "A Tale of Two Cities," will have its stage premiere at Sadler's Wells the following night; it was first heard in a London broadcast in 1953.

Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" will be produced by the Vienna State Opera next April with Karl Boehm conducting. Lisa Della Casa, Paul Schoeffler and Wolfgang Windgassen are among the singers known here slated for leading roles. On the home front, the Amato Opera Theater will give a new production of "Fledermaus" in English on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights from July 26 through Aug. 18 in its theater ... Bleecker St.

Pierre Monteux, who will conduct at Tanglewood next Saturday evening.

Enterprise
MAYNARD, Mass.
Weekly Ind. Rep.
Comb. Circ. 4,728
JUL 18 1957

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,794
JUL 19 1957

Weekend Concert Programs

The Boston Symphony orchestra will devote itself to works of Tchaikowsky and Stavinsky in the music shed concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. this weekend.

Symphony No. 5 by Tchaikowsky and Stravinsky's "Le Sacre du Printemps" will be presented Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Pierre Monteux conducting.

Sunday's scheduled concert will be in the afternoon at 2:30 and will be a memorial to the late Sergei Koussevitzky, former conductor of the Boston Symphony and director of the Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch will conduct.

The program will consist of Tchaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet," Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum and the Tchaikowsky violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

Music Mountain

The fourth Sunday afternoon chamber music concert of the 28th summer series at Music Mountain, Falls Village, will present Janna Dawson, pianist, as guest artist with the Berkshire Quartet.

The program will include the "Quinten" Quartet by Haydn; the Quartet in A Minor by the contemporary English composer, William Walton; and the Piano Quin[tet] ... Schumann, with Janna[...]

An adde[d] ... uing throug[h] ... exhibit of ... Sascha M[...] in the Gree[n ...]

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012
JUL 19 1957

Berkshire Weekend Schedule Slated

The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000 seat Music Shed opens tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Director Charles Munch presenting music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra.

Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

Saturday at 8:30 p. m. Pierre Monteux will conduct Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

Dr. Munch will dedicate Sunday's program at 2:30 to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky.

* * *

SOLOISTS John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 19 1957

Boston Symphony Music Shed Series Opens Tonight

The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Munch Conducting

Tonight's concert, at 8.30, will be conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra. Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow evening at 8.30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelsohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture. Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Sunday afternoon's concert at 2.30 will again be under the direction of Dr. Munch who dedicates this program to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia which will be remembered as a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky. Soloists John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday.

Stern is Soloist

First performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice in 1956, the work is dedicated to Venice and to St. Mark. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the closing half of the program, performing the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. This will be the first of three appearances Mr. Stern will make at Tanglewood this summer.

As in previous years, Saturday morning's rehearsal by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed will be open to the public. The admission is devoted to the orchestra's pension fund.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center may attend several events by students and faculty of the school during the weekend, including the Sunday morning chamber music concert at 10 and the Composer's Forum Sunday evening at 8.30.

The Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 19, 1957

FESTIVAL WILL AT TANGLEWOOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south. The New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28. Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend. Programs for the following weekend (August [illegible]) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the four[th] end (August [illegible] to Beethove[n] will conduc[t] each weeken[d] conductor, C[harles Munch]. "Informatio[n] programs, as[k] this circular ... ilies in the E[ast] ... be had by ... Office, Tan[glewood], Massachusetts.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 19 1957

...ar as soloist with ...fternoon when he ...n will make two ...this year's festival.

Boosey and Hawkes

Igor Stravinsky's 75th anniversary will be celebrated at Tanglewood this week end with performances of three of his works.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535
JUL 19 1957

Shed Concerts Get Under Way At Tanglewood

Music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky Will Be Heard This Evening

The first week end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6000 seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood, Lenox. Tonight's concert, at 8.30, will be conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's "Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra." Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

TIGHT BINDING

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 14 1957

Berkshires to Hear Jazz

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will make its first appearances of the summer in the coming week end's Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox. This is the principal, but far from the only summer series in western Massachusetts: chamber music, opera, recitals and jazz will also be heard in this area during the next few weeks.

The Temple of Music at South Mountain, near Pittsfield, will house eight chamber music concerts beginning at 3 p.m., on Fridays, July 19 and Aug. 9; Saturdays, July 20, 27 and Aug. 3, and Sundays, Sept. 22, 29 and Oct. 6. The two Friday concerts are for youthful audiences. The New York Brass Ensemble and New Art Quintet will give the two opening programs.

Jerry Mulligan's quartet and the Lee Baker Dancers will appear tonight in the weekly jazz program at the Music Barn near Tanglewood. The After Dinner Opera Company will give a quadruple bill in the Music Barn on Aug. 5, 6 and 7, presenting short works by Mark Bucci, Gian-Carlo Menotti, Gerald Cockshott and Meyer Kupferman. The company was formed at Tanglewood eight summers ago, but these will be its first public performances in this neighborhood.

The free Sunday afternoon series of the Cummington School of the Arts at Cummington, Mass., continues through Aug. 11; the next three programs will be devoted to chamber music. In neighboring northwestern Conecticut Benny Goodman will play today with the Berkshire Quartet in the weekly chamber music series at Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn. Bach cantatas will be sung Wednesday afternoon in the weekly schedule of the Norfolk Music School of Yale University at Battell House in Norfolk.

* * *

Sembrich Studio

The Marcella Sembrich Memorial Studio at Bolton Landing on Lake George, N. Y., is open up through Labor Day. Records of the Marcella Sembrich Memorial Association show that the famous soprano's studio has had nearly 33,000 visitors since it was first opened to the public in 1937, two years after her death.

* * *

Ellenville Singers

Virginia Copeland, who sings Elektra for the third time when Richard Strauss' fourth opera is repeated in the Empire State Festival at Ellenville, N. Y., next Friday night, is the second American-born singer who has appeared in this exacting role. The first, according to a reminder by Philip L. Miller, of the New York Public Library's Music Division, was the New York-born Lucile Marcel (1887-1921), who became the late Felix Weingartner's third wife in 1911. Recommended to Weingartner by Jean de Reszke, she was the Elektra in the opera's first Vienna performance on March 24, 1908.

Mme. Marcel's career was mainly in Europe, but she sang with the Boston Opera Company with Weingartner conducting in 1912 and 1913.

Philip Maero, who sings baritone solos in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" and Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana" under Leopold Stokowski's direction at Ellenville Thursday and Saturday nights, has been signed up by the NBC Opera Company for its second tour this fall. A severe attack of polio threatened to end the ex-Marine World War II veteran's career two years ago, but he was encouraged to try a comeback by the Rev. Don Leonardo Pavone, paster of the Roman Catholic Church of Our Lady of Fatima at Port Washington. The priest persuaded another of his parishioners, Perry Como, to give Mr. Maero a television appearance last year with successful results.

* * *

Festival in Brussels

"Decade de la Nouvelle Musique Américaine" is the title of an American Music festival to be held in Brussels in October, under the sponsorship of the Belgian Center of International Service. The repertory will range from orchestral, choral and operatic music to jazz and experimental electronic music. Belgian musicians will be heard under an American conductor, Alfred Wallenstein, and with American soloists.

An American committee headed by Howard Mitchell, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington, will recommend works to the Belgian committee which will make the final choice. The other members of Mr. Mitchell's committee are Dr. Howard Hanson, Norman Dello Joio, Roger Sessions, William Schuman, Oliver Daniel, Dr. Gustave Reese and Edward Downes, with David S. Cooper as executive secretary.

* * *

The Operatic World

Igor Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progres widespr ice pre been h
by the Daily T
forman

Enterprise
MAYNARD, Mass.
Weekly Ind. Rep.
Comb. Circ. 4,728
JUL 18 1957

Pierre Monteux, who will conduct at Tanglewood next Saturday evening.

July 22, by the New Opera Company at Sadler's Wells. It has already been heard in Britain, however, at the Edinburgh Festival. Arthur Benjamin's Dickens-based opera, "A Tale of Two Cities," will have its stage premiere at Sadler's Wells the following night; it was first heard in a London broadcast in 1953.

Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" will be produced by the Vienna State Opera next April with Karl Boehm conducting. Lisa Della Casa, Paul Schoeffler and Wolfgang Windgassen are among the singers known here slated for leading roles. On the home front, the Amato Opera Theater will give a new production of "Fledermaus" in English on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights from July 26 through Aug. 18 in its theater Bleecker St.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,794
JUL 19 1957

Weekend Concert Programs

The Boston Symphony orchestra will devote itself to works of Tchaikowsky and Stavinsky in the music shed concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. this weekend.

Symphony No. 5 by Tchaikowsky and Stravinsky's "Le Sacre du Printemps" will be presented Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Pierre Monteux conducting.

Sunday's scheduled concert will be in the afternoon at 2:30 and will be a memorial to the late Sergei Koussevitzky, former conductor of the Boston Symphony and director of the Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch will conduct.

The program will consist of Tchaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet," Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum and the Tchaikowsky violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

Music Mountain

The fourth Sunday afternoon chamber music concert of the 28th summer series at Music Mountain, Falls Village, will present Janna Dawson, pianist, as guest artist with the Berkshire Quartet.

The program will include the 'Quinten" Quartet by Haydn; the Quartet in A Minor by the contemporary English composer, William Walton; and the Piano Quin
with Janna
An added
uing throug exhibit of Sascha Ma in the Gree

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 19 1957

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012
JUL 19 1957

Berkshire Weekend Schedule Slated

The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000 seat Music Shed opens tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Director Charles Munch presenting music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra.

Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

Saturday at 8:30 p. m. Pierre Monteux will conduct Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

Dr. Munch will dedicate Sunday's program at 2:30 to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky.

* * *

SOLOISTS John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday.

The Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 19, 1957—

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 19 1957

ar as soloist with fternoon when he rn will make two this year's festival.

Boosey and Hawkes

Igor Stravinsky's 75th anniversary will be celebrated at Tanglewood this week end with performances of three of his works.

FESTIVAL WILL AT TANGLEWOOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south. The New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28 Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the four end (August to Beethove will conduc each weeken conductor, C

Information programs, as tive circular ities in the B be had by Office, Tan
Massachusetts

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535
JUL 19 1957

Shed Concerts Get Under Way At Tanglewood

Music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky Will Be Heard This Evening

The first week end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6000 seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood, Lenox. Tonight's concert, at 8.30, will be conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's "Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra." Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

Boston Symphony Music Shed Series Opens Tonight

The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Munch Conducting

Tonight's concert, at 8.30, will be conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra. Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow evening at 8.30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Sunday afternoon's concert at 2.30 will again be under the direction of Dr. Munch who dedicates this program to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia which will be remembered as a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky. Soloists John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday.

Stern is Soloist

First performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice in 1956, the work is dedicated to Venice and to St. Mark. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the closing half of the program, performing the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. This will be the first of three appearances Mr. Stern will make at Tanglewood this summer.

As in previous years, Saturday morning's rehearsal by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed will be open to the public. The admission is devoted to the orchestra's pension fund.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center may attend several events by students and faculty of the school during the weekend, including the Sunday morning chamber music concert at 10 and the Composer's Forum Sunday evening at 8.30.

TIGHT BINDING

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 14 1957

Berkshires to Hear Jazz

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will make its first appearances of the summer in the coming week end's Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox. This is the principal, but far from the only summer series in western Massachusetts; chamber music, opera, recitals and jazz will also be heard in this area during the next few weeks.

The Temple of Music at South Mountain, near Pittsfield, will house eight chamber music concerts beginning at 3 p.m., on Fridays, July 19 and Aug. 9; Saturdays, July 20, 27 and Aug. 3, and Sundays, Sept. 22, 29 and Oct. 6. The two Friday concerts are for youthful audiences. The New York Brass Ensemble and New Art Quintet will give the two opening programs.

Jerry Mulligan's quartet and the Lee Baker Dancers will appear tonight in the weekly jazz program at the Music Barn near Tanglewood. The After Dinner Opera Company will give a quadruple bill in the Music Barn on Aug. 5, 6 and 7, presenting short works by Mark Bucci, Gian-Carlo Menotti, Gerald Cockshott and Meyer Kupferman. The company was formed at Tanglewood eight summers ago, but these will be its first public performances in this neighborhood.

The free Sunday afternoon series of the Cummington School of the Arts at Cummington, Mass., continues through Aug. 11; the next three programs will be devoted to chamber music. In neighboring northwestern Conecticut Benny Goodman will play today with the Berkshire Quartet in the weekly chamber music series at Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn. Bach cantatas will be sung Wednesday afternoon in the weekly schedule of the Norfolk Music School of Yale University at Battell House in Norfolk.

* * *

Sembrich Studio

The Marcella Sembrich Memorial Studio at Bolton Landing on Lake George, N. Y., is open up through Labor Day. Records of the Marcella Sembrich Memorial Association show that the famous soprano's studio has had nearly 33,000 visitors since it was first opened to the public in 1937, two years after her death.

* * *

Ellenville Singers

Virginia Copeland, who sings Elektra for the third time when Richard Strauss' fourth opera is repeated in the Empire State Festival at Ellenville, N. Y., next Friday night, is the second American-born singer who has appeared in this exacting role. The first, according to a reminder by Philip L. Miller, of the New York Public Library's Music Division, was the New York-born Lucile Marcel (1887-1921), who became the late Felix Weingartner's third wife in 1911. Recommended to Weingartner by Jean de Reszke, she was the Elektra in the opera's first Vienna performance on March 24, 1908.

Mme. Marcel's career was mainly in Europe, but she sang with the Boston Opera Company with Weingartner conducting in 1912 and 1913.

Philip Maero, who sings baritone solos in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" and Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana" under Leopold Stokowski's direction at Ellenville Thursday and Saturday nights, has been signed up by the NBC Opera Company for its second tour this fall. A severe attack of polio threatened to end the ex-Marine World War II veteran's career two years ago, but he was encouraged to try a comeback by the Rev. Don Leonardo Pavone, paster of the Roman Catholic Church of Our Lady of Fatima at Port Washington. The priest persuaded another of his parishioners, Perry Como, to give Mr. Maero a television appearance last year with successful results.

* * *

Festival in Brussels

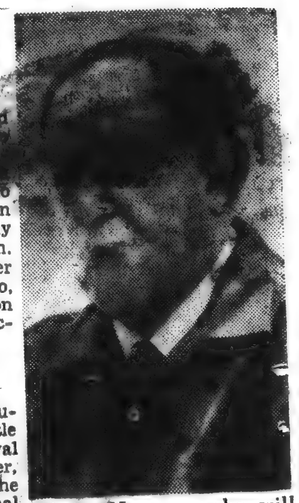
"Decade de la Nouvelle Musique Américaine" is the title of an American Music festival to be held in Brussels in October, under the sponsorship of the Belgian Center of International Service. The repertory will range from orchestral, choral and operatic music to jazz and experimental electronic music. Belgian musicians will be heard under an American conductor, Alfred Wallenstein, and with American soloists.

An American committee headed by Howard Mitchell, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington, will recommend works to the Belgian committee which will make the final choice. The other members of Mr. Mitchell's committee are Dr. Howard Hanson, Norman Dello Joio, Roger Sessions, William Schuman, Oliver Daniel, Dr. Gustave Reese and Edward Downes, with David S. Cooper as executive secretary.

* * *

The Operatic World

Igor Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress," which has had a widespread career since its Venice premiere in 1951, has not yet been heard in London, judging by the announcement in "The Daily Telegraph" of a first performance there Monday night.



Pierre Monteux, who will conduct at Tanglewood next Saturday evening.

July 22, by the New Opera Company at Sadler's Wells. It has already been heard in Britain, however, at the Edinburgh Festival. Arthur Benjamin's Dickens-based opera, "A Tale of Two Cities," will have its stage premiere at Sadler's Wells the following night; it was first heard in a London broadcast in 1953.

Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" will be produced by the Vienna State Opera next April with Karl Boehm conducting. Lisa Della Casa, Paul Schoeffler and Wolfgang Windgassen are among the singers known here slated for leading roles. On the home front, the Amato Opera Theater will give a new production of "Fledermaus" in English on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights from July 26 through Aug. 18 in its theater at 159 Bleecker St.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,794
JUL 19 1957

Weekend Concert Programs

The Boston Symphony orchestra will devote itself to works of Tchaikowsky and Stavinsky in the music shed concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. this weekend.

Symphony No. 5 by Tchaikowsky and Stravinsky's "Le Sacre du Printemps" will be presented Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Pierre Monteux conducting.

Sunday's scheduled concert will be in the afternoon at 2:30 and will be a memorial to the late Sergei Koussevitzky, former conductor of the Boston Symphony and director of the Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch will conduct.

The program will consist of Tchaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet," Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum and the Tchaikowsky violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

Music Mountain

The fourth Sunday afternoon chamber music concert of the 28th summer series at Music Mountain, Falls Village, will present Janna Dawson, pianist, as guest artist with the Berkshire Quartet.

The program will include the 'Quinten" Quartet by Haydn; the Quartet in A Minor by the contemporary English composer, William Walton; and the Piano Quintet by Schumann, with Janna Dawson assisting.

An added attraction continuing through July 28 will be an exhibit of twelve paintings by Sascha Maurer, watercolorist, in the Green Room.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012
JUL 19 1957

Berkshire Weekend Schedule Slated

The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000 seat Music Shed opens tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Director Charles Munch presenting music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra.

Dr. Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

Saturday at 8:30 p. m. Pierre Monteux will conduct Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

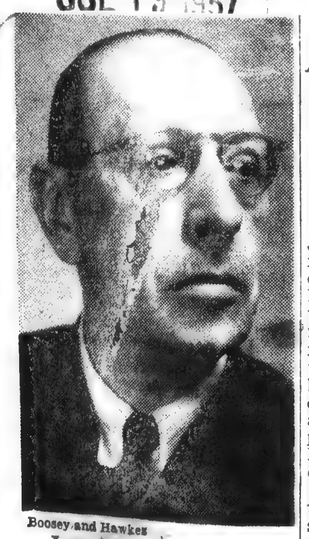
Dr. Munch will dedicate Sunday's program at 2:30 to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky.

* * *

SOLOISTS John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday.

The Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 19, 1957

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 19 1957



Boosey and Hawkes

Igor Stravinsky's 75th anniversary will be celebrated at Tanglewood this week end with performances of three of his works.

L
OOD
BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south. The New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28. Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend. Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (August 9-10-11) is devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

ıony Music
pens Tonight

... of Berkshire Fes... concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Munch Conducting

Tonight's concert, at 8:30, will be conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra. Dr. Much will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the "Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow evening at 8:30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and, continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Sunday afternoon's concert at 2:30 will again be under the direction of Dr. Munch who dedicates this program to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program opens with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia which will be remembered as a special favorite of Dr. Koussevitzky. Soloists John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, will join in a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," climaxing the observance of the composer's birthday.

Stern is Soloist

First performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice in 1956 the work is dedicated to Venice and to St. Mark. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the closing half of the program, performing the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. This will be the first of three appearances Mr. Stern will make at Tanglewood this summer.

As in previous years, Saturday morning's rehearsal by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed will be open to the public. The admission is devoted to the orchestra's pension fund.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center may attend several events by students and faculty of the school during the weekend, including the Sunday morning chamber music concert at 10 and the Composer's Forum Sunday evening at 8:30.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD
DIAL RE 3-1121
Learn how little it will cost you to run an ad like this every week in The Union and Daily News.
ADVERTISE
IT PAYS TO DEVELOP OWN ECONOMY
Amherst, July 19—Mexico will develop resources independently, Consul General Manuel Aguilar said last night at the [4407]

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443

JUL 18 1957

Festival Concerts Go Into High Gear

Entire Boston Symphony Will Be Heard Friday

Music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky Will Be Featured This Week-end in Giant Music Shed.—Latter Honored for 75th Birthday Anniversary This Year.

The first week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's music director, will open Friday with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox.

The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening conducted by guest conductor Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin (July 21), and Samuel Mayes, cello (July 19). The concert of Sunday afternoon (July 21) will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6000 accommodated in the Music Shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 week-end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert conducted by Charles Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the orchestra's first

Tanglewood Turn to twelfth page

chestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle) in honor of Saint Mark. The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUN 16 1957

Igor Stravinsky, whose seventy-fifth birthday tomorrow will be celebrated throughout the summer at music festivals in America and in most countries of Europe.

Music Events Hail Stravinsky's Birth

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The most prominent musical birthday of 1957 is that of a living and active composer, Igor Stravinsky, who will be seventy-five years old tomorrow. On that date, he will be one of the conductors of the program of his music which closes the Los Angeles Music Festival; this offers the "Symphony of Psalms," the new "Canticum Sacrum" and the premiere of his ballet, "Agon."

Mr. Stravinsky would have to travel far to attend all of the events which are honoring this occasion now and during the next few weeks. In July he will go to New Mexico, where the recently organized Santa Fe Opera Association will produce his "The Rake's Progress" on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, July 17, 19 and 20, with Robert Craft conducting and Leopold Sachse as stage director.

In the eastern United States the anniversary will be observed in festivals in Boston, Ellenville, N. Y., and Tanglewood. His music will occupy the three closing evenings of Boston's free Arts Festival in the Public Garden on June 28, 29 and 30 with his son, Soulima, as soloist in the Capriccio for piano and orchestra. As already announced, the "Canticum" will be performed at Ellenville on Thursday and Saturday nights, July 18 and 20, under Leopold Stokowski, and at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, July 21, under Charles Munch. He will also be represented in the two other concerts of that Berkshire week end, with "Jeu de Cartes" Friday, July 19, under Mr. Munch, and "Le Sacre du Printemps" Saturday, July 20, under Pierre Monteux.

In this summer's festival at Aspen, Colo., he will figure in ten of the thirty programs. The works to be heard include the Three Pieces for clarinet solo, June 26; Three Pieces for String Quartet, June 29; piano excerpts from Petrouchka, July 3; Danses Concertantes, July 7; "Pulcinella," July 14; Duo Concertante, July 17; "Dumbarton Oaks," July 28; Two Poems and Three Japanese Lyrics, Aug. 5; "L'Histoire du Soldat," Aug. 11, and Four Russian Songs, Aug. 25.

* * *

Also in Europe

The most intensive celebration of Mr. Stravinsky's birthday abroad is in the current Holland Festival. "The Rake's Progress" was scheduled for Amsterdam last night, and will also be staged in The Hague tomorrow and June 25, in Utrecht this Wednesday, in Rotterdam this Saturday and in Amsterdam July 6. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct all but the last of these performances.

Mr. Monteux will conduct the Violin Concerto July 3 at Scheveningen, with Arthur Grumiaux as soloist; the Concerto for Orchestra in D will be played by Szymon Goldberg's ensemble in Scheveningen July 9 and Amsterdam July 12. The Cleveland Orchestra was scheduled to play the "Fire Bird" suite in Amsterdam last night.

* * *

Thomson Lectures

Virgil Thomson is the subject of a lecture series to be given by John Cage on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, beginning June 18, at the New School for Social Research, subtitled "The Evolution of a Composer." The course will be illustrated by live and recorded performances. Towards the end of the course, the composer will attend and discuss his current activities.

* * *

Harrell Rejoins Met

Mack Harrell, baritone, who was not heard at the Metropolitan Opera last season, will rejoin its roster for 1957-'58. Among his scheduled roles are Amfortas in "Parsifal," Jochanaan in "Salome" and Kurvenal in "Tristan und Isolde."

Sun (e)
HUDSON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 2,085

JUL 12 1957

FESTIVAL WILL AT TANGLEWOOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south. The New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28 Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (August 9-10-11) is devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 16 1957

First of Weekend Concerts by Boston Symphony is Friday

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will open Friday, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000-seat music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox

Munch and Monteux

The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon under Dr Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening conducted by guest conducter, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, on Sunday and Samuel Mayes, cello on Friday. The concert Sunday afternoon will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

In addition to the 6,000 accommodated in the music shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 week-end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert conducted by Dr. Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rocco Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique). Mr. Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work. The Variations were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in the order of the Variations. Mr. Mayes now performs them in the order intended by the composer, and is the first exponent in the Western world of this original version newly published in Moscow. Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

Saturday Evening

On Saturday evening the program to be conducted by Mr. Monteux will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring" which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysees where the performance took place. Mr. Monteux later introduced the work in Boston and in New York.

At the concert Sunday afternoon, to the memory of Dr. Koussevitsky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Orchestra and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality, the salute to Stravinsky will continue. Dr. Munch will conduct a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (the Sacred Canticle in Honor of St. Mark. The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross. The "Canticum Sacrum" was first performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice as part of the Venice Festival in September, 1956. The first American performance was on the West Coast as part of a special birthday concert on June 17 conducted by Stravinsky's pupil, Robert Craft. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (Aug. 3) and Beethoven (Aug. 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture.

The first of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

JUL 17 1957

Russian Favorites At Tanglewood This Weekend

The major concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will start Friday night when Charles Munch, director, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big music shed. The program will consist of "Jeu de Cartes" by Stravinsky, and two works by Tschaikowsky, Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, and the Sixth Symphony. Samuel Mayes will be 'cellist.

Saturday night Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor. The program will be: Mendelssohn's Fingal's Cave overture, Tschaikowsky Fifth Symphony, and "Le Sacre du Printemps" by Stravinsky.

On Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct the Koussevitsky Memorial Concert and [illegible] Stern will be violin soloist. The program is: "Romeo and Juliet" by Tschaikowsky, Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum, and Violin Concerto by Tschaikowsky.

The following weekend, July 26-28, the Festival programs will concentrate on the works of Berlioz, and Brahms will get special attention the first weekend in August.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

JUL 19 1957

Music

Sunday, July 21, Janna Dawson, pianist, will be guest artist with the Berkshire Quartet in chamber music by Haydn, Walton and Schumann. The concerts start at 4 p.m. at Music Mountain, Falls Village.

Friday, July 19, the first week of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will open in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., starting at 8:30 p.m. Music by Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky will be featured. On Saturday, July 20, the program will include works by Tchaikovsky, Stravinsky and Mendelssohn, under the baton of Pierre Monteux. The Koussevitsky Memorial Concert on Sunday, July 21, will be conducted by Dr Munch, and will feature the Tschaikovsky violin concerto, with Isaac Stern; Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum", with the Berkshire Festival chorus and soloists.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443
JUL 18 1957

Festival Concerts Go Into High Gear

Entire Boston Symphony Will Be Heard Friday

Music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky Will Be Featured This Week-end in Giant Music Shed.—Latter Honored for 75th Birthday Anniversary This Year.

The first week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's music director, will open Friday with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox.

The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening conducted by guest conductor Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin (July 21), and Samuel Mayes, cello (July 19). The concert of Sunday afternoon (July 21) will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6000 accommodated in the Music Shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 week-end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert conducted by Charles Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the orchestra's first

Tanglewood Turn to twelfth page

chestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle) in honor of Saint Mark. The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUN 16 1957

Igor Stravinsky, whose seventy-fifth birthday tomorrow will be celebrated throughout the summer at music festivals in America and in most countries of Europe.

Music Events Hail Stravinsky's Birth

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The most prominent musical birthday of 1957 is that of a living and active composer, Igor Stravinsky, who will be seventy-five years old tomorrow. On that date, he will be one of the conductors of the program of his music which closes the Los Angeles Music Festival; this offers the "Symphony of Psalms," the new "Canticum Sacrum" and the premiere of his ballet, "Agon."

Mr. Stravinsky would have to travel far to attend all of the events which are honoring this occasion now and during the next few weeks. In July he will go to New Mexico, where the recently organized Santa Fe Opera Association will produce his "The Rake's Progress" on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, July 17, 19 and 20, with Robert Craft conducting and Leopold Sachse as stage director.

In the eastern United States the anniversary will be observed in festivals in Boston, Ellenville, N. Y., and Tanglewood. His music will occupy the three closing evenings of Boston's free Arts Festival in the Public Garden on June 28, 29 and 30 with his son, Soulima, as soloist in the Capriccio for piano and orchestra. As already announced, the "Canticum" will be performed at Ellenville on Thursday and Saturday nights, July 18 and 20, under Leopold Stokowski, and at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, July 21, under Charles Munch. He will also be represented in the two other concerts of that Berkshire week end, with "Jeu de Cartes" Friday, July 19, under Mr. Munch, and "Le Sacre du Printemps" Saturday, July 20, under Pierre Monteux.

In this summer's festival at Aspen, Colo., he will figure in ten of the thirty programs. The works to be heard include the Three Pieces for clarinet solo, June 26; Three Pieces for String Quartet, June 29; piano excerpts from "Petrouchka," July 3; Danses Concertantes, July 7; "Pulcinella," July 14; Duo Concertante, July 17; "Dumbarton Oaks," July 28; Two Poems and Three Japanese Lyrics, Aug. 5; "L'Histoire du Soldat," Aug. 11, and Four Russian Songs, Aug. 25.

* * *

Also in Europe

The most intensive celebration of Mr. Stravinsky's birthday abroad is in the current Holland Festival. "The Rake's Progress" was scheduled for Amsterdam last night, and will also be staged in The Hague tomorrow and June 25, in Utrecht this Wednesday, in Rotterdam this Saturday and in Amsterdam July 6. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct all but the last of these performances.

Mr. Monteux will conduct the Violin Concerto July 3 at Scheveningen, with Arthur Grumiaux as soloist; the Concerto for Orchestra in D will be played by Szymon Goldberg's ensemble in Scheveningen July 9 and Amsterdam July 12. The Cleveland Orchestra was scheduled to play the "Fire Bird" suite in Amsterdam last night.

* * *

Thomson Lectures

Virgil Thomson is the subject of a lecture series to be given by John Cage on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, beginning June 18, at the New School for Social Research, subtitled "The Evolution of a Composer." The course will be illustrated by live and recorded performances. Towards the end of the course, the composer will attend and discuss his current activities.

* * *

Harrell Rejoins Met

Mack Harrell, baritone, who was not heard at the Metropolitan Opera last season, will rejoin its roster for 1957-'58. Among his scheduled roles are Amfortas in "Parsifal," Jochanaan in "Salome" and Kurvenal in "Tristan und Isolde."

Sun (e)
HUDSON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 2,085
JUL 12 1957

FESTIVAL WILL AT TANGLEWOOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south. The New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28 Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (August 9-10-11) is devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 16 1957

First of Weekend Concerts by Boston Symphony is Friday

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, and its director emeritus, Serge Koussevitzky, will open with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Munch and Monteux

The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, on Sunday and Samuel Mayes, cello on Friday. The concert Sunday afternoon will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

In addition to the 6,000 accommodated in the music shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 week-end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert conducted by Dr. Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony "Pathetique." Mr. Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony since 1946 has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work. The Variations were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in the order of the Variations. Mr. Mayes now performs them in the order intended by the composer, and is the first exponent in the Western world of this original version newly published in Moscow. Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" Ballet in Three Deals written for the American Ballet in 1937.

Saturday Evening

On Saturday evening the program to be conducted by Mr. Monteux will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" Tchaikovsky's Symphonic ballad "Fate" Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring" conducted in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a sensation. The Theatre Guild presented the per

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
JUL 17 1957

Russian Favorites At Tanglewood This Weekend

The major concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will start Friday night when Charles Munch, director, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big music shed. The program will consist of "Jeu de Cartes" by Stravinsky, and two works by Tschaikowsky, Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, and the Sixth Symphony Samuel Mayes will be 'cellist.

Saturday night Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor. The program will be Mendelssohn's Fingal's Cave overture, Tschaikow Fifth Symphony, and "Le Sacre du Printemps" by Stravinsky.

On Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct the Koussevitsky Memorial Concert and Isaac Stern will be violin soloist. The program is: "Romeo and Juliet" by Tschaikowsky, Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum, and Violin Concerto by Tschaikowsky.

The following weekend, July 26-28, the Festival programs will concentrate on the works of Berlioz, and Brahms will get special attention the first weekend in August.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159
JUL 19 1957

Music

Sunday, July 21, Janna Dawson, pianist, will be guest artist with the Berkshire Quartet in chamber music by Haydn, Walton and Schumann. The concerts start at 4 p.m. at Music Mountain, Falls Village.

Friday, July 19, the first week of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will open in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., starting at 8:30 p.m. Music by Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky will be featured. On Saturday, July 20, the program will include works by Tchaikovsky, Stravinsky and Mendelssohn, under the baton of Pierre Monteux. The Koussevitsky Memorial Concert on Sunday, July 21, will be conducted by Dr Munch, and will feature the Tschaikovsky violin concerto, with Isaac Stern; Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum", with the Berkshire Festival chorus and soloists.

...reat Barrington 67-77 Sate Ro...
...Spaulding & So...
ONLY $219.5...
...ERED IN GREAT BARRINGT...
...ARANTEE ...UNDER...

(Continued from first page) 3

cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique). Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work.

The Variations were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in the order of the Variations. Mr. Mayes now performs them in the order intended by the composer, and is the first exponent in the Western world of this original version newly published in Moscow. Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

The concert of Saturday evening will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Regular conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, Mr. Monteux has appeared frequently in recent years as guest conductor at Tanglewood and in Boston. He shared with Dr. Munch the concerts of the orchestra's European tour in 1952, the transcontinental tour in 1952, and the European tour of last summer, conducting concerts in both Leningrad and Moscow, as well as in Edinburgh, London, Paris and Switzerland.

Mr. Monteux's program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring" which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysses where the performance took place. Mr. Monteux later introduced the work in Boston and in New York.

The concert of Sunday afternoon is dedicated to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle) in honor of Saint Mark. The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUN 16 1957

Igor Stravinsky, whose seventy-fifth birthday tomorrow will be celebrated throughout the summer at music festivals in America and in most countries of Europe.

Music Events Hail Stravinsky's Birth

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The most prominent musical birthday of 1957 is that of a living and active composer, Igor Stravinsky, who will be seventy-five years old tomorrow. On that date, he will be one of the conductors of the program of his music which closes the Los Angeles Music Festival; this offers the "Symphony of Psalms," the new "Canticum Sacrum" and the premiere of his ballet, "Agon."

Mr. Stravinsky would have to travel far to attend all of the events which are honoring this occasion now and during the next few weeks. In July he will go to New Mexico, where the recently organized Santa Fe Opera Association will produce his "The Rake's Progress" on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, July 17, 19 and 20, with Robert Craft conducting and Leopold Sachse as stage director.

In the eastern United States the anniversary will be observed in festivals in Boston, Ellenville, N. Y., and Tanglewood. His music will occupy the three closing evenings of Boston's free Arts Festival in the Public Garden on June 28, 29 and 30 with his son, Soulima, as soloist in the Capriccio for piano and orchestra. As already announced, the "Canticum" will be performed at Ellenville on Thursday and Saturday nights, July 18 and 20, under Leopold Stokowski, and at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, July 21, under Charles Munch. He will also be represented in the two other concerts of that Berkshire week end, with "Jeu de Cartes" Friday, July 19, under Mr. Munch, and "Le Sacre du Printemps" Saturday, July 20, under Pierre Monteux.

In this summer's festival at Aspen, Colo., he will figure in ten of the thirty programs. The works to be heard include the Three Pieces for clarinet solo, June 26; Three Pieces for String Quartet, June 29; piano excerpts from Petrouchka, July 3; Danses Concertantes, July 7; "Pulcinella," July 14; Duo Concertante, July 17; "Dumbarton Oaks," July 28; Two Poems and Three Japanese Lyrics, Aug. 5; "L'Histoire du Soldat," Aug. 11, and Four Russian Songs, Aug. 25.

• • •

Also in Europe

The most intensive celebration of Mr. Stravinsky's birthday abroad is in the current Holland Festival. "The Rake's Progress" was scheduled for Amsterdam last night, and will also be staged in The Hague tomorrow and June 25, in Utrecht this Wednesday, in Rotterdam this Saturday and in Amsterdam July 6. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct all but the last of these performances.

Mr. Monteux will conduct the Violin Concerto July 3 at Scheveningen, with Arthur Grumiaux as soloist; the Concerto for Orchestra in D will be played by Szymon Goldberg's ensemble in Scheveningen July 9 and Amsterdam July 12. The Cleveland Orchestra was scheduled to play the "Fire Bird" suite in Amsterdam last night.

• • •

Thomson Lectures

Virgil Thomson is the subject of a lecture series to be given by John Cage on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, beginning June 18, at the New School for Social Research, subtitled "The Evolution of a Composer." The course will be illustrated by live and recorded performances. Towards the end of the course, the composer will attend and discuss his current activities.

• • •

Harrell Rejoins Met

Mack Harrell, baritone, who was not heard at the Metropolitan Opera last season, will rejoin its roster for 1957-'58. Among his scheduled roles are Amfortas in "Parsifal," Jochanaan in "Salome" and Kurvenal in "Tristan und Isolde."

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
JUL 17 1957

Russian Favorites At Tanglewood This Weekend

The major concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will start Friday night when Charles Munch, director, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big music shed. The program will consist of "Jeu de Cartes" by Stravinsky, and two works by Tschaikowsky, Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, and the Sixth Symphony. Samuel Mayes will be 'cellist.

Saturday night Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor. The program will be: Mendelssohn's Fingal's Cave overture, Tschaikow Fifth Symphony, and "Le Sacre du Printemps" by Stravinsky.

On Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct the Koussevitsky Memorial Concert and Isaac Stern will be violin soloist. The program is: "Romeo and Juliet" by Tschaikowsky, Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum, and Violin Concerto by Tschaikowsky.

The following weekend, July 26-28, the Festival programs will concentrate on the works of Berlioz, and Brahms will get special attention the first weekend in August.

Sun (e)
HUDSON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 2,085
JUL 12 1957

FESTIVAL WILL AT TANGLEWOOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south. The New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28 Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (August 9-10-11) is devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159
JUL 19 1957

Music

Sunday, July 21, Janna Dawson, pianist, will be guest artist with the Berkshire Quartet in chamber music by Haydn, Walton and Schumann. The concerts start at 4 p.m. at Music Mountain, Falls Village.

Friday, July 19, the first week of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will open in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., starting at 8:30 p.m. Music by Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky will be featured. On Saturday, July 20, the program will include works by Tchaikovsky, Stravinsky and Mendelssohn, under the baton of Pierre Monteux. The Koussevitsky Memorial Concert on Sunday, July 21, will be conducted by Dr Munch, and will feature the Tschaikovsky violin concerto, with Isaac Stern; Stravinsky's "'Canticum Sacrum", with the Berkshire Festival chorus and soloists.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 16 1957

First of Weekend Concerts by Boston Symphony is Friday

The first weekend of concert by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will open Friday, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000-seat music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Munch and Monteux

The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon under Dr Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening conducted by guest conducter, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, on Sunday and Samuel Mayes, cello on Friday. The concert Sunday afternoon will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

In addition to the 6,000 accommodated in the music shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 weekend concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert conducted by Dr. Munch will in-

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY

RED RASPBERRIES — Pick your own. John Gwozdz, Pales Road, East Cheshire.

RASPBERRIES ARE READY — Order large quantities by phone, MO 3-8610. Smaller amounts always on hand at Kateley's Berry Patch, Blackinton section.

BEEF SIDES — Quarters or any sizes. Special discounts on quantities. No cutting charge. Cramer's Market.

Good Things to Eat—54

BOTTLED GAS and fuel oil. Sales and service 'round the clock. H. A. George, Oil Burners and Gas Appliances, 651 Ashland St. MO 3-6652.

Coal, Coke, Fuel & Wood—53

SPECIAL SUMMER PRICES on hardwood slabs, $13 a cord. E. A. Burdick, Tel. MO 3-8357.

ROOFING, Building Materials, Aluminum Roofing, Paints, Paint Supplies, Eastern States Farmers Exchange, State St. MO 2-2343.

OVERHEAD DOORS
John D. Steele
Tel. Williamstown 15

CONSTINATION WINDOWS AND DOORS — FACTORY SALES ROOM OPEN daily and Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Cusson Manufacturing Co., Inc., 100 North St., Plainfield, Mass.

UNDERWOOD INSULATORS
Tel. MO 3-7035

Doors, Awnings

Chamber Music

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its offical debut on the same hall in the summer of 1953. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin, Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus, and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio is performed for the first time at this concert.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., afternoon concerts at 2:30 p. m. The grounds open at 6 p. m. and 12 noon, for those who wish to picnic on the lawns or tour the grounds before the concert starts. General admission to the grounds is on sale on the day of the performance.

Public Rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the music shed will be held on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund.

. Spaulding & Sc
reat Barrington 67-77 Sate Ro
ONLY $2195
/ERED IN GREAT BARRINGT
ARANTEE UNDER

(Continued from first page)

cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique). Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work.

The Variations were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in the order of the Variations. Mr. Mayes now performs them in the order intended by the composer, and is the first exponent in the Western world of this original version newly published in Moscow. Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

The concert of Saturday evening will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Regular conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, Mr. Monteux has appeared frequently in recent years as guest conductor at Tanglewood and in Boston. He shared with Dr. Munch the concerts of the orchestra's European tour in 1952, the transcontinental tour in 1952, and the European tour of last summer, conducting concerts in both Leningrad and Moscow, as well as in Edinburgh, London, Paris and Switzerland.

Mr. Monteux's program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring" which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysses where the performance took place. Mr. Monteux later introduced the work in Boston and in Ne York.

The concert of Sunday afternoon is dedicated to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle) in honor of Saint Mark. The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUN 16 1957

Igor Stravinsky, whose seventy-fifth birthday tomorrow will be celebrated throughout the summer at music festivals in America and in most countries of Europe.

Music Events Hail Stravinsky's Birth

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The most prominent musical birthday of 1957 is that of a living and active composer, Igor Stravinsky, who will be seventy-five years old tomorrow. On that date, he will be one of the conductors of the program of his music which closes the Los Angeles Music Festival; this offers the "Symphony of Psalms," the new "Canticum Sacrum" and the premiere of his ballet, "Agon."

Mr. Stravinsky would have to travel far to attend all of the events which are honoring this occasion now and during the next few weeks. In July he will go to New Mexico, where the recently organized Santa Fe Opera Association will produce his "The Rake's Progress" on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, July 17, 19 and 20, with Robert Craft conducting and Leopold Sachse as stage director.

In the eastern United States the anniversary will be observed in festivals in Boston, Ellenville, N. Y., and Tanglewood. His music will occupy the three closing evenings of Boston's free Arts Festival in the Public Garden on June 28, 29 and 30 with his son, Soulima, as soloist in the Capriccio for piano and orchestra. As already announced, the "Canticum" will be performed at Ellenville on Thursday and Saturday nights, July 18 and 20, under Leopold Stokowski, and at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, July 21, under Charles Munch. He will also be represented in the two other concerts of that Berkshire week end, with "Jeu de Cartes" Friday, July 19, under Mr. Munch, and "Le Sacre du Printemps" Saturday, July 20, under Pierre Monteux.

In this summer's festival at Aspen, Colo., he will figure in ten of the thirty programs. The works to be heard include the Three Pieces for clarinet solo, June 26; Three Pieces for String Quartet, June 29; piano excerpts from "Petrouchka," July 3; Danses Concertantes, July 7; "Pulcinella," July 14; Duo Concertante, July 17; "Dumbarton Oaks," July 28; Two Poems and Three Japanese Lyrics, Aug. 5; "L'Histoire du Soldat," Aug. 11, and Four Russian Songs, Aug. 25.

* * *

Also in Europe

The most intensive celebration of Mr. Stravinsky's birthday abroad is in the current Holland Festival. "The Rake's Progress" was scheduled for Amsterdam last night, and will also be staged in The Hague tomorrow and June 25, in Utrecht this Wednesday, in Rotterdam this Saturday and in Amsterdam July 6. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct all but the last of these performances.

Mr. Monteux will conduct the Violin Concerto July 3 at Scheveningen, with Arthur Grumiaux as soloist; the Concerto for Orchestra in D will be played by Szymon Goldberg's ensemble in Scheveningen July 9 and Amsterdam July 12. The Cleveland Orchestra was scheduled to play the "Fire Bird" suite in Amsterdam last night.

* * *

Thomson Lectures

Virgil Thomson is the subject of a lecture series to be given by John Cage on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, beginning June 18, at the New School for Social Research, subtitled "The Evolution of a Composer." The course will be illustrated by live and recorded performances. Towards the end of the course, the composer will attend and discuss his current activities.

* * *

Harrell Rejoins Met

Mack Harrell, baritone, who was not heard at the Metropolitan Opera last season, will rejoin its roster for 1957-'58. Among his scheduled roles are Amfortas in "Parsifal," Jochanaan in "Salome" and Kurvenal in "Tristan und Isolde."

Sun (e)
HUDSON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 2,085

JUL 12 1957

FESTIVAL WILL AT TANGLEWOOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south. The New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28 Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (August 9-10-11) is devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 16 19[illegible]

First of Weekend Concerts by Boston Symphony is Friday

The first [illegible] of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will be given Friday evening with the first [illegible] of concerts [illegible] at the Tanglewood Music Shed [illegible].

Munch and Monteux

[illegible] concerts on Friday evening at Stockbridge [illegible] Dr. Munch's direction [illegible] Saturday evening conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, on Sunday and Samuel Mayes, cello on Friday. The concert Sunday afternoon will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

In addition to the 6,000 accommodated in the music shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 week end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert conducted by Dr. Munch will in[illegible]

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY

RED RASPBERRIES — Pick your own. John Gwozdz, Pales Road, East Cheshire.

RASPBERRIES ARE READY — Order large quantities by phone. MO 3-8610. Smaller amounts always on hand at Kateley's Berry Patch, Blackinton section.

BEEF SIDES — Quarters or any sizes. Special discounts on quantities. No cutting charge. Cramer's Market.

Good Things to Eat—54

BOTTLED GAS and fuel oil. Sales and service. Found the clock. H. A. George, Oil Burners and Gas Appliances. 651 Ashland St. MO 3-6652.

Coal, Coke, Fuel & Wood—53

SPECIAL SUMMER PRICES on hardwood slabs, $13 a cord. E. A. Burdick. Tel. MO 3-8357.

ROOFING, Building Materials, Aluminum Rooms, Paints, Paint Supplies, Eastern States Painters Exchange, State St. MO 2-2343.

COMBINATION WINDOWS AND DOORS — FACTORY SALES ROOM OPEN daily and Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Casson Manufacturing Co., Inc., 100 North St., Plainfield, Mass.

OVERHEAD DOORS
John D. Steele
Tel. Williamstown 15

UNDERWOOD INSULATORS
Tel. MO 3-1035

ALUMINUM WINDOWS, DOORS, AWNINGS

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

JUL 17 1957

Russian Favorites At Tanglewood This Weekend

The major concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will start Friday night when Charles Munch, director, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big music shed. The program will consist of "Jeu de Cartes" by Stravinsky, and two works by Tschaikowsky, Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, and the Sixth Symphony Samuel Mayes will be 'cellist.

Saturday night Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor. The program will be: Mendelssohn's Fingal's Cave overture, Tschaikowsky Fifth Symphony, and "Le Sacre du Printemps" by Stravinsky.

On Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct the Koussevitsky Memorial Concert and Isaac Stern will be violin soloist. The program is: "Romeo and Juliet" by Tschaikowsky, Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum, and Violin Concerto by Tschaikowsky.

The following weekend, July 26-28, the Festival programs will concentrate on the works of Berlioz, and Brahms will get special attention the first weekend in August.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

JUL 19 1957

Music

Sunday, July 21, Janna Dawson, pianist, will be guest artist with the Berkshire Quartet in chamber music by Haydn, Walton and Schumann. The concerts start at 4 p.m. at Music Mountain, Falls Village.

Friday, July 19, the first week of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will open in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., starting at 8:30 p.m. Music by Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky will be featured. On Saturday, July 20, the program will include works by Tchaikovsky, Stravinsky and Mendelssohn, under the baton of Pierre Monteux. The Koussevitsky Memorial Concert on Sunday, July 21, will be conducted by Dr Munch, and will feature the Tschaikovsky violin concerto, with Isaac Stern; Stravinsky's "'Canticum Sacrum", with the Berkshire Festival chorus and soloists.

Chamber Music

[illegible] Chamber Music evening at 8:30 [illegible] Hall will [illegible] appearance [illegible]

[illegible] Boston Symphony [illegible] Tanglewood [illegible] Bernstein [illegible] and Beethoven [illegible] will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus and Beethoven. Casadesus [illegible] is performing [illegible] this concert [illegible] first time at the Tanglewood [illegible] concerts at Tanglewood [illegible] at 4 p.m. [illegible] afternoon concerts [illegible] at 8:30 p.m. The grounds [illegible] open at 6 p.m. and 12 noon [illegible] Sundays [illegible] the grounds before [illegible] starts. General admission [illegible] tickets are on sale [illegible] the day of the performance.

Public Rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the music shed will be held on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund

TIGHT BINDING

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
3, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Advertiser
W CANAAN, Conn.
kly Independent
Circ. 2,965
UL 18 1957

New Canaan Library

During the four weekends between July 19 and August 11, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present its annual series of concerts in the Tanglewood shed at Lenox, Mass. The program includes many selections represented in the library's record collection.

There are four Tchaikovsky works: the "Sixth Symphony" with Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony, the "Fifth Symphony" and "Romeo and Juliet," with Paul van Kempen conducting the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam, and Zino Francescatti's playing of the "Violin Concerto" with Dimitri Mitropolous conducting the New York Philharmonic.

The music of Berlioz is performed by William Primrose as soloist with Sir Thomas Beecham conducting the Royal Philharmonic for "Harold in Italy," Pierre Monteux conducting the San Francisco Symphony for the "Fantastic Symphony," and Thomas Scherman conducting the Little Orchestra Society for "L'Enfance du Christ" with the Choral Art Society and the soloists, Mary Davenport, Martial Singher, Leopold Simoneau and Donald Gramm.

Otto Klemperer conducts the Philharmonia Orchestra for the "Haydn Variations" by Brahms and his "First Symphony" features Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony.

Nathan Milstein performs Beethoven's "Violin Concerto," with William Steinberg conducting the Pittsburgh Symphony; Arturo Toscanini leads the NBC Symphony for the "Grand Symphony," and the Philharmonia Orchestra is led by Otto Klemperer for the "Leonore Overture, No. 3" and by Herbert von Karajan for the "Ninth Symphony" with the Gesellschaft Der Musikfreunde and the soloists, Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, Marga Hoffgen, Ernst Haftiger and Otto Edelman.

Sir Thomas Beecham appears again for Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," and Ernest Ansermet leads L'Orchestre de La Suisse Romande for Stravinsky's "Le Sacre de Printemps."

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408
JUL 11 1957

First Music Shed Tanglewood Concert On July 19 Weekend

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will open on Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon (July 19 and 21) under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening (July 20) conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin (July 21), and Samuel Mayes, cello (July 19). The concert of Sunday afternoon (July 21) will be directed to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6,000 accomodated in the building, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 weekend concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert (July 19) conducted by Charles Munch will include the works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique).

Photo by Schoen

WALLINGFORD
POST July 11 1957

SAMUEL MAYES, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will appear as soloist in a performance of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra on Friday evening, July 19, at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Charles Munch leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of works by Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky.

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,931
JUL 13 1957

Week-End Concerts To Start July 19 At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 13 — The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open July 19 and 20 its series of week-end concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed.

Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be performed both inside the Music Shed and outside on the lawns of the Tanglewood Estate. The grounds will open at 6 o'clock in the evening for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to picnic on the lawns prior to the concert.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-21) will be devoted to the music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. A series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-28.

Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux, the third. Programs for the following weekend (Aug. 2-4) will feature the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (Aug. 9-11) will be devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each week-end, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be secured by writing the ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 143,181
JUL 14 1957

Full Orchestra Ready To Play At Tanglewood

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will open Friday in the 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The programs Friday evening and Saturday afternoon will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Orchestra. Saturday evening Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, will direct. Evening concerts begin at 8:30, the afternoon performance at 2:30.

Music of Tschaikowsky and Igor Stravinsky will be featured on the programs. Stravinsky marks his seventy-fifth year this year.

Complete programs are as follows:

Friday evening — Stravinsky, "Jeu de Cartes;" Tschaikowsky, Rococo Variations for 'Cello And Orchestra (Samuel Mayes); Tschaikowsky, Sixth Symphony.

Saturday evening — Mendelssohn, "Hebrides" Overture; Tschaikowsky, Fifth Symphony; Stravinsky, "Sacre du Printemps."

Sunday afternoon — Tschaikowsky, "Romeo And Juliet" Overture; Stravinsky, Canticum Sacrum (John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; Festival Chorus); Tschaikowsky, Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern).

Wednesday evening, in the Theater-Concert Hall, The Beaux Arts Trio will play works by Haydn, Robert Casadesus and Beethoven.

Sunday Sun
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 9,024
JUL 14 1957

Start Tanglewood Festival July 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Director, in the 6,000-seat Music Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p. m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

The new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston, thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER EXPRESS
Circ. D. 168,672 - S. 308,605
JUL 14 1957

AT TANGLEWOOD—The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will open this Friday evening at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Charles Munch will direct the orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon (July 21), while the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will devote his program on Saturday evening to music of Tschaikowsky and the celebration of Igor Stravinsky's 75th birthday.

Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist, and Samuel Mayes, cellist.

On Sunday afternoon, the Serge Koussevitzky Memorial Concert will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum."

Town Crier & Herald
WESTPORT, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,200
JUL 25 1957

CHARLES MUNCH, director of the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Center, shares direction at the summer's festival at Tanglewood with Pierre Monteux and Carl Shurichy.

Enterprise (e)
MARLBORO, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 5,435
JUL 12 1957

FESTIVAL WILL AT TANGLEWOOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is readily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south, the New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28 Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (August 9-10-11) is devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ: 161,675
JUL 15 1957

Pierre Monteux will conduct two concerts at Tanglewood this summer—the first on Saturday night, July 20, and the second on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

. Spaulding & So
ONLY $219.95
VERED IN GREAT BARRINGT
ARANTEE • UNDER
reat Barrington 67-77 Sale Ro

Tanglewood
(Continued from first page) 3

cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique). Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work.

The Variations were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in the order of the Variations. Mr. Mayes now performs them in the order intended by the composer, and is the first exponent in the Western world of this original version newly published in Moscow. Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

The concert of Saturday evening will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Regular conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, Mr. Monteux has appeared frequently in recent years as guest conductor at Tanglewood and in Boston. He shared with Dr. Munch the concerts of the orchestra's European tour in 1952, the transcontinental tour in 1952, and the European tour of last summer, conducting concerts in both Leningrad and Moscow, as well as in Edinburgh, London, Paris and Switzerland.

Mr. Monteux's program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring" which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysses where the performance took place. Mr. Monteux later introduced the work in Boston and in New York.

The concert of Sunday afternoon is dedicated to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle) in honor of Saint Mark. The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 · S. 528,253
JUN 16 1957

Igor Stravinsky, whose seventy-fifth birthday tomorrow will be celebrated throughout the summer at music festivals in America and in most countries of Europe.

Music Events Hail Stravinsky's Birth

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The most prominent musical birthday of 1957 is that of a living and active composer, Igor Stravinsky, who will be seventy-five years old tomorrow. On that date, he will be one of the conductors of the program of his music which closes the Los Angeles Music Festival; this offers the "Symphony of Psalms," the new "Canticum Sacrum" and the premiere of his ballet, "Agon."

Mr. Stravinsky would have to travel far to attend all of the events which are honoring this occasion now and during the next few weeks. In July he will go to New Mexico, where the recently organized Santa Fe Opera Association will produce his "The Rake's Progress" on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, July 17, 19 and 20, with Robert Craft conducting and Leopold Sachse as stage director.

In the eastern United States the anniversary will be observed in festivals in Boston, Ellenville, N. Y., and Tanglewood. His music will occupy the three closing evenings of Boston's free Arts Festival in the Public Garden on June 28, 29 and 30 with his son, Soulima, as soloist in the Capriccio for piano and orchestra. As already announced, the "Canticum" will be performed at Ellenville on Thursday and Saturday nights, July 18 and 20, under Leopold Stokowski, and at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, July 21, under Charles Munch. He will also be represented in the two other concerts of that Berkshire week end, with "Jeu de Cartes" Friday, July 19, under Mr. Munch, and "Le Sacre du Printemps" Saturday, July 20, under Pierre Monteux.

In this summer's festival at Aspen, Colo., he will figure in ten of the thirty programs. The works to be heard include the Three Pieces for clarinet solo, June 26; Three Pieces for String Quartet, June 29; piano excerpts from Petrouchka, July 3; Danses Concertantes, July 7; "Pulcinella," July 14; Duo Concertante, July 17; "Dumbarton Oaks," July 28; Two Poems and Three Japanese Lyrics, Aug. 5; "L'Histoire du Soldat," Aug. 11, and Four Russian Songs, Aug. 25.

* * *

Also in Europe

The most intensive celebration of Mr. Stravinsky's birthday abroad is in the current Holland Festival. "The Rake's Progress" was scheduled for Amsterdam last night, and will also be staged in The Hague tomorrow and June 25, in Utrecht this Wednesday, in Rotterdam this Saturday and in Amsterdam July 6. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct all but the last of these performances.

Mr. Monteux will conduct the Violin Concerto July 3 at Scheveningen, with Arthur Grumiaux as soloist; the Concerto for Orchestra in D will be played by Szymon Goldberg's ensemble in Scheveningen July 9 and Amsterdam July 12. The Cleveland Orchestra was scheduled to play the "Fire Bird" suite in Amsterdam last night.

* * *

Thomson Lectures

Virgil Thomson is the subject of a lecture series to be given by John Cage on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, beginning June 18, at the New School for Social Research, subtitled "The Evolution of a Composer." The course will be illustrated by live and recorded performances. Towards the end of the course, the composer will attend and discuss his current activities.

* * *

Harrell Rejoins Met

Mack Harrell, baritone, who was not heard at the Metropolitan Opera last season, will rejoin its roster for 1957-'58. Among his scheduled roles are Amfortas in "Parsifal," Jochanaan in "Salome" and Kurvenal in "Tristan und Isolde."

Sun (e)
HUDSON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 2,085
JUL 12 1957

FESTIVAL WILL AT TANGLEWOOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south. The New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28 Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (August 9-10-11) is devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 16 1957

First of Weekend Concerts by Boston Symphony is Friday

The first weekend of concert by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will open Friday with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000-seat music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Munch and Monteux

The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, on Sunday and Samuel Mayes, cello on Friday. The concert Sunday afternoon will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Can

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
RED RASPBERRIES — Pick your own. John Gwozdz, Pales Road, East Cheshire.
RASPBERRIES ARE READY — Order large quantities by phone, MO 3-8610. Smaller amounts always on hand at Kateley's Berry Patch, Blackinton section.
BEEF SIDES — Quarters or any sizes. Special discounts on quantities. No cutting charge. Cramer's Market.
Good Things to Eat—54
BOTTLED GAS and fuel oil. Sales and service 'round the clock. H. A. George, Oil Burners and Gas Appliances, 651 Ashland St. MO 3-6652.
Coal, Coke, Fuel & Wood—53
SPECIAL SUMMER PRICES on hardwood slabs, $13 a cord. E. A. Burdick, Tel. MO 3-8357.
ROOFING, Building Materials, Aluminum Roofing, Paints, Paint Supplies, Eastern States Farmers Exchange, State St. MO 2-2343.
OVERHEAD DOORS
John D. Steele
Tel. Williamstown 15
COMBINATION WINDOWS AND DOORS — FACTORY SALES ROOM OPEN daily and Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Cusson Manufacturing Co., Inc., 100 North St., Plainfield, Mass.
ALUMINUM WINDOWS
Doors, Awnings
UNDERWOOD INSULATORS
Tel. MO 3-1035
Building, Home Supplies—52
We have a full line of paints, enamels, brushes, thinners, turps, colors, Albert's Hardware, Summer St., Adams. Tel. 19.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159
JUL 19 1957

Music

Sunday, July 21, Janna Dawson, pianist, will be guest artist with the Berkshire Quartet in chamber music by Haydn, Walton and Schumann. The concerts start at 4 p.m. at Music Mountain, Falls Village.

Friday, July 19, the first week of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will open in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., starting at 8:30 p.m. Music by Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky will be featured. On Saturday, July 20, the program will include works by Tchaikovsky, Stravinsky and Mendelssohn, under the baton of Pierre Monteux. The Koussevitsky Memorial Concert on Sunday, July 21, will be conducted by Dr Munch, and will feature the Tschaikovsky violin concerto, with Isaac Stern; Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum", with the Berkshire Festival chorus and soloists.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
JUL 17 1957

Russian Favorites At Tanglewood This Weekend

The major concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will start Friday night when Charles Munch, director, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big music shed. The program will consist of "Jeu de Cartes" by Stravinsky, and two works by Tschaikowsky, Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, and the Sixth Symphony. Samuel Mayes will be 'cellist.

Saturday night Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor. The program will be Mendelssohn's Fingal's Cave overture, Tschaikowsky Fifth Symphony, and "Le Sacre du Printemps" by Stravinsky.

On Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct the Koussevitsky Memorial Concert and [illegible] Stern will be violin soloist. The program is: "Romeo and Juliet" by Tschaikowsky, Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum, and Violin Concerto by Tschaikowsky.

The following weekend, July 26-28, the Festival programs will concentrate on the works of Berlioz, and Brahms will get special attention the first weekend in August.

Chamber Music

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance [illegible]

Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its offical debut in this same hall in the summer of 1955. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin, Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus, and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio is performed for the first time at this concert.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m.; afternoon concerts at 2:30 p. m. The grounds open at 6 p. m. and 12 noon for those who wish to picnic on the lawns or tour the grounds before the concert starts. General admission to the grounds is on sale on the day of the performance.

Public Rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the music shed will be held on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Advertiser
NEW CANAAN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,965
JUL 10 1957

New Canaan Library

During the four weekends between July 19 and August 11, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present its annual series of concerts in the Tanglewood shed at Lenox, Mass. The program includes many selections represented in the library's record collection.

There are four Tchaikovsky works: the "Sixth Symphony" with Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony, the "Fifth Symphony" and "Romeo and Juliet," with Paul van Kempen conducting the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam, and Zino Francescatti's playing of the "Violin Concerto" with Dimitri Mitropolous conducting the New York Philharmonic.

The music of Berlioz is performed by William Primrose as soloist with Sir Thomas Beecham conducting the Royal Philharmonic for "Harold in Italy," Pierre Monteux conducting the San Francisco Symphony for the "Fantastic Symphony," and Thomas Scherman conducting the Little Orchestra Society for "L'Enfance du Christ" with the Choral Art Society and the soloists, Mary Davenport, Martial Singher, Leopold Simoneau and Donald Gramm.

Otto Klemperer conducts the Philharmonia Orchestra for the "Haydn Variations" by Brahms and his "First Symphony" features Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony.

Nathan Milstein performs Beethoven's "Violin Concerto," with William Steinberg conducting the Pittsburgh Symphony; Arturo Toscanini leads the NBC Symphony for the "Third Symphony," and the Philharmonia Orchestra is led by Otto Klemperer for the "Leonore Overture, No. 3" and by Herbert von Karajan for the "Ninth Symphony" with the Gesellschaft Der Musikfreunde and the soloists, Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, Marga Hoffgen, Ernst Haftiger and Otto Edelman.

Sir Thomas Beecham appears again for Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," and Ernest Ansermet leads L'Orchestre de La Suisse Romande for Stravinsky's "Le Sacre de Printemps."

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408
JUL 11 1957

Photo by Schoin

First Music Shed Tanglewood Concert On July 19 Weekend

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will open on Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon (July 19 and 21) under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening (July 20) conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin (July 21), and Samuel Mayes, cello (July 19). The concert of Sunday afternoon (July 21) will be directed to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6,000 accomodated in the building, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 weekend concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert (July 19) conducted by Charles Munch will include the works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique).

WALLINGFORD
POST July 11 1957

SAMUEL MAYES, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will appear as soloist in a performance of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra on Friday evening, July 19, at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Charles Munch leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of works by Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky.

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,931
JUL 13 1957

Week-End Concerts To Start July 19 At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 13 — The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open July 19 and 20 its series of week-end concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed.

Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be performed both inside the Music Shed and outside on the lawns of the Tanglewood Estate. The grounds will open at 6 o'clock in the evening for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to picnic on the lawns prior to the concert.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-21) will be devoted to the music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. A series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-28.

Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux, the third. Programs for the following weekend (Aug. 2-3-4) will feature the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (Aug. 9-11) will be devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each week-end, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be secured by writing the ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 143,181
JUL 14 1957

Full Orchestra Ready To Play At Tanglewood

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will open Friday in the 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The programs Friday evening and Saturday afternoon will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Orchestra. Saturday evening Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, will direct. Evening concerts begin at 8:30, the afternoon performance at 2:30.

Music of Tschaikowsky and Igor Stravinsky will be featured on the programs. Stravinsky marks his seventy-fifth year this year.

Complete programs are as follows:

Friday evening — Stravinsky, "Jeu de Cartes;" Tschaikowsky, Rococo Variations for 'Cello And Orchestra (Samuel Mayes); Tschaikowsky, Sixth Symphony.

Saturday evening — Mendelssohn, "Hebrides" Overture; Tschaikowsky, Fifth Symphony; Stravinsky, "Sacre du Printemps."

Sunday afternoon — Tschaikowsky, "Romeo And Juliet" Overture; Stravinsky, Canticum Sacrum (John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; Festival Chorus); Tschaikowsky, Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern).

Wednesday evening, in the Theater-Concert Hall, The Beaux Arts Trio will play works by Haydn, Robert Casadesus and Beethoven.

Sunday Sun
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 9,024
JUL 14 1957

Start Tanglewood Festival July 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Director, in the 6,000-seat Music Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p. m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

The new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston, thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER EXPRESS
Circ. D. 168,672 - S. 308,605
JUL 14 1957

AT TANGLEWOOD—The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will open this Friday evening at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Charles Munch will direct the orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon (July 21), while the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will devote his program on Saturday evening to music of Tschaikowsky and the celebration of Igor Stravinsky's 75th birthday.

Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist, and Samuel Mayes, cellist.

On Sunday afternoon, the Serge Koussevitzky Memorial Concert will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum."

Town Crier & Herald
WESTPORT, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 4,200
JUL 25 1957

CHARLES MUNCH, director of the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Center, shares direction at the summer's festival at Tanglewood with Pierre Monteux and Carl Shurichy.

Enterprise (e)
MARLBORO, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 5,435
JUL 12 1957

FESTIVAL WILL AT TANGLEWOOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south, the New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28 Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (August 9-10-11) is devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 15 1957

Pierre Monteux will conduct two concerts at Tanglewood this summer—the first on Saturday night, July 26, and the second on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

[148]

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 9 1957

Shed Concerts At Tanglewood Open Friday, July 19

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will open on Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon (July 19 and 21) under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening (July 20) conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin (July 21), and Samuel Mayes, cello (July 19). The concert of Sunday afternoon (July 21) will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6,000 accommodated in the music shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 week-end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert (July 19) conducted by Charles Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the Orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique). Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work. The Variations were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in the order of the Variations. Mr. Mayes now performs them in the order intended by the composer and is the first exponent in the Western word of this original version newly published in Moscow. Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

The concert of Saturday evening, July 20, will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Regular conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, Mr. Monteux has appeared frequently in recent years as guest conductor at Tanglewood and in Boston. He shared with Dr. Munch the concerts of the Orchestra's European tour in 1952, the transcontinental tour in 1952, and the European tour of last summer, conducting concerts in both Leningrad and Moscow, as well as in Edinburgh, London, Paris and Switzerland. Mr. Monteux' program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring" which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysees where the permformance took place. Mr. Monteux later introduced the work in Boston and in New York.

The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum". (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark. The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross. The "Canticum Sacrum" was first performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice as part of the Venice Festival in September 1956. The first American performance was on the West Coast as part of a special birthday concert on June 17 conducted by Stravinsky's pupil, Robert Craft. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (August 3) and Beethoven (August 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture.

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday, July 19, at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio. The members of the trio—Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano—will offer trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus, and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio will be performed for the first time at this concert.

Programs for the rest of the week are:

Friday, July 19, 8.30 p. m. Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

"Jeu de Cartes" ..... Stravinsky
Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra ..... Tchaikovsky
(First performance in the United States of the original version)
Soloist: SAMUEL MAYES
Symphony No. 6 ("Pathetique") ..... Tchaikovsky
CHARLES MUNCH, Conductor

Saturday, July 20, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra

Overture, "The Hebrides" (Fingal's Cave) ..... Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 5 ..... Tchaikovsky

"Sacre du Printemps" ..... Stravinsky
PIERRE MONTEUX, Conductor

Sunday, July 21, 2.30 p. m., Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra

KOUSSEVITZKY MEMORIAL CONCERT
"Romeo and Juliet" Overture ..... Tchaikovsky
"Canticum Sacrum" ..... Stravinsky
Soloists: JOHN MCCOLLUM, tenor; DONALD GRAMM, bass; FESTIVAL CHORUS
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
Soloist: ISAAC STERN
CHARLES MUNCH, Conductor

Concerts of the fourth week end of the Berkshire Festival will be devoted to music of Berlioz, including a performance on Saturday evening, July 27, of "L'Enfanee du Christ" with chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch. Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of Sunday, July 28, and Joseph de Pasquale will be soloist in "Harold in Italy" on Friday evening, July 26.

Students in Concerts

A number of concerts will be presented by students of the Berkshire Music Center during the coming week. These concerts are open to friends of the school who make a voluntary contribution to its scholarship fund. The performances are as follows. Sunday morning chamber music by Department I students (10 a. m., July 21, Chamber Music Hall; Sunday evening composer's forums by Department III students, 8.30 p. m., July 21, Chamber Music Hall; a choral concert by the Tanglewood Choir of Department II, 8.30 p. m., July 16, Theater Concert Hall; a symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department I, 8.30 p. m., July 18, Music Shed; and two lectures in the Seminar in Contemporary Music by guest composer Milton Babbitt, 3.15 p. m., Chamber Music Hall; July 17 and 19.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 13 1957

Next Week at Tanglewood

Stravinsky Music Programed

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, will open Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony. Mr. Mayes will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of the Rococo Variations. They were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in their order. Mr. Mayes will play them in the order intended by the composer. The program will also include Stravinsky's "Card Game."

* * *

The concert of Saturday evening, July 20, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides," Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum." The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross.

* * *

The "Canticum Sacrum" was first performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice as part of the Venice Festival in September, 1956. The first American performance was on the West Coast as part of a special birthday concert on June 7, conducted by Stravinsky's pupil, Robert Craft.

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (Aug. 3) and Beethoven (Aug. 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture.

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday, July 19, at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio. The members of the trio—Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano—will offer trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus, and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio will be performed for the first time at this concert.

News
FAIRFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,850

JUL 25 1957

CHARLES MUNCH, director of the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Center, shares direction of the summer's festival at Tanglewood with Pierre Monteux and Carl Shurichs.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 14 1957

Pierre Monteux To Share Podium At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 15—Pierre Monteux will share the podium with Charles Munch next week end at Tanglewood in conducting the first three of the concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed. Mr. Monteux will direct the orchestra in next Saturday night's concert.

Midweek Concert

The third in the series of midweek chamber music concerts, on Wednesday, at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its official debut in this same hall in the summer of 1955. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus, and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio is performed for the first time at this concert.

Programs for the rest of the week are:

Friday, July 19, 8.30 p. m. Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

"Jeu de Cartes" ..... Stravinsky
Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra ..... Tchaikovsky
(First performance in the United States of the original version)
Soloist: SAMUEL MAYES
Symphony No. 6 ("Pathetique") ..... Tchaikovsky
CHARLES MUNCH, Conductor

Saturday, July 20, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra

Overture, "The Hebrides" (Fingal's Cave) ..... Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 5 ..... Tchaikovsky

"Sacre du Printemps" ..... Stravinsky
PIERRE MONTEUX, Conductor

Sunday, July 21, 2.30 p. m., Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra

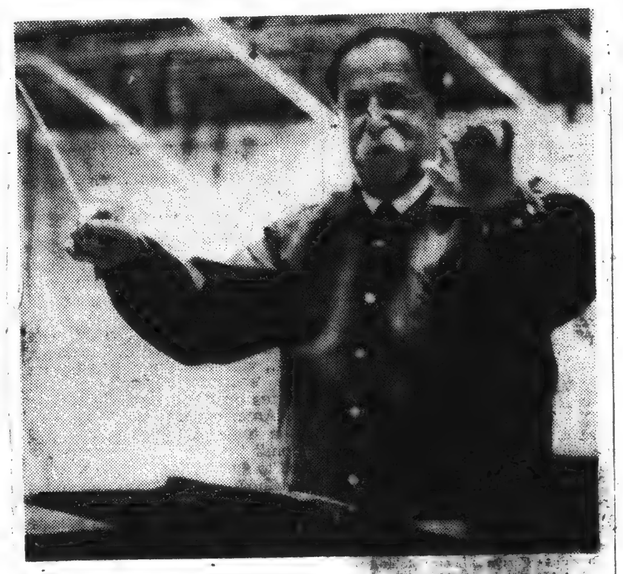
KOUSSEVITZKY MEMORIAL CONCERT
"Romeo and Juliet" Overture ..... Tchaikovsky
"Canticum Sacrum" ..... Stravinsky
Soloists: JOHN MCCOLLUM, tenor; DONALD GRAMM, bass; FESTIVAL CHORUS
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
Soloist: ISAAC STERN
CHARLES MUNCH, Conductor

Concerts of the fourth week end of the Berkshire Festival will be devoted to music of Berlioz, including a performance on Saturday evening, July 27, of "L'Enfanee du Christ" with chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch. Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of Sunday, July 28, and Joseph de Pasquale will be soloist in "Harold in Italy" on Friday evening, July 26.

Students in Concerts

A number of concerts will be presented by students of the Berkshire Music Center during the coming week. These concerts are open to friends of the school who make a voluntary contribution to its scholarship fund. The performances are as follows. Sunday morning chamber music by Department I students (10 a. m., July 21, Chamber Music Hall; Sunday evening composer's forums by Department III students, 8.30 p. m., July 21, Chamber Music Hall; a choral concert by the Tanglewood Choir of Department II, 8.30 p. m., July 16, Theater Concert Hall; a symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department I, 8.30 p. m., July 18, Music Shed; and two lectures in the Seminar in Contemporary Music by guest composer Milton Babbitt, 3.15 p. m., Chamber Music Hall; July 17 and 19.

To Conduct Saturday



Pierre Monteaux, world famous conductor who shared direction of the Boston Symphony with Charles Munch on its recent tour [illegible] to Tanglewood. On Saturday evening, he Boston Symphony in a program haikovsky and Stravinsky. (Music , 8:30 p. m.

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,742

JUL 14 1957

Full Boston Symphony to Give Tanglewood Concert This Week

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 13 — The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open next Friday, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concerts on next Friday evening and next Sunday afternoon under Dr. Munch's direction, and on next Saturday evening conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, on Sunday, and Samuel Mayes, cello, on Friday. The concert of Sunday afternoon will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the Winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music [illegible]

[illegible] to the 6,000 accommodated in the Music Shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12-week-end [illegible] from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic in the grounds prior to the concert.

SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Tuesday, July 16, 1957

Berkshire Center Students' Concerts In Tanglewood

Students of the Berkshire Music Center are presenting concerts this week in the Chamber Music Hall in "Tanglewood", Lenox, Mass. during the annual Berkshire Music Festival. Tonight the Tanglewood Choir of Department 2 will give a program; Thursday night a symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department 1 is scheduled.

Next Sunday afternoon's program [illegible] the great Music Shed in "Tanglewood" will be the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. The program will include the Tschaikowsky "Romeo and Juliet" overture and the same composer's Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, soloist. Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the orchestra.

Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" will be included in the program with John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass as soloists and the Berkshire Music Festival Chorus also participating. Concerts Friday and Saturday nights, July 19-20, also in the Shed, by the Orchestra will be conducted, respectively, by Dr. Munch and by Pierre Monteux.

YWCA PLANS TRIP TO TANGLEWOOD

The YWCA will sponsor a trip to Tanglewood, Lenox, on Sunday, July 21. A bus will leave the YWCA, 26 Howard St. at 11 a. m.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. An all Tchaikovsky program, with Isaac Stern, violin soloist.

The bus will arrive at Tanglewood in time for lunch and a tour of the grounds.

Reservations may be made by calling the YWCA, by July 17.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., TUESDAY, JULY 16, 1957

[148]

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 9 1957

Shed Concerts At Tanglewood Open Friday, July 19

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will open on Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon (July 19 and 21) under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening (July 20) conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin (July 21), and Samuel Mayes, cello (July 19). The concert of Sunday afternoon (July 21) will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6,000 accommodated in the music shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 week-end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert (July 19) conducted by Charles Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the Orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique), Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work. The Variations were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in the order of the Variations. Mr. Mayes now performs them in the order intended by the composer and is the first exponent in the Western word of this original version newly published in Moscow. Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

The concert of Saturday evening, July 20, will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Regular conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, Mr. Monteux has appeared frequently in recent years as guest conductor at Tanglewood and in Boston. He shared with Dr. Munch the concerts of the Orchestra's European tour in 1952, the transcontinental tour in 1952, and the European tour of last summer, conducting concerts in both Leningrad and Moscow, as well as in Edinburgh, London, Paris and Switzerland. Mr. Monteux' program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides", ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky "The Rite of Spring" which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysees where the permformance took place. Mr. Monteux later introduced the work in Boston and in New York.

The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark. The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross. The "Canticum Sacrum" was first performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice as part of the Venice Festival in September 1956. The first American performance was on the West Coast as part of a special birthday concert on June 17 conducted by Stravinsky's pupil, Robert Craft. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (August 3) and Beethoven (August 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 13 1957

Next Week at Tanglewood

Stravinsky Music Programed

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, will open Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony. Mr. Mayes will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of the Rococo Variations. They were first published in 1878 in a version by the cellist, Fitzenhagen, who made certain changes in their order. Mr. Mayes will play them in the order intended by the composer. The program will also include Stravinsky's "Card Game."

* * *

The concert of Saturday evening, July 20, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides," Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum." The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross.

* * *

The "Canticum Sacrum" was first performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice as part of the Venice Festival in September, 1956. The first American performance was on the West Coast as part of a special birthday concert on June 7, conducted by Stravinsky's pupil, Robert Craft.

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (Aug. 3) and Beethoven (Aug. 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture.

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday, July 19, at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio. The members of the trio—Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano—will offer trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus, and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio will be performed for the first time at this concert.

Pierre Monteux To Share Podium At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 15—Pierre Monteux will share the podium with Charles Munch next week end at Tanglewood in conducting the first three of the concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed. Mr. Monteux will direct the orchestra in next Saturday night's concert.

Midweek Concert

The third in the series of midweek chamber music concerts, on Wednesday, at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its official debut in this same hall in the summer of 1955. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus, and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio is performed for the first time at this concert.

Programs for the rest of the week are:

Friday, July 19, 8.30 p. m. Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

"Jeu de Cartes" ..... Stravinsky
Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra ..... Tchaikovsky
(First performance in the United States of the original version)
Soloist: SAMUEL MAYES
Symphony No. 6 ("Pathetique") ..... Tchaikovsky
CHARLES MUNCH, Conductor

Saturday, July 20, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra

Overture, "The Hebrides" (Fingal's Cave) ..... Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 5 ..... Tchaikovsky
"Sacre du Printemps" ..... Stravinsky
PIERRE MONTEUX, Conductor

Sunday, July 21, 2.30 p. m., Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra

KOUSSEVITZKY MEMORIAL CONCERT
"Romeo and Juliet" Overture ..... Tchaikovsky
"Canticum Sacrum" ..... Stravinsky
Soloists: JOHN McCOLLUM, tenor; DONALD GRAMM, bass; FESTIVAL CHORUS
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
Soloist: ISAAC STERN
CHARLES MUNCH, Conductor

Concerts of the fourth week end of the Berkshire Festival will be devoted to music of Berlioz, including a performance on Saturday evening, July 27, of "L'Enfance du Christ" with chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch. Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of Sunday, July 28, and Joseph de Pasquale will be soloist in "Harold in Italy" on Friday evening, July 26.

Students in Concerts

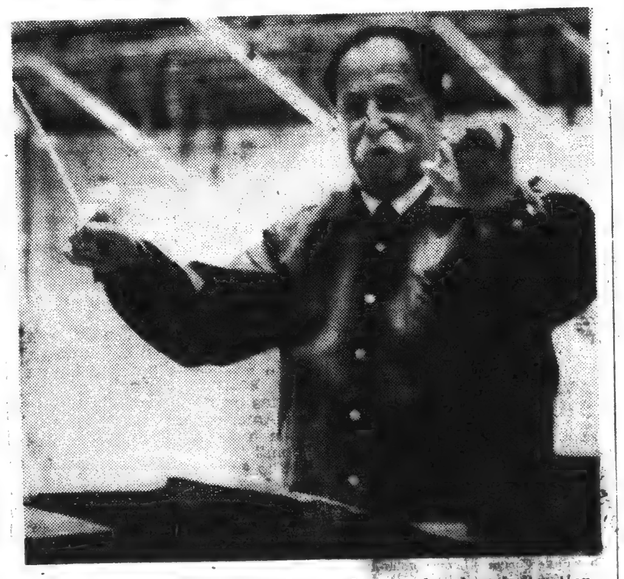
A number of concerts will be presented by students of the Berkshire Music Center during the coming week. These concerts are open to friends of the school who make a voluntary contribution to its scholarship fund. The performances are as follows. Sunday morning chamber music by Department I students (10 a. m., July 21, Chamber Music Hall; Sunday evening composer's forums by Department III students, 8.30 p. m., July 21, Chamber Music Hall; a choral concert by the Tanglewood Choir of Department II, 8.30 p. m., July 16, Theater Concert Hall; a symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department I, 8.30 p. m., July 18, Music Shed; and two lectures in the Seminar in Contemporary Music by guest composer Milton Babbitt, 3.15 p. m., Chamber Music Hall; July 17 and 19.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 14 1957

To Conduct Saturday

CHARLES MUNCH, director of the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Center, shares direction of the summer's festival at Tanglewood with Pierre Monteux and Carl Shurich.



Pierre Monteaux, world famous conductor who shared direction of the Boston Symphony with Charles Munch on its recent tour of Europe, has returned to Tanglewood. On Saturday evening, July 20, Mr. Monteaux leads the Boston Symphony in a program of works by Mendelssohn, Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. (Music shed, 8:30 p. m.

mphony to Give oncert This Week

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 13 — The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open next Friday, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concerts on next Friday evening and next Sunday afternoon under Dr. Munch's direction, and on next Saturday evening conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, on Sunday, and Samuel Mayes, cello, on Friday. The concert of Sunday afternoon will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the Winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6,000 accommodated in the Music Shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12-week-end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic in the grounds prior to the concert.

SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Tuesday, July 16, 1957

Berkshire Center Students' Concerts In Tanglewood

Students of the Berkshire Music Center are presenting concerts this week in the Chamber Music Hall in "Tanglewood", Lenox, Mass. during the annual Berkshire Music Festival. Tonight the Tanglewood Choir of Department 2 will give a program; Thursday night a symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department 1 is scheduled.

Next Sunday afternoon's program in the great Music Shed in "Tanglewood" will be the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. The program will include the Tschaikowsky "Romeo and Juliet" overture and the same composer's Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, soloist. Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the orchestra.

Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" will be included in the program with John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass as soloists and the Berkshire Music Festival Chorus also participating. Concerts Friday and Saturday nights, July 19-20, also in the Shed, by the Orchestra will be conducted, respectively, by Dr. Munch and by Pierre Monteux.

YWCA PLANS TRIP TO TANGLEWOOD

The YWCA will sponsor a trip to Tanglewood, Lenox, on Sunday, July 21. A bus will leave the YWCA, 26 Howard St. at 11 a. m.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. An all Tchaikovsky program, with Isaac Stern, violin soloist.

The bus will arrive at Tanglewood in time for lunch and a tour of the grounds.

Reservations may be made by calling the YWCA, by July 17.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., TUESDAY, JULY 16, 1957

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550

JUL 11 1957

Full BSO Opens Summer Series July 19 Weekend

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concerts Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, July 19 and 21, under Dr. Munch's direction, and Saturday evening, July 20, conducted by Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, July 21, and Samuel Mayes, cello. The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

SAMUEL MAYES
(Soloist)

The Friday evening concert, July 19, will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the Orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony "Pathetique." Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game."

The concert Saturday evening, July 20, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Mr. Monteux' program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

The salute to Stravinsky will continue at the concert July 21, dedicated to the memory of Dr. Koussevitzky, when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum." The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms, August 3, and Beethoven, August 9. The program will open with Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture.

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday, July 19, at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall will feature the Beaux Arts Trio. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio is performed for the first time at this concert.

This weekend's final concerts in the Bach-Mozart series by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch are: on Saturday evening, July 13, in the Music Shed, three Mozart Symphonies (in E-flat, G minor and C major, "Jupiter"); and on Sunday afternoon, July 14, in the Theatre-Concert Hall, an all-Mozart program including the Adagio and Fugue in C minor, the Bassoon Concerto (soloist, Sherman Walt), the Horn Concerto K. 495 (soloist, James Stagliano); and the Sinfonia Concertante for wind instruments (soloists, Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon).

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be devoted to music of [illegible]

Enterprise
CONCORD, Mass.
Weekly Ind. Rep.
Comb. Circ. 4700

JUL 18 1957

FESTIVAL WILL AT TANGLEWOOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City, and points south. The New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28 Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend. Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (August 9-10-11) is devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

BUY U. S. SAVINGS BONDS

STUDENT CONCERTS LISTED THIS WEEK

Lenox, July 13—A number of concerts will be presented by students of the Berkshire Music Center during the coming week. These concerts are open to friends of the school who make a voluntary contribution to its scholarship fund. The performances are as follows: Sunday morning chamber music by Dept. 1 students (10 a. m., July 14 and 21, Chamber Music Hall); Sunday evening composer's forums by Dept. 3 students (8:30 p. m., July 14 and 21, Chamber Music Hall). Also a choral concert by the Tanglewood Choir of Dept. 2 (8:30 p. m., July 16, Theater Concert Hall); a symphony concert by the student orchestra of Dept. 1 (8:30 p. m., July 18, Music Shed); and two lectures in the Seminar in Contemporary Music by guest composer Milton Babbitt (3:15 p. m., Chamber Music Hall; July 17 and 19).

THE BOSTON HERALD, TUESDAY, JULY 16, 1957

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 19 1957

Berkshire Festival

The first week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6000-seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood, Lenox. Tonight's concert at 8:30 will be conducted by the Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rocco Variations of Cello and Orchestra. Dr Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphon, the "Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow evening at 8:30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and continuing this week-ends tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Mr. Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 442,970

JUL 14 1957

Berkshire Festival

The first week-end of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in full numbers, under the direction of Charles Munch, will begin Friday evening at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Programs will be as follows:

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting. Stravinsky: "Jeu de Cartes"; Tchaikovsky: Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra (first performance in the United States of the original version; Samuel Mayes, soloist); Tchaikovsky: "Pathetic" Symphony.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed, Pierre Monteux conducting. Mendelssohn: Overture, "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"); Tchaikovsky: Fifth Symphony; Stravinsky: "Le Sacre du Printemps."

Sunday, July 21, at 2:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting. Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Tchaikovsky: Overture-Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet"; Stravinsky: Canticum Sacrum, (soloists: John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; the Berkshire Festival Chorus); Tchaikovsky: Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern, soloist).

The final concert by small orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, will be given at 2:30 today in the Theater-Concert Hall. Charles Munch will conduct a Mozart program which will include the Adagio and Fugue in C minor, the Bassoon Concerto with Sherman Walt as soloist; the Horn Concerto (K. 495) with James Stagliano as soloist, and the Sinfonia Concertante for wind instruments with the following soloists: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet, and Messrs. Stagliano and Walt. All soloists are first desk players of the Boston Symphony.

The Wednesday evening chamber music concert, at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, July 17, will be given by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano), and will include music by Haydn, Robert Casadesus and Beethoven.

Refugee to Conduct Tanglewood Choir

Lajos Toth, who came here last fall as a refugee from Hungary, tonight will conduct the Tanglewood Choir in four songs of Bela Bartok at the Berkshire Music Festival.

Now employed at Jordan Marsh Company, Toth won a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center. He is a former conductor of the Musicians Guild Orchestra in Budapest and the Radio Budapest Orchestra.

He is one of six student conductors who will appear in tonight's program, the choir's first concert of this current season. Faculty directors will be Alfred Nash Patterson and Lorna Cooke DeVaron of the Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 13,362

JUL 26 1957

Bershire Festival opens this week in Lenox, Mass.

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed this weekend.

Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road — the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south. The New York Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors in a little over two hours from Boston, thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts this weekend will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. A series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of 26-28. Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend.

Programs for the following weekend, August 2-4 will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend, August 9-11 will be devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 516,809 - S. 172,502

JUL 19 1957

Academy Plans Music Excursion

The Brooklyn Academy of Music will sponsor a one-day excursion, "Sunday at Tanglewood," Aug. 11, the final day of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Tickets for the excursion cost $10, and include railroad fare, a guided tour of the grounds, a visit to Hawthorne Cottage, a luncheon, and general admission to the concert. Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will be the feature work of the day. Reservations may be made at the Academy, 30 Lafayette Ave.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

JUL 19 1957

Chamber Concerts Are Announced For Tanglewood

There will be chamber music concerts at Tanglewood Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall, and Sunday evening at 8:30 in the same hall.

The morning concert will feature works of Karl Kohn of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, Prokofieff and Brahms. The evening concert will feature works by students of the composition group.

The program follow:

DEPARTMENT I—CHAMBER MUSIC
SUNDAY MORNING AT 10.
CHAMBER MUSIC HALL.

Adagio and Allegro — Kohn
Merrill Debskf, trumpet, Ansonia, Conn.
Robert Hauss, trombone, Shelby, N.C.
Gerald Conrath, trumpet, Portland, Ore.
Robert Stephenson, trombone, Floresville, Texas.
Joanna Marsh, piano, Seattle, Wash.

Quintet — Prokofieff
Peter Angelo, oboe, Bronxville, N.Y.
Hyman Bress, violin, Montreal, Canada.
Homer Lee, clarinet, San Francisco, Calif.
Jesse Levine, viola, Bronx, N.Y.
David Bethe, double bass, Appleton, Wis.

Quartet, Opus 51, No. 2 — Brahms
Leo Ahramjian, violin, San Francisco, Calif.
Roy Hickrenn, viola, Hamburg, N.Y.
Joyce Pollard, violin, Chicago, Ill.
Chester Wood, cello, Port Orchard, Wash.

DEPARTMENT III—COMPOSERS' FORUM
SUNDAY EVENING AT 8:30.
CHAMBER MUSIC HALL.

String Quartet No. 2
Richard Hensel, Mt. Carroll, Ill.
Suite Canina for oboe, clarinet and bassoon.
Jose Serebrier, Montevideo, Uruguay.
SONG GROUP
Gordon Sherwood, Ann Arbor, Mich.
Malcolm Peyton, Princeton, N.J.
David Ward-Steinmann, Alexandria, La.
Joseph Lukewitz, Chicago, Ill.
NAOMI FARR, soprano, New York, N.Y.
Suite for solo clarinet
MALCOLM PEYTON, Princeton, N.J.
Sonata for two flutes and piano
[illegible]ko, Youngstown, Ohio.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 18 1957

Lecture, Concert Forum Scheduled At Music Center

An illustrated lecture on contemporary music, a chamber music concert and a composers' forum are the highlights of activity this weekend at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox. The lecture and concerts are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the music school.

Tomorrow afternoon, American composer Milton Babbitt will speak about "Dodecaphonism Developed," at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall. His lecture, which will be illustrated musically by Fromm Fellowship Players, is part of the Seminar in Contemporary Music sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. Mr. Babbitt, Associate Professor of Music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. The next seminar program, Wednesday, July 24, will be presented by Karl Kohn, faculty member of the music school, who will speak on the subject of "Nationalist Trends: European Phase."

The third weekly chamber music concert, Sunday morning at 10 a. m. in the Chamber Music Hall, features works by Karl Kohn of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, Prokofieff and Brahms. Sunday evening, at 8:30 p. m., in the Chamber Music Hall, the second weekly Composers' Forum will feature works by composition students Richard Hensel of Mt. Carroll, Illinois; Jose Serebrier of Montevideo, Uruguay; Gordon Sherwood of Ann Arbor, Mich.; Malcolm Peyton of Princeton, N. J.; David Ward-Steinmann of Alexandria, La.; Joseph Lukewitz of Chicago, Ill.; and Ramon Zupko of Youngstown, O. Their works will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550

JUL 11 1957

Full BSO Opens Summer Series July 19 Weekend

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concerts Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, July 19 and 21, under Dr. Munch's direction, and Saturday evening, July 20, conducted by Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, July 20, and Samuel Mayes, cello. The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

SAMUEL MAYES
(Soloist)

The Friday evening concert, July 19, will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the Orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony "Pathetique." Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game."

The concert Saturday evening, July 20, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Mr. Monteux' program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

The salute to Stravinsky will continue at the concert July 21, dedicated to the memory of Dr. Koussevitzky, when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum." The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms, August 3, and Beethoven, August 9. The program will open with Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture.

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday, July 19, at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall will feature the Beaux Arts Trio. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio is performed for the first time at this concert.

This weekend's final concerts in the Bach-Mozart series by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch are: on Saturday evening, July 13, in the Music Shed, three Mozart Symphonies (in E-flat, G minor and C major, "Jupiter"); and on Sunday afternoon, July 14, in the Theatre-Concert Hall, an all-Mozart program including the Adagio and Fugue in C minor, the Bassoon Concerto (soloist, Sherman Walt), the Horn Concerto K. 495 (soloist, James Stagliano); and the Sinfonia Concertante for wind instruments (soloists, Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon).

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be devoted to music of Berlioz, including a performance on Saturday evening, July 27, of "L'Enfance du Christ" with chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch. Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of Sunday, July 28, and Joseph de Pasquale will be soloist in "Harold in Italy" on Friday evening, July 26.

STUDENT CONCERTS LISTED THIS WEEK

Lenox, July 13—A number of concerts will be presented by students of the Berkshire Music Center during the coming week. These concerts are open to friends of the school who make a voluntary contribution to its scholarship fund. The performances are as follows: Sunday morning chamber music by Dept. 1 students (10 a. m., July 14 and 21, Chamber Music Hall); Sunday evening composer's forums by Dept. 3 students (8:30 p. m., July 14 and 21, Chamber Music Hall). Also a choral concert by the Tanglewood Choir of Dept. 2 (8:30 p. m., July 16, Theater Concert Hall); a symphony concert by the student orchestra of Dept. 1 (8:30 p. m., July 18, Music Shed); and two lectures in the Seminar in Contemporary Music by guest composer Milton Babbitt (3:15 p. m., Chamber Music Hall; July 17 and 19).

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 19 1957

Berkshire Festival

The first week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6000-seat Music Shed opens tonight at Tanglewood, Lenox. Tonight's concert at 8:30 will be conducted by the Charles Munch, who will present music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. The program opens with Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals). Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first United States performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's Rocco Variations of Cello and Orchestra. Dr Munch will close the program with Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphon, the "Pathetique."

The concert tomorrow evening at 8:30 will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and continuing this week-ends tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring." Mr. Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 442,970

JUL 14 1957

Berkshire Festival

The first week-end of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the full numbers, under the direction of Charles Munch, will begin Friday evening at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Programs will be as follows:

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting. Stravinsky: "Jeu de Cartes"; Tchaikovsky: Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra (first performance in the United States of the original version; Samuel Mayes, soloist); Tchaikovsky: "Pathetic" Symphony.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed, Pierre Monteux conducting. Mendelssohn: Overture, "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"); Tchaikovsky: Fifth Symphony; Stravinsky: "Le Sacre du Printemps."

Sunday, July 21, at 2:30, Music Shed. Charles Munch conducting. Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Tchaikovsky: Overture-Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet"; Stravinsky: Canticum Sacrum, (soloists: John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; the Berkshire Festival Chorus); Tchaikovsky: Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern, soloist).

The final concert by small orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, will be given at 2:30 today in the Theater-Concert Hall. Charles Munch will conduct a Mozart program which will include the Adagio and Fugue in C minor, the Bassoon Concerto, with Sherman Walt as soloist; the Horn Concerto (K. 495) with James Stagliano as soloist, and the Sinfonia Concertante for wind instruments with the following soloists: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet, and Messrs. Stagliano and Walt. All soloists are first desk players of the Boston Symphony.

The Wednesday evening chamber music concert, at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, July 17, will be given by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano), and will include music by Haydn, Robert Casadesus and Beethoven.

...LL ...OOD BEGIN JULY 19

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the weekend of July 19-20-21. Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed by thousands, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate. Many people picnic on the grounds prior to the concert. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for evening concerts and 12 noon on Sundays for those who wish to take advantage of this pleasant custom.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road—the Taconic Parkway from New York City, and points south. The New York State Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors to Tanglewood in a little over two hours from Boston thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts of the first weekend (July 19-20-21) are devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, and conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. An especially interesting series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of July 26-27-28 Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlioz, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend Programs for the following weekend (August 2-3-4) will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend (August 9-10-11) is devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

BUY U. S. SAVINGS BONDS

THE BOSTON HERALD, TUESDAY, JULY 16, 1957

Refugee to Conduct Tanglewood Choir

Lajos Toth, who came here last fall as a refugee from Hungary, tonight will conduct the Tanglewood Choir in four songs of Bela Bartok at the Berkshire Music Festival.

Now employed at Jordan Marsh Company, Toth won a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center. He is a former conductor of the Musicians Guild Orchestra in Budapest and the Radio Budapest Orchestra.

He is one of six student conductors who will appear in tonight's program, the choir's first concert of this current season. Faculty directors will be Alfred Nash Patterson and Lorna Cooke DeVaron of the Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 13,362

JUL 26 1957

Bershire Festival opens this week in Lenox, Mass.

The 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox will open its series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed this weekend.

Four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be enjoyed, both inside the famous Music Shed, and outside on the lawns of the beautiful Tanglewood Estate.

Tanglewood is easily approached by road — the Taconic Parkway from New York City and points south. The New York Thruway and the new Massachusetts Turnpike bring visitors in a little over two hours from Boston, thus allowing music lovers from the Eastern part of New England to drive to Tanglewood, attend a Berkshire Festival concert, and return to their homes in a single day of easy driving.

The concerts this weekend will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. A series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Charles Munch for the weekend of 26-28. Dr. Munch, who is known as a specialist in the performance of Berlios, will conduct two of the concerts, and Pierre Monteux the third. A good choice of tickets is still available for this concert, and good accommodations may still be had in the area for this particular weekend.

Programs for the following weekend, August 2-4 will emphasize the music of Brahms, and the fourth and final weekend August 9-11 will be devoted to Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts in each weekend, and the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, one.

Information on tickets and programs, as well as a descriptive circular about other activities in the Berkshire area, may be had by writing the Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - S. 172,502

JUL 19 1957

Academy Plans Music Excursion

The Brooklyn Academy of Music will sponsor a one-day excursion, "Sunday at Tanglewood," Aug. 11, the final day of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Tickets for the excursion cost $10, and include railroad fare, a guided tour of the grounds, a visit to Hawthorne Cottage, a luncheon, and general admission to the concert. Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will be the feature work of the day. Reservations may be made at the Academy, 30 Lafayette Ave.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

JUL 19 1957

Chamber Concerts Are Announced For Tanglewood

There will be chamber music concerts at Tanglewood Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall, and Sunday evening at 8:30 in the same hall.

The morning concert will feature works of Karl Kohn of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, Prokofieff and Brahms. The evening concert will feature works by students of the composition group.

The program follow:

DEPARTMENT I—CHAMBER MUSIC
SUNDAY MORNING AT 10.
CHAMBER MUSIC HALL.

Adagio and Allegro — Kohn
Merrill Debski, trumpet, Ansonia, Conn.
Robert Hause, trombone, Shelby, N.C.
Gerald Conrath, trumpet, Portland, Ore.
Robert Stephenson, trombone, Floresville, Texas.
Joanna Marsh, piano, Seattle, Wash.

Quintet — Prokofieff
Peter Angelo, oboe, Bronxville, N.Y.
Hyman Bress, violin, Montreal, Canada.
Homer Lee, clarinet, San Francisco, Calif.
Jesse Levine, viola, Bronx, N.Y.
David Bethe, double bass, Appleton, Wis.

Quartet, Opus 51, No. 2 — Brahms
Leo Ahramjian, violin, San Francisco, Calif.
Roy Mickrenz, viola, Hamburg, N.Y.
Joyce Pollard, violin, Chicago, Ill.
Chester Wood, cello, Port Orchard, Wash.

DEPARTMENT III—COMPOSERS' FORUM
SUNDAY EVENING AT 8:30.
CHAMBER MUSIC HALL.

String Quartet No. 2
Richard Hensel, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

Suite Canina for oboe, clarinet and bassoon.
Jose Serebrier, Montevideo, Uruguay.

SONG GROUP
Gordon Sherwood, Ann Arbor, Mich.
Malcolm Peyton, Princeton, N.J.
David Ward-Steinmann, Alexandria, La.
Joseph Lukewitz, Chicago, Ill.
NAOMI FARR, soprano, New York, N.Y.

Suite for solo clarinet
MALCOLM PEYTON, Princeton, N.J.

Sonata for two flutes and piano
Ramon Zupko, Youngstown, Ohio.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 18 1957

Lecture, Concert Forum Scheduled At Music Center

An illustrated lecture on contemporary music, a chamber music concert and a composers' forum are the highlights of activity this weekend at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox. The lecture and concerts are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the music school.

Tomorrow afternoon, American composer Milton Babbitt will speak about "Dodecaphonism Developed," at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall. His lecture, which will be illustrated musically by Fromm Fellowship Players, is part of the Seminar in Contemporary Music sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. Mr. Babbitt, Associate Professor of Music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. The next seminar program, Wednesday, July 24, will be presented by Karl Kohn, faculty member of the music school, who will speak on the subject of "Nationalist Trends: European Phase."

The third weekly chamber music concert, Sunday morning at 10 a. m. in the Chamber Music Hall, features works by Karl Kohn of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, Prokofieff and Brahms. Sunday evening, at 8:30 p. m., in the Chamber Music Hall, the second weekly Composers' Forum will feature works by composition students Richard Hensel of Mt. Carroll, Illinois; Jose Serebrier of Montevideo, Uruquay; Gordon Sherwood of Ann Arbor, Mich.; Malcolm Peyton of Princeton, N. J.; David Ward-Steinmann of Alexandria, La.; Joseph Lukewitz of Chicago, Ill.; and Ramon Zupko of Youngstown, Ohio. Their works will be performed by Fromm Fellowship Players.

Thousands Expected For Festival Weekend

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open on Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening concert (July 19) conducted by Charles Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the Orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique). Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work. Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

The concert of Saturday evening, July 20, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. The program will include Mendelssohn's Overature "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rites of Spring."

Sunday, the salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark). The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival will be prepared by Hugh Ross. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concert.

WASHINGTON, D. C.
Post & Times Herald
Circ. D. 380,624 - S. 410,185

JUL 14 1957

Tanglewood Lists Music

THE BERKSHIRE Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open its 1957 series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, director, in the 6000-seat Music Shed next weekend. There will be four weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

The first weekend (July 19-21) will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, conducted by Munch and Pierre Monteux. A series of Berlioz programs has been chosen by Munch for the following weekend.

THE ECHO, TUESDAY, JULY 16, 1
NEW LEBANON, NEW YORK

Complete Orchestra In Shed Concerts

The first week end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open this Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon (July 19 and 21) under Dr. Munch's direction, and on

SAMUEL MAYES

Saturday evening (July 20) conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin (July 21) and Samuel Mayes, cello (July 19). The concert of Sunday afternoon (July 21) will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

The Orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6,000 accommodated in the Music Shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's twelve week end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts tomorrow, July 19, at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its official debut in this same hall in the summer of 1955.

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
Circ. W. 467
JUL 17 1957

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415
JUL 18 1957

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
JUL 18 1957

9B

Concerts in Music Shed Will Start Friday Night

Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky Featured Composers This Week as Full Boston Symphony Orchestra Reassembles at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 13 — The first week end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will open Friday night with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood. The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon (July 19 and 21) under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening (July 20) conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky.

SAMUEL MAYES, CELLIST

Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin (July 21), and Samuel Mayes, cello (July 19). The concert of Sunday afternoon (July 21) will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

Orchestra at Full Strength

The orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler wil come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6000 accommoated in the Music Shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 week-end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert (July 19) conducted by Dr. Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for cello and orchestra, with the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the sixth symphony ("Pathetique"). Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of tihs work. The program will open with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" ("Ballet in Three Deals") written for the American Ballet in 1937.

Monteux to Conduct

The concert of Saturday evening, July 20; will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Regular conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, Mr. Monteux has appeared frequently in recent years as guest conductor at Tanglewood and in Boston.

The program will include Mendelssohn's overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's fifth symphony and Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring," which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysees where the performance took place. Mr. Monteux later introduced the work in Boston and in New York.

Koussevitzky Memorial

The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark. The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the festival chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross.

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (Aug. 3) and Beethoven (Aug. 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" overture.

Chamber Music

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday, July 19, at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its official debut in this same hall in the summer of 1955. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio will be performing for the first time at this concert. Complete programs for the week:

Friday, July 19, 8.30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
"Jeu de Cartes" ..... Stravinsky
Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra ..... Tchaikovsky
(First performance in the United States of the original version)
Soloist Samuel Mayes
Symphony No. 6 ("Pathetique") ..... Tchaikovsky
Charles Munch, conductor

Saturday, July 20, 8.30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Overture, "The Hebrides" (Fingal's Cave) ..... Mendelsshon
Symphony No. 5 ..... Tchaikovsky
"Sacre du Printemps" ..... Stravinsky
Pierre Monteux, conductor

Sunday, July 21 2.30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Koussevitzky Memorial Concert
"Romeo and Juliet" Overture ..... Tchaikovsky
"Canticum Sacrum" ..... Stravinsky
Soloists John McCollum, tenor; Donald Grase, bass; Festival Chorus
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
Soloist Isaac Stern
Charles Munch, conductor

The final concert in the Bach-Mozart series by members of the Boston Symphony tomorrow afternoon in the Theater-Concert Hall, offers an all-Mozart program including the Adagio and Fugue in C minor, the Bassoon concerto (soloist Sherman Walt), the Horn concerto K. 495 (soloist James Stagliano); and the Sinfonia Concertante for wind instruments (soloist Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon).

[150]

Thousands Expected For Festival Weekend

The first weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open on Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening concert (July 19) conducted by Charles Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra, with the Orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique). Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of this work. Dr. Munch opens the Friday evening program with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" (Ballet in Three Deals) written for the American Ballet in 1937.

The concert of Saturday evening, July 20, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. The program will include Mendelssohn's Overature "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rites of Spring."

Sunday, the salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark). The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the Festival will be prepared by Hugh Ross. Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concert.

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL, Section II, July [illegible] 1957

Lenox Rep 7/14/57 9B

Concerts in Music Shed Will Start Friday Night

Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky Featured Composers This Week as Full Boston Symphony Orchestra Reassembles at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 13 — The first week end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, will open Friday night with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood. The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon (July 19 and 21) under Dr. Munch's direction, and on Saturday evening (July 20) conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky.

SAMUEL MAYES, CELLIST

Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin (July 21), and Samuel Mayes, cello (July 19). The concert of Sunday afternoon (July 21) will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

Orchestra at Full Strength

The orchestra of 106 players will assemble for the first time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler wil come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6000 accommodated in the Music Shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's 12 week-end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The Friday evening concert (July 19) conducted by Dr. Munch will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for cello and orchestra, with the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the sixth symphony ("Pathetique"). Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony since 1948, has appeared several times at the Berkshire Festival concerts as soloist and will present the first performance in the United States of the original version of tihs work. The program will open with a performance of Stravinsky's "Card Game" ("Ballet in Three Deals") written for the American Ballet in 1937.

Monteux to Conduct

The concert of Saturday evening, July 20, will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Regular conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, Mr. Monteux has appeared frequently in recent years as guest conductor at Tanglewood and [illegible]

The program [illegible] Mendelssohn's [illegible] "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring," which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysees where the performance took place. Mr. Monteux later introduced the work in Boston and in New York.

Koussevitzky Memorial

The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. Dr. Koussevitzky not only developed the Berkshire Festival concerts, but also founded the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark. The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the festival chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross.

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (Aug. 3) and Beethoven (Aug. 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" overture.

Chamber Music

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday, July 19, at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its official début in this same hall in the summer of 1955. The members of the trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano, will present a program of trios by Haydn, Robert Casadesus and Beethoven. The Casadesus trio will be performing for the first time at this concert. Complete programs for the week:

Friday, July 19, 8.30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
"Jeu de Cartes" ..... Stravinsky
Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra ..... Tchaikovsky
(First performance in the United States of the original version)
Soloist Samuel Mayes
Symphony No. 6 ("Pathetique") ..... Tchaikovsky
Charles Munch, conductor

Saturday, July 20, 8.30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Overture, "The Hebrides" (Fingal's Cave) ..... Mendelssohn
Symphony No. ..... Tchaikovsky
"Sacre du Printemps" ..... Stravinsky
Pierre Monteux, conductor

Sunday, July 21, 2.30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Koussevitzky Memorial Concert
"Romeo and Juliet" Overture ..... Tchaikovsky
"Canticum Sacrum" ..... Stravinsky
Soloists John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; Festival Chorus
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
Soloist Isaac Stern
Charles Munch, conductor

The final concert in the Bach-Mozart series by members of the Boston Symphony tomorrow afternoon in the Theater-Concert Hall, offers an all-Mozart program including the Adagio and Fugue in C minor, the Bassoon concerto (soloist Sherman Walt), the Horn concerto K. 495 (soloist James Stagliano); and the Sinfonia Concertante for wind instruments (soloist Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon).

WASHINGTON, D. C.
Post & Times Herald
Circ. D. 380,624 - S. 410,185
JUL 14 1957

Tanglewood Lists Music

THE BERKSHIRE Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open its 1957 series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, director, in the 6000-seat Music Shed next week. There will be four week-end concerts on Friday evenings and [illegible] 19 [illegible] usic [illegible] avin- [illegible] and [illegible] ies of [illegible] been [illegible] the fol-

THE ECHO, TUESDAY, JULY 16, 1957
NEW LEBANON, NEW YORK

Complete Orchestra In Shed Concerts

The first week end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will open this Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon (July 19 and 21) under Dr. Munch's direction, and on

SAMUEL MAYES

Saturday evening (July 20) conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin (July 21) and Samuel Mayes, cello (July 19). The concert of Sunday afternoon (July 21) will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky a[illegible] a performance of S[illegible] anticum Sacrum" for c[illegible]ts.

The Orches[illegible]yers will assemble for the [illegible] time since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, when players who have been appearing in the free concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston under the direction of Arthur Fiedler will come to the Berkshire Hills to join the members, including 36 principals, who have been performing as a chamber orchestra in the Bach-Mozart series, as well as serving as faculty members for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to the 6,000 accommodated in the Music Shed, additional thousands of music lovers will enjoy the season's twelve week end concerts from the lawns outside, many of them taking advantage of the opportunity to picnic on the grounds prior to the concert.

The third in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts tomorrow, July 19, at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall will mark the third appearance at Tanglewood of the Beaux Arts Trio, which made its official debut in this same hall in the summer of 1955.

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
Circ. W. 467
JUL 17 1957

[illegible] N. Y.
[illegible]ALD
Circ. W. 415
JUL 18 1957

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
JUL 18 1957

C151

NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

JUL 12 1957

Stravinsky's Music Featured At Lenox

Composer's 75th Birthday Marked Next Week

The first week end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will open on Friday, July 19, with the first of a series of concerts in the great 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, July 19 and 21, under the direction of Dr Munch, and on Saturday evening, July 20, conducted by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will be devoted to music of Tchaikovsky and, in celebration of his 75th birthday this year, of Igor Stravinsky. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violin, July 21, and Samuel Mayes, cello, July 19. The concert of Sunday afternoon will be dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will feature a performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m. afternoon concerts at 2:30 p.m. The grounds open at 6 p.m. and 12 noon for those who wish to picnic on the lawns or tour the grounds before the concert starts. General admission to the grounds is on sale the day before the performance.

Complete programs for next week are:

Friday, July 19, 8:30 p.m. Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Stravinsky, "Jeu de Cartes"; Tchaikovsky, Rococo Variations for cello and orchestra; Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 6, "Pathetique", Charles Munch, conductor.

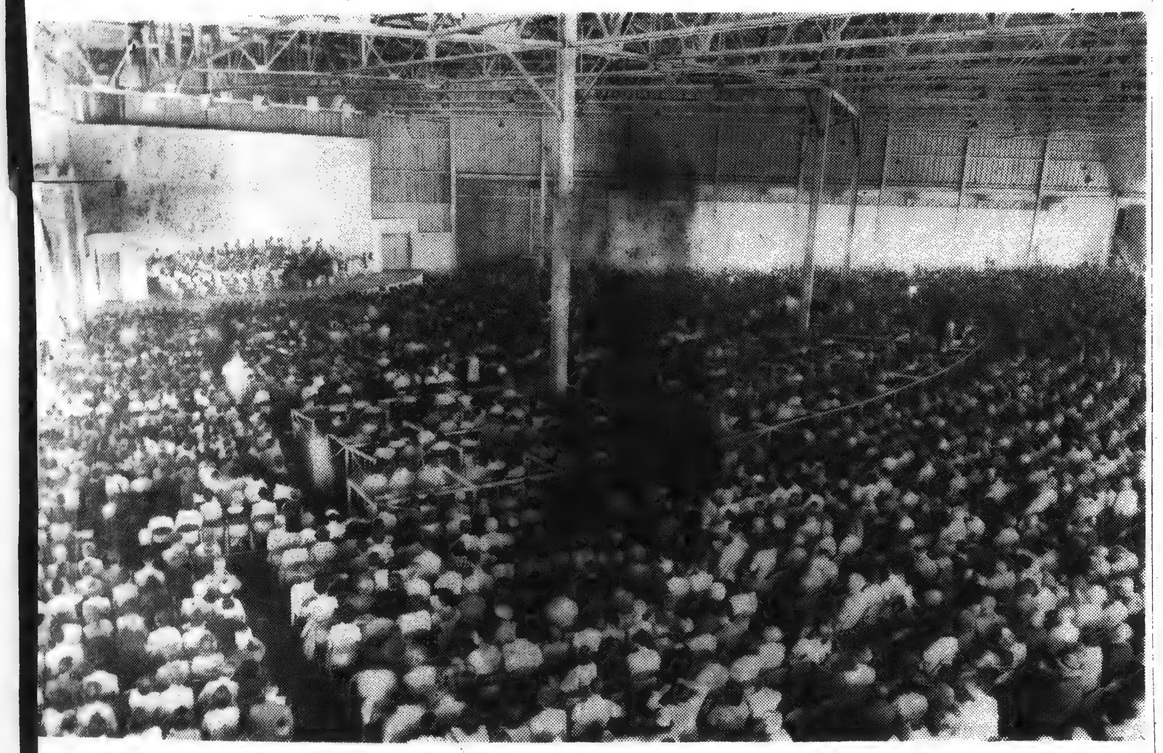
Saturday, July 20, 8:30 p.m. Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra; Mendelssohn, Overture "The Hebrides" (Fingal's Cave); Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 5; Stravinsky, "Sacre du Printemps", Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Sunday, July 21, 2:30 p.m. Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Koussevitzky Memorial concert; Tchaikovsky, "Romeo and Juliet" Overture; Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum" soloists John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; festival chorus; Tchaikovsky, violin concerto, soloist, Isaac Stern; Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 28 1957

Another Sunday of Music in the Shed at Tanglewood



Music under the moon, Friday and Saturday nights, and in the sun on Sunday afternoons by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox. Here is a view showing the orchestra on the stage and also some of the audience. The fourth Sunday concert takes place this afternoon with Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, on the podium. The Berkshire Music Festival has two weeks to go. The final Shed concert takes place Sunday, Aug. 11, when Charles Munch, music director, will lead the orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
Circ. D. 119,412

JUL 16 1957

Boston Symphony In Tanglewood Series

The first in a series of four weekend concerts by the 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the 6,000-seat shed at Tanglewood, will take place Friday evening, at 8:30 under the direction of Charles Munch.

The Friday evening concert will include two works of Tchaikovsky, the Rococo Variations for cello and orchestra, with the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and the Sixth Symphony (Pathetique).

MONTEUX TO CONDUCT

The concert of Saturday evening, July 20, will be under the direction of the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Mr. Monteux' program will include Mendelssohn's Overture, "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring."

The concert of Sunday afternoon, July 21, is dedicated to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzsky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the man who turned the Tanglewood idea into a reality. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum" (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark.) The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, Donald Gramm, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross.

STERN SOLOIST

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Englewood tahis Summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (August 3) and Betthoven (August 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

JUL 28 1957

Hi-Fi No Substitute for Performance

By MILES KASTENDIECK

CURIOSITY about contemporary music leads a true music lover to live performances. With due respect to Hi-Fi enthusiasts, no substitute for the real thing exists. What is more important: very few live performances duplicate the quality or intensity of some other interpretation.

On records the performance is always the same. Since there is no one way of interpreting a piece, only the performance of the moment is fresh and real.

Opposite Ideas

In the course of my circuit tour last week, I heard three performances of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" within three days. Two were given by Stokowski and the Symphony of the Air at the Empire State Music Festival at Ellenville. The third was given by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Different approaches to the work and different performers presented almost opposite ideas about the music. Audience reaction, however, remained constant: it was skeptical and unmoved in the mass, satisfied and appreciative among the Stravinski enthusiasts.

At Ellenville, Stokowski repeated the work immediately in response to the audience request he solicited. This is a Stokowski tradition, harking back to his days in Philadelphia when he usually played over new works at the end of a concert. It happens that the repetition of the "Canticum" has happened elsewhere on a first performance. Hearing it the second time clarified details and confirmed a first impression. The performance also sounded more assured on the part of the participants.

Ever conscious of sound and effect, Stokowski made the work quite articulate. Whatever effectiveness it has came through both in rhythmic accent and in color. This was a piece in honor of St. Mark and dedicated to Venice. Stokowski paid his respects along with Stravinsky.

At Tanglewood, Munch revealed quite a different idea about the music. Stravinsky first thought of it as "a spiritual cantata based upon St. Mark." The opening and closing verses come from the Book of Mark, the Evangelist, with the remainder of the text drawn from the Old Testament. Conceiving it primarily as a liturgical work, Munch approached it from a contemplative, religious point of view. The dramatic accent yielded to the pious concept. Thus this interpretation differed noticeably from that of Stokowski. Superficially, it was hard to believe that the same work was involved.

Since both concepts are admissible and both do justice to the score, only hearing the performance at the time could give the listener a contemporaneous experience from which to carry on.

Music lovers must remember that music is a temporal art.

Monteux Leads BSO Tonight, Big Weekend Crowd Expected

TANGLEWOOD — Pierre Monteux, regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1919 to 1924, will be on the podium tonight at 8:30 for the second major concert of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed.

Last night's crowd of 6,700 for the Berkshire Nights concert by the BSO is expected to be far exceeded tonight and tomorrow afternoon when fair and warm weather is forecast. The Massachusetts Turnpike is expected to pour thousands of residents from the eastern part of the state into Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon for the first Sunday concert in the Music Shed.

Mr. Monteux, who has appeared frequently as guest conductor at Tanglewood and in Boston, shared with Dr. Munch the concerts of the orchestra's European tour in 1952, the transcontinental tour in 1952 and the European tour of last summer. He conducted concerts in both Leningrad and Moscow, as well as Edinburgh, London, Paris and Switzerland.

Tonight's Program

Mr. Monteux' program will include Mendelssohn's Overture "The Hebrides" ("Fingal's Cave"), Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and, in tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky, "The Rite of Spring," which was introduced to a Paris audience in 1913 with Mr. Monteux conducting, causing a near riot in the Theatre des Champs Elysees where the performance took place. Mr. Monteux later introduced the work in Boston and in New York.

The concert tomorrow afternoon is dedicated to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Koussevitzky founded the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center. The salute to Stravinsky will continue at this concert when Dr. Munch conducts a performance of his new work, the "Canticum Sacrum" (The Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark).

The Soloists

The soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm baritone; and the Festival Chorus will be prepared by Hugh Ross. The "Canticum Sacrum" was first performed in St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice as part of the Venice Festival in September 1956. The first American performance was on the West Coast as part of a special birthday concert on June 17 conducted by Stravinsky's pupil, Robert Craft.

Isaac Stern will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, the first of three appearances he will make at Tanglewood this summer. He will also play the concertos of Brahms (Aug. 3) and Beethoven (Aug. 9). The program will open with Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet Overture."

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 17 1957

[152]

Festival Student Orchestra Gives 3rd Concert Tomorrow

The student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center will present its third concert of the 1957 season in the Music Shed at Tanglewood tomorrow evening at 8:30 p.m.

Student Conductors

The program features works by Copland, Schumann, Nielsen and Beethoven. Assisting teacher of orchestral conducting Seymour Lipkin will share the podium with three student conductors: David Wooldridge of London, England; Michael Senturia of Washington, D.C.; Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, Great Britain.. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Wooldridge, who will conduct the first and second movements of Aaron Copland's Symphony No. 3, was a student conductor at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1956. A Commonwealth Fund Fellow, he received his Ph. D. from the Royal College of Music, London University in 1952, and studied at the Vienna State Academy from 1952 until 1954. Michael Senturia, age 20, will direct the orchestra in a performance of the first movement of Schumann's Piano Concerto, with Morey Ritt of Hempstead, N.Y., as soloist. Mr. Senturia, a junior at Harvard University, studied at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester during the summer of 1955. Wyn Morris, twenty-nine, of South Wales, Great Britain, will conduct the first movement of Nielsen's Fifth Symphony. Mr. Morris attended the Royal Academy of Music in London from 1945-50.

Morey Ritt

Morey Ritt, 20-year-old pianist who will play the first movement of Schumann's Piano Concerto with the student orchestra, received her diploma from the High School of Performing Arts in New York and attended Queens College from 1954-56. She is presently studying at the Mannes College of Music in New York City.

The program will conclude with a performance of Beethoven's Sixth Symphony, the "Pastoral," under the direction of Seymour Lipkin, who assists Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho in the department of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

Tanglewood Choir Makes Debut Tomorrow

The Tanglewood Choir, composed of choral students at the Berkshire Music Center, will present its first concert of the 1957 season in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood tomorrow evening at 8:30. The concert is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Directing the student singers will be Alfred Nash Patterson and Lorna Cooke DeVaron of the Music Center faculty, and six student conductors: Abraham Kaplan of Tel Aviv, Israel; Eric Ericson of Stockholm, Sweden; Arpad Darazs and Lajos Toth, both of Budapest, Hungary; Robert Pettit of Boston, Mass.; and Barry Volkman of Bronx, New York.

The choir program will begin with a performance of Bach's Cantata No. 118, directed by Alfred Nash Patterson, and will conclude with a performance of Daniel Pinkham's Wedding Cantata, which will receive its Tanglewood premiere under the direction of Lorna Cooke DeVaron. Mr. Patterson, conductor of the Chorus Pro Musica and Mrs. DeVaron of the New England Conservatory of Music are both assisting Hugh Ross in the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

The Berkshire Eagle, Monday, July 15, 1957

Telegram (m)
RCESTER, Mass
Republican
Circ. 57,006
JUL 20 1957

Yorks of T
eature of
RAYMOND MORI
legram Music Critic
NOX—The opening of the first big Music
at Tanglewood w
ikovsky - Stravinsky attended last nigh
Two previous week
Bach and Mozart
ected combined audie
2,000.
harles Munch condu full membership of
on Symphony Orches
first time the 106 pla assembled since the
he winter season in
y Hall, Boston.

Main Courses

With all due respect to vinsky, whose 75th b was commemorated b
ing of his "Jeu de Ca rd Game), it was T sky who provided the rses of the evening.
he first was a singu resting, and possibly ant performance—the ing in the United Stat original version of "V s on a Rococo Them
lo, with Orchestral Ac liment, Opus 33." The was the orchestra's list, Samuel Mayes.

Restored in Moscow

appears that this recently published in
, in a restored edition he main difference bet nd the standard is tha iations have been plac
ir original sequence.
eighth or final vari been restored. It had usly been dropped.
However important this to the devotee or sti truth, it is not "g haikovsky. Mayes was sistently the purist o ation or the faultless cian. But he did trans work into poetic and same time, bravura

Sensitive Handling

After the Stravinsky, it e treading on virgin p hear the commonp
metimes sugary, but ex
e melodies. Mayes ga
ensitive handling of ph rile tone and firm
hile not irresistible T
vsky, it does provide list with a "tour de fo
Mayes successfully me
allenge of its elaborat inations, including ecariously perched har and deluges of pas
rk.
Stravinsky wrote his me" for a ballet, "Je eals." It might have h
the audience could

MUNCH CONDUCTS THIS AFTERNOON'S CONCERT IN SHED

Program to Be Dedicated To the Memory of Serge Koussevitzky

The final concert of the third week of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, in the Music Shed this afternoon at 2.30.

Dr. Munch dedicates the concert to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky, and opens the program with one of Dr. Koussevitzky's special favorites, the "Romeo and Juliet" Overture by Tchaikovsky. Isaac Stern, violinist, will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, thus rounding out the special emphasis on the works of this composer during the weekend just past.

ISAAC STERN

Another feature of the weekend has been a salute to Igor Stravinsky on the occasion of his 75th birthday, and Dr. Munch climaxes the tribute with a performance of the "Canticum Sacrum". Soloists will be John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, and the Berkshire Festival chorus has been prepared by Hugh Ross.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for this performance, and general admission allows an overflow audience to enjoy the concert from the Tanglewood lawns. An easy drive over the new Massachusetts Turnpike brings Springfield visitors to Lenox in about an hour.

The final events of this third Festival weekend will be the student performance of Chamber Music this morning at 10.00 and the Composer's Forum in the evening at 8.30. Both these events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 28, 1957

22—The Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, July 17, 1957

Student Concert Program Announced

The student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center will present its third concert of the 1957 season in the Music Shed at Tanglewood tomorrow evening at 8:30. The program features works by Copland, Schumann, Nielsen and Beethoven. Assisting teacher of orchestral conducting Seymour Lipkin will share the podium with three student conductors: David Wooldridge of London, England; Michael Senturia of Washington, D.C.; Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, Great Britain. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Program

Symphony No. 3 (first and second movements) Copland
David Wooldridge, conductor.
London, England.

Piano Concerto (first movement) Schumann
Morey Ritt, piano, Hempstead, N.Y.
Michael Senturia, conductor, Washington, D.C.

Symphony No. 5 (first movement) Nielsen
Wyn Morris, conductor.
Llanelly, South Wales, Great Britain.

Intermission.

Symphony No. 6 Beethoven
Seymour Lipkin, conductor.

AGE AND WORK

Capacity Does Not Lessen

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

ON SUNDAY, I watched Pierre Monteux conduct the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. Monteux is 82. He has had a continuous schedule this summer at Tanglewood after a very difficult season in New York including conducting at the Metropolitan Opera which is no light chore.

Leading an orchestra of a hundred or more men, and as at Tanglewood also one woman, is not only an intellectual task of the highest order but also involves violent physical effort, tremendous capacity for memory, self-control, and the simultaneous response to composer, player and audience. It is surprising that a man can do this at 82; yet look so fresh and even buoyant after the performance is over.

SOKOLSKY

Age is, of course, as much of the spirit as of the arteries. Those who grow old quickest are surely those who have least to interest and concern them; yet I have known loafers who grow old, if not gracefully; that is, they live long. Therefore, there are apparently no fixed rules. But it is possibe to note, in our own country, the amazing spectacle of Bernard Baruch writing his memoirs at 87, the first volume coming out in August, and Herbert Hoover, 83, writing his definitive work on Woodrow Wilson which will shortly be published, and Arthur Vining Davis, 90, still engaging in enormous real estate transactions.

+ + +

AGE APPARENTLY has nothing to do with capacity to work if the spirit and desire are still alive.

Of course, such men as I describe do not pursue hobbies. They need no toys. They keep working at their tasks. Monteux, music; Baruch, the economy of nations; Hoover, government; Davis, business—the activities they know and understand and are able to do competently. The fellow who retires and pursues a hobby may expend as much physical effort on the hobby as on his life-work, but it may be exciting, and the effort is often without result—the kind of result that is really meaningful to him. Those who hate what they are doing, do it not well at all, and do themselves no good at all. They are playing games.

That is why so many rich women go in for toys. Before they found the toys they did nothing themselves, delegating their responsibilities to hirelings and consuming time in the peripheral activities of the search for clothes, the gossip of the hair-dressing parlor, auctions for pictures, luncheons with other women they hate or dinners with the husband's associates whom they find to be bores. They have lived according to the necessities and proprieties of their station.

Then comes the day when they want to do something themselves to find themselves, as the phrase may be. So, they go in for all sorts of movements, not because they believe in them, but because somebody they know believes in them.

+ + +

THE OLDSTERS still at work, such as Monteux, Baruch, Hoover, Davis and many others, do not require such sublimations. They do not live in a toyland world. They continue their life-work as long as they can without being diverted by the tenuous terrors of their neighbors who believe that they can achieve long life by retiring from life. It is the fallacy of our industrial establishment that men are retired at 65 or 68, just when experience has accumulated and matured into wisdom, just when a proper balance of intellect and spirit is producing wisdom. Wisdom is a quality that comes to few.

I suppose that I should have concentrated on Berlioz and Hindemith on Sunday, but I could not avoid thinking of what men can do in their eighties if the will to do is not shrunk by life's petty battles and small affairs and by the fears of illness and death.

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 181,325
JUL 20 1957

Monteux to Direct Berkshire Concerts

Tonight's first Saturday night concert of the Berkshire Festival by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be conducted by Pierre Monteux.

His program will include Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and . . . continuing this weekend's tribute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky . . . "The Rite of Spring."

Mr. Monteux conducted the first performance of this work in Paris in 1913 and later introduced it in Boston and New York.

Mr. Monteux, who will also conduct the Shed concert next weekend, spans a generation in the musical life of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, having been its conductor between 1919 and 1924 and a frequent guest conductor during recent years.

He spent a number of years as the regular conductor of both the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam and the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, and has joined Charles Munch in conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its transcontinental tour and two European tours. This will mark his sixth visit to Tanglewood.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.
ALABAMA JOURNAL
Circ. D. 22,831
AUG 1 1957

MARINETTE, WIS.
EAGLE-STAR
AUG 1 1957

NYACK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-NEWS
Circ. D. 10,786
AUG 1 1957

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.
LIGHT
Circ. D. 103,831 - S. 133,598
AUG 1 1957

San Francisco, Calif.
CALL-BULLETIN
Circ. D. 137,340
AUG 1

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
AUG 1

JAMAICA, N. Y.
Long Island Press
Circ. D. 258,815 - S. 312,250
AUG 1 1957

Choir
ut Tomorrow
d Choir, composed at the Berkshire
will present its first 1957 season in the hall at Tangle-evening at 8:30.
open to friends of
usic Center.
student singers will Patterson and Varon of the Music and six student braham Kaplan of Eric Ericson of den; Arpad Darazs
both of Budapest,
rt Pettit of Boston,
Barry Volkman of York. program will begin rmance of Bach's
18, directed by Alfred n, and will conclude rmance of Daniel edding Cantata, which ves its Tanglewood
der the direction of DeVaron. Mr. Patteror of the Chorus Pro
Mrs. DeVaron of the and Conservatory of both assisting Hugh choral department of re Music Center this

July 17, 1957

Announced.

umann, Nielsen and assistant teacher of orducting Seymour Lip-es the podium with t conductors: David of London, England;
turia of Washington,
Morris of Llanelly, Great Britain. The
en to Friends of the usic Center.

Program
(first and second move-Copland
oldridge, conductor.
on, England.
(first movement) Schumann
piano, Hempstead, N.Y. da, conductor, Washington,
D.C.
8 (first movement) Nielsen
Morris, conductor,
outh Wales, Great Britain.
Intermission.
Beethoven
our Lipkin, conductor.

Y, ALA.
URNAL
931

1957

S.

957

N. Y.
NEWS
0,786

1957

TO, TEX.
T
- S. 133,598

1957 co, Calif.

LLETIN
37,340

1957

TTY, N. Y.
ERICAN
. S, 955,847

1957

. N. Y.
Press
S, 342,250

1957

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

JUL 20 1957

Works of Tchaikovsky Feature of Lenox Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—The opening concert of the first big Music Shed series at Tanglewood was a Tchaikovsky - Stravinsky program, attended last night by 6,710. Two previous weekends of Bach and Mozart music attracted combined audiences of 22,000.

Charles Munch conducted the full membership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra—the first time the 106 players had assembled since the close of the winter season in Symphony Hall, Boston.

Main Courses

With all due respect to Igor Stravinsky, whose 75th birthday was commemorated by the playing of his "Jeu de Cartes" (Card Game), it was Tchaikovsky who provided the main courses of the evening.

The first was a singularly interesting, and possibly important performance—the first playing in the United States of his original version of "Variations on a Rococo Theme for Cello with Orchestral Accompaniment, Opus 33." The soloist was the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes.

Restored in Moscow

It appears that this work was recently published in Moscow, in a restored edition.

The main difference between it and the standard is that the variations have been placed in their original sequence, and the eighth or final variation has been restored. It had previously been dropped.

However important this may be to the devotee or stickler for truth, it is not "great" Tchaikovsky. Mayes was not consistently the purist of intonation or the faultless technician. But he did transform the work into poetic and, at the same time, bravura music.

Sensitive Handling

After the Stravinsky, it was like treading on virgin purity to hear the commonplace, sometimes sugary, but expressive melodies. Mayes gave it a sensitive handling of phrase, virile tone and firm bow. While not irresistible Tchaikovsky, it does provide the cellist with a "tour de force."

Mayes successfully met the challenge of its elaborate machinations, including some precariously perched harmonies and deluges of passage-work.

Stravinsky wrote his "Card Game" for a ballet, "In Three Deals." It might have helped if the audience could have seen the "Dance of the Joker," "Variations of the Four Queens," and the "Combat Between the Spades and Hearts."

A Weak Work

Without visual interest this is a weak, dawdling work. It makes valiant efforts to be charming and polite, and has an abundance of familiar Stravinsky bravado.

In spite of a brilliant performance by orchestra and conductor, it remained, in the main, a tiresome work. A rescue of a sort is attempted in the finale ("A Triumph of the Hearts"). Here Stravinsky offers bizarre rythms in conflict, minus which little else is left to incite a flicker of excitement.

Standard

Munch and the orchestra gave a standard performance of Tchaikowsky's Symphony No. 6 in B Minor, the "Pathetique." The spotlight was focused generally on its morbidity and frustration, encased in beautiful technical performance by the orchestra.

Possibly the unforgettable performances by Koussevitzky are still echoing in the subconscious — enough to make lesser performances pallid by comparison.

Tonight's program includes Mendelssohn's Hebrides Overture, Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring."

STRAVINSKY WORK HEARD AT LENOX

Boston Symphony Plays His 'Jeu de Cartes' and Piece by Tchaikovsky at Fete

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 19—This is a Stravinsky week-end of sorts at the Berkshire Festival. At each of the Boston Symphony's three concerts one of the 75-year-old composer's works will be played. But as if to balance this diet, which is really not drastic any longer, there will be a generous helping of Tchaikovsky on every program.

Friday's Stravinsky piece was his "Jeu de Cartes" (Card Game), which the composer described as a "ballet in three deals." It does not belong among his major works, but it has a great deal of vivacity and rhythmic vitality. It makes for pleasant listening. Though it was written only twenty years ago, it is not in the least bit problematical. It shows that the later Stravinsky is not always knotty.

Charles Munch conducted the piece with an abundance of gusto, and the rich-voiced Boston Symphony responded with a performance that glowed with color, as though the music were by Tchaikovsky. It may be asked whether even this music, which is certainly Stravinsky in a congenial vein, might not have been closer to his nature with a leaner tone and less opulence of texture.

Tchaikovsky was represented by what might be called, with unlimited poetic license, a novelty. This was the Variations on a Rococo Theme for 'Cello and Orchestra, Opus 33, which was being performed in the original version for the first time in this country.

It seems a 'cellist named Fitzhagen, to whom the Variations were dedicated and who played the first performance, "improved" them for publication. Russian musicologists have recently traced his activities, worked up a fine show of indignation at his perfidy and, with the help of art experts, criminologists and "ultraviolet and infra-red rays," restored the composition to its original state.

THE HARTFORD TIMES, SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1957

Munch Leads Aces In 'Card Game'

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass. — The Tchaikowsky-Stravinsky weekend at Tanglewood was the signal for the return of the Boston Symphony's full complement of players to the Music Shed last night, in a program of more than ordinary interest.

For his Stravinsky Mr. Munch chose the composer's "Card Game," subtitled a "Ballet in Three Deals," which is among the least familiar and most eclectic of his scores. Someone has noted stylistic affinities to Rossini, Delibes, Johann Strauss and Tchaikowsky, and there are doubtless others.

Yet it makes a pleasant divertissement on a Summer's evening, and the Bostonians under Munch handled its rhythmic intricacies with precision and exhilarating buoyancy. Stravinsky may have envisaged fewer than 106 men in his ballet orchestra, but never the unanimity the Boston Orchestra demonstrated.

* * *

TCHAIKOWSKY'S "Rococo" Variations for Cello and Orchestra have never argued the composer's immortality, but they always make an excellent pretext for the appearance of a virtuoso cellist. On this occasion it was Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, who gave the first "Western" performance of the variations in the original order set down by Tchaikowsky.

For all its technical display (which Mr. Mayes handled with imperturbable elan and less than perfect intonation), this work has a redeeming melodic core that rescues it from the merely rhetorical. The cellist received a prolonged ovation from an enthusiastic audience of approximately 6,700.

* * *

"THRILLING" is a tired cliche of the reviewer's vocabulary, but it was descriptive of the impassioned threnody that Dr. Munch elicited from his men in the Tchaikowsky "Pathetique" Symphony. Never has this writer heard a more stirring statement of the first three movements, which culminate in the vigorous march theme.

In his approach to Tchaikowsky Munch is reminiscent of Mengelberg, particularly so in his use of the magnificent brass ensemble of the Boston Orchestra. In the dolorous finale there were times when the conductor applied his brass a little too heavily, but in the preceding movements this choir was the bulwark and mainstay of a moving interpretation.

Munch never slights the melodic curve and never fails to build the climaxes with inexorable logic and with a knowledge of the overall design. This was easily worth the long trip to Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

it is difficult to see why the Russians were so exercised. Granting them every bit of credit for taking the trouble to rediscover the truth of what a composer wished, one must suggest that this was much ado about very little. The Variations are pretty thin. Original version or not, they do not amount to much. By the time they have reached their full course, they have lost whatever promise they began with—and there was not a lot of that.

A 'cellist however, is hard put to find anything new. Samuel Mayes, the Boston Symphony's first 'cellist, could not be blamed for pitching into this original version with enthusiasm. He played with a large, singing tone, with security of intonation and with considerable virtuoso flair. The audience, which is loyal to its Bostonians, recalled him again and again, and when he returned to his accustomed place in the ensemble for the second half of the program, it gave him another big hand.

The program ended with Tchaikovsky's "Symphonic Pathétique," which Mr. Munch conducted with the fervor of a man who believes in this music. That, by the way, is the only honest approach to this most tragic of Tchaikovsky's symphonies.

The orchestra played with power and intensity. The sound was so big and the emotion so vibrant that surely not a bit of it could have been missed by those in the audience who were seated on the farthest reaches of the lawn.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

JUL 20 1957

Stravinsky, Tchaikovsky Music Featured at Berkshire Festival

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 19—This is a Stravinsky week-end of sorts at the Berkshire Festival. At each of the Boston Symphony's three concerts one of the 75-year-old composer's works will be played. But as if to balance this diet, which is really not drastic any longer, there will be a generous helping of Tchaikovsky on every program.

Tonight's Stravinsky piece was his "Jeu de Cartes" (Card Game), which the composer described as a "ballet in three deals." It does not belong among his major works, but it has a great deal of vivacity and rhythmic vitality. It makes for pleasant listening. Though it was written only twenty years ago, it is not in the least bit problematical. It shows that the later Stravinsky is not always knotty.

Charles Munch conducted the piece with an abundance of gusto, and the rich-voiced Boston Symphony responded with a performance that glowed with color, as though the music were by Tchaikovsky. It may be asked whether even this music, which is certainly Stravinsky in a congenial vein, might not have been closer to his nature with a leaner tone and less opulence of texture.

Tchaikovsky was represented by what might be called, with unlimited poetic license, a novelty. This was the Variations on a Rococo Theme for 'Cello and Orchestra, Opus 33, which was being performed in the original version for the first time in this country.

It seems a 'cellist named Fitzhagen, to whom the Variations were dedicated and who played the first performance, "improved" them for publication. Russian musicologists have recently traced his activities, worked up a fine show of indignation at his perfidy and, with the help of art experts, criminologists and "ultraviolet and infra-red about very little. The Variations are pretty thin. Original version or not, they do not amount to much. By the time they have reached their full course, they have lost whatever promise they began with—and there was not a lot of that.

Samuel Mayes

A 'cellist however, is hard put to find anything new. Samuel Mayes, the Boston Symphony's first 'cellist, could not be blamed for pitching into this original version with enthusiasm. He played with a large, singing tone, with security of intonation and with considerable virtuoso flair. The audience, which is loyal to its Bostonians, recalled him again and again, and when he returned to his accustomed place in the ensemble for the second half of the program, it gave him another big hand.

The program ended with Tchaikovsky's "Symphonic Pathétique," which Mr. Munch conducted with the fervor of a man who believes in this music. That, by the way, is the only honest approach to this most tragic of Tchaikovsky's symphonies.

The orchestra played with power and intensity. The sound was so big and the emotion so vibrant that surely not a bit of it could have been missed by those in the audience who were seated on the farthest reaches of the lawn.

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 20 1957

Munch's Concert Draws Peak Berkshire Throng

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 20 — Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra last night began the main series of concerts of the 20th annual Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The great fame of the orchestra and its conductor, plus the nature of the largely popular program and Berkshire weather of the finest, drew an audience of 6710 persons. If not a record attendance, this was extraordinarily large.

Each week-end of the main series this year will stress the music of one composer (though not devoted exclusively to him) and the first to be so honored is Tchaikovsky. He was represented last night by the first performance in the United States of the original version of the variations on a Rococo theme, and the sixth, or "Pathetique," symphony. In contrast to the style of Tchaikovsky came in the opening piece, the droll and piquant Stravinsky ballet, "Card Game."

Mayes Soloist

Samuel Mayes, the superbly gifted first cellist of the Boston Symphony, was soloist in the Rococo variations, a work not frequently performed by this orchestra in recent seasons. The American debut of the original version was made possible by publication of the manuscript in Russia last year.

From the casual listener's point of view, the difference between the usual (doctored) version and the original is not great, largely alterations in the order of some variations and a certain trimming down of some ornate detail. To a player, however, differences that seem but academic to the public may be of great importance.

In any event, the score remains one of the great Russian's attractive, largely serene and smaller scaled works. It is pleasantly diverting and provides many pages for true virtuoso display, but it does not ruffle the nerves or increase the rate of one's pulse.

Mayes played it beautifully, with a fine ardor and all of his usual technical mastery — albeit with some places, mostly toward the beginning, where the pitch was small—fractionally off. The silken elegance of his tone and the grace of his playing were the best Mayes, and the best Mayes is gorgeous cello playing.

"Card Game" is to be counted among the less arid and decidedly more engaging of later Stravinsky.

The rhythm is not perfunctorily mechanical, nor is it abstrusely involved as that of much of his later music. The reason, perhaps, is the fact that "Card Game" was meant to be danced.

Munch and the orchestra gave it a brisk and lucid performance, one neither overly delicate nor too hearty, but somewhere in between, in terms of dynamic scale. The score was an excellent preliminary to the more substantial music that followed.

The best came last, which is always desirable.

Last night's performance of the "Pathetique" Symphony took its place among the two, three or four greatest readings of this personal threnody which I ever have heard. Munch has done it very well before, but last night he exceeded even his best with the score.

The "Pathetique" is often noisy, always emotionally outgoing, and the conductor played it quite honestly within this frame of expression. When the score said "very loud," the music came out that way, and it was vastly exciting or deply moving, according to the context.

Heighten Effect

One factor in achieving such a reading is the fact of bringing out those "inner voices"—secondary melodies which when heard in the right proportion enrich the whole texture and heighten the total effect.

In places Mnuch brought them out too strongly—some violin detail and much work from the horns. Yet, in terms of communication directly to the heart, this was a "Pathetique" of rare intensity at the same time it was very cleanly played.

The audience last night was pleasingly responsive. Mr. Mayes got a true ovation for his work, and so did the "Pathetique." As always, the march which makes the third movement, proved irrestible, and the public applauded where it shouldn't, despite Munch's frantic gesture for silence. So he launched into the finale while the palms were still beating.

There was a new face in the cello section—Winifred Winograd, who has just become a member of the Boston Symphony. Last night marked her first concert with it.

On Sunday will come the first East Coast performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum." If the weather holds, a huge audience may be expected.

[155]

[154]

6710 ATTEND TANGLEWOOD SHED CONCERT

Music of Stravinsky and Tschaikowsky Is Featured

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 19 — The music of Stravinsky and Tschaikowsky played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, aided by perfect weather, drew 6710 people to the giant music shed tonight for the opening week end of the shed concerts of this current Berkshire Music Festival. As is usual at such an opening, there were many distinguished guests occupying the boxes and seats in the shed and a multitude of music lovers occupying the spacious grounds.

For All Tastes

The program had been arranged so that there was music for all tastes. The program opened with "Jeu de Cartes," that is "Card Game," a ballet in three deals, followed by the first performance in the United States of the original version of Tschaikowsky's variations on a Rococo theme for violoncello with orchestral accompaniment," played magnificently by first cellist Samuel Mayes, and finally "Symphony in B Minor, No. 6" (the Pathetique).

There was particular interest in the Rococo variations, known in this country through the Fitzenhagen arrangement which was published in 1876. Recent information from Russia reveals that Fitzenhagen made a considerable number of changes in the original version and that the order of the variations is very different from the restored version made in Moscow in 1956.

However, most of the audience was much more interested in the music than in the placement of each variation. This is lovely, imaginative and effective music. Samuel Mayes is one of the finest of contemporary cellists. He draws a fine full tone from his instrument. His phrasing is always elegant and his realization of whatever music he is playing is scholarly and his performance is vital. So it was tonight. His colleagues with Mr. Munch, provided perfect collaboration and were among the most enthusiastic when the time came for applause.

Most Effective

Stravinsky's ballet, "Jeu de Cartes," is one of his most effective. Even without the dancers, the music mirrors every episode in full color. The ballet centers around an enormous card table, the cards of the pack represented by individual dancers. The shuffling and dealing make a ceremonial introduction to each of the three deals. The joker is the source of all the mischief which accompanies each episode.

Mr. Munch and the orchestra entered into the spirit of the music, providing a highly colorful, artfully rhythmic performance. The "Little Waltz" in the first episode was charming and there was imagination and spirit in the variations of the four queens and the final march of the second episode. The third "deal" includes a dainty waltz-minuet and a stunning "Combat Between Spades and Hearts," a presto movement that was a stunning bit of virtuosity. One needed only a modicum of imagination to visualize the action, or lacking that one could simply enjoy this colorful and rhythmic music for itself.

What is there new to say about Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique?" It has been played and replayed. For years it has been a sure-fire hit with Tanglewood audiences and so it continues to be. We have listened to all kinds of interpretations of this music, the massive slow moving reading of Furtwangler; the passionate utterances which Koussevitzky drew from the orchestra and the more rigid, but undeniably powerful reading of Markovich.

Middle Road

Mr. Munch gets tremendously excited when he conducts this music and seems to urge his players to give more than they can, but they never do. Thus the underlying nostalgia which is inherent in this music remains clear and untarnished. We cannot feel that a true interpretation of this work necessitates the unleashing of the furies or a fall into utter sentimentality. There is a middle way and Mr. Munch has found it.

Tomorrow night Pierre Monteux returns to the podium and great enthusiasm will mark his return to Tanglewood. He will open his program with the overture to "The Hebrides" by Mendelssohn and follow this with his reading of Tschaikowsky's "Symphony No. [illegible] in E Minor." The concluding portion of the program will be devoted to "Le Sacre du Printemps" by Stravinsky. Mr. Monteux conducted the first performance in Paris in 1913 and introduced the music in concert form the following year.

Mr. Munch returns to the podium Sunday afternoon to lead the annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Isaac Stern will be heard in the Tschaikowsky violin concerto and the program will open with the same composer's "Romeo and Juliet" overture-fantasy. Between these two, we shall hear Stravinsky's latest work, which may become as controversial as the "Sacre," namely the "Canticum Sacrum Ad Honorum Sancti Marci Nominis" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra.

THE SPRINGFIELD [illegible] SUNDAY, JULY 21, 1957

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 21, 1957

Tchaikovsky, Stravinsky Program at Tanglewood

By Jay S. Harrison

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Samuel Mayes, cellist. The program:

"Jeu de Cartes" . . . Stravinsky
Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra; Symphony No. 6 ("Pathetique") . . . Tchiakovsky.

LENOX, Mass., July 20.—The Berkshire Music Festival entered the major phase of its current activity last night in Tanglewood's mammoth Music Shed, as Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program given to Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, the latter being the featured composer of the week end in honor of his seventy-fifth birthday. A ballet, a set of variations and the "Pathetique" Symphony were the evening's ample fare, and an audience of 6,710 was pleased to greet the Tchaikovsky numbers with something like hysteria and the Stravinsky with something akin to a deep-seated New England reserve.

In point of fact, Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" was actually tendered the least successful rendition of the concert. The "Card Game, A Ballet in Three Deals," to give it its complete English title, is mostly a sardonic and bitter affair, and Mr. Munch's reading was neither. It did not sting or lash out even in those sections where the composer has been inspired to invent real thumb-on-nose gestures for his orchestra.

Venom Lacking

Moreover, the crispness that is native to "Card Game," both rhythmically and in questions of sonority, was little reflected in a performance that generally substituted prettiness for the acerbity and bite that are at the heart of the work.

Of course it may be argued, and strongly, that "Card Game" is not an autonomous concert piece, that it needs the action of the pasteboard-figures-come-to-life of the ballet. At any rate the work is so markedly kinetic, so clearly designed to accompany gestures that a good bit of its impact wafts away unless there are evil Jokers, elegant Queens and knavish Knaves present to lure our sight precisely as the music holds our ears. Furthermore, "Card Game" is no ideal outdoor number, since most of its textural filigree is promptly gobbled up by the boundless acoustics of a large hall. Still, the performance could, without effort, have shown us the work in a truer light. On this occasion, the venom of "Card Game" was mainly milk.

Tchaikovsky's rococo variations for cello and orchestra have never achieved the enduring popularity accorded most of his concerted works, a condition some claim, that results from the number having been played in an "inauthentic" version not entirely of the composer's design.

As if to scotch this view once and for all, last night's performance, with Samuel Mayes as soloist, presented for the first time in America Tchaikovsky's original version of the score and it proved beyond a shred of doubt that the autographed version is quite the equal of the later emended edition.

Touched-Up Version

Actually, the familiar form of the rococo variations is the brainchild of a certain Fitzhagen who, presumably with Tchaikovsky's tacit consent, rearranged their order and touched up the solo parts. The eighth variation he excluded altogether.

In returning to Tchaikovsky's original, Mr. Mayes has done us a service by demonstrating that the maestro knew perfectly well what he wanted to begin with and that the piece as first set down need have embarrassed no one. Granted, it is a slight, a powdery effort. But it is nowhere offensive or gauche. It simply is not Tchaikovsky at his best.

Mr. Mayes is further to be commended for an amazingly dexterous performance, one that was ripe with temperament and elan. Throughout there was nary a cough from his cello nor yet a grunt or a chortle. It was all aural velvet, and the colors he drew were of a rich and luminous intensity.

'Pathetique' Intense

Intense, as well, almost to the point of paranoia, was the "Pathetique" Symphony, which is rather as it should be. Mr. Munch has always presented a bonton and streamlined Tchaikovsky to which are combined elements of panic and ferocity, quite frightening to behold.

What emerges is a moody, violent and often penetrating study of the composer whose every private joy and agony he was willing to share with his public. And when the Boston men are on their mettle, as they certainly were for the "Pathetique," you are likely to hear such orchestral playing as to make the trip between New York and Lenox a slim price to pay for the pleasure of encountering it.

Music Review

Eagle 7/20

Shed Concerts Open

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

"LA GRANDE SAISON" at Tanglewood started last night. The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra, reassembled in the great Shed after its dispersed assignments here for the smaller Bach-Mozart series and the Esplanade in Boston, played under Charles Munch the first of the three programs which are to be devoted this weekend to Tschaikovsky and Stravinsky.

Attracted by a program thus devised to please both old musical settlers and musical pioneers and abetted by an evening as fine as Berkshire can produce, 6,700 people gathered in and around the Shed for the first concert of the four-week big season.

* * *

A DEBUT and a premiere not generally noticed, but of more than passing significance, was the initial participation in the ranks of the orchestra of a newly recruited cellist, Winifred Winograd, the first lady to play a bowed instrument in the Boston Symphony. The orchestra is proud of its female flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and of its second harpist, Olivia Lutke, but this is the first stringed instrument in the Boston orchestra, if the purists will exclude the harp, to be played by a lady.

Munch began his program with the 20-year-old ballet of Stravinsky, "The Game of Cards," designated by the composer "in three deals." The 75th birthday of Stravinsky was observed a month ago but its celebration continues here and in many other musical centers. This ballet is among his milder and more light-hearted music. It is three sections, played without pause, each of which is introduced by a repetition of a short, eight-bar statement not unlike, at least in gait and certainly in purpose, the Promenade in the "Pictures" of Moussorgsky. Anyone not acquainted with the danced version, as is this reviewer, could well imagine and visualize all manner of opportunity for wit and jollity in the choreography.

* * *

IT IS AN ACHIEVEMENT for a conductor to bring his orchestra through the rhythmic intricacies of this, as of most Stravinsky scores, without mishap. The composer has been known to harangue performers who attempted to "interpret" his music. Humble obedience to the indications are all that are required and expected. Contrasts are the result of heeding markings "leggiero" and "pesante"; he asks the horns to play "cantabile" and the bassoon "grazioso."

Samuel Mayes

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA was in magnificent form. The concluding "Pathetique," was one of the most noisy and most dramatic this listener can recall but the opening sentence ending with the superb viola section producing a marvelously vibrant tone was an earnest of the playing which was to be produced consistently through the entire symphony.

Following the "Jeu," the solo cellist of the orchestra,, Samuel Mayes, played the Tschaikovsky "Variations on a Rococo Theme" with the orchestra. Mayes played the gaudy show-piece with amazing wizardry. The version used last night was the composer's original one and not the one which has been in current usage and accepted without question up to now as authentic.

* * *

EVIDENTLY performers and editors had changed the sequence of some of the variations and made minor "improvements." Mayes last night played the original for the first time in the United States. This would not seem to be of world-shattering importance in this case, as the music is not arresting. Only the performance was. Mayes played with glowing tone, a security which his nonchalance belied, and a singing quality in the few opportunities the piece affords of this type of playing that was magnetic. The ovation he received was the peak of the evening.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411

JUL 20 1957

Munch's Concert Draws Peak Berkshire Throng

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 20 — Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight began the main series of concerts of the 20th annual Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The great fame of the orchestra and its conductor, plus the nature of a largely popular program and Berkshire weather of the finest, drew an audience of 6710 persons. If not a record attendance, this was extraordinarily large.

Each week-end of the main series this year will stress the music of one composer (though not devoted exclusively to him) and the first to be so honored is Tchaikovsky. He was represented tonight by the first performance in the United States of the original version of the variations on a Rococo theme, and the sixth, or "Pathetique," symphony. Contrast to the style of Tchaikovsky came in the opening piece, the droll and piquant Stravinsky ballet, "Card Game."

Mayes Soloist

Samuel Mayes, the superbly gifted first cellist of the Boston Symphony, was soloist in the Rococo variations, a work not frequently performed by this orchestra in recent seasons. The American debut of the original version was made possible by publication of the manuscript in Russia last year.

From the casual listener's point of view, the difference between the usual (doctored) version and the original is not great, largely alterations in the order of some variations and a certain trimming down of some ornate detail. To a player, however, differences that seem but academic to the public may be of great importance.

In any event, the score remains one of the great Russian's attractive, largely serene and smaller scaled works. It is pleasantly diverting and provides many pages for true virtuosos display, but it does not ruffle the nerves or increase the rate of one's pulse.

Mayes played it beautifully, with a fine ardor and all of his usual technical mastery — albeit with some places, mostly toward the beginning, where the pitch was small—fractionally off. The silken elegance of his tone and the grace of his playing were the best Mayes, and the best Mayes is gorgeous cello playing.

"Card Game" is to be counted among the less arid and decidedly more engaging of later Stravinsky.

The rhythm is not so perfunctori[ly] mechanical, nor so abstrusely involved as that of much of his later music. The reason, perhaps, is the fact that "Card Game" was meant to be danced.

Munch and the orchestra gave it a frisk and bracing performance, one neither overly delicate nor too hearty, but somewhere in between, in terms of dynamic scale. The score was an excellent preliminary to the more substantial music that followed.

The best came last, which is always desirable.

Tonight's performance of the "Pathetique" Symphony took its place among the two, three or four greatest readings of this personal threnody we could ever have heard. Munch has done it very well before, but tonight he exceeded even his best with the score.

The "Pathetique" is often noisy, always emotionally outpoing, and the conductor played it quite honestly within its frame of expression. When the score said "very loud," the music came out that way, and it was vastly exciting, deply moving, according to the context.

Heighten Effect

One factor in achieving such a reading is the fact of bringing out those "inner voices"—secondary melodies—which often heard in the right proportion enrich the whole texture and heighten the total effect.

In places this is brought the out too strongly, some violin d[e]tail and even work from the horns. Yet the forms of communication come to the heart, the was a "Pathetique" of rare intensity at the same time it was vent cleanly played.

The audience tonight was pleasingly responsive. Mr. Mayes got a true ovation for his work and so did the "Pathetique." As always, the march which makes the third movement, proved irresistible, and the public applauded where it shouldn't, despite Munch's frantic gesture for silence. So he launched into the finale while the palms were still beating.

There was a new face in the cello section—Winifred Winograd who has just become a member of the Boston Symphony. Tonight marked her first concert with it.

On Sunday will come the first East Coast performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum." If the weather holds, a huge audience may be expected.

OTHER THEATER NEWS ON PAGE 22

...ANGLEWOOD ...haik... ...kes
By MILES KAST...
...OOD, Lenox, Mass., ...Boston Symphony ...Shed last night. ..., the third of the ...ights this year's Be...
...ion of a work by ...however, served to ...of the composer's ...It also helped to ...udience conscious ...e in the musical ...20th as well as the ...
...on this program ...performance in the ...original version of ...ons on a Rococo ...Cello." For years ...s been heard in an ...the cellist Fizen... ...irst played it. The ...liminates his order ...tions, his omission ...n one, and his rep... ...wo phrases of the ...s is all to the good.
As Written
...Mayes had the honor ...he work as the com... ...originally written. It... ...tyle of playing and ...'s style synchronize ...formance made the ...the more impos... ...cello tone is warm ..., capable of glori... ...t that gives the in... ...ch an opportunity ...audience heartily ...how he made it do ...
...ng glory of the ...ver, was Munch's ...erformance of the ...ny. Only a vir... ...ra could have ...the demands he ... This interpreta... ...y charged emo... ...ch so that the
...K CITY, N. Y. ...L AMERICAN ...,991 - S. 855,847
...22 1957
BERKSHIRE FEST...
Spotlig...
By MILES KAST...
...ANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass... people attended the Tchai... ...of the Berkshire Festival. ... music shed yesterday after... Boston Symphony played ... Juliet" and the violin con... ...oist.
...terest centered, however, in ...performance of Stravinsky's ...t recent work "Canticum ...rum," heard for the first ...e in the East at Ellenville, ..., last Thursday. ...hat the "Canticum Sacrum" ...ded more sacred and less ...matic on this occasion may ...attributed to Munch's ac... ...ance of it as a liturgical ...k.
...his approach shifted certain ...ances, thus giving the work ...ewhat different values.
Little Effect
...his change neither enhanced ...lessened the effect of the ...sic; it remained something ...admire for its craftsmanship ...her than for its impact. The ...or accorded St. Mark in this ...e thus becomes more a mat... ...of respect than of fevor. ...n this performance, the ...rus functioned less force... ...y than the soloists. Both

...ncert Dra...
...ire Thron...

...illy mechanical, nor s... involved as that of r...
later music. The reas...
is the fact that "Card...
meant to be danced.

Munch and the orch...
a brisk and bracing ...
one neither overly ...
too hearty, but so...
between, in terms ...
scale. The score w...
lent preliminary to t...
stantial music that ...

The best came l...
always desirable.

Tonight's perform...
"Pathetique" Symp... place among the two...
greatest readings o...
threnody which I ev...
Munch has done it ...
fore, but tonight he ...
his best with the ...

The "Pathetique" ... always emotionall...
the conductor play...
estly within this ...
sion. When the ...
loud," the music ...
way, and it was v...
steply moving, a...
context.

Heighten Effect

One factor in ...
reading is the fa...
those "inner v...
melodies—which...
the right propo...
whole texture ...
total effect.

In places Mu... out too strongl...
tail and much...
horns. Yet, in ...
cation, directly ...
was a "Pathet...
sity at the san...
cleanly played...

The audie...
pleasingly re...
got a true ov...
and so did t...
always, the ...
the third m...
restible, an...
plauded whe...
spite Munch'...
silence. So h...
finale while ...
beating.

There wa...
cello section ...
who has just ...
the Boston Sym... marked her first ...
On Sunday wi...
East Coast perfo... vinsky's "Cantic...
the weather hol...
ece may be exp...

OTHER THE...
ON PA...

AT TANGLEWOOD New York Journal-American
14-Sat., July 20, 1957 ★

Tchaikovsky Takes Over

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 20.—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony began their big weekends in the Music Shed last night. Their preoccupation was Tchaikovsky, the third of the great composers whose music highlights this year's Berkshire festival.

The inclusion of a work by Stravinsky, however, served to take note of the composer's 75th year. It also helped to keep the audience conscious that we live in the musical world of the 20th as well as the 19th Century.

Featured on this program was the first performance in the U. S. of the original version of the "Variations on a Rococo Theme for Cello." For years this work has been heard in an "edition" by the cellist Fizenhagen who first played it. The restoration eliminates his order of the variations, his omission of the eighth one, and his repetition of two phrases of the theme. This is all to the good.

Played As Written

Samuel Mayes had the honor of playing the work as the composer had originally written it. Since his style of playing and Tchaikovsky's style synchronize well, his performance made the occasion all the more important. His cello tone is warm and resonant, capable of glorifying a work that gives the instrument such an opportunity to sing. The audience heartily approved of how he made it do just that.

The crowning glory of the concert, however, was Muncn's impassioned performance of the Sixth Symphony. Only a virtuoso orchestra could have responded to the demands he made upon it. This interpretation was highly charged emotionally, so much so that the musicians were driven at times to keep up with the fervor emanating from their leader.

Special Affinity

Nevertheless, in his individual way Munch justified the frenzied moments through the tender ones. It became obvious that he built up his performance to the finale where the pathos found utterance and the symphony revealed its full meaning. He finds a special affinity in this music. While this may not have been his finest interpretation of it it was superbly set forth and deeply moving.

Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" opened the concert. Its rhythmic pulse sustained the piece without benefit of choreography, but the pleasure it gave otherwise proved mild.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.

AUG 1957

The Concerts

The first weekend (July 5, 6, 7) was devoted to orchestral and choral works by Bach under the baton of Charles Munch. The following week we heard much delightful music making. On July 13 Dr. Munch conducted the Symphony in E flat major (39), Symphony in G minor (40) and the Symphony in C major (41) by Mozart with verve. The orchestra sounded full and exciting. The next afternoon the program included other choice Mozart morsels, including the B flat major Bassoon Concerto played by Sherman Walt, the E flat major Horn Concerto played by James Stagliano, and the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet and Bassoon, played by Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Stagliano and Walt. It was a fine concert, full of agility and fun. A large audience attended.

Tschaikowsky was the bill of fare the following week (July 19, 20, 21). Sprinkled with monumental Stravinsky works, the series of three concerts attracted capacity crowds. On Friday evening, Dr. Munch conducted Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes", Tschaikowsky's variation of a rococo theme for Violoncello played by Samuel Mayes. The work was performed in the United States for the first time in its original version, a fact that did not impress us very much. A terrible performance of the "Pathetique" concluded the evening. Unbalanced and unimaginative. Equally disappointing was the Fifth Symphony performed under Pierre Monteux' baton. A definite feeling of unrehearsed quality seemed evident. This all was dispelled however, when Monteux raised his baton to conduct Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps". The excitement generated by the 83-year-old maestro in the score was breathtaking. The pictures of pagan Russia, which this work is, came to life and stayed with every listener. On Sunday afternoon we attended round three of the Canticum Sacrum ad Honorem Sancti Marci Nominis. We heard the work earlier in the week at Ellenville under Stokowski, but now heard a different conductor (Munch), different chorus (Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross) and two different soloists (John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, baritone) with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The difference was startling. Munch took the work at a much more rapid pace, but subdued it much more. Both soloists were superior interpreters of the work, but the Festival Chorus proved to be an unmanageable instrument that did not respond to the fine chant lines. In the large Tanglewood shed, the delicate work became too diffuse and was not absorbed by many listeners as fully as in Ellenville. And yet, we feel that Charles Munch captured more of the religious fervor of the work and distilled it to a fine tribute. Isaac Stern concluded the afternoon with an authorized reading of the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto. Here was smooth perfection, and unique rapprochement between conductor and soloist.

On Friday evening Munch devoted his energies to Berlioz' Corsair Overture, Harold in Italy, with Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist, and the Fantastic Symphony. It was surely one of the great thrills to see the conductor give readings that ranged from the bombastic to the very sensitive. All was given true color and true majesty. The Sacred Trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ" was given the following night. Here was a different Berlioz. Subdued, devout, reverend. The work separates into three sections, Herod's Dream, the Flight into Egypt and the Arrival at Sais. It was sung with devotion by Cesare Valletti, tenor, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Gerard Sousay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass. The festival chorus, much smoother by now, was prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

On July 28 "Papa" Monteux again mounted the podium to devote himself to excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz, and the overture to the opera "News of the Day" by Hindemith, as well as the latter's "Mathis der Maler." This was another memorable performance.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 22 1957

AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

Spotlight Stravinsky

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 22.—Some 27,490 people attended the Tchaikowsky-Stravinsky weekend of the Berkshire Festival. For the final program in the music shed yesterday afternoon, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony played the Tchaikowsky "Romeo and Juliet" and the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

Interest centered, however, in the performance of Stravinsky's most recent work "Canticum Sacrum," heard for the first time in the East at Ellenville, N. Y., last Thursday.

That the "Canticum Sacrum" sounded more sacred and less dramatic on this occasion may be attributed to Munch's acceptance of it as a liturgical work.

This approach shifted certain balances, thus giving the work somewhat differenet values.

Little Effect

This change neither enhanced nor lessened the effect of the music, it remained something to admire for its craftsmanship rather than for its impact. The honor accorded St. Mark in this piece thus becomes more a matter of respect than of fevor.

In this performance, the chorus functioned less forcefully than the soloists. Both John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, gave excellent accounts of their roles. If the orchestra felt about it as indifferently as the final note sounded, then it had many in agreement with its point of view. Audience applause was polite.

On one of the Berkshires' hottest afternoons, the orchestra played Tchaikovsky well. It worked up gradually to ardor in the "Romeo and Juliet" and held its own in concerto, but this was not one of its superb moments.

Stern Poised, Lyrical

Stern gave a poised, lyrical account of the concerto. His singing tone soared in sweetness if it did not work up into brilliance. When the orchestra played full tilt, his violin sounded in the minority.

Why the racetrack pace in the finale was necessary remains one of those perplexing elements in concerts these days.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Saturday night concert, attended by 11,000. How Mendelssohn's "Hebrides" overture slipped into the program is a mystery. Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony kept the weekend programs in line.

Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps" highlighted the evening both as one of the composer's unquestioned masterpieces and as one of the conductor's, also. It was the only work of his to give him full stature at these concerts.

[155]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 22 1957

'Canticum Sacrum' Feature Of Program at Tanglewood

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.
Boston Symphony Orchestra (Pierre Monteux conducting Saturday night. The program:
Overture, "The Hebrides" (Fingal's Cave) ..... Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 5 ..... Tchaikovsky
"Sacre du Printemps" ..... Stravinsky
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, Sunday afternoon. The program:
"Romeo and Juliet" Overture ..... Tchaikovsky
"Canticum Sacrum" ..... Stravinsky
(Soloists: John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; Festival Chorus)
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
(Soloist: Isaac Stern, violinist)

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 21.—Igor Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," which received its East Coast premiere only three days ago at the Empire State Festival, provided the central issue on this afternoon's program at Tanglewood conducted by Charles Munch, and brought to a natural culmination a week end devoted to honoring—in tandem with Tchaikovsky—the seventy-fifth birthday of the greatest creative musician of his century.

Out of the same surge of homage, Pierre Monteux, appearing at the Berkshire Music Center for the first time this season, last night led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the unendingly powerful and inspired "Le Sacre du Printemps," and the two pieces, though separated by forty-two years, served to remind all concerned that the age of anxiety is also an age productive of music cherishable to posterity.

The "Canticum Sacrum" is a humbly pious work—chaste, noble, spiritual, untouched by the brighter colors of sensual life. To achieve this end, the "Canticum," written on a commission from Venice for St. Mark's Cathedral, is scored for a small orchestra in which the darker shades predominate, the sonority layout demanding only winds, violas and double-basses. In this respect it bears a generic resemblance to the composer's "Symphony of Psalms," though that work is far more ponderous and slashing than the present canticle, which is thoroughly typical of Stravinsky's latest understated, rarified style.

Dedication to Venice

Actually, the "Canticum," in five short movements with an opening dedication to the City of Venice, reveals anew Stravinsky's preoccupation with religion, atonality, contrapuntal invention, the musical developments native to the era of his birth and the technical devices common to the Renaissance. In other hands the mixture might remain just that—a mixture with none of these isolated features settling into a compound. But Stravinsky, through a filtering process that is the loom of genius, has combined these elements into an entity that could come from no other pen but his. Indeed, it is of no more importance to know whether the "Canticum" is twelve-tone or not than it is necessary to be told what kind of staff paper it was written on.

The fact that the first and last movements for chorus are exact retrogrades or that certain intervals are inevitably associated with certain ideas, while of interest to the student, is of no matter to the ear. For the piece's musical intention, its balance, serenity and repose, are not born of cerebral considerations but derived, instead, from the composer's desire to underline his Vulgate text with music that suits its hallowed spirit.

And to the recurrent claim that Stravinsky is a non-vocal composer one has only to chide the remark as a rank humbug and point to the fact that in the "Canticum's" solo arias Stravinsky is neither more nor less vocal than Johann Sebastian Bach. In all then, the Canticum is such a number as we have a right to expect from our major worker in tone. Perhaps there will arrive a day when late Stravinsky, like late Beethoven, will come to be regarded as something special, as something more than music demanding only a casual acquaintance. I hazard that day is within our sight.

Koussevitsky Memorial

The remainder of yesterday's program, which was given in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, included a straightforward and rousing performance of Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet Overture" and a hugely expressive rendition of his Violin Concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist. Since Tchaikovsky and Stern are as much a natural combination as you are likely to find outside the annals of fiction, it is no wonder that the piece glowed and shimmered, darted and soared.

As for Saturday night's affair in the Music Shed, it belonged [illegible] "Le Sacre du Printemps," [illegible] performance by Mr. Monteux that was remarkable on almost every conceivable count. As he sees it, "Le Sacre" [illegible] churns a atmosphere [illegible] for a series of pagan fertility rites, which, of course, is precisely what it is meant to be. Never does the work become a vehicle for his personal prowess, though that prowess was everywhere in evidence; rather he turns "Le Sacre" into a vast and gripping tone-poem which is not incessantly aggressive after the manner of most conductors who occupy themselves with the work.

No Excessive Hysteria

Indeed, excepting those sections which lay authentic claim on it, there was no excessive hysteria, no whooping-up of sentiments that are themselves almost plaintive and moonstruck. "Le Sacre," after all, is not a perpetual motion dynamo, its moments of quietude and muted ferocity occurring as frequently as those others that lift the skies with their vehemence. Monteux's way is to allow the several aspects of the work their due to avoid exaggerating those moments of calm preceding orchestral storms, and to allow the storms, when they arrive, to thunder with hurricane force. The balance achieved thereby lends the work a nobility, a primitive directness, a primal ebb and flow that is irresistible. Also shattering. For confronting so great a masterpiece as read by a mind both deeply reflective and totally unmeretricious is an expereince to leave one limp.

AT TANGLEWOOD New York Journal-American
14-Sat. July 20, 1957

Tchaikovsky Takes Over

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 20.—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony began their big weekends in the Music Shed last night. Their preoccupation was Tchaikovsky, the third of the great composers whose music highlights this year's Berkshire festival.

The inclusion of a work by Stravinsky, however, served to take note of the composer's 75th year. It also helped to keep the audience conscious that we live in the musical world of the 20th as well as the 19th Century.

Featured on this program was the first performance in the U. S. of the original version of the "Variations on a Rococo Theme for Cello." For years this work has been heard in an "edition" by the cellist Fizenhagen who first played it. The restoration eliminates his order of the variations, his omission of the eighth one, and his repetition of two phrases of the theme. This is all to the good.

Played As Written

Samuel Mayes had the honor of playing the work as the composer had originally written it. Since his style of playing and Tchaikovsky's style synchronize well, his performance made the occasion all the more important. His cello tone is warm and resonant, capable of glorifying a work that gives the instrument such an opportunity to sing. The audience heartily approved of how he made it do just that.

The crowning glory of the concert, however, was Munch's impassioned performance of the Sixth Symphony. Only a virtuoso orchestra could have responded to the demands he made upon it. This interpretation was highly charged emotionally, so much so that the musicians were driven at times to keep up with the fervor emanating from their leader.

Special Affinity

Nevertheless, in his individual way Munch justified the frenzied moments through the tender ones. It became obvious that he built up his performance to the finale where the pathos found utterance and the symphony revealed its full meaning. He finds a special affinity in this music. While this may not have been his finest interpretation of it it was superbly set forth and deeply moving.

Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" opened the concert. Its rhythmic pulse sustained the piece without benefit of choreography but the pleasure it gave otherwise proved mild.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
AUG 1957

The Concerts

The first weekend (July 5, 6, 7) was devoted to orchestral and choral works by Bach under the baton of Charles Munch. The following week we heard much delightful music making. On July 13 Dr. Munch conducted the Symphony in E flat major (39), Symphony in G minor (40) and the Symphony in C major (41) by Mozart with verve. The orchestra sounded full and exciting. The next afternoon the program included other choice Mozart morsels, including the B flat major Bassoon Concerto played by Sherman Walt, the E flat major Horn Concerto played by James Stagliano, and the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet and Bassoon, played by Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Stagliano and Walt. It was a fine concert, full of agility and fun. A large audience attended.

Tschaikowsky was the bill of fare the following week (July 19, 20, 21). Sprinkled with monumental Stravinsky works, the series of three concerts attracted capacity crowds. On Friday evening, Dr. Munch conducted Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes", Tschaikowsky's variation of a rococo theme for Violoncello played by Samuel Mayes. The work was performed in the United States for the first time in its original version, a fact that did not impress us very much. A terrible performance of the "Pathetique" concluded the evening. Unbalanced and unimaginative. Equally disappointing was the Fifth Symphony performed under Pierre Monteux' baton. A definite feeling of unrehearsed quality seemed evident. This all was dispelled however, when Monteux raised his baton to conduct Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps". The excitement generated by the 83-year-old maestro in the score was breathtaking. The pictures of pagan Russia, which this work is, came to life and stayed with every listener. On Sunday afternoon we attended round three of the Canticum Sacrum ad Honorem Sancti Marci Nominis. We heard the work earlier in the week at Ellenville under Stokowski, but now heard a different conductor (Munch), different chorus (Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross) and two different soloists (John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, baritone) with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The difference was startling. Munch took the work at a much more rapid pace, but subdued it much more. Both soloists were superior interpreters of the work, but the Festival Chorus proved to be an unmanageable instrument that did not respond to the fine chant lines. In the large Tanglewood shed, the delicate work became too diffuse and was not absorbed by many listeners as fully as in Ellenville. And yet, we feel that Charles Munch captured more of the religious fervor of the work and distilled it to a fine tribute. Isaac Stern concluded the afternoon with an authorized reading of the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto. Here was smooth perfection, and unique rapprochement between conductor and soloist.

On Friday evening Munch devoted his energies to Berlioz' Corsair Overture, Harold in Italy, with Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist, and the Fantastic Symphony. It was surely one of the great thrills to see the conductor give readings that ranged from the bombastic to the very sensitive. All was given true color and true majesty. The Sacred Trilogy, "L'-Enfance du Christ" was given the following night. Here was a different Berlioz. Subdued, devout, reverend. The work separates into three sections, Herod's Dream, the Flight into Egypt and the Arrival at Sais. It was sung with devotion by Cesare Valletti, tenor, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Gerard Soussay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass. The festival chorus, much smoother by now, was prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

On July 28 "Papa" Monteux again mounted the podium to devote himself to excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz, and the overture to the opera "News of the Day" by Hindemith, as well as the latter's "Mathis der Maler." This was another memorable performance.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 22 1957

'Canticum Sacrum' Feature Of Program at Tanglewood

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS. Boston [illegible] night. The program:
Overture [illegible] (Elegy) Cappricio [illegible] Mendelssohn
Symphony [illegible] Tchaikovsky
"Sacre du [illegible] Stravinsky
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, Sunday afternoon. The program:
"Romeo and Juliet" Overture Tchaikovsky
"Canticum Sacrum" Stravinsky
(Soloists: John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; Festival Chorus)
Violin Concerto Tchaikovsky
(Soloist: Isaac Stern, violinist)

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 21.—Igor Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," which received its East Coast premiere only three days ago at the Empire State Festival, provided the central issue on this afternoon's program at Tanglewood conducted by Charles Munch, and brought to a natural culmination a week end devoted to honoring—in tandem with Tchaikovsky—the seventy-fifth birthday of the greatest creative musician of his century.

Out of the same surge of homage, Pierre Monteux, appearing at the Berkshire Music Center for the first time this season, last night led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the unendingly powerful and inspired "Le Sacre du Printemps," and the two pieces, though separated by forty-two years, served to remind all concerned that the age of anxiety is also an age productive of music cherishable to posterity.

The "Canticum Sacrum" is a humbly pious work—chaste, noble, spiritual, untouched by the brighter colors of sensual life. To achieve this end, the "Canticum," written on a commission from Venice for St. Mark's Cathedral, is scored for a small orchestra in which the darker shades predominate, the sonority layout demanding only winds, violas and double-basses. In this respect it bears a generic resemblance to the composer's "Symphony of Psalms," though that work is far more ponderous and slashing than the present canticle, which is thoroughly typical of Stravinsky's latest understated, rarified style.

Dedication to Venice

Actually, the "Canticum," in five short movements with an opening dedication to the City of Venice, reveals anew Stravinsky's preoccupation with religion, atonality, contrapuntal invention, the musical developments native to the era of his birth and the technical devices common to the Renaissance. In other hands the mixture might remain just that—a mixture with none of these isolated features settling into a compound. But Stravinsky, through a filtering process that is the loom of genius, has combined these elements into an entity that could come from no other pen but his. Indeed, it is of no more importance to know whether the "Canticum" is twelve-tone or not than it is necessary to be told what kind of staff paper it was written on.

The fact that the first and last movements for chorus are exact retrogrades or that certain intervals are inevitably associated with certain ideas, while of interest to the student, is of no matter to the ear. For the piece's musical intention, its balance, serenity and repose, are not born of cerebral considerations but derived, instead, from the composer's desire to underline his Vulgate text with music that suits its hallowed spirit.

And to the recurrent claim that Stravinsky is a non-vocal composer one has only to chide the remark as a rank humbug and point to the fact that in the "Canticum's" solo arias Stravinsky is neither more nor less vocal than Johann Sebastian Bach. In all then, the Canticum is such a number as we have a right to expect from our major worker in tone. Perhaps there will arrive a day when late Stravinsky, like late Beethoven, will come to be regarded as something special, as something more than music demanding only a casual acquaintance. I hazard that day is within our sight.

Koussevitsky Memorial

The remainder of yesterday's program, which was given in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, included a straightforward and rousing performance of Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture and a hugely expressive rendition of his Violin Concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist. Since Tchaikovsky and Stern are as much a natural combination as you are likely to find outside the annals of fiction, it is no wonder that the piece glowed and shimmered, darted and soared.

As for Saturday night's affair in the [illegible] Shed, it belonged to [illegible] "Le Sacre du Printemps" [illegible] performance by Mr. [illegible] was remarkable [illegible] every consonable count. As he sees it, "Le [illegible] churr[illegible] atmo[illegible] for a series of pagan [illegible]ites, which, of course, is precisely what it is meant to be. Never does the work become a vehicle for his personal prowess, though that prowess was everywhere in evidence; rather he turns "Le Sacre" into a vast and gripping tone-poem which is not incessantly aggressive after the manner of most conductors who occupy themselves with the work.

No Excessive Hysteria

Indeed, excepting those sections which lay authentic claim on it, there was no excessive hysteria, no whooping-up of sentiments that are themselves almost plaintive and moon-struck. "Le Sacre," after all, is not a perpetual motion dynamo but its moments of quietude and muted ferocity occurring as frequently as those others that lift the skies with their vehemence. Monteux's way is to allow the several aspects of the work their due to avoid exaggerating those moments of calm preceding orchestral storms, and to allow the storms, when they arrive, to thunder with hurricane force. The balance achieved thereby lends the work a nobility, a primitive directness, a primal ebb and flow that is irresistible. Also shattering. For confronting so great a masterpiece as read by a mind both deeply reflective and totally unmeretricious is an experience to leave one limp.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 22 1957

AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

Spotlight Stravinsky

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 22.—Some 27,490 people attended the Tchaikowsky-Stravinsky weekend of the Berkshire Festival. For the final program in the music shed yesterday afternoon, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony played the Tchaikowsky "Romeo and Juliet" and the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

Interest centered, however, in the performance of Stravinsky's most recent work "Canticum Sacrum," heard for the first time in the East at Ellenville, N. Y., last Thursday.

That the "Canticum Sacrum" sounded more sacred and less dramatic on this occasion may be attributed to Munch's acceptance of it as a liturgical work.

This approach shifted certain balances, thus giving the work somewhat differenet values.

Little Effect

This change neither enhanced nor lessened the effect of the music; it remained something to admire for its craftsmanship rather than for its impact. The honor accorded St. Mark in this piece thus becomes more a matter of respect than of fevor.

In this performance, the chorus functioned less forcefully than the soloists. Both John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, gave excellent accounts of their roles. If the orchestra felt about it as indifferently as the final note sounded, then it had many in agreement with its point of view. Audience applause was polite.

On one of the Berkshires' hottest afternoons, the orchestra played Tchaikovsky well. It worked up gradually to ardor in the "Romeo and Juliet" and held its own in concerto, but this was not one of its superb moments.

Stern Poised, Lyrical

Stern gave a poised, lyrical account of the concerto. His singing tone soared in sweetness if it did not work up into brilliance. When the orchestra played full tilt, his violin sounded in the minority.

Why the racetrack pace in the finale was necessary remains one of those perplexing elements in concerts these days.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Saturday night concert, attended by 11,000. How Mendelssohn's "Hebrides" overture slipped into the program is a mystery. Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony kept the weekend programs in line.

Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps" highlighted the evening both as one of the composer's unquestioned masterpieces and as one of the conductor's, also. It was the only work of his to give him full stature at these concerts.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047
JUL 21 1957

[156]

Monteux Greeted Warmly At Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—A warm reception for guest conductor Pierre Monteux, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and an audience of 11,000, prefaced the second concert of Series "A" of the Berkshire Music Festival last night in the Tanglewood Music Shed.

The program was Mendelssohn's "Hebrides" or "Fingal's Cave" overture, Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 5 in E minor, Opus 64, and the no longer notorious "The Rite of Spring" by Stravinsky.

Musician's Conductor

Once again, Monteux was the musician's conductor. Not much of a visual show, but we have not heard the Boston Symphony sound so well nor so inspired in a long time. The audience apparently didn't feel deprived of invigorating calisthenics or spurious mannerisms because they punctuated the evening with ovations which Monteux generously and rightfully shared with the orchestra.

The Mendelssohn overture was possessed throughout of a magnificent serenity. It was played unhurriedly, making an arresting issue of its weaving melodies which were at their best in the cellos. Brass passages were of full penetration without serious blemishes. Pulsating figures had the steadiness and precision of a well-oiled machine.

Most Dramatic

We can say without qualification that this was the most dramatic reading we have heard to date of Tschaikowsky's Fifth. Monteux gave the opening movement a sober, reflective perspective. There were heavy imprints of the bucolic, which is not a commonplace occurrence in this movement, ending in tones of cavernous depth.

Monteux read the opening of the second movement like a profound elegy, alleviated by solos in horn (James Stagliano), woodwinds and strings. The movement had moments of shattering climax.

The third movement was a [illegible] waltz in [illegible] rather [illegible] per-missible. It had waves of sound that practically covered the music shed's steel girders.

Competing for interest were the rehearsal of Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring" yesterday morning and last night's public performance. What made both subjects of intrigue was that Monteux conducted the premiere of the work in 1913, in Paris. It caused a riot and scandal at the time, such as had not been witnessed since the premiere of Wagner's "Tannhauser" in 1861.

The rehearsal was most informal, with players in sport shirts and Monteux decked out in a grey peasant frock with a wide red stripe across the back.

He didn't dissect the work, and spent a small fraction of the physical energy wasted by some of the younger fry who have been seen hereabouts in recent years.

No Wasted Motion

No matter how loud or intricate the ambush of the moment, there was not a wasted motion from the podium. Nor did he stop the players for corrections as if he were directing traffic. He gave his instructions in English, which may be a surprise to some.

Even when the pot boiled over (which it frequently does in "The Rite") it was controlled by poise and restraint—with huzzah sound as its product.

Some of the most leisurely or economical beats were devoted to the tempestuous passages. Occasionally, Monteux sang melodies as he wanted to hear them, and that's quite a trick in this score. It was amusing to see him touch his left ear from time to time as if to reassure himself about the weird harmonies.

Little Fuss

He made a little fuss about an intricate timpani beat in the "Sacrificial Dance"—he got the "ta-ta-ta" that he wanted. A youngster who had gotten separated from his parents set up a howl. Monteux siphoned it off from the music, but some of the violinists looked most unhappy.

It's a long trek from the "free-for-all" that "The Rite" received in Paris 44 years ago—and the ovation it incited last night.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 20 1957

First of Tanglewood Shed Concerts Enjoyed by 6,710

A program of Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch last evening opened the first weekend of Tanglewood shed concerts during the current Berkshire Music Festival.

6,710 Present

Clear skies and a variety of selections found 6,710 attentive music lovers occupying shed boxes, seats and the spacious grounds near the shed.

The program last night opened with Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes"—("Card Game"), a ballet in three parts. The second selection marked the first performance in this country of the original version of Tchaikovsky's variations on a Rococo theme for violincello with orchestral accompaniment. Samuel Mayes was the solo performer.

Tchaikovsky's "Symphony in B Minor, No. 6" (the Pathetique) closed the program and was well received by the Tanglewood listeners.

Continues Tonight

The shed concert series will continue tonight with the return of Pierre Monteux to the Festival podium. The overture to "The Hebrides" by Mendelssohn will be followed by Monteux's reading of Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 5 in E Minor".

In conclusion, "Le Sacre du Printemps" by Stravinsky will be played. Mr. Monteux directed the first performance in Paris in 1913 and the next year introduced the selection in concert form.

The annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky will be conducted by Mr. Munch on Sunday afternoon. Tchaikovsky's overture-fantasy "Romeo and Juliet" will precede Stravinsky's most recent work, the "Canticum Sacrum Ad Honorum Sancti Marci Nominis" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra. Isaac Stern playing the Tchaikovsky violin concerto will conclude the concert.

Music Review

Great Weekend at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST weekend at Tanglewood was a decided success both musically and attendance-wise. The Boston Symphony orchestra devoted all three concerts, with a single exception, to Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky and played to a total audience of nearly 27,000.

Yesterday afternoon's concert closed with Isaac Stern giving a monumental performance of the Tchaikovsky violin concerto. Stern has now long been on the summit level among violinists and the instrument itself is no longer his prime concern. Anything he pleases to do he does flawlessly and with a tone of radiant warmth and sonorous depth. But his conception of the concerto was built as by an architect. He plays now at the peak of mature music-making, daring to play with restraint, choosing always the simple and sincere way when there is a choice, and then where appropriate, as in the gypsy finale, casting caution to the wind and plunging forward with audacity but neverfailing surefootedness.

* * *

LAST YEAR when the same concerto was played by another internationally famous artist, the performer was congratulated by Fritz Kreisler, who had been in the audience. The performer, with humble deference to the old master, countered with the statement "but, maitre, it was too fast, wasn't it?" Kreisler answered "To tell the truth, yes." Under similar conditions the master might have made the same comment about Stern's playing of the last movement yesterday, but it was so perfect and with such abandon and style that few would complain.

The concert had started with the Tchaikovsky overture "Romeo and Juliet," followed by a first performance by this orchestra of the Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum," written only last year. The overture was played with Munch's stimulating drive and, in the long-line melodies, with beseechingly warm appeal. In these latter sections the horns were allowed to come through too conspicuously but that may have been a minor detail.

The "Canticum Sacrum" is dedicated to the [illegible] and the [illegible] displeased to get, for their large honorarium, a mere 17-minute cantata, and, to add insult to injury, one that employed but a scant nucleus of instruments in support of a chorus and two male soloists.

Pierre Monteux

* * *

THE SCORE calls for reeds without clarinets, various and unusual trumpets and trombones, harp, organ, violas and basses. The chorus is treated like an instrument in the manner of harmonic relationships. The soloists have tasks of terrifying irrelevancy. There are few occasions when they can lean for support or turn for reference to any other contributing factor in the cantata. Yet tenor John McCollum and baritone Donald Gramm made impressive conquests of their assignments. One might almost have said opponents, so incompatible were most of their sequences.

Stravinsky, unceasingly alert, never ceases to seek new paths nor does he disdain emulating others who have sought them. Here he goes to two extremes: He reverts to classic tonality in two effective passages for the organ and bassoons, and in other places uses the 12-note system, which, for vocalists, was an assignment which called for superior musicianship. In the aria "Awake, O North Wind" McCollum overcame the difficulties with remarkable success. The English horn, played by Louis Speyer, plays exactly one-half tone higher than the vocal line.

The chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, was remarkable in its tone production, in spite of the impertinent relativity of Stravinsky's writing and his irregular metric progressions. The whole composition is meager, and the wonder of it all is that so much can be conveyed with such sparse resources.

* * *

SATURDAY night Munch gave way to Pierre Monteux who made the first of two guest appearances scheduled for this Festival. He started his program with some Mendelssohn, proceeded to the Stravinsky "Sacre du Printemps" and ended with the Tchaikovsky Fifth Symphony.

Mendelssohn's overture "Fingal's Cave" is a reminiscence of a voyage to the Hebrides the young composer made when he was 20. Monteux happily allowed the orchestra to play in its own graceful way, guiding it with more affection than domination.

In May of 1913, at the time of the miraculous regime in Paris of the Russian impresario Serge Diaghilev, there was played for the first time a composition which he had commissioned and which was to alter the progress of music from that time on. Stravinsky's "Consecration of Spring" was new and original. It provoked a veritable riot. The debate has not stilled even yet. The conductor that evening was the man who led the Boston orchestra Saturday evening at Tanglewood.

* * *

THE CONDUCTOR'S wife related that the manager of the hall came to her at the last minute before the concert was to start and, frantically, asked her what was to be done. Camille Saint-Saens, the venerable 77-year-old composer, was at the box office, and there were no seats available. Madame Monteux made room for the venerated artist. She can not recall how nor whom she displaced. He sat beside her and once the "Sacre" was in progress turned to her asking "You like that?" over and over again.

Thirty-nine years later, again in the month of May and again in the same theater, Monteux led an orchestra in a performance of the "Sacre." But this time it was the Boston orchestra which, in the meantime, he had led in its home hall for five years. The composer was in the audience again this time, his chin resting in his cupped hands which were supported by his arms resting on the arms of his chair. He was at ease this time, inwardly secure that his music would not only be well performed but, at the minimum, politely received and respectfully listened to.

* * *

THE MUSIC is rewarding to a scholar and an analyst. It is strange and barbaric but not to the young. The "Sacre" is music of today's young people. It comes natural to them. The Tchaikovsky Fifth Symphony is harder for them to take.

It is curious to note that Stravinsky, Picasso and James Joyce were all born within a wide half-year. By 1913, each in his own metier had work to his credit as controversial as the Stravinsky exhibit. It was an era in which artists made new paths in entirely new concepts. It was the music, or the arts, of the future. It is now the music of the day.

Monteux accepts the responsibility of its direction with confidence and without excitement. He achieves a remarkable reading and his 11,000-strong audience would not allow him to go to his intermission recess.

The Tchaikovsky symphony was a quieter version of the Russian than was heard in the concerts framing Monteux's. But when the composer indicates, in the concluding coda, two degrees stronger than fortissimo, Monteux complied. The audience showed its reaction with a demonstration which, it seemed, was equally divided between elation with the music and a touching, kind feeling for the conductor.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
JUL 22 1957

Stravinsky Gets Ovations At Tanglewood

A dynamic performance of Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring" was sounded by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of 82-year-old Pierre Monteux Saturday night at Tanglewood.

Ovations were given the guest conductor by an audience of 11,000 following the performance which opened with a colorful and lyrical delivery of Mendelssohn's overture to "The Hebrides" (Fingal's Cave"), Opus 26 as well as Tchaikovsky's melodious "Symphony No. 5 in E Minor, Opus 64.

The final half of the program was devoted to Stravinsky's work which pulsated with rhythms and variations, sometimes mounting into a frenzy. The wierd and discordant notes of the score were woven among the rhythms with skill by Mr. Monteux who led the first performance of the work 43 years ago. The percussion instruments vibrated in brilliant solo work and the wind instruments added to the barbaric quality of the ballet.

All the power of the Stravinsky work was evoked by Mr. Monteux who filled the work with drama. An ecstatic quality was given to the first episode, the Adoration of the Earth. The last episode, the Sacrifice, was especially dramatic.

The Stravinsky work which lacks melody was a distinct contrast to the first half of the program. The romance of Mendelssohn's "The Hebrides" was brought out by the orchestra which made a tone poem of Fingal's Cave. The melodies of the Tchaikovsky work were liquid as played by the orchestra.

J. B. M.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047

JUL 21 1957

[156]

Monteux Greeted Warmly At Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—A warm reception for guest conductor Pierre Monteux, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and an audience of 11,000, prefaced the second concert of Series "A" of the Berkshire Music Festival last night in the Tanglewood Music Shed.

The program was Mendelssohn's "Hebrides" or "Fingal's Caye" overture, Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 5 in E minor, Opus 64, and the no longer notorious "The Rite of Spring" by Stravinsky.

Musician's Conductor

Once again, Monteux was the musician's conductor. Not much of a visual show, but we have not heard the Boston Symphony sound so well nor so inspired in a long time. The audience apparently didn't feel deprived of invigorating calisthenics or spurious mannerisms because they punctuated the evening with ovations which Monteux generously and rightfully shared with the orchestra.

The Mendelssohn overture was possessed throughout of a magnificent serenity. It was played unhurriedly, making an arresting issue of its weaving melodies which were at their best in the cellos. Brass passages were of full penetration without serious blemishes. Pulsating figures had the steadiness and precision of a well-oiled machine.

Most Dramatic

We can say without qualification that this was the most dramatic reading we have heard to date of Tschaikowsky's Fifth. Monteux gave the opening movement a sober, reflective perspective. There were heavy imprints of the bucolic, which is not a commonplace occurrence in this movement, ending in tones of cavernous depth.

Monteux read the opening of the second movement like a profound elegy, alleviated by solos in horn (James Stagliano), woodwinds and strings. The movement had moments of shattering climax.

The third movement was a masterpiece of grace and waltz lilt. Theatricals appeared in the finale, in matters of timpani and extremely penetrating trumpets — certainly permissible. It had a wall of sound that practically covered the music shed's steel girders.

Competing for interest were the rehearsal of Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring" yesterday morning and last night's public performance. What made both subjects of intrigue was that Monteux conducted the premiere of the work in 1913, in Paris. It caused a riot and scandal at the time, such as had not been witnessed since the premiere of Wagner's "Tannhauser" in 1861.

The rehearsal was most informal, with players in sport shirts and Monteux decked out in a grey peasant frock with a wide red stripe across the back.

He didn't dissect the work, and spent a small fraction of the physical energy wasted by some of the younger fry who have been seen hereabouts in recent years.

No Wasted Motion

No matter how loud or intricate the ambush of the moment, there was not a wasted motion from the podium. Nor did he stop the players for corrections as if he were directing traffic. He gave his instructions in English, which may be a surprise to some.

Even when the pot boiled over (which it frequently does in "The Rite") it was controlled by poise and restraint — with huzzah sound as its product.

Some of the most leisurely or economical beats were devoted to the tempestuous passages. Occasionally, Monteux sang melodies as he wanted to hear them, and that's quite a trick in this score. It was amusing to see him touch his left ear from time to time as if to reassure himself about the weird harmonies.

Little Fuss

He made a little fuss about an intricate timpani beat in the "Sacrificial Dance"—he got the "ta-ta-ta" that he wanted. A youngster who had gotten separated from his parents set up a howl. Monteux siphoned it off from the music, but some of the violinists looked most unhappy.

It's a long trek from the "free-for-all" that "The Rite" received in Paris 44 years ago — and the ovation it incited last night.

Music Review

Great Weekend at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST weekend at Tanglewood was a decided success both musically and attendance-wise. The Boston Symphony orchestra devoted all three concerts, with a single exception, to Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky and played to a total audience of nearly 27,000.

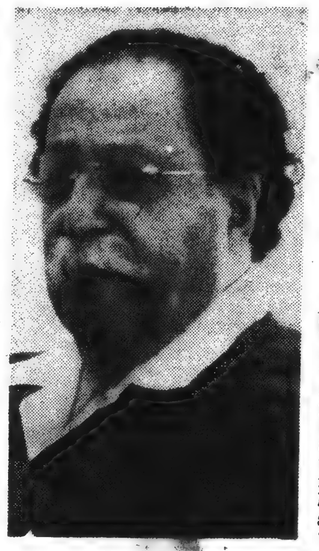
Yesterday afternoon's concert closed with Isaac Stern giving a monumental performance of the Tchaikovsky violin concerto. Stern has now long been on the summit level among violinists and the instrument itself is no longer his prime concern. Anything he pleases to do he does flawlessly and with a tone of radiant warmth and sonorous depth. But his conception of the concerto was built as by an architect. He plays now at the peak of mature music-making, daring to play with restraint, choosing always the simple and sincere way when there is a choice, and then where appropriate, as in the gypsy finale, casting caution to the wind and plunging forward with audacity but neverfailing surefootedness.

* * *

LAST YEAR when the same concerto was played by another internationally famous artist, the performer was congratulated by Fritz Kreisler, who had been in the audience. The performer, with humble deference to the old master, countered with the statement "but, maitre, it was too fast, wasn't it?" Kreisler answered "To tell the truth, yes." Under similar conditions the master might have made the same comment about Stern's playing of the last movement yesterday, but it was so perfect and with such abandon and style that few would complain.

The concert had started with the Tchaikovsky overture "Romeo and Juliet," followed by a first performance by this orchestra of the Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum," written only last year. The overture was played with Munch's stimulating drive and, in the long-line melodies, with beseechingly warm appeal. In these latter sections the horns were allowed to come through too conspicuously but that may have been a minor detail.

The "Canticum Sacrum" is dedicated to the honor of St. Mark and was commissioned by the city of Venice which, incidentally, was quite perplexed and displeased to get, for their large honorarium, a mere 17-minute cantata, and, to add insult to injury, one that employed but a scant nucleus of instruments in support of a chorus and two male soloists.



Pierre Monteux

* * *

THE SCORE calls for reeds without clarinets, various and unusual trumpets and trombones, harp, organ, violas and basses. The chorus is treated like an instrument in the manner of harmonic relationships. The soloists have tasks of terrifying irrelevancy. There are few occasions when they can lean for support or turn for reference to any other contributing factor in the cantata. Yet tenor John McCollum and baritone Donald Gramm made impressive conquests of their assignments. One might almost have said opponents, so incompatible were most of their sequences.

Stravinsky, unceasingly alert, never ceases to seek new paths nor does he disdain emulating others who have sought them. Here he goes to two extremes: He reverts to classic tonality in two effective passages for the organ and bassoons, and in other places uses the 12-note system, which, for vocalists, was an assignment which called for superior musicianship. In the aria "Awake, O North Wind" McCollum overcame the difficulties with remarkable success. The English horn, played by Louis Speyer, plays exactly one-half tone higher than the vocal line.

The chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, was remarkable in its tone production, in spite of the impertinent relativity of Stravinsky's writing and his irregular metric progressions. The whole composition is meager, and the wonder of it all is that so much can be conveyed with such sparse resources.

* * *

SATURDAY night Munch gave way to Pierre Monteux who made the first of two guest appearances scheduled for this Festival. He started his program with some Mendelssohn, proceeded to the Stravinsky "Sacre du Printemps" and ended with the Tchaikovsky Fifth Symphony.

Mendelssohn's overture "Fingal's Cave" is a reminiscence of a voyage to the Hebrides the young composer made when he was 20. Monteux happily allowed the orchestra to play in its own graceful way, guiding it with more affection than domination.

In May of 1913, at the time of the miraculous regime in Paris of the Russian entrepreneur Serge Diaghilev, there was played for the first time a composition which he had commissioned and which was to alter the progress of music from that time on. Stravinsky's "Consecration of Spring" was new and original. It provoked a veritable riot. The debate has not stilled even yet. The conductor that evening was the man who led the Boston orchestra Saturday evening at Tanglewood.

* * *

THE CONDUCTOR'S wife related that the manager of the hall came to her at the last minute before the concert was to start and, frantically, asked her what was to be done. Camille Saint-Saens, the venerable 77-year-old composer, was at the box office, and there were no seats available. Madame Monteux made room for the venerated artist. She can not recall how nor whom she displaced. He sat beside her and once the "Sacre" was in progress turned to her asking "You like that?" over and over again.

Thirty-nine years later, again in the month of May and again in the same theater, Monteux led an orchestra in a performance of the "Sacre." But this time it was the Boston orchestra which, in the meantime, he had led in its home hall for five years. The composer was in the audience again this time, his chin resting in his cupped hands which were supported by his arms resting on the arms of his chair. He was at ease this time, inwardly secure that his music would not only be well performed but, at the minimum, politely received and respectfully listened to.

* * *

THE MUSIC is rewarding to a scholar and an analyst. It is strange and barbaric but not to the young. The "Sacre" is music of today's young people. It comes natural to them. The Tchaikovsky Fifth Symphony is harder for them to take.

It is curious to note that Stravinsky, Picasso and James Joyce were all born within a wide half-year. By 1913, each in his own metier had work to his credit as controversial as the Stravinsky exhibit. It was an era in which artists made new paths in entirely new concepts. It was the music, or the arts, of the future. It is now the music of the day.

Monteux accepts the responsibility of its direction with confidence and without excitement. He achieves a remarkable reading and his 11,000-strong audience would not allow him to go to his intermission recess.

The Tchaikovsky symphony was a quieter version of the Russian than was heard in the concerts framing Monteux's. But when the composer indicates, in the concluding coda, two degrees stronger than fortissimo, Monteux complied. The audience showed its reaction with a demonstration which, it seemed, was equally divided between elation with the music and a touching kind feeling for the conductor.

ewood Shed oyed by 6,710 nd Tchaikovsky performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch last evening opened the first weekend of Tanglewood shed concerts during the current Berkshire Music Festival.

6,710 Present

Clear skies and a variety of selections found 6,710 attentive music lovers occupying shed boxes, seats and the spacious grounds near the shed.

The program last night opened with Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" —("Card Game"), a ballet in three parts. The second selection marked the first performance in this country of the original version of Tchaikovsky's variations on a Rococo theme for violincello with orchestral accompaniment. Samuel Mayes was the solo performer.

Tchaikovsky's "Symphony in B Minor, No. 6" (the Pathetique) closed the program and was well received by the Tanglewood listeners.

Continues Tonight

The shed concert series will continue tonight with the return of Pierre Monteux to the Festival podium. The overture to "The Hebrides" by Mendelssohn will be followed by Monteux's reading of Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 5 in E Minor".

In conclusion, "Le Sacre du Printemps" by Stravinsky will be played. Mr. Monteux directed the first performance in Paris in 1913 and the next year introduced the selection in concert form.

The annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky will be conducted by Mr. Munch on Sunday afternoon. Tchaikovsky's overture-fantasy "Romeo and Juliet" will precede Stravinsky's most recent work, the "Canticum Sacrum Ad Honorum Sancti Marci Nominis" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra. Isaac Stern playing the Tchaikovsky violin concerto will conclude the concert.

At Tanglewood

A dynamic performance of Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring" was sounded by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of 82-year-old Pierre Monteux Saturday night at Tanglewood.

Ovations were given the guest conductor by an audience of 11,000 following the performance which opened with a colorful and lyrical delivery of Mendelssohn's overture to "The Hebrides" (Fingal's Cave"), Opus 26 as well as Tchaikovsky's melodious "Symphony No. 5 in E Minor, Opus 64.

The final half of the program was devoted to Stravinsky's work which pulsated with rhythms and variations, sometimes mounting into a frenzy. The wierd and discordant notes of the score were woven among the rhythms with skill by Mr. Monteux who led the first performance of the work 43 years ago. The percussion instruments vibrated in brilliant solo work and the wind instruments added to the barbaric quality of the ballet.

All the power of the Stravinsky work was evoked by Mr. Monteux who filled the work with drama. An ecstatic quality was given to the first episode, the Adoration of the Earth. The last episode, the Sacrifice, was especially dramatic.

The Stravinsky work which lacks melody was a distinct contrast to the first half of the program. The romance of Mendelssohn's "The Hebrides" was brought out by the orchestra which made a tone poem of Fingal's Cave. The melodies of the Tchaikovsky work were liquid as played by the orchestra.

L. B. M.

Empire Festival

By Jay S

LENOX, Mass., Stravinsky's "Ca rum," which rece Coast premiere on ago at the Empire val, provided the on this afternoon' Tanglewood co Charles Munch, a a natural culmina end devoted to tandem with Tch seventy-fifth birt greatest creative his century.

Out of the sa homage, Pierre pearing at the Be Center for the fi season, last night ton Symphony Or unendingly power spired "La Sacre d and the two pieces arated by forty served to remind that the age of a an age productiv cherishable to post

The "Canticum humbly pious work ble, spiritual, unto brighter colors of s achieve this end, th written on a com Venice for St. Mar is scored for a sm in which the darke dominate, the so demanding only and double-basses. spect it bears a semblance to th "Symphony of Psa that work is far mo and slashing than canticle, which is typical of Stravinsk derstated, rarified

Dedication to

Actually, the "C five short moveme opening dedication of Venice, reveals a sky's preoccupation atonality, contrap tion, the musical native to the era of the technical device the Renaissance. I the mixture might that—a mixture these isolated feat into a compound. sky, through a filt that is the loom o combined these ele entity that could c other pen but his, of no more import whether the "C twelve-tone or no necessary to be told staff paper it was w

The fact that the movements for cho retrogrades or that vals are inevitab with certain ideas terest to the stud matter to the ear. musical intention serenity and repose of cerebral consi derived, instead, f poser's desire to Vulgate text with suits its hallowed

And to the re that Stravinsky is composer one has the remark as a and point to the fa "Canticum's" solo sky is neither mor than Johann Seba all then, the Canti number as we ha expect from our m tone. Perhaps ther day when late St late Beethoven, w regarded as some as something mor demanding only quaintance. I haza is within our sight

Koussevitsky

The remainder program, which memory of Serge included a straigh rousing performan

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052
JUL 22 1957

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411
JUL 22 1957

Empire State Festival

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 21.—Igor Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," which received its East Coast premiere only three days ago at the Empire State Festival, provided the central issue on this afternoon's program at Tanglewood conducted by Charles Munch, and brought to a natural culmination a week end devoted to honoring—in tandem with Tchaikovsky—the seventy-fifth birthday of the greatest creative musician of his century.

Out of the same surge of homage, Pierre Monteux, appearing at the Berkshire Music Center for the first time this season, last night led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the unendingly powerful and inspired "La Sacre du Printemps," and the two pieces, though separated by forty-two years, served to remind all concerned that the age of anxiety is also an age productive of music cherishable to posterity.

The "Canticum Sacrum" is a humbly pious work—chaste, noble, spiritual, untouched by the brighter colors of sensual life. To achieve this end, the "Canticum," written on a commission from Venice for St. Mark's Cathedral, is scored for a small orchestra in which the darker shades predominate, the sonority layout demanding only winds, violas and double-basses. nI this respect it bears a generic resemblance to the composer's "Symphony of Psalms," though that work is far more ponderous and slashing than the present canticle, which is thoroughly typical of Stravinsky's latest understated, rarified style.

Dedication to Venice

Actually, the "Canticum," in five short movements with an opening dedication to the City of Venice, reveals anew Stravinsky's preoccupation with religion, atonality, contrapuntal invention, the musical developments native to the era of his birth and the technical devices common to the Renaissance. In other hands the mixture might remain just that—a mixture with none of these isolated features settling into a compound. But Stravinsky, through a filtering process that is the loom of genius, has combined these elements into an entity that could come from no other pen but his. Indeed, it is of no more importance to know whether the "Canticum" is twelve-tone or not than it is necessary to be told what kind of staff paper it was written on.

The fact that the first and last movements for chorus are exact retrogrades or that certain intervals are inevitably associated with certain ideas, while of interest to the student, is of no matter to the ear. For the piece's musical intention, its balance, serenity and repose, are not born of cerebral considerations but derived, instead, from the composer's desire to underline his Vulgate text with music that suits its hallowed spirit.

And to the recurrent claim that Stravinsky is a non-vocal composer one has only to chide the remark as a rank humbug and point to the fact that in the "Canticum's" solo arias Stravinsky is neither more or less vocal than Johann Sebastian Bach. In all then, the Canticum is such a number as we have a right to expect from our major worker in tone. Perhaps there will arrive a day when late Stravinsky, like late Beethoven, will come to be regarded as something special, as something more than music demanding only a casual acquaintance. I hazard that day is within our sight.

Koussevitsky Memorial

The remainder of yesterday's program, which was given in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, included a straightforward and rousing performance of Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet Overture" and a hugely expressive rendition of his Violin Concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist. Since Tchaikovsky and Stern are as much a natural combination as you are likely to find outside the annals of fiction, it is no wonder that the piece glowed and shimmered, darted and soared.

As for Saturday night's affair in the Music Shed, it belonged hands down to "Le Sacre du Printemps," in a performance by Mr. Monteux that was remarkable on almost every conceivable count. As he sees it, "Le Sacre" is heaving, churning atmosphere music for a series of pagan fertility rites, which, of course, is precisely what it is meant to be. Never does the work become a vehicle for his personal prowess, though that prowess was everywhere in evidence; rather he turns "Le Sacre" into a vast and gripping tone-poem which is not incessantly aggressive after the manner of most conductors who occupy themselves with the work.

No Excessive Hysteria

Indeed, excepting those sections which lay authentic claim on it, there was no excessive hysteria, no whooping-up of sentiments that are themselves almost plaintive and moon-struck. "Le Sacre," after all, is not a perpetual motion dynamo, its moments of quietude and muted ferocity occurring as frequently as those others that lift the skies with their vehemence. Monteux's way to to allow the several aspects of the work their due to avoid exaggerating those moments of calm preceding orchestral storms, and to allow the storms, when they arrive, to thunder with hurricane force. The balance achieved thereby lends the work a nobility, a primitive directness, a primal ebb and flow that is irresistible. Also shattering. For confronting so great a masterpiece as read by a mind both deeply reflective and totally unmeretricious is an expereince to leave one limp.

The remainder of the program, given over to Mendelssohn's "Hebrides" Overture and Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, was in its own way equally fine, though the effect, by comparison, was trifling. The former was made to sound, and properly, a rippling mystery of sea and wave, while the latter was delivered with all its harvest colors and autumnal flavor intact. It is Mr. Monteux's secret that he is able to make a piece grow before our eyes, to render its thematic substance inseparable from its form, a condition that stems from his refusal to highlight one glittering tune at the expense of another whose sheen is not so marked. Thus heard, the Tchaikovsky — even allowing certain arbitrary details of tempo—was all of a piece with the rest of the evening. And with "Le Sacre" to end it, what an evening it was!

Monteux Directs Orchestra Before Throng At Lenox

More than 11,000 persons crowded the lawns of Tanglewood Saturday night to hear a rather ordinary program given first rate treatment by the great and grand Pierre Monteux. This octogenarian is a dynamic musical figure — the audience loves him, and the Boston Symphony played with unusual vigor and devotion, responding to the merest flick of the baton (younger conductors could take lessons in economy of movement from this gentleman), pouring forth large and lovely tones.

Why the powers-that-be decided on Tchaikovsky's "Fifth Symphony" as the major work of the evening is a question that must forever remain unanswered. Perhaps the piece does have some obvious appeal, but it lacks unity, shape, variety, color andeven inspiration. The composer himself found in it "something repellent, something superfluous, patchy, and insincere, which the public instinctively recognizes." There are moments of beauty, and some of the effects are clever, but the whole does not stand up under repeated hearings.

Be that as it may, Mr. Monteux and his charges gave it a sonorous reading — and almost, by their vitality, succeeded in infusing the sprawling symphony with life and meaning. The horn player was not at his best in the second movement, and tempi here were inclined to drag. The fourth movement was notable for gusto and excitement.

A pleasant performance of Mendelssohn's overture, "The Gebrides," opened the program. This is innocuous music, playful and descriptive, and Mr. Monteux limned it in sunny colors.

Closing the program was the Stravinsky ballet "Le Sacre du Printemps," a controversial piece of music since it was introduced by the conductor 43 years ago. Also called "Pictures of Pagan Russia," it is a strongly rhythmic work with, however, little beauty. It was enormously effective when set to pictures by Disney in "Fantasia," and still remains interesting when performed without dancers. It crashes, jolts, shoots off into space, jars and shakes. Its performance on Saturday was stunning, and Mr. Monteux gave it a lustrous and strong appeal.

With the great wealth of orchestral literature from which to choose, it seems strange indeed that conductors like Mr. Monteux and an orchestra such as the Boston Symphony should lavish their considerable talents on music of questionable value. It appears to be a relatively simple matter to choose works more worthy of their time and attention.

The opera group will present a program of opera scenes this evening in the Theatre Concert Hall. Wednesday's chamber music program in the same hall will be devoted to music of Haydn, Janacek and Schubert, played by the Kroll String Quartet. — B. D

A Memorial to Koussevitzky

Stern's Brilliant Work Caps Tanglewood Day

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 21—The first Sunday afternoon concert in the main series of the Berkshire Festival was dedicated to the memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitsky. Although no special ceremonies were included, and there was no speaking, the entire program was of a nature peculiar to the musical taste of Koussevitzky.

"Romeo and Juliet," the overture-fantasia by Tchaikovsky, which Charles Munch conducted first, was one of the famous Koussevitzky warhorses, and so was the Tchaikovsky violin concerto—with Isaac Stern as soloist—which ended the concert.

The middle piece was the relatively new Canticum Sacrum by Igor Stravinsky, a composer long and faithfully championed by Koussevitzky. Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the conductor, was in the audience.

Second Performance in U.S.

This Tanglewood performance of the Canticum Sacrum was the second in the eastern United States, the first having been at the festival in Ellenville, N.Y., just last Thursday night. At Tanglewood the two splendid soloists were tenor John McCollum and bass-baritone Donald Gramm, and the chorus was that of the Berkshire Music Center, prepared by Hugh Ross.

The full title—in English—is "Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark"; the piece was composed in 1955 and given its premiere at the Venice festival in September, 1956, and the opening section is a dedication to the city of Venice in praise of its patron saint, the Apostle Mark.

The Canticum Sacrum is 12-tone music, though not according to the most severe technical rules of the style. Stravinsky has a tone row for his singers and instrumentalists, one that imposes great difficulty upon the voices, which, having to produce their own true pitch, must cope with out-of-scale intervals alien to vocal music as hitherto we have known it.

New [illegible]ition [illegible]ed in Gos- such [illegible]g of Solomon, the Psalms, St. John and St. Mark.

There is, however, a musical unity, governed by the nature of the 12-tone system, not by any aspect of emotional communication. There is none here of the brave sounds of Gabriel. Instead the texture is dry and sombre, to some extent rhythmically reiterative, and with suggestions of plain chant.

Stravinsky's instrumentation is peculiar—a quartet each of trumpets and trombones, the only strings violas and a few basses, woodwinds without clarinets, and organ.

This 17 minutes piece, characterized by the brevity and the impossibility of development dictated by the 12-tone system, has some weird fine detail, such [illegible] putting three double basses [illegible] in the treble clef. The Can[illegible] Sacrum is not going to be [illegible]ediately popular—today's a[illegible]e, though continuing, was the[illegible]

But on the basis that you can get accustomed to almost anything the more it is heard the nearer you will come to an understanding of it. With these words of what I hope is wisdom, let further judgement await passing of time.

Stern Superb in Concerto

Issac Stern gave a really glorious performance of the Tchaikovsky violin concerto—lyrical, beautifully phrased and intoned, cleanly executed on a humid day bad for strings. It was a masterly reading in which Mr. Munch's conducting provided a superlative accompaniment. The ovation which followed was a long roar of enthusiasm.

While "Romeo and Juliet" was not one of Munch's most thoroughly integrated performances, it was white hot and very moving. Certainly the audience of 9780 persons who came up on a hot sunny afternoon, was greatly pleased. The weather held and the big attendance expected did materialize.

On Saturday night the figure was even larger—11,000. Pierre Monteux conducted the "Fingal's Cave" overture by Mendelssohn, the Fifth Symphony of Tchaikovsky—which from a tepid beginning worked up to a rousing count of the finale, and the [illegible]vinsky masterpiece with which Monteux is so closely [illegible]ated, "The Rite of Spring."

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052
JUL 24 1957

Tanglewood Shed Concerts Popularity Is Increasing

The first weekend of the Music Shed concerts by the full Boston Symphony at Tanglewood brought a total of 27,490 music devotees from all directions; one was interested to see a bus full of representatives from the United Nations in attendance for the whole weekend.

In what has become a tradition, the orchestra members stood at attention Friday evening when Dr. Munch came onstage to direct the first concert in the series devoted to Tchaikovsky and in honor of the seventy-fifth birthday of Stravinsky. The latter's Ballet "jeu de Cartes" in Three Deals was tossed to the audience for the opening number. A pert, frothy and vivid orchestral "Card Game" it was graphic in every detail, moving through the constantly changing meters and tricky rhythms to the final triumphant dance. Samuel Mayes was the soloist in the next and first performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's "Variations on a Rococo Theme for Violoncello with Orchestral Accompaniment. Mr. Mayes' playing was an artistic triumph; his tone has a warmth and mellow resonance perfectly suited to the harmonic wealth of Tchaikovsky, and his technique showed to great advantage in the intricate double-stops, spizzicati runs and crystaline harmonics. The final number was the popular "Pathetique" Symphony of Tchaikovsky, truly a summing up of the composer's life in music so completely and specifically his. Dr. Munch directed with great intensity and vigor, exhorting the orchestra to more and more feeling, his sweeping motions resulting in whiplash runs from the strings, the whole carrying away the audience so that they applauded before the final Adagio Lamentoso; one must be truly sparton to remain unmoved by this highly emotional music.

Sunday afternoon's concert dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitsky opened with the tragically beautiful Fantasy Overture, "Romeo and Juliet," of Tchaikovsky, dramatically vivid throughout its telling by the excellence of its direction and performance. For the Stravinsky number, Dr. Munch directed the Berkshire Festival Chorus, soloists John McCollum and Donald Gramm and the orchestra minus violins and clarinets, in his new work, "Canticum Sacrum." Difficult to acept in its strictly technical appeal, one must admit its structural form, harmonic and rhythmic content, but there was no substance to grasp and hold one's attention. The audience received it with warm applause.

It is easy to understand why Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto might be given the drastic and unfavorable reviews it received at its first performance, if the soloist, orchestra and director were not wholly dedicated to its worth as Isaac Stern, the Boston Symphony and Dr. Munch so ably proved in their treatment of this excitingly difficult and absorbing work. One couldn't help but be amazed at the complete and utter disregard of the humidity enveloping everyone, as Mr. Stern proceeded with his incomparable virtuoso performance. The audience literally went wild in its acclaim for Mr. Stern, Dr. Munch and the orchestra, a truly unforgettable experience.

M.deB.B.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411
JUL 22 1957

Empire State Festival

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 21.—Igor Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," which received its East Coast premiere only three days ago at the Empire State Festival, provided the central issue on this afternoon's program at Tanglewood conducted by Charles Munch, and brought to a natural culmination a week end devoted to honoring—in tandem with Tchaikovsky—the seventy-fifth birthday of the greatest creative musician of his century.

Out of the same surge of homage, Pierre Monteux, appearing at the Berkshire Music Center for the first time this season, last night led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the unendingly powerful and inspired "La Sacre du Printemps," and the two pieces, though separated by forty-two years, served to remind all concerned that the age of anxiety is also an age productive of music cherishable to posterity.

The "Canticum Sacrum" is a humbly pious work—chaste, noble, spiritual, untouched by the brighter colors of sensual life. To achieve this end, the "Canticum," written on a commission from Venice for St. Mark's Cathedral, is scored for a small orchestra in which the darker shades predominate, the sonority layout demanding only winds, violas and double-basses. nI this respect it bears a generic resemblance to the composer's "Symphony of Psalms," though that work is far more ponderous and slashing than the present canticle, which is thoroughly typical of Stravinsky's latest understated, rarified style.

Dedication to Venice

Actually, the "Canticum," in five short movements with an opening dedication to the City of Venice, reveals anew Stravinsky's preoccupation with religion, atonality, contrapuntal invention, the musical developments native to the era of his birth and the technical devices common to the Renaissance. In other hands the mixture might remain just that—a mixture with none of these isolated features settling into a compound. But Stravinsky, through a filtering process that is the loom of genius, has combined these elements into an entity that could come from no other pen but his. Indeed, it is of no more importance to know whether the "Canticum" is twelve-tone or not than it is necessary to be told what kind of staff paper it was written on.

The fact that the first and last movements for chorus are exact retrogrades or that certain intervals are inevitably associated with certain ideas, while of interest to the student, is of no matter to the ear. For the piece's musical intention, its balance, serenity and repose, are not born of cerebral considerations but derived, instead, from the composer's desire to underline his Vulgate text with music that suits its hallowed spirit.

And to the recurrent claim that Stravinsky is a non-vocal composer one has only to chide the remark as a rank humbug and point to the fact that in the "Canticum's" solo arias Stravinsky is neither more or less vocal than Johann Sebastian Bach. In all then, the Canticum is such a number as we have a right to expect from our major worker in tone. Perhaps there will arrive a day when late Stravinsky, like late Beethoven, will come to be regarded as something special, as something more than music demanding only a casual acquaintance. I hazard that day is within our sight.

Koussevitsky Memorial

The remainder of yesterday's program, which was given in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, included a straightforward and rousing performance of Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet Overture" and a hugely expressive rendition of his Violin Concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist. Since Tchaikovsky and Stern are as much a natural combination as you are likely to find outside the annals of fiction, it is no wonder that the piece glowed and shimmered, darted and soared.

As for Saturday night's affair in the Music Shed, it belonged hands down to "Le Sacre du Printemps," in a performance by Mr. Monteux that was remarkable on almost every conceivable count. As he sees it, "Le Sacre" is heaving, churning atmosphere music for a series of pagan fertility rites, which, of course, is precisely what it is meant to be. Never does the work become a vehicle for his personal prowess, though that prowess was everywhere in evidence; rather he turns "Le Sacre" into a vast and gripping tone-poem which is not incessantly aggressive after the manner of most conductors who occupy themselves with the work.

No Excessive Hysteria

Indeed, excepting those sections which lay authentic claim on it, there was no excessive hysteria, no whooping-up of sentiments that are themselves almost plaintive and moon-struck. "Le Sacre," after all, is not a perpetual motion dynamo, its moments of quietude and muted ferocity occurring as frequently as those others that lift the skies with their vehemence. Monteux's way to to allow the several aspects of the work their due to avoid exaggerating those moments of calm preceding orchestral storms, and to allow the storms, when they arrive, to thunder with hurricane force. The balance achieved thereby lends the work a nobility, a primitive directness, a primal ebb and flow that is irresistible. Also shattering. For confronting so great a masterpiece as read by a mind both deeply reflective and totally unmeretricious is an expereince to leave one limp.

The remainder of the program, given over to Mendelssohn's "Hebrides" Overture and Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, was in its own way equally fine, though the effect by comparison, was trifling. The former was made to sound, and properly, a rippling mystery of sea and wave, while the latter was delivered with all its harvest colors and autumnal flavor intact. It is Mr. Monteux's secret that he is able to make a piece grow before our eyes, to render its thematic substance inseparable from its form, a condition that stems from his refusal to highlight one glittering tune at the expense of another whose sheen is not so marked. Thus heard, the Tchaikovsky — even allowing certain arbitrary details of tempo—was all of a piece with the rest of the evening. And with "Le Sacre" to end it, what an evening it was!

ects Orchestra Throng At Lenox ons

gle-
wood Saturday night to hear a rather ordinary program given first rate treatment by the great and grand Pierre Monteux. This octogenarian is a dynamic musical figure — the audience loves him, and the Boston Symphony played with unusual vigor and devotion, responding to the merest flick of the baton (younger conductors could take lessons in economy of movement from this gentleman), pouring forth large and lovely tones.

Why the powers-that-be decided on Tchaikovsky's "Fifth Symphony" as the major work of the evening is a question that must forever remain unanswered. Perhaps the piece does have some obvious appeal, but it lacks unity, shape, variety, color andeven inspiration. The composer himself found in it "something repellent, something superfluous, patchy, and insincere, which the public instinctively recognizes." There are moments of beauty, and some of the effects are clever, but the whole does not stand up under repeated hearings.

Be that as it may, Mr. Monteux and his charges gave it a sonorous reading — and almost, by their vitality, succeeded in infusing the sprawling symphony with life and meaning. The horn player was not at his best in the second movement, and tempi here were inclined to drag. The fourth movement was notable for gusto and excitement.

A pleasant performance of Mendelssohn's overture, "The Gebrides," opened the program. This is innocuous music, playful and descriptive, and Mr. Monteux limned it in sunny colors.

Closing the program was the Stravinsky ballet "Le Sacre du Printemps," a controversial piece of music since it was introduced by the conductor 43 years ago. Also called "Pictures of Pagan Russia," it is a strongly rhythmic work with, however, little beauty. It was enormously effective when set to pictures by Disney in "Fantasia," and still remains interesting when performed without dancers. It crashes, jolts, shoots off into space, jars and shakes. Its performance on Saturday was stunning, and Mr. Monteux gave it a lustrous and strong appeal.

With the great wealth of orchestral literature from which to choose, it seems strange indeed that conductors like Mr. Monteux and an orchestra such as the Boston Symphony should lavish their considerable talents on music of questionable value. It appears to be a relatively simple matter to choose works more worthy of their time and attention.

The opera group will present a program of opera scenes this evening in the Theatre Concert Hall. Wednesday's chamber music program in the same hall will be devoted to music of Haydn, Janacek and Schubert, played by the Kroll String Quartet. — B. D

A Memorial to Koussevitzky

Stern's Brilliant Work Caps Tanglewood Day

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 21—The first Sunday afternoon concert in the main series of the Berkshire Festival was dedicated to the memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky. No special ceremonies were included, and there was no speaking, the entire program was of a nature peculiar to the musical taste of Koussevitzky.

"Romeo and Juliet," the overture-fantasia by Tchaikovsky, which Charles Munch conducted first, was one of the famous Koussevitzky warhorses, and so was the Tchaikovsky violin concerto—with Isaac Stern as soloist—which ended the concert.

The middle piece was the relatively new Canticum Sacrum by Igor Stravinsky, a composer long and faithfully championed by Koussevitzky. Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the conductor, was in the audience.

Second Performance in U.S.

This Tanglewood performance of the Canticum Sacrum was the second in the eastern United States, the first having been at the festival in Ellenville, N.Y., just last Thursday night. At Tanglewood the two splendid soloists were tenor John McCollum and bass-baritone Donald Gramm, and the chorus was that of the Berkshire Music Center, prepared by Hugh Ross.

The full title—in English—is "Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark"; the piece was composed in 1955 and given its premiere at the Venice festival in September, 1956, and the opening section is a dedication to the city of Venice in praise of its patron saint, the Apostle Mark.

The Canticum Sacrum is 12-tone music, though not according to the most severe technical rules of the style. Stravinsky has a tone row for his singers and instrumentalists, one that imposes great difficulty upon the voices, which, having to produce their own true pitch, must cope with out-of-scale intervals alien to vocal music as hitherto we have known it.

Instrumentation Unusual

The text, from both Old and New Testaments in the Vulgate edition of the Bible, is scarcely unified in its exhortations to preach the Gospel, having been taken from such disparate books as the Song of Solomon, the Psalms, St. John and St. Mark.

There is, however, a musical unity, governed by the nature of the 12-tone system, not by any aspect of emotional communication. There is none here of the brave sounds of Gabriel. Instead the texture is dry and sombre, to some extent rhythmically repetitive, and with suggestions of plain chant.

Stravinsky's instrumentation is peculiar—a quartet each of trumpets and trombones, the only strings violas and a few basses woodwinds without clarinets, and organ.

This 17 minutes piece, characterized by the brevity and the impossibility of development dictated by the 12-tone system, has some weird fine detail, such as putting three double basses in the treble clef. The Canticum Sacrum is not going to be immediately popular—today's applause, though continuing, was thin.

But on the basis that you can get accustomed to almost anything the more it is heard the nearer you will come to an understanding of it. With these words of what hope is wisdom, let further judgement await passing of time.

Stern Superb in Concerto

Issac Stern gave a really glorious performance of the Tchaikovsky violin concerto—lyrical, beautifully phrased and intoned, cleanly executed on a humid day bad for strings. It was a masterly reading in which Mr. Munch's conducting provided a superlative accompaniment. The ovation which followed was a long roar of enthusiasm.

While "Romeo and Juliet" was not one of Munch's most thoroughly integrated performances, it was white hot and very moving. Certainly the audience of 9780 persons who came up on a hot sunny afternoon, was greatly pleased. The weather held and the big attendance expected did materialize.

On Saturday night the figure was even larger—11,000. Pierre Monteux conducted the "Fingal's Cave" overture by Mendelssohn, the Fifth Symphony of Tchaikovsky—which from a tepid beginning worked up to a rousing account of the finale, and the Stravinsky masterpiece with which Monteux is so closely associated, "The Rite of Spring."

Shed Concerts arity Is Increasing

Music
Boston
lewood brought a total of 27,450 music devotees from all directions; one was interested to see a bus full of representatives from the United Nations in attendance for the whole weekend.

In what has become a tradition, the orchestra members stood at attention Friday evening when Dr. Munch came onstage to direct the first concert in the series devoted to Tchaikovsky and in honor of the seventy-fifth birthday of Stravinsky. The latter's Ballet "jeu de Cartes" in Three Deals was tossed to the audience for the opening number. A pert, frothy and vivid orchestral "Card Game" it was graphic in every detail, moving through the constantly changing meters and tricky rhythms to the final triumphant dance. Samuel Mayes was the soloist in the next and first performance of the original version of Tchaikovsky's "Variations on a Rococo Theme for Violoncello with Orchestral Accompaniment. Mr. Mayes' playing was an artistic triumph; his tone has a warmth and mellow resonance perfectly suited to the harmonic wealth of Tchaikovsky, and his technique showed to great advantage in the intricate double-stops, spizzicati runs and crystalline harmonics. The final number was the popular "Pathetique" Symphony of Tchaikovsky, truly a summing up of the composer's life in music so completely and specifically his. Dr. Munch directed with great intensity and vigor, exhorting the orchestra to more and more feeling, his sweeping motions resulting in whiplash runs from the strings, the whole carrying away the audience so that they applauded before the final Adagio Lamentoso; one must be truly sparton to remain unmoved by this highly emotional music.

Sunday afternoon's concert dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitsky opened with the tragically beautiful Fantasy Overture, "Romeo and Juliet," of Tchaikovsky, dramatically vivid throughout its telling by the excellence of its direction and performance. For the Stravinsky number, Dr. Munch directed the Berkshire Festival Chorus, soloists John McCollum and Donald Gramm and the orchestra minus violins and clarinets, in his new work, "Canticum Sacrum." Difficult to acept in its strictly technical appeal, one must admit its structural form, harmonic and rhythmic content, but there was no substance to grasp and hold one's attention. The audience received it with warm applause.

It is easy to understand why Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto might be given the drastic and unfavorable reviews it received at its first performance, if the soloist, orchestra and director were not wholly dedicated to its worth as Isaac Stern, the Boston Symphony and Dr. Munch so ably proved in their treatment of this excitingly difficult and absorbing work. One couldn't help but be amazed at the complete and utter disregard of the humidity enveloping everyone, as Mr. Stern proceeded with his incomparable virtuoso performance. The audience literally went wild in its acclaim for Mr. Stern, Dr. Munch and the orchestra, a truly unforgettable experience.

M.deB.B.

C1587

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006
JUL 22 1957

Isaac Stern Dominates Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—Isaac Stern dominated the third concert in the opening series fo Music Shed programs at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon with a spectacular performance of the Tchaikovsky violin concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.

There was an attendance of 9,780 to bring the weekend total to [illegible]90. The orchestra played Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" overture Fantasia. However, it was far from all "peaches and cream" at this concert. The orchestra, and the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students explored the mysteries of a new Stravinsky work—"Canticum Sacrum, ad Honorem Sancti Marci Nominis," or "Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark."

Soloists

Soloists were John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone. They are owed felicitations for having undertaken the assignment and sympathy for having been given it.

Stern did not saw his way through the Tchaikovsky concerto as is so often the case. In all three movements, particularly the second, he reached the core of its poetry.

His technique was nothing short of dazzling. Yet everything was accomplished with admirable poise. While the beauty of the slow movement was brought out with calculated poise, it was not minimized one iota and, incidentally, the counter melody in flute was beautifully played.

Firm Rein on Speed

Munch kept a firm rein on speed, but not to a point that the finale received a jet finish.

Stravinsky wrote "Canticum Sacrum' in 1955. It received its first American performance at Ellenville, N. Y., last week. This was the second time the American public was exposed to it.

The Stravinsky reputation did absolutely nothing to rescue it, or the bored audience—and probably, the bored musicians. Another factor that might have salvaged it, had there been a least a little mite of musical coherence to mull over, were the religious words, some taken from the Book of Mark the Evangelist. The work is dedicated to the city of Venice.

Offers Nothing

This "20 Minutes in the Madhouse" offers nothing but aimless melodic excursions to ambiguous chordal backgrounds in which low stops on the organ and strings predominate.

McCollum's solo, "Awake, O North Wind' is pure license in a type of mongrel Gregorian style which would require unabated imagination to find a complement between words and music.

Gramm's solo, "Jesus Said Unto Him" was even less lucid in any respect. The chorus did its duty, whatever it was, with respectful determination. If one were to successfully search for a redeeming feature, it would be the final, welcomed, merciful "Amen.'

Applause

For some polite reason, here was considerable applause.

Munch and the orchestra gave an engrossing performance of the "Romeo and Juliet" music. In fact, this was the orchestra's most successful effort over the weekend at being a virtuosic instrument.

The Friar Laurence theme was resplendently played in low strings. It was presented with dignity, expressiveness, and a wealth of richness. The wholesale pizzicato passages were effected as if by one instrument.

While Everett Firth's handling of timpani was quite magnificent in the overture's final sequence, the opening of the Montague and Capulet battle had more crash than dynamic quality. A great storm raged during the passage, smoothly dovetailed with Louis Speyer's warm, English horn solo for the love music.

Butting Brass

The second appearance of the Montague-Capulet bout brought out some butting brass in secondary themes that put the thing out of focus, but they redeemed themselves with a perfect rendition of the chorale that leads to the shattering close.

Series "B," beginning on Friday, will feature the music of Berlioz. The opening concert will be the "Corsair" overture, "Harold in Italy," with Joseph De Pasquale as viola soloist, and the Fantastic Symphony. Munch will conduct.

Stravinsky Work At Tanglewood Is Dark, Impossible

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 21—In spite of terrific heat, quite the worst that we remember at Tanglewood, 9,780 people were on hand for the final concert of the first session of week-end concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

Unnecessary Addition

How many people came to hear Stravinsky's latest work in its second American performance, we do not know, but we venture to predict this will be their last hearing. Titled "Canticum Sacrum," for tenor, baritone chorus and orchestra, it was dedicated to the City of Venice and, had its first performance there. The work could just as aptly have been titled "Seventeen Minutes of Maelstrom" or "Cacaphonic Ecstasy." It is an impossible work, dark, stark, without melody and, and as far as this listener could feel, a quite unnecessary addition to the literature.

One could only admire tenor John McCollum and baritone Donald Gramm for their musicianly singing of an almost impossible vocal score and the festival choir which must have labored mightily to even approximate the written notes.

Mr. Munch gave devoted attention to the score and somehow or other kept all the forces intact. Stravinsky has used Latin text, as he has done several times since he wrote the "Symphony of Psalms." We are told that the structure of the work is in five sections, paralleling the five domes of St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice, and that correspondences can be drawn between the musical form and subjects of the texts. The first part tells of the Lord's command to go forth and preach the Gospel, and the last part is the fulfillment; that is to say, the future which has become the past. It is doubtful that there will be many opportunities to dwell upon this ugly work.

The program opened with a well-proportioned and keenly-felt reading of Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet," overture-fantasy. Because this work was a favorite of the late Serge Koussevitzky, it was fitting that it be included in this concert program given in his memory.

The concert concluded with an eloquent performance of Tschaikowsky's violin concerto by Isaac Stern. Rich in tone, elegant as to phrase and sensitive, in spite of a jet-propelled finale, orchestra and soloist combined to bring full realization of the work. Mr. Stern and his associates earned a well deserved ovation.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., MONDAY, JULY 22, 1957

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, JULY 22 1957

Music: A Modern Master

Stravinsky Dominates Week-End at Lenox

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 21—The extremes of the remarkable career of Igor Stravinsky were highligted at Tanglewood last night and this afternoon. last night and this afternoon. with "Le Sacre du Printemps" the primeval violence the composer could summon forth from an orchestra forty-five years ago. At this afternoon's concert there was the "Canticum Sacrum," composed last year, with its economy and almost enigmatic complexity.

•

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony, with John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, as soloists, performed the "Canticum Sacrum" three days after it was presented at Ellenville, N. Y., under the direction of Leopold Stokowski. The public here, like the public at the Empire State Music Festival, seemed to be divided in its reactions—some were sympathetic and some clearly indifferent or hostile.

No one could blame an audience for finding little to warm up to in this music at first hearing. To this traveler it took on new values. After hearing the "Canticum Sacrum" twice in Ellenville and once here, one is more than ever convinced that it is one of the best of Stravinsky's late works. His previous flirtations with the serial technique seemed unattractive, but in the "Canticum Sacrum" the composer has bent it admirably to his purposes.

It becomes clear on further acquaintance with the score that Stravinksy has not merely used twelve-tone procedures but has amalgamated them with a recollection of the "new art" of the fourteenth century. The fusion is wholly his own. The effect is a strong and personal religious affirmation.

Mr. Munch took the piece at a considerably more rapid pace than did Mr. Stokowski. There is no need to judge which was the correct approach; what was interesting was that two conductors could arrive at different perspectives about a new piece and that each could make his interpretation viable. The soloists were effective in the difficult passage allotted to them.

•

At Tanglewood the large Music Shed was not quite the happiest setting for this music, which stresses the low strings and makes sparing use of the instruments. The sounds had a tendency to become dispersed. One wonders how much of the music's continuity the people out on the lawn were able to apprehend.

There was no difficulty about following the large outlines of Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture and Violin Concerto, which framed the Stravinsky work. The story [illegible] of the former were direction. And the Concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist, had a spacious interpretation.

Isaac Stern

Mr. Stern, who is practically an institution here this summer, will return to play the other two big violin concertos—those by Beethoven and Brahms, of course. He has the big style, singing tone and surging temperament for Tchaikovsky. And the hot, humid afternoon cramped neither his style nor his virtuosity.

•

The astonishing figure of the week-end has been Pierre Monteux. At 82, the placid-looking, round little Maestro walked out slowly to the podium last night and accepted a helping hand from a violinist as he took the two steps up to the podium. But once he lifted his baton he behaved like the youngest and liveliest person on the premises.

After a delightfully measured and lyrical reading of Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, he unleashed Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, giving it a performance of irresistible vitality. Within a proportioned conception that did not seek to tear a passion to tatters, he none the less established the excitement and drama of the score. Inner voices one rarely hears were accentuated neatly, so that the large statement of the music was intensified.

And when he got to the "Sacre du Printemps," he seemed to find fresh sources of energy. Of course, he knows the score intimately, he was in charge at the première in 1913, when this music provoked rioting. It is no longer cause for mob scenes, but in its explosiveness and rhythmic force it still affects one like an upheaval of nature. The octogenarian Maestro got a magnificent performance from the Boston Symphony—controlled and barbaric at the same time, as the "Sacre" must be.

•

With 11,000 last night and almost 10,000 this afternoon the Berkshire Festival has had a banner week-end. Was it Stravinsky or Tchaikovsky or the weather—or a little of all three?

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 21,025
JUL 23 1957

Concerts Big Success At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 22 — The first week end of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood came to a triumphant close Sunday afternoon with more than 27,000 music-lovers having heard the three concerts in programs devoted to Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky under the batons of Charles Munch, director of the Boston, and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor Saturday night.

The Sunday afternoon concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky presented the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" in honor of St. Mark before an audience of 9,800 with John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm baritone. But it was Isaac Stern as soloist in the Tchaikovsky "Violin Concerto in D major" with the Boston under Munch who scored the triumph of the afternoon and was called back repeatedly by an audience that did not seem to mind the heat that sent listeners on the spacious lawns to the shelter of the trees.

Not even temperatures just short of the 100-degree mark during the past two days could keep the audience away. It was a brilliant week end of Russian music for which 11,000 turned out on Saturday evening to hear Monteux conduct, despite his 82 years, one of the finest performances of Stravinsky's "The Rite of Sprint." Seldom have we heard the Boston's brasses give such a spirited performance. Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. [illegible] in E minor" was given a beautiful reading and its brilliant end received an ovation.

Monteux's relationship with the Boston Symphony runs back over more than 40 years and the warm reception he received from the entire orchestra when he appeared was testimony to the love the players have for him. His conducting, despite the warmth of the evening, showed he has not lost one whit of his brilliance.

This will be a Berlioz week end with the programs Friday and Saturday evenings being devoted to his music with Munch conducting. Sunday afternoon the program will be Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" with some of Hindemith included under the conductorship of Monteux.

S. M.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
JUL 21 1957

MONTEUX' BATON DIRECTS CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

82-Year-Old Conductor, Symphony Heard in Stravinsky Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 20 — Forty-three years ago, Pierre Monteux conducted the first performance of Stravinsky's ballet "Le Sacre du Printemps." Tonight at the age of 82 he conducted the work again as the closing number on the second concert of the week-end series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Rising Greeting

As he came slowly on stage the orchestra rose to greet him and along with 11,000 people seated within the shed and on the lawns. The excessive evening heat made the lawn a more pleasant place for listening.

This week end Stravinsky and Tschaikowsky are sharing the programs. Tonight we heard a capital performance of Tschaikowsky's Fifth Symphony, a reading that was sure, just and remarkably vital. Mr. Monteux conducts with a minimum of gestures and if there are any labored moments, they are few.

The Fifth Symphony was given a spacious reading. There was plenty of sentiment and a deal of drama. The music was allowed to speak for itself, which it can do eloquently.

There were a few dubious moments. Mr. Stagliano can play the horn solo of the second movement much better than he did tonight and speed took the place of grace in the valse of the third movement. The final allegro was magnificent.

"The Hebrides."

The program opened with a delightful performance of Mendelssohn's overture, "The Hebrides." While the trend today seems to impel every traveler either to write a book or inflict colored slides or movies on his friends, composers are prone to place their travels into music. It was a journey that prompted Mendelssohn to put Fingal's cave into music and he did it simply and melodically. Mr. Monteux did not allow a bit of the romance and sentiment to be omitted.

The program concluded with what must be a definitive reading of Stravinsky's "Rites of Spring." No conductor has been closer to the work than Mr. Monteux. He has said that he practically had to run for his life after the premiere performance. Those days are over but there is much in this barbaric, highly colored music that shocks the ears.

Powerful it is. Beauty it has not. Rhythms pile on rhythms. There are no dull moments. Mr. Monteux made skillfull differentiation between the two episodes, "The Adoration of the Earth" and "the Sacrifice."

Mixed Reaction

The audience reaction was mixed, as it always has been. One either likes the work or detests it. This music will always be controversial but it seems to have gained increasing popularity through the years.

The orchestra responded superbly to every demand made upon it. Seldom does one hear such glorious sonorities or such virtuoso playing from the percussion section. When it comes to conducting this work, Mr. Monteux has lost none of his vitality or sense of drama. It was a definitive performance.

Tomorrow afternoon Stravinsky and Tschaikowsky will again share the program. Mr. Stravinsky will be represented by his latest work for solo tenor and baritone, chorus and orchestra, the "Canticum Sacrum." Isaac Stern will play the Tschaikowsky violin concerto and the concert will open with his "Romeo and Juliet" overture-fantasy. Charles Munch will conduct this concert dedicated to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky.

C1587

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006
JUL 22 1957

Isaac Stern Dominates Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—Isaac Stern dominated the third concert in the opening series fo Music Shed programs at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon with a spectacular performance of the Tchaikovsky violin concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.

There was an attendance of 9,780 to bring the weekend total to [illegible]90. The orchestra played Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" overture Fantasia. However, it was far from all "peaches and cream" at this concert. The orchestra, and the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students explored the mysteries of a new Stravinsky work—"Canticum Sacrum, ad Honorem Sancti Marci Nominis," or "Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark."

Soloists

Soloists were John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone. They are owed felicitations for having undertaken the assignment and sympathy for having been given it.

Stern did not saw his way through the Tchaikovsky concerto as is so often the case. In all three movements, particularly the second, he reached the core of its poetry.

His technique was nothing short of dazzling. Yet everything was accomplished with admirable poise. While the beauty of the slow movement was brought out with calculated poise, it was not minimized one iota and, incidentally, the counter melody in flute was beautifully played.

Firm Rein on Speed

Munch kept a firm rein on speed, but not to a point that the finale received a jet finish.

Stravinsky wrote "Canticum Sacrum' in 1955. It received its first American performance at Ellenville, N. Y., last week. This was the second time the American public was exposed to it.

The Stravinsky reputation did absolutely nothing to rescue it, or the bored audience—and probably, the bored musicians. Another factor that might have salvaged it, had there been a least a little mite of musical coherence to mull over, were the religious words, some taken from the Book of Mark the Evangelist. The work is dedicated to the city of Venice.

Offers Nothing

This "20 Minutes in the Madhouse" offers nothing but aimless melodic excursions to ambiguous chordal backgrounds in which low stops on the organ and strings predominate.

McCollum's solo, "Awake, O North Wind' is pure license in a type of mongrel Gregorian style which would require unabated imagination to find a complement between words and music.

Gramm's solo, "Jesus Said Unto Him" was even less lucid in any respect. The chorus did its duty, whatever it was, with respectful determination. If one were to successfully search for a redeeming feature, it would be the final, welcomed, merciful "Amen.'

Applause

For some polite reason, here was considerable applause.

Munch and the orchestra gave an engrossing performance of the "Romeo and Juliet" music. In fact, this was the orchestra's most successful effort over the weekend at being a virtuosic instrument.

The Friar Laurence theme was resplendently played in low strings. It was presented with dignity, expressiveness, and a wealth of richness. The wholesale pizzicato passages were effected as if by one instrument.

While Everett Firth's handling of timpani was quite magnificent in the overture's final sequence, the opening of the Montague and Capulet battle had more crash than dynamic quality. A great storm raged during the passage, smoothly dovetailed with Louis Speyer's warm, English horn solo for the love music.

Butting Brass

The second appearance of the Montague - Capulet bout brought out some butting brass in secondary themes that put the thing out of focus, but they redeemed themselves with a perfect rendition of the chorale that leads to the shattering close.

Series "B," beginning on Friday, will feature the music of Berlioz. The opening concert will be the "Corsair" overture, "Harold in Italy," with Joseph De Pasquale as viola soloist, and the Fantastic Symphony. Munch will conduct.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., MONDAY, JULY 22, 1957

Stravinsky Work At Tanglewood Is Dark, Impossible

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 21 In spite of terrific heat, quite the worst that e remember at Tanglewood, 780 people were on hand for the nal concert of the first session f week-end ined concerts by the oston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles unch.

Unnecessary Addition

How many people came to hear travinsky's latest work in its econd American performance, ve do not know, but we venture o predict this will be their last earing. Titled "Canticum Sacrum," for tenor, baritone chorus and orchestra, it was dedicated to the City of Venice and, had its first performance there. The work could just as aptly have been titled "Seventeen Minutes of Maelstrom" or "Cacaphonic Ecstasy." It is an impossible work, dark, stark, without melody and, and as far as this listener could feel, a quite unnecessary addition to the literature.

One could only admire tenor John McCollum and baritone Donald Gramm for their musicianly singing of an almost impossible vocal score and the festival choir which must have labored mightily to even approximate the written notes.

Mr. Munch gave devoted attention to the score and somehow or other kept all the forces intact. Stravinsky has used Latin text, as he has done several times since he wrote the "Symphony of Psalms." We are told that the structure of the work is in five sections, paralleling the five domes of St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice, and that correspondences can be drawn between the musical form and subjects of the texts. The first part tells of the Lord's command to go forth and preach the Gospel, and the last part is the fulfillment; that is to say, the future which has become the past. It is doubtful that there will be many opportunities to dwell upon this ugly work.

The program opened with a well-proportioned and keenly-felt reading of Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet," overture-fantasy. Because this work was a favorite of the late Serge Koussevitzky, it was fitting that it be included in this concert program given in his memory.

The concert concluded with an eloquent performance of Tschaikowsky's violin concerto by Isaac Stern. Rich in tone, elegant as to phrase and sensitive, in spite of a jet-propelled finale, orchestra and soloist combined to bring full realization of the work. Mr. Stern and his associates earned a well deserved ovation.

Music: A Modern Master

Stravinsky Dominates Week-End at Lenox

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 21—The extremes of the remarkable career of Igor Stravinsky were highligted at Tanglewood last night and this afternoon. last night and this afternoon. with "Le Sacre du Printemps" the primeval violence the composer could summon forth from an orchestra forty-five years ago. At this afternoon's concert there was the "Canticum Sacrum," composed last year, with its economy and almost enigmatic complexity.

•

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony, with John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, as soloists, performed the "Canticum Sacrum" three days after it was presented at Ellenville, N. Y., under the direction of Leopold Stokowski. The public here, like the public at the Empire State Music Festival, seemed to be divided in its reactions—some were sympathetic and some clearly indifferent or hostile.

No one could blame an audience for finding little to warm up to in this music at first hearing. To this traveler it took on new values. After hearing the "Canticum Sacrum" twice in Ellenville and once here, one is more than ever convinced that it is one of the best of Stravinsky's late works. His previous flirtations with the serial technique seemed unattractive, but in the "Canticum. Sacrum" the composer has bent it admirably to his purposes.

It becomes clear on further acquaintance with the score that Stravinksy has not merely used twelve-tone procedures but has amalgamated them with a recollection of the "new art" of the fourteenth century. The fusion is wholly his own. The effect is a strong and personal religious affirmation.

Mr. Munch took the piece at a considerably more rapid pace than did Mr. Stokowski. There is no need to judge which was the correct approach; what was interesting was that two conductors could arrive at different perspectives about a new piece and that each could make his interpretation viable. The soloists were effective in the difficult passage allotted to them.

•

At Tanglewood the large Music Shed was not quite the happiest setting for this music, which stresses the low strings and makes sparing use of the instruments. The sounds had a tendency to become dispersed. One wonders how much of the music's continuity the people out on the lawn were able to apprehend.

There was no difficulty about following the large outlines of Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture and Violin Concerto, which framed the Stravinsky work. The story sections of the former were whipped up almost frenetically under Mr. Munch's excitable direction. And the Concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist, had a spacious interpretation.

Isaac Stern

Mr. Stern, who is practically an institution here this summer, will return to play the other two big violin concertos —those by Beethoven and Brahms, of course. He has the big style, singing tone and surging temperament for Tchaikovsky. And the hot, humid afternoon cramped neither his style nor his virtuosity.

•

The astonishing figure of the week-end has been Pierre Monteux. At 82, the placid-looking, round little Maestro walked out slowly to the podium last night and accepted a helping hand from a violinist as he took the two steps up to the podium. But once he lifted his baton he behaved like the youngest and liveliest person on the premises.

After a delightfully measured and lyrical reading of Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture, he unleashed Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, giving it a performance of irresistible vitality. Within a proportioned conception that did not seek to tear a passion to tatters, he none the less established the excitement and drama of the score. Inner voices one rarely hears were accentuated neatly, so that the large statement of the music was intensified.

And when he got to the "Sacre du Printemps," he seemed to find fresh sources of energy. Of course, he knows the score intimately, he was in charge at the première in 1913, when this music provoked rioting. It is no longer cause for mob scenes, but in its explosiveness and rhythmic force it still affects one like an upheaval of nature. The octogenarian Maestro got a magnificent performance from the Boston Symphony—controlled and barbaric at the same time, as the "Sacre" must be.

•

With 11,000 last night and almost 10,000 this afternoon the Berkshire Festival has had a banner week-end. Was it Stravinsky or Tchaikovsky or the weather—or a little of all three?

JUL [illegible]

Concerts Big Success At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 22 — The first week end of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood came to a triumphant close Sunday afternoon with more than 27,000 music-lovers having heard the three concerts in programs devoted to Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky under the batons of Charles Munch, director of the Boston, and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor Saturday night.

The Sunday afternoon concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky presented the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" in honor of St. Mark before an audience of 9,800 with John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm baritone. But it was Isaac Stern as soloist in the Tchaikovsky "Violin Concerto in D major" with the Boston under Munch who scored the triumph of the afternoon and was called back repeatedly by an audience that did not seem to mind the heat that sent listeners on the spacious lawns to the shelter of the trees.

Not even temperatures just short of the 100-degree mark during the past two days could keep the audience away. It was a brilliant week end of Russian music for which 11,000 turned out on Saturday evening to hear Monteux conduct, despite his 82 years, one of the finest performances of Stravinsky's "The Rite of Sprint." Seldom have we heard the Boston's brasses give such a spirited performance Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 5 in E minor" was given a beautiful reading and its brilliant end received an ovation.

Monteux's relationship with the Boston Symphony runs back over more than 40 years and the warm reception he received from the entire orchestra when he appeared was testimony to the love the players have for him. His conducting, despite the warmth of the evening, showed he has not lost one whit of his brilliance.

This will be a Berlioz week end with the programs Friday and Saturday evenings being devoted to his music with Munch conducting. Sunday afternoon the program will be Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" with some of Hindemith included under the conductorship of Monteux.

S. M.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
JUL 21 1957

MONTEUX' BATON DIRECTS CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

82-Year-Old Conductor, Symphony Heard in Stravinsky Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 20 — Forty-three years ago, Pierre Monteux conducted the first performance of Stravinsky's ballet "Le Sacre du Printemps." Tonight at the age of 82 he conducted the work again as the closing number on the second concert of the week-end series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Rising Greeting

As he came slowly on stage the orchestra rose to greet him and along with 11,000 people seated within the shed and on the lawns. The excessive evening heat made the lawn a more pleasant place for listening.

This week end Stravinsky and Tschaikowsky are sharing the programs. Tonight we heard a capital performance of Tschaikowsky's Fifth Symphony, a reading that was sure, just and remarkably vital. Mr. Monteux conducts with a minimum of gestures and if there are any labored moments, they are few.

The Fifth Symphony was given a spacious reading. There was plenty of sentiment and a deal of drama. The music was allowed to speak for itself, which it can do eloquently.

There were a few dubious moments. Mr. Stagliano can play the horn solo of the second movement much better than he did tonight and speed took the place of grace in the valse of the third movement. The final allegro was magnificent.

"The Hebrides."

The program opened with a delightful performance of Mendelssohn's overture, "The Hebrides." While the trend today seems to impel every traveler either to write a book or inflict colored slides or movies on his friends, composers are prone to place their travels into music. It was a journey that prompted Mendelssohn to put Fingal's cave into music and he did it simply and melodically. Mr. Monteux did not allow a bit of the romance and sentiment to be omitted.

The program concluded with what must be a definitive reading of Stravinsky's "Rites of Spring." No conductor has been closer to the work than Mr. Monteux. He has said that he practically had to run for his life after the premiere performance. Those days are over but there is much in this barbaric, highly colored music that shocks the ears.

Powerful it is. Beauty it has not. Rhythms pile on rhythms. There are no dull moments. Mr. Monteux made skillfull differentiation between the two episodes, "The Adoration of the Earth" and "the Sacrifice."

Mixed Reaction

The audience reaction was mixed, as it always has been. One either likes the work or detests it. This music will always be controversial but it seems to have gained increasing popularity through the years.

The orchestra responded superbly to every demand made upon it. Seldom does one hear such glorious sonorities or such virtuoso playing from the percussion section. When it comes to conducting this work, Mr. Monteux has lost none of his vitality or sense of drama. It was a definitive performance.

Tomorrow afternoon Stravinsky and Tschaikowsky will again share the program. Mr. Stravinsky will be represented by his latest work for solo tenor and baritone, chorus and orchestra, the "Canticum Sacrum." Isaac Stern will play the Tschaikowsky violin concerto and the concert will open with his "Romeo and Juliet" overture-fantasy. Charles Munch will conduct this concert dedicated to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky.

E NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1957.

Music: 2 Contemporaries

Stravinsky 'Canticum,' Orff Work Played

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

ELLENVILLE, N. Y., July 18—Opposite poles of contemporary creative practice were exposed at Thursday's session of the Empire State Music Festival.

The advanced, sophisticated ways of Igor Stravinsky and the return to a kind of rude primitivism as exemplified by Carl Orff were confronted on this program, conducted by Leopold Stokowski. They offered an absorbing contrast in the divergent approaches being taken by composers of our time in an effort to achieve fresh meaningfulness. And if these are only two approaches, there are quite a few others.

•

Mr. Stravinsky, who at 75 may be justifiably termed an old master, has tried more different approaches than any living composer of his stature. He remains an amazing figure. For in the "Canticum Sacrum," which had its first performance in the East at Thursday's concert, he continues to be eager and youthful in his exploration of compositional devices.

The "Canticum Sacrum," which was written last year for the Venice Festival and which had its American première in Los Angeles last month, employs the twelve-tone technique. But Stravinsky could not touch any technique without placing the imprint of his own personality on it. In this work based on a sacred text he has given the serial technique an individual cast. He does not use it throughout the piece. And when he does, his ideas come closer to those of Webern than of any other dodecaphonist.

•

The writing is spare in texture. Violins, 'cellos, clarinets and horns are dispensed with. The instruments remaining in the orchestra are treated with the greatest economy. A few notes here, a short phrase there, but only rarely massed instrumental blocks. The chorus has impressive sections at the beginning and end, with the latter section employing the material of the former in retrograde motion. The baritone and tenor soloists are woven into the work with subtlety of design.

•

This nineteen-minute work is difficult to play and difficult to absorb. After conducting the piece, Mr. Stokowski suggested to the audience that in view of the music's complexity, a second hearing might help to make it clearer. He asked whether the listeners would like a repeat performance. The applause encouraged him to go ahead.

Igor Stravinsky

The Program

EMPIRE STATE FESTIVAL, Symphony of the Air, American Concert Choir; Rudolf Petrak, tenor; Philip Maero, baritone; Ellen Faull, soprano; Leopold Stokowski, conducting. At Ellenville, N. Y.

Canticum Sacrum .....Stravinsky
Carmina Burana .....Carl Orff

•

After these successive performances a woman was heard to say, "That was a good idea, I liked it better the second time." On the other hand, a young man remarked "It was as bad the second time as the first."

To this listener the "Canticum Sacrum" seemed a significant work. There is a searching expressive content in it. The idiom is austere on the surface, but underneath there is a touching, devotional mood. Mr. Stravinsky seems to reach special heights in his works on religious themes; witness the Symphony of Psalms and the Mass.

•

Mr. Stokowski conducted both performances with sovereign control and sympathy. The Symphony of the Air played well, and the American Concert Choir did a good job. Philip Maero, baritone, and Rudolf Petrak, tenor, sang the difficult solo parts effectively.

In Orff's "Carmina Burana" the soloists were joined by Ellen Faull, soprano, who sang with sensitivity and delicacy of nuance. Mr. Stokowski gave this work with its almost overwhelming emphasis on rhythm a vital colorful performance. But brilliant as it was, it could not conceal the limitations of Orff's musical philosophy.

★ Mon., July 22, 1957-9
New York Journal-American ★★

MUSIC

I. Stern Solo Tops Festival

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 22.—Some 27,490 people attended the Tchaikowsky-Stravinsky weekend of the Berkshire Festival. For the final program in the music shed yesterday afternoon, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony played the Tchaikowsky "Romeo and Juliet" and the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

Interest centered, however, in the performance of Stravinsky's most recent work "Canticum Sacrum," heard for the first time in the East at Ellenville, N. Y., last Thursday.

That the "Canticum Sacrum" sounded more sacred and less dramatic on this occasion may be attributed to Munch's acceptance of it as a liturgical work.

This approach shifted certain balances, thus giving the work somewhat different values.

Little Effect

This change neither enhanced nor lessened the effect of the music; it remained something to admire for its craftsmanship rather than for its impact. The honor accorded St. Mark in this piece thus becomes more a matter of respect than of fervor.

In this performance, the chorus functioned less forcefully than the soloists. Both John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, gave excellent accounts of their roles. If the orchestra felt about it as indifferently as the final note sounded, then it had many in agreement with its point of view. Audience applause was polite.

On one of the Berkshires' hottest afternoons, the orchestra played Tchaikovsky well. It worked up gradually to ardor in the "Romeo and Juliet" and held its own in concerto, but this was not one of its superb moments.

Stern Poised, Lyrical

Stern gave a poised, lyrical account of the concerto. His singing tone soared in sweetness if it did not work up into brilliance. When the orchestra played full tilt, his violin sounded in the minority.

Why the racetrack pace in the finale was necessary remains one of those perplexing elements in concerts these days.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Saturday night concert, attended by 11,000. How Mendelssohn's "Hebrides" overture slipped into the program is a mystery. Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony kept the weekend programs in line.

Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps" highlighted the evening both as one of the composer's unquestioned masterpieces and as one of the conductor's, also. It was the only work of his to give him full stature at these concerts.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
JUL 22 1957

C157

Concerts at Tanglewood

Recent Score From Pen Of Stravinsky

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

A fine study in contrast was offered this past weekend when Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux programed works by Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky for the third week of the current Berkshire Festival. With the first two weekends devoted to chamber works and chamber orchestra music by Bach and Mozart, the concerts Friday, Saturday, and Sunday marked the opening of four weeks of music by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It was most appropriate that Stravinsky be chosen to represent the modern school this past weekend. June 17 marked the composer's 75th birthday, and to him is given the credit for the beginning of a new era in music with the performance of "Le Sacre du Printemps" in Paris on May 29, 1913.

Mr. Monteux revived the memory of that historic occasion Saturday night when he led "Le Sacre," a work that he conducted in its 1913 première before a scandalized and unruly audience. Now, of course, "Le Sacre" is considered a classic, and the demonstrations after its performances are entirely favorable.

♪ ♪ ♪

Mr. Munch opened the Friday program with "Jeu de Cartes," a "Ballet in Three Deals" composed by Stravinsky in 1937. This is a clever and amusing piece—downright funny, in fact, where the composer suddenly interpolates Bizet's famous addition to examples of musical card playing. The performance was splendid, with the conductor at the top of his form and the orchestra responding with precision.

This high standard of performance was continued with the Tchaikovsky Variations on a Rococo Theme for Violoncello, Op. 33, in which the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, played superbly while aided by Mr. Munch's masterly accompaniment. This was the first performance in the United States of the work as Tchaikovsky originally conceived it. Before 1956 the Variations, both with piano and orchestral accompaniment, had been performed in a version as revised by a Russian cellist and friend of Tchaikovsky, Wilhelm Fitzenhagen, to whom the work was dedicated.

♪ ♪ ♪

Fitzenhagen's changes were not too extensive, involving a rearrangement in the order of the variations, a dropping of one variation, and a few slight alterations in the solo parts. Both versions are ingratiating and charming, but it was good to hear the piece as originally written, especially under circumstances that justly resulted in an ovation for soloist, conductor, and players.

A vibrant and moving reading of the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 6 brought this splendid concert to a close.

History has shown the fate of critics who have reported adversely on Stravinsky premières —they have always been proved wrong. Perhaps this is another such occasion, but candor forces the conclusion that one of the master's latest works is in some ways a most disagreeable piece.

Receiving its first performance in the East, the "Canticum Sacrum ad Honorem Sancti Marci Nominis" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra, combines some beautiful vocal writing with what on first hearing appeared to be some weird inexplicable orchestral accompaniment. If a composer had wished to make a parody, perhaps the same mélange of grunts, groans, squeaks, brays, and snorts might have been the result. From the opening weird effects to the final orchestral cough, one was hard put to follow the composer's thread of thought.

♪ ♪ ♪

There can be nothing but praise for the performance itself, with fine singing by John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, and with the Festival Chorus splendidly trained for the work by Hugh Ross. Vocally, the work is entirely appropriate to its dedication to Venice and to its patron, St. Mark, and to the text taken from Mark, the Song of Songs, Psalms, Deuteronomy, and the first Epistle of St. John. But one wonders what the Venetians really thought of the odd accompaniment when it was given its première there last year.

Mr. Munch and his men performed some heroic feats during the reading, but the excellence of the playing could not reconcile the audience to the strangeness of the work, and there was but scattered and faint applause at the end.

The hearers, however, had plenty to make them happy with Mr. Munch's forceful interpretation of the opening "Romeo and Juliet" Overture by Tchaikovsky and the same composer's Violin Concerto, magnificently performed by Isaac Stern, which brought the concert and weekend to a close.

SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Monday, July 22, 1957

Berkshire Festival Pleases

By [illegible] WORMER

TANGLEWOOD, LENNOX, Mass.—The [illegible]st week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts in the Shed attracted large audiences to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra perform three programs.

Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the orchestra and the Berkshire Festival, conducted Friday night and yesterday afternoon; Pierre Monteux led the orchestra Saturday.

Yesterady marked the annual memorial to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for many years leader of the Boston. The program comprised works by Tschaikowsky and Stravinsky.

Romeo and Juliet

The atmosphere of tension and hostility between the houses of Montagu and Capulet and the love scenes of those star-crossed lovers, Romeo and Juliet was brought to attention in Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture Fantasia. In this Dr. Munch and his men produced some fine effects with a magnificent climax with the song of Romeo in massive chords.

Isaac Stern, internationally known concert violinst, was soloist in Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto in D. Major Opus 35 with orchestra. The three movements provided memorable music.

Sterns' bownig and fingering was superb musicianship. His instrument fairly sang runs in several passages, notably in the andante movement.

Igr Stravinsky was represented in the program by his "Canticum Sacrum" (sacred canticle in honor of Saint Mark. This was performed for the first time in Tanglewood and for the second time in the East. (It was presented recentl yin the Empire State Festival in Ellenville).

Lower Strings Only

In additon to the orchestra, the Fetsival chorus and soloists, the canticle, of 17 minutes' duration, calls for the lower strings only, a full contingent of winds, clarinets exceptede, and the organ and solo voices (tenor and baritone).

The dedication is to the city of Venice for tenonr and baritone, s[illegible] with trombones. The ver[illegible]re different Psalm texts [illegible]kepts from the Gospels s[illegible] Latin.

There is no doubt that the listner must be exposed to this Stravinsky score for a number of times before grasping its full import. Also, performers have a difficult task with this literature, if efforts in the offering are to have great appeal with many, rather than with the few.

Applause

There was generous applause for Dr. Munch and the performers at the conclusion of the canticle. Returning to the stage a second time with the soloists Johnn McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, baritone, Dr. Munch also shared applause with Hugh Ross, diretcor of the festival chorus, who prepared the singers for the concert, and with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist of the orchestra. She is remembered in Syracuse for solo appearance last fall with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a concert in Central High School. [illegible] "TMHTHTH [illegible] Next Saturday morning there will be an open rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Shed, Joseph De Pasquale, violinist, will be soloist at next Friday night's Festival concert. The Festival chorus will appear next Saturday night. Dr. Munch will conduct both programs. Pierre Monteux, now past the four score mark, will conduct, next Sunday afternoon, "Tanglewood on Parade" featuring the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conducting, is set for Thursday, Aug. 8.

NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1957.

Music: 2 Contemporaries

Stravinsky 'Canticum,' Orff Work Played

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

ELLENVILLE, N. Y., July 18—Opposite poles of contemporary creative practice were juxtaposed at Thursday's concert of the Empire State Music Festival.

The advanced, sophisticated way of Igor Stravinsky and the return to a kind of rude primitivism as exemplified by Carl Orff were confronted on this program, conducted by Leopold Stokowski. They offered an absorbing contrast in the divergent approaches being taken by composers of our time in an effort to achieve fresh meaningfulness. And, of course, these are only two approaches; there are quite a few others.

•

Mr. Stravinsky, who at 75 may be justifiably termed an old master, has tried more different approaches than any living composer of his stature. He remains an amazing figure. For in the "Canticum Sacrum," which had its first performance in the East at Thursday's concert, he continues to be eager and youthful in his exploration of compositional devices.

The "Canticum Sacrum," which was written last year for the Venice Festival and which had its American première in Los Angeles last month, employs the twelve-tone technique. But Stravinsky could not touch any technique without placing the imprint of his own personality on it. In this work based on a sacred text he has given the serial technique an individual cast. He does not use it throughout the piece. And when he does, his ideas come closer to those of Webern than of any other dodecaphonist.

•

The writing is spare in texture. Violins, 'cellos, clarinets and horns are dispensed with. The instruments remaining in the orchestra are treated with the greatest economy. A few notes here, a short phrase there, but only rarely massed instrumental blocks. The chorus has impressive sections at the beginning and end, with the latter section employing the material of the former in retrograde motion. The baritone and tenor soloists are woven into the work with subtlety of design.

•

This nineteen-minute work is difficult to play and difficult to absorb. After conducting the piece, Mr. Stokowski suggested to the audience that in view of the music's complexity, a second hearing might help to make it clearer. He asked whether the listeners would like a repeat performance. The applause encouraged him to go ahead.

•

After these successive performances a woman was heard to say, "That was a good idea, I liked it better the second time." On the other hand, a young man remarked "It was as bad the second time as the first."

To this listener the "Canticum Sacrum" seemed a significant work. There is a searching expressive content in it. The idiom is austere on the surface, but underneath there is a touching, devotional mood. Mr. Stravinsky seems to reach special heights in his works on religious themes; witness the Symphony of Psalms and the Mass.

•

Mr. Stokowski conducted both performances with sovereign control and sympathy. The Symphony of the Air played well, and the American Concert Choir did a good job. Philip Maero, baritone, and Rudolf Petrak, tenor, sang the difficult solo parts effectively.

In Orff's "Carmina Burana" the soloists were joined by Ellen Faull, soprano, who sang with sensitivity and delicacy of nuance. Mr. Stokowski gave this work with its almost overwhelming emphasis on rhythm a vital colorful performance. But brilliant as it was, it could not conceal the limitations of Orff's musical philosophy.

Igor Stravinsky

The Program

EMPIRE STATE FESTIVAL Symphony of the Air, American Concert Choir; Rudolf Petrak, tenor; Philip Maero, baritone; Ellen Faull, soprano; Leopold Stokowski, conducting. At Ellenville, N. Y.

Canticum Sacrum ..... Stravinsky
Carmina Burana ..... Carl Orff

Mon., July 22, 1957-9
New York Journal-American

MUSIC

I. Stern Solo Tops Festival

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 22.—Some 27,490 people attended the Tchaikowsky-Stravinsky weekend of the Berkshire Festival. For the final program in the music shed yesterday afternoon, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony played the Tchaikowsky "Romeo and Juliet" and the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

Interest centered, however, in the performance of Stravinsky's most recent work "Canticum Sacrum," heard for the first time in the East at Ellenville, N. Y., last Thursday.

That the "Canticum Sacrum" sounded more sacred and less dramatic on this occasion may be attributed to Munch's acceptance of it as a liturgical work.

This approach shifted certain balances, thus giving the work somewhat different values.

Little Effect

This change neither enhanced nor lessened the effect of the music; it remained something to admire for its craftsmanship rather than for its impact. The honor accorded St. Mark in this piece thus becomes more a matter of respect than of fervor.

In this performance, the chorus functioned less forcefully than the soloists. Both John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, gave excellent accounts of their roles. If the orchestra felt about it as indifferently as the final note sounded, then it had many in agreement with its point of view. Audience applause was polite.

On one of the Berkshires' hottest afternoons, the orchestra played Tchaikovsky well. It worked up gradually to ardor in the "Romeo and Juliet" and held its own in concerto, but this was not one of its superb moments.

Stern Poised, Lyrical

Stern gave a poised, lyrical account of the concerto. His singing tone soared in sweetness if it did not work up into brilliance. When the orchestra played full tilt, his violin sounded in the minority.

Why the racetrack pace in the finale was necessary remains one of those perplexing elements in concerts these days.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Saturday night concert, attended by 11,000. How Mendelssohn's "Hebrides" overture slipped into the program is a mystery. Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony kept the weekend programs in line.

Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps" highlighted the evening both as one of the composer's unquestioned masterpieces and as one of the conductor's, also. It was the only work of his to give him full stature at these concerts.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
JUL 22 1957

C597

Concerts at Tanglewood

Recent Score From Pen Of Stravinsky

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

A fine study in contrast was offered this past weekend when Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux programed works by Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky for the third week of the current Berkshire Festival. With the first two weekends devoted to chamber works and chamber orchestra music by Bach and Mozart, the concerts Friday, Saturday, and Sunday marked the opening of four weeks of music by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It was most appropriate that Stravinsky be chosen to represent the modern school this past weekend. June 17 marked the composer's 75th birthday, and to him is given the credit for the beginning of a new era in music with the performance of "Le Sacre du Printemps" in Paris on May 29, 1913.

Mr. Monteux revived the memory of that historic occasion Saturday night when he led "Le Sacre," a work that he conducted in its 1913 première before a scandalized and unruly audience. Now, of course, "Le Sacre" is considered a classic, and the demonstrations after its performances are entirely favorable.

• • •

Mr. Munch opened the Friday program with "Jeu de Cartes," a "Ballet in Three Deals" composed by Stravinsky in 1937. This is a clever and amusing piece—downright funny, in fact, where the composer suddenly interpolates Bizet's famous addition to examples of musical card playing. The performance was splendid, with the conductor at the top of his form and the orchestra responding with precision.

This high standard of performance was continued with the Tchaikovsky Variations on a Rococo Theme for Violoncello, Op. 33, in which the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, played superbly while aided by Mr. Munch's masterly accompaniment. This was the first performance in the United States of the work as Tchaikovsky originally conceived it. Before 1956 the Variations, both with piano and orchestral accompaniment, had been performed in a version as revised by a Russian cellist and friend of Tchaikovsky, Wilhelm Fitzenhagen, to whom the work was dedicated.

• • •

Fitzenhagen's changes were not too extensive, involving a rearrangement in the order of the variations, a dropping of one variation, and a few slight alterations in the solo parts. Both versions are ingratiating and charming, but it was good to hear the piece as originally written, especially under circumstances that justly resulted in an ovation for soloist, conductor, and players.

A vibrant and moving reading of the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 6 brought this splendid concert to a close.

History has shown the fate of critics who have reported adversely on Stravinsky premières—they have always been proved wrong. Perhaps this is another such occasion, but candor forces the conclusion that one of the master's latest works is in some ways a most disagreeable piece.

Receiving its first performance in the East, the "Canticum Sacrum ad Honorem Sancti Marci Nominis" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra, combines some beautiful vocal writing with what on first hearing appeared to be some weird inexplicable orchestral accompaniment. If a composer had wished to make a parody, perhaps the same mélange of grunts, groans, squeaks, brays, and snorts might have been the result. From the opening weird effects to the final orchestral cough, one was hard put to follow the composer's thread of thought.

• • •

There can be nothing but praise for the performance itself, with fine singing by John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, and with the Festival Chorus splendidly trained for the work by Hugh Ross. Vocally, the work is entirely appropriate to its dedication to Venice and to its patron, St. Mark, and to the text taken from Mark, the Song of Songs, Psalms, Deuteronomy, and the first Epistle of St. John. But one wonders what the Venetians really thought of the odd accompaniment when it was given its première there last year.

Mr. Munch and his men performed some heroic feats during the reading, but the excellence of the playing could not reconcile the audience to the strangeness of the work, and there was but scattered and faint applause at the end.

The hearers, however, had plenty to make them happy with Mr. Munch's forceful interpretation of the opening "Romeo and Juliet" Overture by Tchaikovsky and the same composer's Violin Concerto, magnificently performed by Isaac Stern, which brought the concert and weekend to a close.

SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Monday, July 22, 1957

Berkshire Festival Pleases

By [illegible] VAN WORMER

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass.—The past week-end's Berkshire Festival concerts in the shed attracted large audiences to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra perform three programs.

Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the orchestra and the Berkshire Festival, conducted Friday night and yesterday afternoon; Pierre Monteux led the orchestra Saturday.

Yesterady marked the annual memorial to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for many years leader of the Boston. The program comprised works by Tschaikowsky and Stravinsky.

Romeo and Juliet

The atmosphere of tension and hostility between the houses of Montagu and Capulet and the love scenes of those star-crossed lovers, Romeo and Juliet was brought to attention in Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture Fantasia. In this Dr. Munch and his men produced some fine effects with a magnificent climax with the song of Romeo in massive chords.

Isaac Stern, internationally known concert violinst, was soloist in Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto in D. Major Opus 35 with orchestra. The three movements provided memorable music.

Sterns' bownig and fingering was superb musicianship. His instrument fairly sang runs in several passages, notably in the andante movement.

Igr Stravinsky was represented in the program by his "Canticum Sacrum" (sacred canticle in honor of Saint Mark. This was performed for the first time in Tanglewood and for the second time in the East. (It was presented recentl yin the Empire State Festival in Ellenville).

Lower Strings Only

In additon to the orchestra, the Fetsival chorus and soloists, the canticle, of 17 minutes' duration, calls for the lower strings only, a full contingent of winds, clarinets exceptede, and the prgan and solo voices (tenor and baritone).

The dedication is to the city of Venice, [illegible] tenor and baritone, [illegible] with trombones. The verses are different Psalm texts [illegible] excerpts from the Gospels [illegible] Latin.

There is no doubt that the listener must be exposed to this Stravinsky piece, for a number of times before grasping its full import. Also, performers have a difficult task with this literature, [illegible] efforts of the offering are to have great appeal with many, rather [illegible] with the few.

[illegible] Applause

There was generous applause for Dr. Munch and the performers at the conclusion of the canticle. Returning to the stage a second time, with the soloists Johnn McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, baritone, Dr. Munch also shared applause with Hugh Ross, director of the festival chorus, who prepared the singers for the concert, and with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist of the orchestra. She is remembered in Syracuse for solo appearance last fall with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert in Central High School [illegible] "TMHTHTH [illegible] Next Saturday morning there will be an open rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in [illegible] Joseph Di Pasquale, [illegible] be soloist at next [illegible]'s Pewival concert. [illegible] chorus will appear [illegible] Saturday night. Dr. Munch [illegible] duct both programs. Pierre Monteux, now past the four score mark, will conduct, next Sunday afternoon, "Tanglewood on Parade" featuring the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conducting, is set for [illegible]rday, Aug. 3.

[160]

Boston Symphony [illegible] Season at Lenox

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

Ballet music, "Card Game" or "Jeu de Cartes, Ballet en trois Donnes" by Igor Stravinsky, the Tchaikovsky "Symphony number 6 'Pathetique,'" and his "Variations on a Rococo Theme for Violoncello with Orchestral Accompaniment" made up the opening program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of this year's Shed Series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* *

CHARLES MUNCH conducted the prorgam on Friday evening with Samuel Mayes appearing as soloist in the Tchaikovsky variations, played for the first time in this country as restored to their original form and newly published in Moscow.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Saturday evening program and Dr. Munch conducted yesterday afternoon. Music for the weekend emphasized Tchaikovsky and paid special tribute to Stravinsky who is celebrating his 75th birthday this year. The Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and sololsts was featured yesterday afternoon and his "Rite of Spring" on Saturday night.

* * *

ISAAC STERN, violinist, was soloist in the Tchaikovsky "Violin Concerto" yesterday and the Tchaikovsky on the Saturday evening program was the "Symphony number 5."

We attended the Friday evening program particularly to hear the "Cello Variations" and the Stravinsky "Card Game."

The "Rococo Variations" were written by Tchaikovsky in December, 1876, and first performed by Wilhelm Karl Friedrich Fritzenhagen on Nov. 18, 1877, at a concert of the Imperial Music Society in Moscow under the direction of Nicholas Rubinstein. They were not published in full [illegible] until 1889.

* * *

MAYES GAVE the work a masterful performance that was a delight to hear and to see. The orchestra, a predominantly string and woodwind group in this number, plays around the solo instrument without ever detracting from its sonority. A brilliant solo piece, its many variations include some of the finest solo cello writing we've heard anywhere. The variations are in the grand manner but first and foremost are music with a meaning—not just a vehicle for technical display — although plenty of that is included.

* * *

STRAVINSKY'S "Card Game" was written for the American Ballet in 1937. The thematic material is lively in action and the music is fanciful and humorous, often with a sardonic twist.

Its "first deal" includes an "Introduction," "Pas d'action," "Dance of the Joker" and "Little Waltz." The "Second Deal' is an "introduction," "March," "Variations of the four Queens," "Variation of the Jack of Hearts and Coda" and "March and Ensemble." The "Third Deal" includes an "Introduction," "Waltz - Minuet," "Presto (Combat between Spades and Hearts)" and "Final Dance (Triumph of the Hearts)." It is played without interruption.

Both the Stravinsky "Card Game" and the Tchaikovsky "Var- [illegible]" were received with enthusiasm by the huge audience and Mayes was given an ovation for his performance in the variations.

* * *

BUT THE WORK which drew the warmest appreciation was the "Symphony Pathetique" played as the final portion of the program.

Dr. Munch gave the music a full realization of its magnificence and its tragic elements as well as full power to its moments of joy. In writing of the symphony which he originally intended to call "A Program Symphony" Tchaikovsky stated "the program is of a kind which remains an enigma to all—let them guess it who can."

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

JUL 20 1957

Listening Pleasant At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox Mass., —With a somewhat sparse house but a full complement of campers upon the cool, dark lawn, the main concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival got under way at the big shed here tonight.

Honors were divided as Charles Munch took the Boston Symphony Orchestra through a program of mingled modern and traditional music. Though in the new plan of devoting each weekend primarily to one composer, this was Tschaikowsky's big moment, the concert actually began with Igor Stravinskys "Jeux de Cartes." The reason, Mr. Stravinsky's seventy fifth anniversary.

Pleasant Listening

However, it was pleasnat to hear this piquant and prancy work again, and, I must say, without the dancers. One seldom gets a clear shot at the music during a ballet performance. Naturally, the dancers are the main show. Then, the orchestras are seldom up to symphonic par. And beyond that, the score is generally tempered to the balletic needs of the occasion.

But though the symphonic performance of a ballet score leaves some thing pictorially missing, still one studies and hears the score itself to better advantage. "Jeux de Cartes" combines some of the most characteristic and attractive aspects of Mr. Stavinskys protean writing. It is whipped up of touches of jazz, sweet melodies, the use of instruments in "combo" fashion as in "Renard" or "[illegible]ie", some spacious writing [illegible] full orchestra, and the whole, wonderful rhythmic business and unusual timbres that are at the heart of the Stravinsky style.

Tonights performance showed certain vagaries of reading and some rather studied playing. Mr. Munch did not press the score for all its brilliance, and the orchestra kept their noses fairly well glued to the pages of the music. However, toward the close, the interpretation and the playing both caught fire, and the performance ended with a proper zest.

The Tschaikowsky works included the Rococo Variations for Cello and the Sixth Symphony. Samuel Mayes, first cello of the Boston Symphony, filled the soloists shoes and won a complete ovation from the audience. Mr. Mayes has frequently demonstrated that he is one of the country's most brilliant cellists and on this occasion he did himself proud. The music itself is not much, a combination of ornatenes for the solo instrument and otherwise a great deal of syrup.

End Result Exciting

But Mr. Mayes took all the filigree with such virtuosity, and the more sustained lyricism with such richness of tone, that the end result was exciting for the sheer doing. Mr. Mayes was reported in advance to have put the score back into its original arrangement, something never before heard in this country. He's not proving it by me, for the Rococo Variations are not favorite enough with this correspondent to give them that close study.

What I was able to hear o the Sixth Symphony, from a poin of no special vantage on the lawn, sounded well played and somewhat subdued in temper. I was not particularly impassioned but rather on the reflective side To some, this will be an improvement on the more tearfu kind of Tschaikowsky, to others it may have been pallid. I personally can take it either way. It seemed good to be hearing the Sixth again on a star-studded night at Tanglewood, played with all the poise the Boston Symphony can muster, and the essential grandeur of the work was satisfying, regardless of the degree of emotional temperature for the decibel scale.

—T.H.P.

Sunday Republic
SPRINGFIELD, M
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 28 1957

Second Thou

Boston Sy ttracts

st Week End in cial Success;
tive Performa

y WILLARD M. CL nox, July 27—The fi of the concerts in th
by the Boston Sy estra, conducted by h and Pierre Monte artistic and presum
al success with mo persons attending t
rts. The orchestra form this summer
ams, devoted to w ikowsky and Stravi
oth familiar and

For Small Orches
75th anniversary
y has resulted in a
amount of his musi
d in many parts and the Berkshire F
one its share. Mr.
cted his ballet "
" and his lates icum Sacrum," wh ux conducted the e du Printemps."
as the religious
City of Venice, nam icum Sacrum" a work we have not
, it was thoroughly
ng. It is scored for tra with the darke
ments predominati
tral part is meagre ngular. The chorus s pts to sing music th
pice unmercifully
and baritone soloists
John McCollum and
m, can only be admi
ay they sang their teful as it was. The d into five parts, m ve domes of St. Mar
l. The scritural tex tin. Mr. Munch is t nted on his courage
ng the work and his ng of the details. It ful that the work will in the regular reper
as just 43 years
Monteux conducte
erformance of Stravi
"Le Sacre Du Print
ris. He tells us he had is life when it was Sunday at 82-years o nducted it again. The deepened his underst
s colossal composition was a difinitive
by one of the w st orchestras. The gave Mr. Monteux ne demanded. It was nce to be treasured in ry.

Exciting Work

Munch did Mr. Stra service as he condu
vuished performance
ballet "Je de Carte allet the dancers a
with the joker, th
naker. The work is e purely instrumental is more than can b
r ballet music.
lighting the Tschai
was the superb of first cellis
of the "Variations
Theme for cello a
." The work was for the first time
in its original fo displayed his trem
al abilities and ship. The variatio
in mood and treme
. What a stunnin

MUSIC

Lowell Sun 7/27

Berkshire Music Festival Scores Another Triumph

By ALFRED E. BURKE

TANGLEWOOD—Another Berkshire Festival, top week-end, was recorded last Saturday and Sunday, by Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch. Saturday, featured music by Mendelssohn, Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. Sunday listed Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

As a variation from Saturday, Sunday's program gained a highlight, in the presence of the brilliant violinist, Isaac Stern. It seemed that, despite the excellence of every part of both programs, the performance of the violinist somewhat eclipsed the remaining portions.

It is really a privilege to witness Pierre Monteux in performance. His ability, so trademarked in its simplicity of physical effort, leaves one actually spellbound. Here, in our time, is a musical great, whose presence would have been a gracing factor in any age of musical history.

He seems to treat the works of various composers, in a way that permits one to easily grasp the intent of the score's originator. This was most apparent in the Stravinsky, "Le Sacre du Printemps."

This music is a far better creation than the "Canticum Sacrum," heard on Sunday. The school this composer represents, has definite value. However, it remained for the latter composition to display the glaring faults he possesses in his vocal writing.

It is simple for one to accept his work by saying that he seeks certain effects. On the other hand, one easily finds much the same effect through a correct vocal line, especially in the Italian school.

Getting back to the program conducted by Monteux, and the Mendelssohn, "The Hebrides," and Tchaikovsky's, "Symphony No. 5," one found established, an evening of never ending brilliance, whose whole structure was encased in setting of musical gems.

On Sunday, Dr. Munch opened his program with the Tchaikovsky "Romeo and Juliet" overture. Here was an occasion of orchestral achievement. Possibly at no time in his wonderful career, has this superb musician gained more.

We have felt that this season has been his best. If never before had one desired to express this, there could be no other opinion offered, after these moments of musical splendor.

The final passages of percussion, that always hold an audience, seemed to be more impressive than ever. The greatest of tributes, a pause after the final note has sounded, and then the applauce, has never been better earned.

The fine Festival chorus, and the soloists, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, had very little to work with in the Stravinsky. If one felt that the work held anything up for praise, this might be found in the organ passages that entered into the picture, time and again.

Turning to the "D major Concerto," those in attendance certainly received a lion's share of a great day at a musical festival. Isaac Stern is a gracious, gifted and technically sound master of the instrument. We desire tonal quality in either a vocalist or instrumentalist. Isaac Stern certainly enthralls his listeners with this element.

Aside from his playing, which to us was truly an achievement, the orchestra cloaked itself in glory. The wonderful harmonic and tonal schemes of the composer, were accorded their full substance.

Each movement unfolded with interpretative expression, and technical wizardry. On one or two occasions, one felt that some part or other crowded another, but what performance ever walks free of this?

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 25 1957

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD
Friday, July 19, 1957
By G. F. C.

This weekend's series of concerts in the Shed at Tanglewood were devoted principally to the works of Tschaikovsky and Stravinsky. Friday's performance opened with the latter's Card Game, a Ballet in Three Deals. Mr. Munch conducted the work with great vivacity and humor, and maintained admirable clarity in the rather large orchestra. The woodwinds, which Stravinsky so often employs for pungent satirical accents, should be particularly praised for the brilliance of their playing.

Samuel Mayes, the first cellist of the Boston Symphony, joined his orchestra as soloist in the Variations on a Rococo Theme for Violon-cello with Orchestral Accompaniment, op. 33 by Tchaikovsky. The work is attractive, though somewhat lacking in substance, and a spectacular show piece for the cello. Mr. Mayes played with brilliant virtuosity as well as with a perfect sense of ensemble with his conductor and orchestra.

The concert was concluded with a somewhat erratic performance of Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony ("Pathetique"). The first movement was extraordinarily well played; Mr. Munch properly stresses the familiar second theme as the chief element of its structure, and this was phrased with a breadth and nobility which redeemed it from its usual stigma of sentimentality. The second movement had a rather breathless, urgent quality which seemed out of keeping with its designation as Allegro con grazia. The last two movements, while brilliantly played on the whole, suffered from Mr. Munch's occasional predilection for sudden violence in the brass and percussion sections. The performance, however, was received with equally explosive enthusiasm.

(Continued on Page 4)

TANGLEWOOD
Saturday Evening, July 20
By C. N. D.

Recognition of Igor Stravinsky's seventy-fifth year was handsomely accorded him by devoting the second half of the Saturday night concert to one of the most controversial artworks of the twentieth century, his Sacre du Printemps. The conductor at Tanglewood last Saturday night was Pierre Monteux, who had conducted the first performance in 1913. Now in his eighty-second year Mr. Monteux' conducting powers are seemingly undiminished.

Parts of Le Sacre du Printemps have become almost idiomatic in describing pulsating primitivism and the work still seems super-charged with energy. Monteux's reading has always been considered the last word in this work and Saturday night's audience was not disagreeing with a single detail of his interpretation. At the end they rose to cheer and to recall again and again the youthful octogenarian who had led the orchestra with such authority.

The first half of the program seemed like a prelude to the Stravinsky piece. It contained the Hebrides Overture of Mendelssohn and Tschaikovsky's Fifth Symphony. In the Symphony there was superb playing of the French horn solo at the beginning of the second movement. On the whole Mr. Monteux held the first three movements down and understated them only to let loose on a final movement that was climactic and full of pageantry.

TANGLEWOOD
Sunday, 21 July
By A. C. S.

The annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky was held Sunday afternoon before an audience of 10,000. Charles Munch selected the most recent sacred choral work of Igor Stravinsky to mark the occasion. Composed in 1955, Canticum Sacrum honors St. Mark, the patron Saint of Venice where it was first performed. The two solo voices were sung in this instance by John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone.

Stravinsky utilizes the twelve-tone system in this composition. With or without text, it is an enigmatic work of vast complexity even though the texture is sparse. Despite the fine singing of the soloists and the Festival Chorus in the difficult parts allotted them, and an obviously thoughtful reading by the conductor, at least one listener wondered whether the seventeen minutes needed for the performance provided either musical enjoyment or spiritual enrichment.

(Continued on Page 15)

A lusty performance of Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture opened the program, and Isaac Stern made the first of a scheduled three appearances as soloist in the composer's Violin Concerto. Mr. Stern displayed his renowned virtuosity in spite of the oppressive heat of the afternoon. Here was playing in the grand manner with a vast palette of tonal color and masterful use of it.

[160]

Boston Symph... Lenox

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

Ballet music, "Card Game" or Jeu de Cartes, Ballet en trois Donnes" by Igor Stravinsky, the Tchaikovsky "Symphony number 6 'Pathetique,'" and his "Variations on a Rococo Theme for Violoncello with Orchestral Accompaniment" made up the opening program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of this year's Shed Series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH conducted the prorgam on Friday evening with Samuel Mayes appearing as soloist in the Tchaikovsky variations, played for the first time in this country as restored to their original form and newly published in Moscow.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Saturday evening program and Dr. Munch conducted yesterday afternoon. Music for the weekend emphasized Tchaikovsky and paid special tribute to Stravinsky who is celebrating his 75th birthday this year. The Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum" for chorus and soloists was featured yesterday afternoon and his "Rite of Spring" on Saturday night.

* * *

ISAAC STERN, violinist, was soloist in the Tchaikovsky "Violin Concerto" yesterday and the Tchaikovsky on the Saturday evening program was the "Symphony number 5."

We attended the Friday evening program particularly to hear the "Cello Variations" and the Stravinsky "Card Game."

The "Rococo Variations" were written by Tchaikovsky in December, 1876, and first performed by Wilhelm Karl Friedrich Fritzenhagen, on Nov. 18, 1877, at a concert of the Imperial Music Society in Moscow under the direction of Nicholas Rubinstein. They were not published in ... until 1889.

* * *

MAYES GAVE the work a masterful performance that was a delight to hear and to see. The orchestra, a predominantly string and woodwind group in this number, plays around the solo instrument without ever detracting from its sonority. A brilliant solo piece, its many variations include some of the finest solo cello writing we've heard anywhere. The variations are in the grand manner, but first and foremost are music with a meaning—not just a vehicle for technical display — although plenty of that is included.

* * *

STRAVINSKY'S "Card Game" was written for the American Ballet in 1937. The thematic material is lively in action and the music is fanciful and humorous, often with a sardonic twist.

The "first deal" includes an "Introduction," "Pas d'action," "Dance of the Joker" and "Little Waltz." The "Second Deal" is an "introduction," "March," "Variations of the four Queens," "Variations of the Jack of Hearts and Coda" and "March and Ensemble." The "Third Deal" includes an "Introduction," "Waltz - Minuet," "Presto (Combat between Spades and Hearts)" and "Final Dance (Triumph of the Hearts)." It is played without interruption.

Both the Stravinsky "Card Game" and the Tchaikovsky "Var... were received with enthusiasm by the huge audience, and Mayes was given an ovation for his performance in the variations.

* * *

BUT THE WORK which drew the warmest appreciation was the "Symphony Pathetique" played as the final portion of the program.

Dr. Munch gave the music a full realization of its magnificence and its tragic elements as well as full power to its moments of joy. In writing of the symphony which he originally intended to call "A Program Symphony" Tchaikovsky stated "the program is of a kind which remains an enigma to all—let them guess it who can."

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

JUL 20 1957

Listening Pleasant At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox Mass., —With a somewhat sparse house but a full complement of campers upon the cool, dark lawn, the main concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival got under way at the big shed here tonight.

Honors were divided as Charles Munch took the Boston Symphony Orchestra through a program of mingled modern and traditional music. Though in the new plan of devoting each weekend primarily to one composer, this was Tschaikowsky's big moment, the concert actually began with Igor Stravinskys "Jeux de Cartes." The reason, Mr. Stravinsky's seventy fifth anniversary.

Pleasant Listening

However, it was pleasnat to hear this piquant and prancy work again, and, I must say, without the dancers. One seldom gets a clear shot at the music during a ballet performance. Naturally, the dancers are the main show; Then, the orchestras are seldom up to symphonic par. And beyond that, the score is generally tempered to the balletic needs of the occasion.

But though the symphonic performance of a ballet score leaves some thing pictorially missing, still one studies and hears the score itself to better advantage. "Jeux de Cartes" combines some of the most characteristic and attractive aspects of Mr. Stavinskys protean writing. It is whipped up of touches of jazz, sweet melodies, the use of instruments in "combo" fashion as in "Renard" or "Histoire", some spacious writing ... full orchestra, and the whole, wonderful rhythmic business and unusual timbres that are at the heart of the Stravinsky style.

Tonights performance showed certain vagaries of reading and some rather studied playing. Mr. Munch did not press the score for all its brilliance, and the orchestra kept their noses fairly well glued to the pages of the music. However, toward the close, the interpretation and the playing both caught fire, and the performance ended with a proper zest.

The Tschaikowsky works included the Rococo Variations for Cello and the Sixth Symphony. Samuel Mayes, first cello of the Boston Symphony, filled the soloists shoes and won a complete ovation from the audience. Mr. Mayes has frequently demonstrated that he is one of the country's most brilliant cellists and on this occasion he did himself proud. The music itself is not much, a combination of ornatenes for the solo instrument and otherwise a great deal of syrup.

End Result Exciting

But Mr. Mayes took all the filigree with such virtuosity, and the more sustained lyricism with such richness of tone, that the end result was exciting for the sheer doing. Mr. Mayes was reported in advance to have put the score back into its original arrangement, something never before heard in this country. He's not proving it by me, for the Rococo Variations are not favorite enough with this correspondent to give them that close study.

What I was able to hear o... the Sixth Symphony, from a point of no special vantage on the lawn, sounded well played and somewhat subdued in temper. It was not particularly impassioned but rather on the reflective side. To some, this will be an improvement on the more tearful kind of Tschaikowsky, to others it may have been pallid. I personally can take it either way. It seemed good to be hearing the Sixth again on a star-studded night at Tanglewood, played with all the poise the Boston Symphony can muster, and the essential grandeur of the work was satisfying, regardless of the degree of emotional temperature for the decibel scale.

—T.H.P.

MUSIC

Lowell Sun 7/27

Berkshire Music Festival Scores Another Triumph

By ALFRED E. BURKE

TANGLEWOOD—Another Berkshire Festival, top week-end, was recorded last Saturday and Sunday, by Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch. Saturday, featured music by Mendelssohn, Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky. Sunday listed Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

As a variation from Saturday, Sunday's program gained a highlight, in the presence of the brilliant violinist, Isaac Stern. It seemed that, despite the excellence of every part of both programs, the performance of the violinist somewhat eclipsed the remaining portions.

It is really a privilege to witness Pierre Monteux in performance. His ability, so trademarked in its simplicity of physical effort, leaves one actually spellbound. Here, in our time, is a musician great, whose presence would have been a gracing factor in any age of musical history.

He seems to treat the works of various composers, in a way that permits one to easily grasp the intent of the score's originator. This was most apparent in the Stravinsky, "Le Sacre du Printemps."

This music was far better creation than the "Canticum Sacrum," heard on Sunday. The school this composer represents, has definite value. However, it remained for the latter composition to display the glaring faults he possesses in his vocal writing.

It is simple for one to accept his work by saying that he seeks certain effects. On the other hand, one easily finds much the same effect through a correct vocal line, especially in the Italian school.

Getting back to the program conducted by Monteux, and the Mendelssohn, "The Hebrides," and Tchaikovsky's, "Symphony No. 5," one found established, an evening of never ending brilliance, whose whole structure was encased in setting of musical gems.

On Sunday, Dr. Munch opened his program with the Tchaikovsky "Romeo and Juliet" overture. Here was an occasion of orchestral achievement. Possibly at no time in his wonderful career, has this superb musician gained more.

We have felt that this season has been his best. If never before had one desired to express this, there could be no other opinion offered, after these moments of musical splendor.

The final passages of percussion, that always hold an audience, seemed to be more impressive than ever. The greatest of tributes, a pause after the final note has sounded, and then the applauce, has never been better earned.

The fine Festival chorus, and the soloists, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, had very little to work with in the Stravinsky. If one felt that the work held anything up for praise, this might be found in the organ passages that entered into the picture, time and again.

Turning to the "D major Concerto," those in attendance certainly received a lion's share of a great day at a musical festival. Isaac Stern is a gracious, gifted and technically sound master of the instrument. We desire tonal quality in either a vocalist or instrumentalist. Isaac Stern certainly enthralls his listeners with this element.

Aside from his playing, which to us was truly an achievement, the orchestra cloaked itself in glory. The wonderful harmonic and tonal schemes of the composer, were accorded their full substance.

Each movement unfolded with interpretative expression, and technical wizardry. On one or two occasions, one felt that some part or other crowded another, but what performance ever walks free of this?

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 25 1957

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD
Friday, July 19, 1957
By G. F. C.

This weekend's series of concerts in the Shed at Tanglewood were devoted principally to the works of Tschaikovsky and Stravinsky. Friday's performance opened with the latter's Card Game, a Ballet in Three Deals. Mr. Munch conducted the work with great vivacity and humor, and maintained admirable clarity in the rather large orchestra. The woodwinds, which Stravinsky so often employs for pungent satirical accents, should be particularly praised for the brilliance of their playing.

Samuel Mayes, the first cellist of the Boston Symphony, joined his orchestra as soloist in the Variations on a Rococo Theme for Violon-cello with Orchestral Accompaniment, op. 33 by Tchaikovsky. The work is attractive, though somewhat lacking in substance, and a spectacular show piece for the cello. Mr. Mayes played with brilliant virtuosity as well as with a perfect sense of ensemble with his conductor and orchestra.

The concert was concluded with a somewhat erratic performance of Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony ("Pathetique"). The first movement was extraordinarily well played; Mr. Munch properly stresses the familiar second theme as the chief element of its structure, and this was phrased with a breadth and nobility which redeemed it from its usual stigma of sentimentality. The second movement had a rather breathless, urgent quality which seemed out of keeping with its designation as Allegro con grazia. The last two movements, while brilliantly played on the whole, suffered from Mr. Munch's occasional predilection for sudden violence in the brass and percussion sections. The performance, however, was received with equally explosive enthusiasm.

TANGLEWOOD
Saturday Evening, July 20
By C. N. D.

Recognition of Igor Stravinsky's seventy-fifth year was handsomely accorded him by devoting the second half of the Saturday night concert to one of the most controversial artworks of the twentieth century, his Sacre du Printemps. The conductor at Tanglewood last

(Continued on Page 4)

Saturday night was Pierre Monteux, who had conducted the first performance in 1913. Now in his eighty-second year Mr. Monteux' conducting powers are seemingly undiminished.

Parts of Le Sacre du Printemps have become almost idiomatic in describing pulsating primitivism and the work still seems super-charged with energy. Monteux's reading has always been considered the last word in this work and Saturday night's audience was not disagreeing with a single detail of his interpretation. At the end they rose to cheer and to recall again and again the youthful octogenarian who had led the orchestra with such authority.

The first half of the program seemed like a prelude to the Stravinsky piece. It contained the Hebrides Overture of Mendelssohn and Tschaikovsky's Fifth Symphony. In the Symphony there was superb playing of the French horn solo at the beginning of the second movement. On the whole Mr. Monteux held the first three movements down and understated them only to let loose on a final movement that was climactic and full of pageantry.

TANGLEWOOD
Sunday, 21 July
By A. C. S.

The annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky was held Sunday afternoon before an audience of 10,000. Charles Munch selected the most recent sacred choral work of Igor Stravinsky to mark the occasion. Composed in 1955, Canticum Sacrum honors St. Mark, the patron Saint of Venice where it was first performed. The two solo voices were sung in this instance by John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone.

Stravinsky utilizes the twelve-tone system in this composition. With or without text, it is an enigmatic work of vast complexity even though the texture is sparse. Despite the fine singing of the soloists and the Festival Chorus in the difficult parts allotted them, and an obviously thoughtful reading by the conductor, at least one listener wondered whether the seventeen minutes needed for the performance provided either musical enjoyment or spiritual enrichment.

A lusty performance of Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture opened the program, and Isaac Stern made the first of a scheduled three appearances as soloist in the composer's Violin Concerto. Mr. Stern displayed his renowned virtuosity in spite of the oppressive heat of the afternoon. Here was playing in the grand manner with a vast palette of tonal color and masterful use of it.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
JUL 28 1957

Second Thoughts On Music

Boston Symphony Orchestra Attracts Many to Concerts

First Week End in Music Shed Was Artistic, Financial Success; Pierre Monteux Conducts Difinitive Performance of Stravinsky's Ballet

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 27—The first week end of the concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, was and artistic and presumably financial success with more than 27,000 persons attending the three concerts. The orchestra is in great form this summer and the programs, devoted to works of Tschaikowsky and Stravinsky offer both familiar and exciting works.

For Small Orchestra

The 75th anniversary of Stravinsky has resulted in a tremendous amount of his music being played in many parts of the world and the Berkshire Festival has done its share. Mr. Munch conducted his ballet "Jeu de Cartes" and his latest work "Canticum Sacrum," while Mr. Monteux conducted the famous "Sacre du Printemps." The novelty was the religious dedicated to the City of Venice, namely the "Canticum Sacrum" and an uglier work we have not heard. To us, it was thoroughly unrewarding. It is scored for a small orchestra with the darker hued instruments predominating. The orchestral part is meagre, stark and angular. The chorus sings, or attempts to sing music that taxes the voice unmercifully and the tenor and baritone soloists, in this case John McCollum and Donald Gramm, can only be admired for the way they sang their music, ungrateful as it was. The work is divided into five parts, matching the five domes of St. Mark's Cathedral. The scritural texts are in Latin. Mr. Munch is to complimented on his courage in programing the work and his superb handling of the details. It seems doubtful that the work will find a place in the regular repertory.

It was just 43 years ago that Pierre Monteux conducted the first performance of Stravinsky's ballet "Le Sacre Du Printemps" in Paris. He tells us he had to run for his life when it was over. Last Sunday at 82-years of age, he conducted it again. The years have deepened his understanding of this colossal composition. The result was a difinitive performance by one of the world's greatest orchestras. The musicians gave Mr. Monteux everything he demanded. It was a performance to be treasured in one's memory.

Exciting Work

Mr. Munch did Mr. Stravinsky a real service as he conducted a distunguished performance of another ballet "Je de Cartes." In this ballet the dancers are the cards, with the joker, the mischief-maker. The work is exciting in its purely instrumental form, which is more than can be said of other ballet music.

Highlighting the Tschaikowsky works, was the superb performance of first cellist Samuel Mayes of the "Variations on a Rococo Theme for cello and orchestra." The work was being heard for the first time in this country in its original form. Mr. Mayes displayed his tremendous technical abilities and his fine scholarship. The variations are varied in mood and tremendously exciting. What a stunning performance of the Dvorak cello concerto, this young man could provide.

Mr. Munch also provided a highly vitalized performance of the "Pathetique" symphony, while Mr. Monteux chose to bring us a lovely performance of the "Symphony No. 5."

Student Orchestra

The Berkshire Music Center School has a very fine orchestra this summer. Indeed, it must be a joy to work with these young men and women. We heard a most musical performance of Mozart's "Concerto in G major, No. 4" by a young Israelie student, David Lein. The tone was ingratiating and the reading sensitive. A student conductor, Myn Morris, revealed real talent directing the work.

An extremely fine performance of the second symphony of Sibelius was provided under the direction of Eleazar de Carvallo, who, with Seymour Lipkin, heads the student orchestra department. Gustav Meier, a young man from Switzerland, provided exciting moments during his direction of "Bachianas Brasileiras, No. 2" by Villa-Lobos.

Fromm Concert

The first of two concerts of contemporary chamber music provided by the Fromm Music Foundation was highlighted by the magnificent singing of soprano Patricia Neway. Accompanied by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, Louise Vosgerchian, piano and Samuel Mayes, cellist, Miss Neway sang the "Chansons Madecasses," as we have never heard them sung before. Her voice is individual, not always beautiful in quality, but she has a superb dramatic instinct and a fine musicality. Every word was appropriately colored and her range of dynamics seemed limitless. She also sand a "Suite for Soprano and Voice" by Villa-Lobos. This work is jungle music, torrid, demanding and treacherous musically. Ruth Posselt, one of the finest interpreters of contemporary music for the violin, collaborated perfectly with Miss Neway. The soprano was at her very best in this work, able to negotiate its difficulties and project its spirit.

Miss Posselt and Miss Vosgerchian provided a fine performance of Bartok's "Sonata No 2 for Violin and Piano." This is a work that one likes better at each hearing. Composer Irving Fine was on hand to hear his "Fantasia for String Trio" finely performed by Messers, George Zazofsky, Joseph de Pasquale and Samuel Mayes. Written this year, the trio has a deal of charm, for Mr. Fine has not forgotten that music can have melody.

Stern in Tschaikowsky

A very special word should be noted on Issac Stern's wonderful performance of Tschaikowsky's violin concerto. Now at the height of his powers Mr. Stern has every he did. The orchestral collaboratioo under Mr. Munch was perfection. Stern will be heard later in the Beethoven and Brahms violin concertos.

News (m)
BANGOR, SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, MONDAY, JULY 22, 1957
Independent
Circ. 71,105
JUL 26 19..
LEBANON NEWS-TIMES
Circ. D. 22,541
JUL 26 1957
ASBURY PARK, N. J.
RECORD
Circ. D. 15,324
JUL 26 1957
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
STATES
Circ. D. 102,216
JUL 29 1957

George Sokolsky

Stravinsky, Who Wrote 'Le Sacre du Printemps,' May Be Prophet Of Right In His Dissonant Music

More and more the summer festival becomes not only a musical treat but also a fashion. And each year, it increases in number and variety. The Shakespeare festivals in Stratford, Conn., and in Canada, are unfolding the virtues of the Bard to generations that have not known the great actors of the 19th Century up to 1912, whose careers in the theater reached their glory when Hamlet or Juliet was achieved. Who, who ever heard them, can forget Sothern and Marlowe or Ellen Terry or Richard Mansfield?

Today, there is a resurgence of the live theater, as it is called in contrast with movies and television, and actors and actresses who are accustomed to the fabulous salaries which these commercial media are willing to pay, turn to "off Broadway" or "on Broadway" or even summer stock to be themselves and not the shadow of a director or even a banker who has sunk his money in a tin-can full of film.

So the summer stock companies proliferate all over the United States in out-of-the-way places where it is possible to play without paying so much for stage hands and stand-ins and similar exorbitantly paid personages, who add little to the show but "on Broadway" can close the theater down and end the career of author and actor.

The music festival is also proliferating, but it involves much more than the theater, for a symphony orchestra consists of at least a hundred persons, not including guest conductors and choruses. It takes considerable organization and housing to move such an army about.

TANGLEWOOD IS INSTITUTION

I usually go to the summer festival at Tanglewood which is now a hoary institution on the road in Lenox, Mass., where Hawthorne wrote his "Tanglewood Tales" and not far from the Stockbridge of the Sedgwicks and the Pittsfield of Oliver Wendell Holmes, the elder, he who wrote of the breakfast table as his son wroe decisions for the courts.

The Berkshires have long possessed an atmosphere of American culture and Tanglewood sits in the midst of it, quite properly not merely an orchestral performance for the cognoscenti, which used to be a New England word for those of great knowledge and taste who could list Brahms before recordings made him a hou problem, but also a school for the young an bitious, many of whom have already proved virtues and their virtuosity.

It is a lovely grove where one sits and l This year, there is much Tchaikovsky and vinsky, the former being easy to take ev those whose main musical treat is the radio latter still being a bit of a problem to many wonder why he has to make so much noise over the point that when the Earth was crea was done by things banging into others. can be frightfully noisy, particularly when explode.

However, since Stravinsky is the father modern music, some of which disguised by garity opens most movies, it is something fo intellect to listen to him and to try to dis why dissonance is a beautiful, if it is, as sonance and harmony. Yet, we live in a disso world, one of wars, confusion, falsehood and pression. It is a world of politics instea philosophy.

WAS A PROPHET

Stravinsky wrote his "Le Sacre du Printe in 1913, even before World War I brought its asters upon the world. Therefore he must be garded as a prophet, because so little else been right since then.

I was talking to the Republican Congress at Tanglewood who enjoys good music when can get away from the cacophony of the H of Representatives. He, too, listened to Strav sky; nevertheless, he thought that all was because the Republicans possessed such vi I could not help asking him how he or an else can believe that we are safe and secure w the Government of the United States has to four per cent term bonds. Either bankers have no in the credit of the cou or we are being robbed. Not since the worst of the depression, in 1933, has the Governmen the United States been required to pay suc high rate of interest.

Therefore, Stravinsky was right, even if he it on a cymbal.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Register (e)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 95,656
JUL 26 1957

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bulletin (m)
NORWICH, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 24,038
JUL 26 1957

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-42
Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 62,179
JUL 26 1957

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal (e)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 9,329
JUL 26 1957

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Press (e)
MIDDLETOWN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,523
JUL 26 1957

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 5,895
JUL 26 1957

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 26 1957

TOWN TIMES (WATERTOWN, CONN.), JULY 25, 1957

'Rite of Spring' Is Lauded By Writer Monteux Conducts

When "Le Sacre du Printemps" by Igor Stravinsky was played for the first time in Paris, May 29, 1913, a riot ensued, and it was necessary for the police to intervene to protect life and property. The theater goer of the time was unprepared for this venture into "modernistic" music, and thought the work scandalous. The conductor of the premiere performance of that work, more than forty-four years ago, was Pierre Monteux.

As guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducted this historic work, which he had introduced to the public, in an outstanding and brilliant performance last Saturday evening at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. At the conclusion of the work, orchestra and audience rose in tribute to Mr. Monteux, and he was accorded a deafening ovation.

It was a thrilling performance of "The Rite of Spring" in the best tradition of this orchestra of world renown. It is difficult to single out any one section of the orchestra for special praise in this performance, but the performance of the brass choir was brilliant and electrifying, the work of the strings was marked by precision and fervor, and the percussion section gave the piece the insistent rhythm and syncopation to present a vivid picture of the pagan rite envisioned in the original performance by Diaghileff's Ballet Russe.

The evening's program was introduced by a spirited performance of the "Fingal's Cave" overture by Mendelssohn. Next followed the saccharinely sentimental Symphony No. 5 in E. minor by Tchaikovsky in which we must once more praise the brass section for their excellent performance, and include the strings, so essential in establishing the romantic mood of the work.

L. F. M.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,140
JUL 25 1957

PETERSBURG, VA.
PROGRESS-INDEX
Circ. D. 17,445 - S. 17,641
JUL 26 1957

ANSONIA, CONN.
SENTINEL
Circ. D. 13 187
JUL 26 1957

TAMPA, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 42,184
JUL 26 1957

HAZLETON, PA.
PLAIN SPEAKER
Circ. D. 16,213
JUL 26 1957

West Palm Beach, Fla.
PALM BEACH TIMES
Circ. D. 17,430
JUL 27 1957

PUNXSUTAWNEY, PA.
SPIRIT
Circ. D. 6,021
JUL 26 1957

SUFFOLK, VA.
NEWS-HERALD
Circ. D. 7,550 - S. 7,551
JUL 26 1957

LIVINGSTON, MONT.
ENTERPRISE
Circ. D. 2,725
JUL 26 1957

STAUNTON, VA.
NEWS-LEADER
Circ. D. 7,079 - S. 8,221
JUL 26 1957

Norfolk, Va.
Ledger-Dispatch
July 26, 1957

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
JUL 28 1957

Second Thoughts On Music

Boston Symphony Orchestra Attracts Many to Concerts

First Week End in Music Shed Was Artistic, Financial Success; Pierre Monteux Conducts Difinitive Performance of Stravinsky's Ballet

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 27- The first weekend of the concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, was and artistic and presumably financial success with more than 27,000 persons attending the three concerts. The orchestra is in great form this summer and the programs, devoted to works of Tschaikowsky and Stravinsky offer both familiar and exciting works.

For Small Orchestra

The 75th anniversary of Stravinsky has resulted in a tremendous amount of his music being played in many parts of the world and the Berkshire Festival has done its share. Mr. Munch conducted his ballet "Jeu de Cartes" and his latest work "Canticum Sacrum," while Mr. Monteux conducted the famous "Sacre du Printemps." The novelty was the religious dedicated to the City of Venice, namely the "Canticum Sacrum" and an uglier work we have not heard. To us, it was thoroughly unrewarding. It is scored for a small orchestra with the darker hued instruments predominating. The orchestral part is meagre, stark and angular. The chorus sings, or attempts to sing music that taxes the voice unmercifully and the tenor and baritone soloists, in this case John McCollum and Donald Gramm, can only be admired for the way they sang their music, ungrateful as it was. The work is divided into five parts, matching the five domes of St. Mark's Cathedral. The scritural texts are in Latin. Mr. Munch is to complimented on his courage in programing the work and his superb handling of the details. It seems doubtful that the work will find a place in the regular repertory.

It was just 43 years ago that Pierre Monteux conducted the first performance of Stravinsky's ballet "Le Sacre Du Printemps" in Paris. He tells us he had to run for his life when it was over. Last Sunday at 82-years of age, he conducted it again. The years have deepened his understanding of this colossal composition. The result was a difinitive performance by one of the world's greatest orchestras. The musicians gave Mr. Monteux everything he demanded. It was a performance to be treasured in one's memory.

Exciting Work

Mr. Munch did Mr. Stravinsky a real service as he conducted a distinguished performance of another ballet "Je de Cartes." In this ballet the dancers are the cards, with the joker, the mischief-maker. The work is exciting in its purely instrumental form, which is more than can be said of other ballet music.

Highlighting the Tschaikowsky works, was the superb performance of first cellist Samuel Mayes of the "Variations on a Rococo Theme for cello and orchestra." The work was being heard for the first time in this country in its original form. Mr. Mayes displayed his tremendous technical abilities and his fine scholarship. The variations are varied in mood and tremendously exciting. What a stunning performance of the Dvorak cello concerto, this young man could provide.

Mr. Munch also provided a highly vitalized performance of the "Pathetique" symphony, while Mr. Monteux chose to bring us a lovely performance of the "Symphony No. 5."

Student Orchestra

The Berkshire Music Center School has a very fine orchestra this summer. Indeed, it must be a joy to work with these young men and women. We heard a most musical performance of Mozart's "Concerto in G major, No. 4" by a young Israelie student, David Lein. The tone was ingratiating and the reading sensitive. A student conductor, Myn Morris, revealed real talent directing the work.

An extremely fine performance of the second symphony of Sibelius was provided under the direction of Eleazar de Carvallo, who, with Seymour Lipkin, heads the student orchestra department. Gustav Meier, a young man from Switzerland, provided exciting moments during his direction of "Bachianas Brasileiras, No. 2" by Villa-Lobos.

Fromm Concert

The first of two concerts of contemporary chamber music provided by the Fromm Music Foundation was highlighted by the magnificent singing of soprano Patricia Neway. Accompanied by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, Louise Vosgerchian, piano and Samuel Mayes, cellist, Miss Neway sang the "Chansons Madecasses," as we have never heard them sung before. Her voice is individual, not always beautiful in quality, but she has a superb dramatic instinct and a fine musicality. Every word was appropriately colored and her range of dynamics seemed limitless. She also sand a "Suite for Soprano and Voice" by Villa-Lobos. This work is jungle music, torrid, demanding and treacherous musically. Ruth Posselt, one of the finest interpreters of contemporary music for the violin, collaborated perfectly with Miss Neway. The soprano was at her very best in this work, able to negotiate its difficulties and project its spirit.

Miss Posselt and Miss Vosgerchian provided a fine performance of Bartok's "Sonata No 2 for Violin and Piano." This is a work that one likes better at each hearing. Composer Irving Fine was on hand to hear his "Fantasia for String Trio" finely performed by Messers, George Zazofsky, Joseph de Pasquale and Samuel Mayes. Written this year, the trio has a deal of charm, for Mr. Fine has not forgotten that music can have melody.

Stern in Tschaikowsky

A very special word should be noted on Issac Stern's wonderful performance of Tschaikowsky's violin concerto. Now at the height of his powers Mr. Stern has every he did. The orchestral collaboratioo under Mr. Munch was perfection. Stern will be heard later in the Beethoven and Brahms violin concertos.

News (m)
BANGOR, ME.
Independent
Circ. 71,105
JUL 26 1957

LONG BRANCH, N. J.
RECORD
Circ. D. 15,324
JUL 26 1957

NEW ORLEANS, LA.
STATES
Circ. D. 102,216
JUL 29 1957

George Sokolsky

Stravinsky, Who Wrote 'Le Sacre du Printemps,' May Be Prophet Of Right In His Dissonant Music

More and more the summer festival becomes not only a musical treat but also a fashion. And each year, it increases in number and variety. The Shakespeare festivals in Stratford, Conn., and in Canada, are unfolding the virtues of the Bard to generations that have not known the great actors of the 19th Century up to 1912, whose careers in the theater reached their glory when Hamlet or Juliet was achieved. Who, who ever heard them, can forget Sothern and Marlowe or Ellen Terry or Richard Mansfield?

Today, there is a resurgence of the live theater, as it is called in contrast with movies and television, and actors and actresses who are accustomed to the fabulous salaries which these commercial media are willing to pay, turn to "off Broadway" or "on Broadway" or even summer stock to be themselves and not the shadow of a director or even a banker who has sunk his money in a tin-can full of film.

So the summer stock companies proliferate all over the United States in out-of-the-way places where it is possible to play without paying so much for stage hands and stand-ins and similar exorbitantly paid personages, who add little to the show but "on Broadway" can close the theater down and end the career of author and actor.

The music festival is also proliferating, but it involves much more than the theater, for a symphony orchestra consists of at least a hundred persons, not including guest conductors and choruses. It takes considerable organization and housing to move such an army about.

TANGLEWOOD IS INSTITUTION

I usually go to the summer festival at Tanglewood which is now a hoary institution on the road in Lenox, Mass., where Hawthorne wrote his "Tanglewood Tales" and not far from the Stockbridge of the Sedgwicks and the Pittsfield of Oliver Wendell Holmes, the elder, he who wrote of the breakfast table as his son wroe decisions for the courts.

The Berkshires have long possessed an atmosphere of American culture and Tanglewood sits in the midst of it, quite properly not merely an orchestral performance for the cognoscenti, which used to be a New England word for those of great knowledge and taste who could listen to Brahms before recordings made him a household problem, but also a school for the young and ambitious, many of whom have already proved their virtues and their virtuosity.

It is a lovely grove where one sits and listens. This year, there is much Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky, the former being easy to take even by those whose main musical treat is the radio; the latter still being a bit of a problem to many who wonder why he has to make so much noise to get over the point that when the Earth was created it was done by things banging into others. Atoms can be frightfully noisy, particularly when they explode.

However, since Stravinsky is the father of all modern music, some of which disguised by vulgarity opens most movies, it is something for the intellect to listen to him and to try to discover why dissonance is a beautiful, if it is, as consonance and harmony. Yet, we live in a dissonant world, one of wars, confusion, falsehood and oppression. It is a world of politics instead of philosophy.

WAS A PROPHET

Stravinsky wrote his "Le Sacre du Printemps" in 1913, even before World War I brought its disasters upon the world. Therefore he must be regarded as a prophet, because so little else has been right since then.

I was talking to the Republican Congressman at Tanglewood who enjoys good music when he can get away from the cacophony of the House of Representatives. He, too, listened to Stravinsky; nevertheless, he thought that all was well because the Republicans possessed such virtue. I could not help asking him how he or anyone else can believe that matters are safe and secure when the Government of the United States has to pay four per cent on long-term bonds. Either the bankers have no faith in the credit of the country or we are being robbed. Not since the worst days of the depression, in 1933, has the Government of the United States been required to pay such a high rate of interest.

Therefore, Stravinsky was right, even if he said it on a cymbal.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Register (e)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 95,656
JUL 26 1957

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bulletin (m)
NORWICH, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 24,038
JUL 26 1957

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-42
Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 62,179
JUL 26 1957

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal (e)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 9,329
JUL 26 1957

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Press (e)
MIDDLETOWN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,523
JUL 26 1957

TOWN TIMES (WATERTOWN, CONN.), JULY 25, 1957

'Rite of Spring' Is Lauded By Writer Monteux Conducts

When "Le Sacre du Printemps" by Igor Stravinsky was played for the first time in Paris, May 29, 1913, a riot ensued, and it was necessary for the police to intervene to protect life and property. The theater goer of the time was unprepared for this venture into "modernistic" music, and thought the work scandalous. The conductor of the premiere performance of that work, more than forty-four years ago, was Pierre Monteux.

As guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducted this historic work, which he had introduced to the public, in an outstanding and brilliant performance last Saturday evening at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. At the conclusion of the work, orchestra and audience rose in tribute to Mr. Monteux, and he was accorded a deafening ovation.

It was a thrilling performance of "The Rite of Spring" in the best tradition of this orchestra of world renown. It is difficult to single out any one section of the orchestra for special praise in this performance, but the performance of the brass choir was brilliant and electrifying, the work of the strings was marked by precision and fervor, and the percussion section gave the piece the insistent rhythm and syncopation to present a vivid picture of the pagan rite envisioned in the original performance by Diaghileff's Ballet Russe.

The evening's program was introduced by a spirited performance of the "Fingal's Cave" overture by Mendelssohn. Next followed the saccharinely sentimental Symphony No. 5 in E. minor by Tchaikovsky in which we must once more praise the brass section for their excellent performance, and include the strings, so essential in establishing the romantic mood of the work.

L. F. M.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,140
JUL 25 1957

PETERSBURG, VA.
PROGRESS-INDEX
Circ. D. 17,445 - S. 17,641
JUL 26 1957

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 5,895
JUL 26 1957

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 26 1957

ANSONIA, CONN.
SENTINEL
Circ. D. 13,187
JUL 26 1957

TAMPA, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 42,184
JUL 26 1957

HAZLETON, PA.
PLAIN SPEAKER
Circ. D. 16,213
JUL 26 1957

West Palm Beach, Fla.
PALM BEACH TIMES
Circ. D. 17,430
JUL 27 1957

PUNXSUTAWNEY, PA.
SPIRIT
Circ. D. 6,021
JUL 26 1957

SUFFOLK, VA.
NEWS-HERALD
Circ. D. 7,550 - S. 7,551
JUL 26 1957

LIVINGSTON, MONT.
ENTERPRISE
Circ. D. 2,725
JUL 26 1957

STAUNTON, VA.
NEWS-LEADER
Circ. D. 7,079 - S. 8,221
JUL 26 1957

Norfolk, Va.
Ledger-Dispatch
July 26, 1957

Sunday Republican
RINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 28 1957

[1623]

It was unbearably hot last Sunday—so much so that a summer suit, just back from the cleaner, became rumpled and creased less than ten minutes after we had donned it, giving the general appearance that we had slept in it all night. We ruefully regarded the ruins of its former freshness as we waited for our car to be serviced at the corner gas station. Then we mentally decided we weren't going to let a little thing like a heat-wilted suit ruin our day and promptly dismissed the matter from our mind. That matter settled we blithely headed for the Berkshires to attend our first Tanglewood shed concert of the season.

There wasn't even the hint of a breeze stirring as we headed up the Massachusetts Turnpike out of West Springfield. Layers of lavender-tinted haze all but obscured the drowsing mountains that bordered the way and the air was still and hot with an oppressive density that hovered like an invisible blanket over the pretty speedway to the Berkshires.

It wasn't until we began the long climb from Westfield to Blandford that we noticed an ever so slight dropping of the temperature, but even that was a welcome relief and we settled back in our seat to enjoy the occasional cool breezes of the higher altitude.

* * *

We were certain that the ravages of the long dry spell would have left their mark on the famed greenness of the Berkshires. But, surprisingly enough, they hadn't, for the forests were green on every side and the lush, emerald aprons of grass that bordered the Turnpike seemed to be thriving under the rays of a merciless, relentless sun.

Except for the presence of streams of automobiles, wending their hasty way to the Berkshire Music Festival, there wasn't another solitary sign of life along the Turnpike. Not so much as a single robin searched for worms in the meadows that fringed the way. Nor was there any sign of activity on the premises of peaceful farmhouses, perched on the slopes of verdant hills. For it was much too warm for life of any kind to be stirring under the blazing canopy of an angry sky.

It was as though even summer herself had gone off to seek a cooler clime. Occasionally, we came across roadside stands of pine trees, resembling great racks of spears, left behind by warriors who had suddenly decided that it was a perfect day for swimming and had gone off to frolic in the cool waters of a woodland pool.

And, on the lofty summits of haze shrouded hills, clusters of silver birches huddled together like grey ghosts holding a mid-summer conclave. And not a very spirited one either, for the heat-exhausted birches appeared wan and wilted and their usually silver-bright garments of bark had been tarnished by the heat into a disgraceful tattle-tale grey. It was that hot a day.

* * *

We were certain we'd find a cool sanctuary on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, but we were wrong. There wasn't a breeze stirring, even at that delightful mountain-top haven, and we'll bet it would have been a simple matter to fry an egg on any one of the hoods of the hundreds of cars parked in the unshaded parking area.

Having found a parking place for the car, we discovered we still had 20 minutes to spare before concert time, so we made a beeline for the refreshment stand where we purchased a pair of box lunches and four cups of cold orange juice for ourself and our companion. Then we spread a car robe in the shade of a towering elm tree and settled down to enjoy the coolest spot we had been able to find all day.

We forgot the heat as the music of the Boston Symphony began to emanate from the shaded recesses of the concert shed. It was beautiful music that hovered over the enormous festival grounds like a refreshing breeze and we rejoiced in every moment of it.

The most delightful moment of the day came when a songbird perched on a branch overhead and blended his song with the rich music of the symphony for a full five minutes, before he flew away. It was as though he had been retained to render a private performance for the score or more of concert listeners with whom we shared the shade of our elm tree.

* * *

It was a little after four o'clock—and still blazing hot—when we joined the slow-moving lines of automobiles leaving the parking area. It was then we realized we would have been much better off had we remained on the grounds until the parking area had been cleared, for so heavy was the departing traffic that it was impossible to move along more than ten or 20 feet at a time before a traffic bottleneck would develop.

Finally, wilted from the heat generated inside the car by the slowly moving lanes of traffic in the parking area, we reached the highway and headed toward Lenox. We were less than a block from the center of the town when our radiator overheated and the motor stopped dead, creating a traffic jam among the cars behind us.

At that point, a courteous state trooper appeared on the scene, advised us to remain calm and began to route traffic around our stalled car. Then, having relieved the bottleneck we had caused, he asked a motorist to push our car onto the tree belt. That accomplished, he gave us a cheerful smile and said:

"Better let your motor cool off a bit before you try to start it up again. Why don't you folks go up to the hotel and relax for awhile? Don't worry about the car—I'll keep an eye on it."

* * *

We were alighting from the car to follow the trooper's advice when a horn blared behind us and a familiar voice hailed us. The owner of the voice turned out to be our friend George Mallis who, with his wife, Dorothy, was on his way home from the Tanglewood concert.

"Having trouble?" George inquired. Having been informed that we were, he wouldn't hear of continuing his homeward journey until he was certain we'd be able to get our car started again.

"Let the motor cool off for awhile," he advised, reiterating the trooper's advice, "And I'll give you a push if you can't get the car started."

And that's exactly what we did. In the meantime, we walked to the hotel where we spent a pleasant hour with George and Dorothy, chatting at a table beside an outdoor swimming pool.

It was nearly seven o'clock when we returned to our stranded car and hopefully turned on the ignition. The motor turned over, but the car wouldn't start, so George gave us a push. A moment later, the motor roared into life and we began the journey home with George following behind to be sure we didn't have any further trouble.

It was 8:30 when we arrived in Springfield and accepted the Mallis' invitation to join them in a cookout in their back yard. And it was close to midnight when—stuffed with hot dogs and hamburgs—we marked an end to a perfect day. An excessively hot day, to be sure, but one rich with a treasury of happy memories.

Modern Music Problem.

The Old Problem of New Music And Our Duty to Composers

By CYRUS DURGIN

Year in and year out, there continues to be complaint, from some quarters, about performance of new music, or, as it generally is termed, "this modern music." Especially is it true among a certain segment of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's local public. The most recent extreme example of it came last Winter when Charles Munch presented the Sixth Symphony of David Diamond. Seldom have I heard such a roar of bitterness as followed those performances.

To tell the truth as this reviewer sees it, the Diamond work was far from his best, a huge fabric of rasping dissonance and instrumental and rythmic confusion. (At least it sounded that way, although it is obvious no serious composer is going to spend so much time and effort deliberately upon creating tonal confusion.)

THE OTHER SIDE

Yet there is another side to the picture, and that is the abstract fact that this work, by a contemporary composer who has made his name with earlier and better music, really deserved to be played. In this connection the fact that Diamond's Sixth Symphony likely is a failure, is of less importance than the fact that it ought to have been heard.

We cannot subsist entirely upon masterpieces, and artistic anemia sets in if we hear only old music of proved popularity. The late Serge Koussevitzky once phrased the problem with terse wisdom: "If we do not hear the new, we shall never hear the old."

The backbone of the symphonic repertory today represents a selective process which has gone on, variously, for as long as nearly three centuries. The best survives and the lesser withers away. But when those pieces were new they could not at once be identified as the best. Much lesser music must have appeared at the time, and because it provided lesser, did not hold attention either of performers or listeners.

This problem came strongly to mind the other day when I read a portion of what Charles Munch said in his talk at the opening of the Berkshire Music Center two weeks ago today. In speaking of the orchestra's visit to Europe last Summer, and of his own conducting in Prague last May, Mr. Munch said:

"I found there so great an interest in the music of the entire world and at the same time so great a desire to hear as much contemporary music as possible that I was very much impressed. And I think of the reproach aimed at us because the Boston Symphony Orchestra plays so much new music on its programs.

OUR DUTY

"Is not this our duty? In defending the present, we are preparing the future—without neglecting the past . . . Nothing is more difficult than to pass definitive judgment on the epoch in which we live. It is History, the future, that takes care of this."

There is profound wisdom in Mr. Munch's statement. There is yet more in his observation:

"It is always the future that knows what is good and what is bad music. If I were asked this question, I should say simply that good music is the music that has its roots in the depths of the human spirit. It makes its way from there, passing through knowledge and intelligence, to the hand that writes on music paper. And from there it must find its way to the soul of the listener. Bad music has roots nowhere and arrives nowhere."

If, as Mr. Munch also said: "there is only one teacher, and that is Life," it is equally true that welcome hearing of new music is one aspect of living. If we shut our ears, minds and hearts to new music as a whole, we cease in that degree to live. We also cease to learn.

In personal matters, most of us are ever concerned with what we can do to help the future of the next generation. We regard it as a sacred duty. Is it not as much our duty to do the same for the next generation of artists? My answer is, emphatically yes!

We may not like the new art upon first acquaintance, though we may come to cherish it. That has been a frequent personal experience of this writer. Even if we never come to like it, at least we have developed our own powers of perception and we have done our best by the creator. That, in the long and as I think, wise, view, is enough for imperfect human beings in an imperfect world.

Furthermore, when you get down to a practical point, if we do not give attention and interest to new art it is we, and we alone, who lose.

FORT WAYNE, IND.
NEWS SENTINEL
Circ. D. 76,286

JUL 25 1957

NOTES FROM THE BERKSHIRES

Rarely-performed Cantatas Present Thrill to Audience

(Fourth in a series of articles by The News-Sentinel's music critic.)

By MONICA MARSHALL AGNEW

Hears Sixth Symphony

After having heard the Sixth Symphony played well a great many times, I wouldn't have believed I could hear a performance so superior to any other as I did on this occasion. Mr. Munch must be dedicated to this "Pathetique" Symphony for his interpretation wrung from the music all the despair, the fervor and intensity that Tschaikiwsky put there. And it never went beyond the bounds of good taste.

The sweep of the climaxes was almost overpowering, as was the breadth and sonority of the sound. Every section of the orchestra rose to heights in playing that was beautiful and exciting throughout every movement of the symphony. The thunderous applause at the end of the stirring third movement could not have been avoided. This was a great performance by a great orchestra.

On Sunday afternoon, July 21, the fourth in the series of Chamber Music Concerts at Music Mountain was given by the Berkshire Quartet with Janna Dawson, pianist and wife of the quartet's violist, as assisting artist. In insufferable heat this fine group of musicians gave Haydn "Quinten" Quartet, the William Walton Quartet in A minor and the Schumann Piano Quintet. The Walton work, which I was hearing for the first time, is continuously interesting and quite frequently very beautiful.

The quartet is in the usual four movements, but each movement has the composer's own stamp of individuality. The third movement is a scherzo, and a fiendishly difficult one to play with its rapid perpetual motion, irregular rhythm that was full of many nice offbeat "nudges and punches." Mrs. Dawson's playing in the Schumann work was masterly. She possesses a big technic perfectly controlled and produces a beautiful tone at any dynamic level. She is a sensitive musician and superb ensemble player.

I mustn't forget to mention that I was surprised and delighted to meet Winifred Winograd at Tanglewood as I was passing her car and she was placing her cello on the ground beside it. She is playing in the Symphony this summer, although she hadn't expected to. She is at the last stand in the cello section, tho' she sat at the first stand during Mr. Mayes' performance. In addition I chatted briefly with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hartigan, formerly of Fort Wayne and now of Schenectady, New York, and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Witherow also of Schenectady and former Fort Wayne residents.

On Friday evening, July 19, I drove several cello students to Tanglewood to hear what turned out to be a thrilling concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Samuel Mayes, principal cellist, as soloist. The program consisted of Stravinsky's Jeu de Cartes" (Card Game), Variations on a Rococo Theme for Violoncello with Orchestral Accompaniment by Tschaikowsky, and the same composer's Sixth Symphony. Charles Munch conducted.

The Stravinsky work, commissioned 20 years ago for the American Ballet, didn't generate too much interest for this listener except in a few instances of rich orchestration and an exquisite passage for two flutes. Mr. Mayes' performance of the Variations was both beautiful and brilliant. His tone is [illegible] and his "singing" his phrases [illegible] and warmth [illegible] playing of the [illegible] and a tremendous ovation followed its conclusion.

6—Holyoke (Mass.) Transcript-Telegram, Tues., July 23, 1957

Tanglewood Nearer Now

A trip to Tanglewood takes on the aspects of a pilgrimage for the devotee of music. After all these years, however, the idea is still slow to take root among people who don't take to classical music particularly, that Tanglewood can be a very special experience for them too.

With the new turnpike bringing Tanglewood closer than ever to Holyoke, it is again time to say that whether you have a stone ear or not, Tanglewood is worth trying at least once.

There were 27,000 people who thought so over this past sizzling weekend. They are not all serious musicians or listeners, by any means. If there is anything that distinguishes the crowd from any other crowd it is the number of young people in it. It is not a place for small children, but the teenagers and college people come in droves.

It's an easy hour and a half drive to Tanglewood over the beautiful turnpike. We advise taking the Lee cutoff despite the signs urging you to go on to West Stockbridge. Seats in the music shed are fairly expensive, but you can get on the grounds for $2, and that is where a great many people prefer to be. A blanket to sit on is all you need; the acoustics are superb and the scenery is breathtaking. Picnicking is very popular before the concerts, brought from home or bought on the grounds.

The pleasures of this kind of listening are manifold. Though silence is mandatory, the restless listener can move away from the crowd and stroll smoking under the stars, while the magnificent music flows around him. Some bring folding chairs to sit on the green Tanglewood lawns, though flat on the back is the preferred method of the young people. The world's best music is heard nowhere, live, under such comfortable and beautiful conditions.

And it is the best music. The Boston Symphony has no superior. It plays programs that lean heavily to the great masterpieces of traditional music — Brahms, Beethoven, Schubert, Tschaikowsky, and this year Berlioz. Though the connoisseurs complain that they like more new or seldom-heard music, most people seem to like hearing the great symphonies year after year. Furthermore, outdoors at Lenox, they have a way of capturing the interest of people who find them strictly ho-hum on the hard seat of a concert hall.

The Berkshire Festival, at midseason, offers a dozen concerts before it ends on August 11, and this includes the major part of the big programs. Tanglewood is one of the things this part of the United States is famous for around the world. But a lot of us who live right next to it have not been there yet.

C163]

Rio de Janeiro — O GLOBO — 23-7-57

REABREM-SE OS CURSOS DO "BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER"

Quinhentos Alunos de 28 Países Fazem o Curso de Aperfeiçoamento Que Serge Koussevitzky Fundou — Um Maestro Brasileiro na Cátedra de Regência

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, USA, julho (De Eleazar de Carvalho, especial para O GLOBO) — O palco da "Opera-House", do Berkshire Music Center, situado em um aprazível local, chamado Tanglewood, aqui, na cidade de Lenox, Estado de Massachusetts, apresentava, no último domingo, um aspecto diferente. No lugar dos cenários, do mobiliário, dos cantores etc., estavam colocadas 36 cadeiras, destinadas aos professôres do Curso de Aperfeiçoamento que Serge Koussevitzky fundou para a juventude de todo mundo.

Às 15 horas, o representante de Mr. Henry B. Cabot, presidente do "Board of Trustees" (diretoria) da Orquestra Sinfônica de Boston, instalava a cerimônia de abertura dos cursos, pela 17.ª vez. Na platéia estavam sentados os 500 estudantes, convidados especiais, a imprensa falada e escrita do país, correspondentes estrangeiros, autoridades e uma atmosfera de expectativa contribuía para que a respiração dos presentes ficasse em suspenso!

Alunos de 28 Países

O representante de Mr. Cabot, após algumas palavras explicativas, apresentou o Maestro Charles Munch, sucessor de Serge Koussevitzky na direção do "Berkshire Music Center", aos jovens alunos, provenientes de 28 países e 31 estados norte-americanos, entre êles, Argentina, Uruguai, Venezuela, Havaí, Canadá, Hungria, Coréia, Suíça, Israel, Inglaterra, Pôrto Rico, Japão, Índia, Formosa, Peru, Lima, Colômbia, França, Itália, Holanda e Cuba.

Daquele mesmo local, onde Charles Munch falava a uma juventude musicalmente preparada, Serge Koussevitzky pregou os sermões mais significativos na história da educação artística dos Estados Unidos, cujos resultados estão espalhados por todo mundo, através dos seus discípulos diretos e indiretos, que continuam a sua obra benemérita e consistente.

Distinção ao Brasil

O "Dean" do Curso, Prof. Ralph Berkowitz, encarregado de coordenar os programas das diferentes classes, horários e realizações didáticas, apresentou, um por um, os professôres aos seus jovens alunos, iniciando pelo autor destas linhas, que ocupa a cátedra de Regência — sucedendo o seu próprio mestre, Serge Koussevitzky, o que redunda, do ponto de vista artístico internacional, em prestígio para o Brasil, considerando-se ser o mesmo o único latino-americano que ocupa tão importante posição.

Os 500 alunos que, ao transporem os portões de 10 metros de altura de Tanglewood, falavam diferentes idiomas, levantam-se e, sob a regência do Sr. Hugh Ross, professor da cadeira de canto-coral, iniciam a execução da obra intitulada "Aleluia", para "Côro à Capela" (côro a sêco: côro sem acompanhamento), de autoria do compositor norte-americano Randal Thompson e escrita especialmente para a inauguração do "Berkshire Music Center", em 1940. Opera-se o milagre da Arte; a expressiva página, distribuída 30 minutos antes do início da cerimônia, é lida pelo heterogêneo grupo de 500 jovens musicistas de tão diferentes pontos do mundo; é compreendida, é executada, graças ao idioma comum a todos os povos: a Música.

Tal Como Será o "Tanglewood Brasileiro"

O "ponche" e o sorvete já tradicionais no dia da abertura dos cursos em Tanglewood, são servidos nos jardins, de onde se deslumbram as belezas das montanhas de "Berkshire", como, futuramente, iremos visiumbrar as belezas da Serra da Mantiqueira de um lado, e, da Serra do Mar, do outro, lá em Guaratinguetá, quando estiver funcionando o "Tanglewood Brasileiro": a nossa Universidade de Música e Artes Plásticas e Cênicas.

Entre as pessoas presentes, viase a figura aristocrática da viúva do saudoso mestre Serge Koussevitzky, que lá estava prestigiando a cerimônia de inauguração do curso que o seu ilustre marido fundou, para edificar a cultura musical da juventude de uma Nação e, hoje, disseminando ensinamentos para outras nações do mundo.

Em Tanglewood reabriram-se as aulas do Curso de Aperfeiçoamento que Serge Koussevitzky fundou, freqüentado por 500 alunos de 28 países.  Na foto, vemos o Sr. Hugh Ross, da cadeira de Canto Coral; Aaron Copland, da cadeira de Composição; a viúva de Koussevitzky; e Eleazar de Carvalho, maestro brasileiro que ocupa a cadeira de Regência

The Full Score

Boston Symphony And Stravinsky

By John White
Times-Dispatch Music Critic

TANGLEWOOD, MASS.—It takes at least one mountain to make a music festival, and this place is most pleasingly furnished with a rolling vista of the Berkshires. Last week end was not exactly cool, but the crisp dry air was considerably below the temperature at sea level. Anyway, the air was mainly there to carry the Sunday afternoon sounds of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch to a crowd of many thousands which had gathered for the Tchaikovsky-Stravinsky week end.

The Berkshire Music Festival makes no concessions to the weather but the audience, especially the "general admission" bracket on the lawn outside the great Music Shed, displays many stages of summer undress and Stravinsky melts with the faint scent of suntan lotion. Even if it is the latest, most eagerly awaited Stravinsky—in this case the "Canticum Sacrum" which was written for the International Festival of Contemporary Music in Venice and was first performed there in the Cathedral of St. Mark in 1956.

Formidable Work

This Tanglewood performance was one of the first on the Eastern Seaboard, and for me it was the third hearing of the new work in 24 hours, since I had visited the Empire State Music Festival in Ellenville, N. Y., the night before for Stokowski's version. I felt very educated, even for a critic. But more about Stokowski next week.

The European reviewers had given warning that Stravinsky's "Canticum" was formidable, highly esoteric, and a usual with him, entirely unexpected. So Munch spliced it between two best-sellers, Tchaikovsky"s "Romeo and Juliet" Fantasy and the violin concerto with Isaac Stern. My neighbors responded to these with wild and calculable enthusiasm, for we have derived two or three popular songs from these scores and could extract more.

The orchestra sounded marvelous, the soloist is one of the very best and everybody knows it—so that part of the concert was infallible.

During and after the Stravinsky my neighbors sat in pained and perplexed silence. First of all, they found it to be a piece of church music—not liturgical, to be sure, but its Latin devotions and its stark asceticism make it a remarkably non-visual work of art, hence probably inappropriate to a concert stage and a mass audience.

It has a full title, "Sacred Canticle in Honor of the Name of St. Mark," and it begins with a musical dedication to the city of Venice and its patron saint. The texts are from the Latin Bible with quotations from Marks' gospel, the letters of John, the psalms, and the Song of Songs. Their theme is the command "to preach the gospel to every living creature" and its summary is faith, hope, and charity.

Though these texts are a familiar subject for music, their treatment is not indeed, unless you are familiar already with the composer's Symphony of Psalms and his Mass. The Canticum is well in advance of them. Some knowledge of medieval music would also help—say, the 12th century polyphony of Notre Dame—as well as an acquaintance with the late works of Anton Webern.

Startling Medium

The medium is starting: a chorus, tenor and baritone soloists, and a large orchestra without violins, cellos, clarinets or horns. The remaining instruments are sparingly and unusual: the English horn for short interjections, three contrabasses in very high harmonics, flutter-tonguing from the flute, plucking and thumping on the harp, and a deep choir of trombones.

The music has many "blank" spots—said to allow for the decay of sound in St. Mark's Cathedral—and the remainder is highly distilled, more suggested than stated. The suggestions are, however, a labyrinth of counterpoint and musical relationships of the non-revealing sort. The last movement, for example, is the same as the first read backwards.

All these matters point up what we have been hearing, that Stravinsky's most recent alliance is with the school of Webern and serial composition, and that he is deserting the concert hall as a dying institution. Though his piece has a great and meaningful subject, it leaves the large public behind, at least for the present, in favor of the few who no longer seek a strongly sensual side to music. Certainly it did not rest easy with this so elevated and respectful audience.

The "BSO" as the natives call it, is one of the great wonders of the American way of life. No music lover should count himself complete until he has heard this great orchestra several times in the flesh. Even its tuning up has a wonderful particular glow.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 2 - 1957

Skirting the Issue

Tanglewood to the Tone Deaf

By CYNTHIA SETON

THOSE WHO are perfectly content to sit in Grand Central Station to watch the crowds for an hour or two between trains ought not to let a limited development of their musical ear stand in the way of their taking in Tanglewood. My endowment in the musical way is not very impressive, but every Friday and many Wednesdays of the Festival season we have earmarked, sitterwise, for Tanglewood. We have even prepared for this through the long winter by collecting enough green stamps to fill four books to buy two aluminum outdoor chairs to carry with us to the concerts.

We start an hour beforehand with the two chairs, a couple of blankets, an extra jacket, my knitting, my husband's pipe and all the little knives, forks and spoons that pipe smokers seem to need, and an occasional something to eat. We are thus able to locate ourselves advantageously with both the sights and the sounds in mind. We find nothing more relaxing than the following hours.

Strange people surge in and out of view. Some of them become recognizable as friends and acquaintances and there is that cocktail party atmosphere with the exchange of casual gossip. I used to feel a little apologetic about choosing not to sit inside where it is obvious that the finer tones may be distinguished. But after all, I am ready to leave the finer tones to the finer ears and look at the stars. Perhaps I am endowed with finer eyes.

* * *

IT MATTERS very little what the program is. We are content to listen to Brahms and Stravinsky, orchestral and choral. It is the peace that passeth over, and to us it all sounds very nice indeed. Last week we made a mental note of the fact that we were going off to hear Tchaikovsky and that Tchaikovsky had been considered pretty bourgeois, non-U, sub rosa and whatnot during the years we were developing our intellectual affectations. But, fortunately for our peace of mind we ran across some bit of musical information lately which let us know that the avant-garde was rediscovering Tchaikovsky, and it was therefore possible to listen to his music again without grimacing, shaking heads, shrugging shoulders and giving other indications that you knew a thing or two. This is fortunate because there were some very pretty tunes we might have missed.

It is always interesting to see what the ladies are wearing. So many of the blanket group come from out of the county. And so many are young people who achieve that strange combination of rigid conformity and aggressive individualism which can be seen in the dress, the hairdos, the mannerisms, the facial expressions, their beaux and their belles. What a wonderful place to come for the weekend when one is soul-searching and extra-sensitive. It is best to be 20 at Tanglewood.

* * *

BUT EVEN if you are not 20 you may sit back under the stars and let your mind wander freely through the dark and over the imponderables.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
JUL 22 1957

shown with the children.

Tanglewood Drew 27,000 On Weekend

Some 27,000 people went to Tanglewood in Lenox over the weekend to hear three concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra concentrating on the works of Tschaikovsky and Stravinsky. Although the Berkshire Festival has been going on since July 3, this was the first weekend of the major concerts, held in the big Music Shed.

The late Serge Koussevitsky, who as conductor of the Boston Symphony put the Berkshire Festival into high gear and created the Music Center which is the summer music school accompanying the festival, virtually transplanted Tschaikovsky to the Berkshire hills. The Boston orchestra, under his baton, came to play the works of this great Russian with unrivaled power and understanding, and this tradition continues with Koussevitksy's successor, conductor Charles Munch. In addition to the orchestra's rapport with Tschaikovsky, the Tanglewood shed with its great acoustics and the magnificent outdoor setting serve to heighten the effect.

Friday night the haunting music of the Sixth "Pathetique" thrilled a comparatively thin turnout. The lovely sweeping themes, the brave march, the almost overpowering tenderness were done with great feeling. Before that the 'cellist Samuel Mayes displayed exquisite skill in the Variations on a Rococo Theme for Violoncello with Orchestral Accompaniment. This is a delicate piece of much prettiness that, with Mr. Mayes' excellence, brought forth great applause.

The program opened with Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" a bright, clever work that somehow did not quite come off. Perhaps it needs the ballet for which it was written, or perhaps it just does not carry in an outdoor performance.

For Saturday's concert, conducted by 82-year-old Pierre Monteux, a real Tanglewood crowd of more than 11,000 people was present.

On Sunday, before nearly 10,000 people in the boiling heat, Munch conducted a program introducing Stravinsky's latest work, "Canticum Sacrum," and including Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" and Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist. Again the Tschaikowsky works, played this time in special commemoration of Koussevitsky, were particularly pleasing. The new Stravinsky work was a little too new for the average ear, although the introduction of new works in the Tanglewood program is always welcome.

During the coming week, in addition to the usual student concerts, there will be a concert Wednesday night by the Kroll string quartet, and the Boston Symphony concerts in the shed Friday, Saturday and Sunday will be devoted to the works of Berlioz, with Hindemith's "News of the Day" overture added on Sunday.

—A. B. M.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 22 1957

First Tanglewood Weekend Shed Concerts Draw 20,000

The first weekend of shed concerts of the current Berkshire Music Festival drew more than 20,000 persons to Tanglewood in Lenox Saturday evening and yesterday afternoon. The programs were devoted to music by Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky.

Guest Apearance

On Saturday evening 82-year-old Pierre Monteux, former conductor of the Boston Symphony, made his first guest appearance of the season at Tanglewood. He led the orchestra in performances of Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 5" and Stravinsky's "Le Sacre du Printemps."

Yesterday's concert, with Charles Munch on the podium, was the annual Koussevitzky Memorial program, honoring the founder of the Berkshire Music Center. Works heard were "Romeo and Juliet" and "Violon Concerto" by Tchaikovsky, and Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum." Isaac Stern was soloist in the "Violin Concerto."

The festival continues this week with the second chamber music concert Wednesday evening in the theater-concert hall and major shed concerts by the full Boston Symphony Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

The Kroll String Quartet will perform at the Wednesday concert.

Music of Berlioz

The weekend programs will be devoted mainly to the music of Berlioz. The Friday evening concert will include the overture "Le Corsair," "Harold in Italy," with Joseph De Pasquale as soloist, and the "Fantastic Symphony." On Saturday evening the orchestra will be joined by the Festival Chorus and soloists Florence Kopleff, Cesare Valletti, Donald Gramm and Gerard Souzay in a performance of "L'Enfance du Christ." Mr. Munch will conduct both programs.

Sunday, Mr. Monteux will make his second and final Tanglewood appearance of the season as he conducts the orchestra in excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet," by Berlioz, and "News of the Day" overture and "Mathis der Maler" by Hindemith.

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 21, 1957

Big Week End Gets Under Way For Berkshires

Pittsfield, July 20—The biggest week-end of the season is in progress in the Berkshires, with nearly every available tourist accommodation already taken.

Many travelers off the turnpike who planned to spend last night in the area were forced to resume their journeys as most motels and tourist places have been booked well in advance for the opening week end of the major concert season at Tanglewood. All hotels in Central and South Berkshire are booked solid and many who came to this vacation mecca without reservations will be forced to camp out or move on to other areas.

Capacity audiences are expected at all summer playhouses, Jacobs Pillow and Berkshire Music Festival. Beaches and picnic areas are packed. Other hundreds in the area are here for visits to sons or daughters in summer camps.

Waterbury American
Monday July 22/1957

27,000 Hear Concerts At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 22 — The first week end of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood came to a triumphant close yesterday afternoon with more than 27,000 music-lovers having heard the three concerts in programs devoted to Tchaikovsky and Stravinsky under the batons of Charles Munch, director of the Boston, and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor Saturday night.

The Sunday afternoon concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky presented the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" in honor of St. Mark before an audience of 9,800 with John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm baritone. But it was Isaac Stern as soloist in the Tchaikovsky "Violin Concerto in D major" with the Boston under Munch who scored the triumph of the afternoon and was called back repeatedly by an audience that did not seem to mind the heat that sent listeners on the spacious lawns to the shelter of the trees.

Not even temperatures just short of the 100-degree mark during the past two days could keep the audience away. It was a brilliant week end of Russian music for which 11,000 turned out on Saturday evening to hear Monteux conduct, despite his 82 years, one of the finest performances of Stravinsky's "The Rite of Sprint." Seldom have we heard the Boston's brasses give such a spirited performance. Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 5, in E minor" was given a beautiful reading and its brilliant end received an ovation.

Monteux's relationship with the Boston Symphony runs back over more than 40 years and the warm reception he received from the entire orchestra when he appeared was testimony to the love the players have for him. His conducting, despite the warmth of the evening, showed he has not lost one whit of his brilliance.

This will be a Berlioz week end with the programs Friday and Saturday evenings being devoted to his music with Munch conducting. Sunday afternoon the program will be Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" with some by Hindemith included under the conductorship of Monteux.

S. M.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411
UL 23 1957

Society: 20th Concert Season Opens For Berkshire Music Festival

By MARJORIE W. SHERMAN

The shady green lawns of Tanglewood in the Berkshires never looked more welcome to drought-weary Bostonians than at this week-end's 1957 Berkshire Festival. It is the 20th season of these world-famous concerts sponsored by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, ably assisted by the Tanglewood advisory committee.

★ ★

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, whose late great husband was a prime factor in establishing the Berkshire Music Center, was present for Charles Munch's special Tchaikovsky program, and her beautiful white concert dress was worn with a most exquisite scarf of fragile rose point lace.

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, who did so much to help Dr. Koussevitzky found the Center, was in her usual box for the concerts, inviting many noted musicians to join her Aug. 4 at her annual party for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to be given at her Stockbridge estate.

Mrs. Albert Spalding was another distinguished guest at Tanglewood, where hundreds picnicked and lingered outside to hear the soaring, familiar music under the stars. Still others of the more than 6700 there included the Philip Sherwoods of Dedham; Mrs. Robert Arms, who is among the boxholders; President James Baxter of Williams College, whose guests included Dean Roy Lamson and Mrs. Lamson, Prof. and Mrs. Robert Allen, and Joseph Johnson, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, and Mrs. Johnson.

Still other well-known boxholders included John Burk who did the excellent historical notes for the concert program, enjoying the season's first full orchestra concert with his daughter Margaret; Mrs. Bruce Crane and Mrs. Winthrop Crane with boxes of guests; Mrs. Charles Griswold with Box 5; Mrs. James Cross, Mrs. Henry Howe of Brookline and Mrs. Winthrop Aldrich, also boxholders; Mrs. Thomas Hunnewell, G. K. Livermore, Miss Ann Sargent, Miss Mabel Choate with Box 11 full of guests; Mrs. Robert B. Hill and Mrs. Albert Coons sharing another of the Boston boxes.

Chronicle
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Negro Weekly-Ind.
Circ. 1,682
JUL 27 1957

On The Scene

By Vin Haynes
Boston, Mass. Special

Upon the wake of jazz festival reviews recently, a New York Times reader cried out in disgust at the fact that "every reviewer (was) compelled to write that jazz draws more people to festivals than Beethoven or Brahms ever can". Obviously a classic devotee, the reader feels that the constant reference to the fact is unneccessary, and he is convinced that such a policy pursued by responsible criitcs is in the direction of mediocrity. And these critics are just a bit amazed at the trend of the public in comparison to the days in the past. And then, jazz festivals are now a flourishing business when in the past they were almost unheard of with very few exceptiins. The classics still continue to draw huge audiences. The Boston Pops and the free concerts at the Esplanade are examples. Perhaps, Tanglewood has slipped a bit, but the audiences are still there . . . remember some points that once jazz was restricted to cluubs and, theserious approach in study has also aided jazz audience-wise.

Speaking of festivals, the Newport final reports reveal that the attendance exceeded 50,000, and for the first time in the four years the affair emerged with surplus profit to be spent on developing the festival and its music. Already director George Wein and his staff are working hard on next year's program which will be at Newport once again, reports the Virginia Wicks Associates.

The Music Inn in Lenox, Mass., has another exciting Weekend on tap with Eva Jessye's Choir there this afternoon, Saturday, July27 at 4:00. Duke Ellington's Orchestra takes over the bandstand Sunday evening, July 28. On schedule for the future is Mahalia Jackson in gospel songs. She scored a tremendous success at Newport.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 21 1957

That Beautiful Music Is Cash in the Till

The Berkshire vacation-travel industry's most beautiful music—cash dropping into the till—echoed from most county tourist establishments today.

The SRO sign was out early at practically all the regular commercial establishments, according to John F. Downing, Berkshire Hills Conference executive. He said the overflow was expected to fill rooms in many of the private guest houses in the area.

Parents Visit Camps

As usual, the main drawing card is the first of the four major weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. The fact that several of the area's summer camps for children are having parents visit this weekend also is playing a large part in filling inns, hotels and motels.

"Almost all the commercial rooms were gone before the weekend arrived," said Mr. Downing.

He said the Pittsfield Chamber of Commerce has an expanded list of available rooms in private homes and expects to be able to handle all last-minute requests.

Resorts, hotels and rooming houses in Lenox report their best business weekend of the summer. The Curtis Hotel in Lenox has a full house with some guests housed in some of the downstairs parlor rooms.

Biggest Weekend Yet

The Kiwanis Information Center in Lenox reported the biggest weekend of the summer season. Rooms in private houses are at a premium. Mrs. John M. O'Brien, attendant at the center, predicted this morning that all the rooms registered will be rented by tonight.

Attendants at the Chamber of Commerce tourist information booth in Lee were kept busy last night with the regular Tanglewood-Jacob's Pillow volume of visitors, along with many travelers off the Turnpike who stopped at Lee looking for a place to eat and sleep before continuing on the Turnpike this morning.

Most of the through travelers off the Turnpike sought motels and indicated they would continue on when informed that motel accommodations are seldom available here at this time of year without early reservations.

Many Visitors From Hub

The booth reported that the volume of tourists from the Boston area was much heavier than in previous years. Most of the Boston-area travelers had come here to attend the usual attractions, though many of them are still "looking around to see what the Berkshires are like."

In demand, according to booth attendants, are places to swim and places where entire families may stay. In previous years, family-type accommodations were not so much in demand.

In Stockbridge, the Red Lion Inn reported its biggest house count in recent history. The hotel, which has a normal capacity of 145 persons, had 151 last night and has reservations for 152 tonight.

Only about 5 or 10 per cent of the guests are from the Boston area, owner-manager Byrne Bauer of the Red Lion Inn reported. He said the hotel had many requests from Boston area people who had to be turned away.

They Don't Know Yet

"Bostonians have not yet learned that during the Tanglewood season, reservations well in advance are advisable," Mr. Bauer said. New Yorkers know this from previous experience.

Volume of traffic on the Turnpike was reported to be heavy at the West Stockbridge interchange this morning and mild at the Lee interchange.

In South Berkshire, the weekend shaped up as busier than it was during last weekend's horse show. The Chamber of Commerce in Great Barrington expected to run out of rooms today for the first time this summer. Out-of-state licenses stood out on swelling Route 7 traffic.

Great Barrington's Berkshire Inn was booked solid and the Wigwam Motel was farming out its overflow to area tourist homes. In Sheffield, crowds from the nearby Lakeville (Conn.) horse show were filling Stagecoach Hill in Sheffield and other border inns. The F2 Restaurant, Sheffield, and Barrington eating places reported a breakfast business this morning as fast as any this summer.

Busy Up North

In North Berkshire, the weekend also shaped up as a busy one. In Williamstown especially, Route 7 appeared to be carrying a heavy load of tourists. Out-of-state license plates were a common sight on Spring Street in the college town, many of them apparently bearing families of persons participating in the Great Books Foundation parley, winding up a week-long session at Williams College.

Manager Howard Wooster of the Williams Inn said the hostelry was booked solid today. This being parents' weekend at area camps, the inn has been turning down room requests for about two months, he said.

Williamstown motels also reported heavy traffic, and it appeared that long before nightfall no rooms would be left.

Best Weekend in Recent Years Reported Throughout County

Enthusiastic reports from area tourist operations today indicate Berkshire County had the best weekend business in recent years.

Those reports are substantiated by the fact that attendance at Tanglewood over the three-day period was up 50 per cent from the same weekend last year.

Total attendance for the three days was 27,480 compared to 18,951 last year.

'Still Pouring In'

"And," according to John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference," requests for reservations and information on the Berkshires are still pouring in.

"Usually at this time of the year the inquiries drop off markedly," said Mr. Downing.

William H. Clifford said the Hotel Wendell-Sherwood enjoyed the largest three-day business of the three years he [illegible]. He said he had to refer many guests to private tourist homes Saturday night.

Fred Jurgensen, owner of the Green Acres Motel on Cheshire Road also reported the same trouble—full to overflowing.

'About the Best'

"It was about the best weekend during the five years we've been in business," said Mr. Jurgensen. "We've been filled before, but we have never turned so many away. There was definitely much more traffic than ever."

Liberty Court Motel on the Albany Road also reported a peak weekend, as did Tanglewood Motor Court, one of the group of motels on the Lenox-Pittsfield Road. The Tanglewood Motel Court reported solid bookings through Aug. 11.

The Tanglewood season closes Aug. 11. This past weekend was the first of the four major Tanglewood weekends this season. There were 6,700 present at the Friday night concert; 11,000 Saturday night, and 9,780 yesterday afternoon.

This weekend was the biggest of the season so far in Lenox. Traffic was heavy all day on Main Street with slight tie-ups developing at the monument at the intersection of Routes 7 and 183.

Mrs. John M. O'Brien, attendent in the Kiwanis information center in Lenox, characterized the weekend as "terrific." She said that tourists were "coming in droves from all over." The information center closed at 1 p.m. after filling the 200 rooms registered. Tourists who came later were referred to the Lee and Pittsfield information centers.

The Curtis Hotel in Lenox had over 100 per cent occupancy. Rollaway cots were installed in main floor parlor rooms to take the overflow.

In Lee, traffic on the main street was heavy all day. Restaurants on the street reported a larger than average business, even for a Tanglewood weekend. Anthony J. Rossi, owner of Rossi's Restaurant, said this was "the best weekend in 10 years." He said customers were standing in the aisles waiting for tables from 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. yesterday.

'By Far the Biggest'

Kathryn G. Ford, attendent in the chamber of Commerce information center in Lee, reported that business was very good Saturday and that all the rooms registered were rented. She added that "this was by far the biggest weekend of the season" and "we were far too busy to count the number of rooms rented."

Traffic was reported heavy in both directionns on the Massachusetts Turnpike at the Lee and West Stockbridge interchanges. Traffic was evenly divided between Massachusetts and out-of-state cars.

In Stockbridge, Byrne Bauer, owner-manager of the Red Lion Inn, said that this weekend "was the biggest the inn ever had." They had to put cots up to accommodate the over-capacity crowd. He said that the inn's restaurant served more meals than last year.

North County Busy

In Northern Berkshire, the Williamstown Board of Trade's information booth reported a heavy demand for accommodations Saturday night. The force manning the booth was upped to two persons for the first time this season, but both workers were hopping during the peak period from 4 to 9 p.m., according to Mrs. William M. Leete.

All motels, cabins and lodging houses registered with the Board of Trade were filled Saturday night. Traffic was heavy all day Saturday, but somewhat lighter Sunday.

The Williamstown Summer Theater Foundation reported a "good" crowd of about 350—75 per cent of capacity in the Adams Memorial Theater—for the final performance of "Anastasia" Saturday night. The performance grossed about $800, according to Business Manager William J. Martin.

Yesterday afternoon the theater foundation presented the New York Pro Musica Antiqua in the group's only Berkshire concert this season. The performance drew more than 200 persons, nearly double the number who attended the Pro Musica concert of pre-Bach music in Williamstown last year.

Heavy in South

Southern Berkshire weekend tourist reports were all the same —"very busy." The words were used by Hebert's Beach, Gibson's Grove and personnel at the Chamber of Commerce information booth.

Chamber personnel reported, "we filled up everything for miles around." They ran out of rooms and closed up the office at 8 Saturday night, they added. They ventured, nonetheless, that the weekend was not so busy as last year's Tanglewood opener; there were just fewer rooms available to them, it was said.

Hebert's reported business "just as good as the Fourth," which they claim as a record for the beach.

Cars clogged Route 7 through Great Barrington all weekend, but only two minor accidents were reported in the town.

Jolly Innkeeper Has Dinner Out

STOCKBRIDGE — Some friends of Manager and Mrs. Byrne Bauer of the Red Lion Inn had a couple of unscheduled and happy guests for dinner last night.

The Bauers found themselves in the pleasant crisis of not being able to get into the inn dining room, it was so crowded.

—The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 20, 1957

United Nations Group Arrives For Weekend in Berkshires

About 40 members of the United Nations Secretariat arrived here last night to spend a weekend in the Berkshires under the auspices of Pittsfield's Workshop for World Understanding.

The visitors, from 20 different countries, are staying in private homes. They spent last evening with their respective hosts, and this afternoon are guests of the Castle, a GE engineers' cooperative in Lenox, at an open house. They will return to the Castle for another open house after attending tonight's concert at Tanglewood. Tomorrow, the guests, their hosts and 39 foreign pupils of the Berkshire Music Center, will be entertained at a picnic on the Tanglewood grounds. The picnic will be furnished by the Married Peoples' Class of First Baptist Church.

This is the eighth year the local group has sponsored the U.N. group's visit to this area, and more than 500 have come here to date.

In charge of arrangements are Mrs. Fred M. Myers, Mrs. A. E. Schubert, Harry H. Ross and K. K. Paluev.

Hosts will be Bill Irwin, Jim Faillace and E. D. Feuerstein of the Castle, Lenox, Frank de la Chevallerie of Great Barrington, the Misses Catherine and Elizabeth Derivan of 117 Livingston Ave., Mr. and Mrs. Walter Finch of Canaan, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Hermann of Narragansett Ave., Mr. and Mrs. Lee H. Hill of 84 Tor Ct., Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Kaufman of 39 Partridge Rd., and Mr. and Mrs. David Keeney of 847 West St., Sam Ridge of the Last Resort cooperative on Ridge Avenue.

Also Mr. and Mrs. William McDonald of Canaan, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. Jack R. Meador of 226 High St., Mr. and Mrs. Morton Wayne of Partridge Road, Miss Virginia Neri of the cooperative at 103 Holmes Rd., Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton M. Redman of 931 West St., Mr. and Mrs. John Sayles of Richmond, Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Schubert of 892 West St. and Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Tucker of Dalton.

Countries represented are Japan, the Netherlands, Great Britain, Portugal, France, Belgium, New Zealand, Iran, Yugoslavia, India, Canada, Thailand, Sweden, Argentina, Switzerland, Australia, Spain, Italy and Israel.

Berkshire Eagle, Monday, July 22, 1957

In Brief . . .

These hot clear days are murder for withered gardens and woodlands but they don't do any harm to the county's tourist business. Preliminary reports from resort operators and other area entrepreneurs indicate the weekend past was the biggest ever, surpassing even the fabulous Columbus Day holiday of 1956 . . . The good attendance at Tanglewood, although not quite up to some peak weekends of summers past, seems to have been more than compensated for by the turnouts at other county attractions . . . The only really disheartening statistic, in fact, was the record of two

Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, July 17, 1957

In Brief . . .

Doubtless the brisk array of monetary and administrative improvements being effected by Town Manager J. Maynard Austin in Williamstown have created some annoyance among old hands who figure grandpa's methods can't be bettered. But the fact is that the changes he's made to date seem to have been uniformly dictated by the demands of plain common sense . . . While the weatherman doubtless rates a hearty bravo for his important hand in the increased attendance at Tanglewood to date, a big share of credit also goes to Mr. Munch's admirable programming and to the increasing good judgment of Tanglewood patrons whose tastes have been reflected by a steady increase in the popularity of the chamber music concerts . . .

Letters

Bombless Mission

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

The average yearly deficit of the five major symphony orchestras in America is about $200,000. A million dollars per annum would guarantee their continuance. The cost of one B52, about six million dollars, is enough to secure these orchestras for at least five years.

Without suggesting we cut one B52 from the 2,000 or so now in service—it is noteworthy that while no B52 has yet reached its pinpoint destination, Moscow—the Boston Symphony Orchestra completed this mission round-the-world with telling effect in 1956.

NATHAN GEORGE HORWITT.
Lenox.

Eagle, Saturday, July 20, 1957

'Pop' Question: Corks or Music

TWO SCHOOLS of thought are extant on the derivation of the term "pop" as applied to musical programs. The original idea was to popularize semi-classical music by playing it informally, providing tables, food and drink for the audience. One school believes "pop" refers to popularizing the programs; the other that the popping of wine corks imparted the name. The very first pop concert was played in London, England, in 1830. In 1853 the idea was tried here, and later became a regular feature of the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts in Boston and later in Tanglewood.

County Turns Out For Shed Opening

Photos by Mitchell

FIRST BERKSHIRE NIGHTS audience included a large proportion of area residents, including three Pittsfield sisters, Mrs. Carl K. Badger, Mrs. Milton B. Warner and Miss M. Louise Teot, who are studying their program before the concert. Subscribers since the beginning of the festival, the three were among the first to purchase Berkshire Nights series.

AT INTERMISSION Dr. and Mrs. Albert C. England stroll in the Shed. Dr. England, who will be 80 years old Oct. 30, resigned as medical examiner for the Central Berkshire District last November after a quarter century's service.

THOSE IN BOXES included Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn of St. Paul, Minn., and Lenox, whose guests were Mrs. Wallace U. Alexander and Mrs. John S. McLennan., In rear are Mr. McLennan, Mr. Sanborn and Mr. Alexander. Boxes have been decreased this year from 86 to 62 in order to widen aisles and facilitate traffic in Shed. Total attendance last night was 6,710.

Area Boxholders Listed For Berkshire Festival

TANGLEWOOD — Many Berkshire County residents are among boxholders for the Berkshire Festival concerts this season at Tanglewood.

County boxholders are Alan J. Blau and John H. Rice of Pittsfield, Robert B. Anderson of Housatonic, Mrs. William Felton Barrett, Frederick W. Beinecke, Mrs. Milton C. Rose and Robert K. Wheeler of Great Barrington, James Phinney Baxter III, Philip Marshall Brown and Mrs. Julian Sprague of Williamstown, Miss Mabel Choate, Mrs. Charles C. Griswold, Walter Hoving, Mrs. Rodney Procter and William H. Ryan of Stockbridge.

Also, Mrs. Bruce Crane and Mrs. Winthrop M. Crane Jr. of Dalton, Homer Gunn of West Stockbridge, Mrs. Milton J. Heller, George K. Livermore, Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn, Mrs. John L. Senior, Mrs. Winfred Rhoades and Mrs. Edgar B. Stern of Lenox, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Glendale.

Others include George E. Judd of Cannonsville, N.Y., retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; John S. Williams of Old Chatham, N.Y., Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield of Marblehead, Mrs. Lowell Thomas of Pawling, N.Y., S. L. Eisenbergs of Troy, N.Y., Mrs. Alfred G. Kay of Chester, N.J., and Palm Beach, Fla., Frank W. McCabe of Rensselaer, N.Y., and Paul Porzelt of New York and Sharon, Conn.

Here This Weekend

Among those at Tanglewood this weekend will be Mr. and Mrs. Jacob J. Kaplan, E. Morton Jennings and Edward A. Taft of Boston, trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Mrs. F. S. Crofts of Stamford, Conn., who will meet with students who have been awarded the composition scholarships given in her name to the Berkshire Music Center; and Nikolai Lopatnikoff, professor of music at Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, who is spending the summer at the MacDowell Colony, Peterborough, N.H.

7/20/57

Mahan

BERKSHIRE ROOM, featuring large photographs of the four seasons in the Berkshire Hills, is one of main features of $12,000 project completed at Liggett's North Street store.

$12,000 Project Is Completed At Liggett Store

A $12,000 renovation has recently been completed at Pittsfield's Liggett Rexall Super Drug store, 41 North St. Described by company officials as the most modern drug establishment in the East, it is one of the largest Liggett stores in New England.

The entire floor area has been remodeled to allow expansion of all departments. Lowered display counters and widened aisles provide more space for self-service.

"Variety and convenience are emphasized in the new design," according to Edward Babideau, of Boston, Liggett district merchandiser.

The cafeteria-fountain department has been expanded to include the Berkshire Room, a restaurant section which features four large murals depicting the four seasons in Berkshire County.

[64]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
G 5 - 1957

lewood Blanket

The St

staff reporter, writing in Springfield Union.)

e wag, whose visa has revoked by Berkshire Co called Tanglewood the of the New York Unive one who has ever atte erkshire Music Festival u this is unfair. You t dogs at Tanglewood. you can find muste d haunch to paunch-s on the lawn outside the d Music Shed. Like ye fternoon [July 28], fo when 6,176 people cam Pierre Monteux conduct Symphony Orchestra. 2,000 of them listened Dress is very inform wood concerts and peop n can stretch out wher d space. Most people a wholly delightful d point out that it attr democratic cross sec ican music lovers who near an ordinary car those present yester Monteux and the Bo y Orchestra, were elchior, Bach, Bri nd their families. Th ravinsky, who runs a in Manhattan; Lu who is a truck dispat ooklyn; Benny rahms and Herman are partners in a bow yonne, N.J., and v up here.

e two ways to go concerts. You can seat and sit under can go the way Ha nny, George and

Tel. 83
Weds
Bynack
Marlboro
Tassone
J. Bynack
RINGTON — Mis
Adam on a bott
1:55, 3
Cour
—"Nat
nardin
Lee
6:30, gle," 8
Mah
and th
Moh
zie," Fire,"
Para
"Front
7:15;
2:25,
VFW
Brid
GREA
VFW winning four-hit blankin field, 6
Gwin
Reid a hitting clout h
of the
Tues
Berkshire
night will local Kostka

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 5 1957

Tanglewood Blanket Brigade

The Stravinskys' Sunday Rites

(A staff reporter, writing in the Springfield Union.)

Some wag, whose visa has since been revoked by Berkshire County, once called Tanglewood the Coney Island of the New York University set.

Anyone who has ever attended the Berkshire Music Festival can tell you this is unfair. You can't buy hot dogs at Tanglewood.

But you can find music fans massed haunch to paunch sometimes on the lawn outside the Tanglewood Music Shed. Like yesterday afternoon [July 28], for instance, when 6,176 people came to hear Pierre Monteux conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

About 2,000 of them listened from the lawn. Dress is very informal at Tanglewood concerts and people on the lawn can stretch out wherever they find space. Most people consider it a wholly delightful institution and point out that it attracts a good democratic cross section of American music lovers who seldom go near an ordinary concert hall.

* * *

Among those present yesterday, besides Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, were Stravinsky, Melchior, Bach, Brahms, Mozart and their families. That's Harold Stravinsky, who runs a delicatessen in Manhattan; Ludwig Melchior, who is a truck dispatcher from Brooklyn; Benny Bach, George Brahms and Herman Mozart, who are partners in a bowling alley in Bayonne, N.J., and drove all the way up here.

There are two ways to go to Tanglewood concerts. You can buy a reserved seat and sit under the Shed or you can go the way Harold, Ludwig, Benny, George and Herman go. They pay $2 and rest on the lawn in whatever posture they choose and Harold's wife, for example, can choose some lulus.

The cost per concert is lower this way, but the capital outlay is likely to be steep. Take the Harold Stravinskys. Harold's Tanglewood concert clothes — his striped Bermuda shorts, matching striped shirt, duckbill cap and flip-up smoked glasses — cost a pretty penny and that's just the start.

The Stravinskys—Harold, his wife Gladys, the two daughters and little Harold Jr. — arrived yesterday with the inflatable rubber surf boards that are so popular this season among those who like to listen from a prone position. These they spread out on a 6-by-8 alpaca pile rug, big enough for the whole family, and there was still room for a portable ice chest, a five-gallon thermos of refreshments and a picnic basket.

* * *

The Stravinskys had just stretched out and gotten little Harold quiet when Monteux took the Boston Symphony into the second of three excerpts from Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet."

This lively part of the symphony is generally known as "Queen Mab, the Fairy of Dreams," but at Tanglewood is known as "The Children's Movement."

Sure enough, after a few trumpet blasts, little Harold Stravinsky, who was almost asleep, sat bolt upright and began bawling. Big Harold and Gladys tried everything to get him quiet again, but it was no use.

"I'm awfully sorry," said big Harold turning around to everybody with this frantic smile. Everybody glowered back.

"I'm going to put him in the ice chest," said big Harold, as little Harold's screams became horrible.

"You are not," said Gladys. "It will make the beer warm."

Finally, of course, they were forced to march back to the parking lot, lugging their inflated surf boards, the alpaca pile rug, the ice chest, the thermos jug, and the picnic basket, with Berlioz in the background. Scores of other families were retreating the same way, so the Stravinskys did not feel so bad.

* * *

"Honestly," said George Brahms to his friends Benny and Herman and their wives, "you'd think people would have better sense than to bring children to a concert. Why do they let people like that in here?"

By this time Monteux had taken the Boston Symphony into the third excerpt from "Romeo and Juliet." This part is often called "Romeo Alone," but is known at Tanglewood as the "f.16, 1/100, double-X, panchromatic overture."

Sure enough, George Brahms had brought along his camera. He had sprawled out in a very uncomfortable position and one leg was cramped, and he decided to stand up and snap a few pictures of Benny, Herman and the wives.

"Hey, Benny," said George in that stage whisper of his, "move in here closer, so I can get everybody in the picture."

"Sh-h-h-h-h!" came voices from all sides.

"Wanna make something of it?" said George, picking out the oldest and most decrepit-looking shusher he could find.

This fellow didn't want to make anything of it, but George's wife, Maureen, did.

MUSIC

Lester Trimble

THE directors of the Empire State Music Festival at Ellenville, New York, took a dangerous fling recently when they allowed the vitriolic sentiments of Richard Strauss's Elektra to ring forth in their mountainside music-tent. Audiences progressively dwindled on each of the three nights that the opera ran. Apparently the combined attractions of conductor Laszlo Halasz (who has been absent from the American scene for almost five years); the Symphony of the Air; and the young American soprano, Virginia Copeland (making her first appearance in the title role), were insufficient to offset public fright or disinterest regarding the opera. It was a pity, for Elektra is a masterpiece, and the performance, while not flawless, was on a high level of excellence.

The title role in Elektra is one of the most demanding in operatic literature. Hofmannsthal, Strauss's librettist, focused attention upon the character by having her on stage almost every one of the opera's ninety minutes. Strauss, for his part, gave her fiendishly difficult music to sing and then ranged against her an orchestral accompaniment that could drown out the sound of Niagara Falls. With due respect to the Festival tent's remarkable acoustical qualities, it was to Miss Copeland's credit that she could be heard at all. That she sang so fluently, with such warmth and beauty of tone was proof of the development she has made since her New York appearances in Menotti's Saint of Bleeker Street.

From a dramatic point of view, Elisabeth Hongen, of the Vienna State Opera, set the tone of the production with her portrayal of Klytemnestra. Her feeling for the opera's contorted, Medieval-Germanic stage postures was innate and deeply convincing. Miss Copeland, on the other hand, being young and native to a non-Germanic culture, had not completely assimilated this style of stage behavior. Her writhings carried with them an air of nervousness and "taught-by-rote." If she continues singing Elektra, she will certainly have to perfect the visual aspect of her characterization. But, for the moment, the mercurial quality of her singing provided a considerable compensation.

Among the shorter roles—all splendidly sung—were those of Ellen Faull (Crysothemis) and Marcello Di Giovanni (Aegisthus). Michael Bondon, who portrayed Orestes, did not inject much personal dynamism into his brief, climactic appearance on stage. But his singing, like that of the other principals, was consistently rich and secure.

AT THE Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood a few days later, the Boston Symphony presented a weekend of orchestral music devoted to Tchaikovsky and Igor Stravinsky. Tchaikovsky was represented by his Fifth and Sixth (Pathétique) Symphonies, the Romeo and Juliet Overture, the Violin Concerto; and the Variations on a Rococo Theme for Cello and Orchestra. Isaac Stern and Samuel Mayes were soloists, respectively, in the Concerto and in the Variations.

Three works by Stravinsky were programmed: his Jeu de Cartes, Le Sacre du Printemps, and the Canticum Sacrum, his latest opus, for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra.

Since Pierre Monteux presided on the podium when the first, riot-inspiring performance of Le Sacre took place in 1913, it was fitting that he should conduct this later playing in honor of the composer's seventy-fifth anniversary. And if anyone expected a flagging of energy to be apparent in either Le Sacre or in Monteux (who is seven years Stravinsky's senior) he was sadly misguided. Both struck sparks. Le Sacre seemed an even more sybaritic piece than I had remembered it to be. And Monteux, with his simple, unbombastic baton technique, showed himself to be a man who comprehends such phenomena; who can take them in hand with the eagerness of a youth and leaven them with the sagacity of age.

OF THE performance itself, I affirm that it was remarkable. The Boston orchestra, which has always a fine sense of cultural unanimity, offered its obedience like a friendly lap-dog, allowing itself to be controlled to the smallest nuance, so that quiet portions of the score hummed with pagan mysticism while the orgiastic passages filled the air with fury, and yet did not split the eardrums. Indeed, Monteux has a way of drawing every ounce of sound from an orchestra without forcing or sharp-edging the tone. How he does this is his own secret, but I wish he would divulge it to some other conductors. His approach to Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony bespoke the same ability to keep a work within a rational (though not unemotional) framework while taming the brass and percussion sections' latent explosiveness. I have not heard the Fifth put forth with such a morning-fresh sound in years. It was a distinct relief from all the syrup and braying that generally pass for Tchaikovsky.

The Canticum Sacrum, or Honore n Sancti Marci Nomine, a seventeen-minute religious, choral work, was composed by Stravinsky in 1955 and premiered at the Venice Festival in the following year. Like many of Stravinsky's compositions, it falls disconcertingly upon the ear at first hearing. It is a cold, chiseled kind of music, seemingly devoid of even the restrained passion of the early church cantillations it occasionally invokes. Whether the work will warm up on further hearing is difficult to say. I suspect it will not.

Charles Munch, the small portion of the Boston Symphony required by the Canticum, the Festival Chorus (prepared by Hugh Ross), and the soloists, John McCollum and Donald Gramm, gave the work what could be an exemplary performance. By varying his instrumentation—use of doubles, brasses, harp, organ, violas and double-basses, Stravinsky set himself an instrumental framework not dissimilar to that of his Symphony of Psalms. But no two works could be more opposite in effect. Where the Symphony is warm and pulsating with energy, the Canticum is icy and reserved in five minuscule sections giving an impression of brevity without compression.

The fact that Stravinsky has in these latter years bied over to the Webern system has both confounded his enemies and confused his friends. The Canticum is a product of this orientation. Discussions of it invariably abound in technical verbiage about tone-rows, retrograde movement, etc. But these do not solve the enigma of the composer's present aesthetic, nor tell us whether it has, indeed, changed. Throughout most of his career, Stravinsky has devoted himself to a search for utter objectivity. Perhaps he has merely drawn closer to this ideal. Perhaps he has even attained it. If there are subjective values in the Canticum, they do not reveal themselves easily.

August 17, 1957
THE NATION

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 5 - 1957

Tanglewood Blanket Brigade

The Stravinskys' Sunday Rites

(A staff reporter, writing in the Springfield Union.)

Some wag, whose visa has since been revoked by Berkshire County, once called Tanglewood the Coney Island of the New York University set.

Anyone who has ever attended the Berkshire Music Festival can tell you this is unfair. You can't buy hot dogs at Tanglewood.

But you can find music fans massed haunch to paunch sometimes on the lawn outside the Tanglewood Music Shed. Like yesterday afternoon [July 28], for instance, when 6,176 people came to hear Pierre Monteux conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

About 2,000 of them listened from the lawn. Dress is very informal at Tanglewood concerts and people on the lawn can stretch out wherever they find space. Most people consider it a wholly delightful institution and point out that it attracts a good democratic cross section of American music lovers who seldom go near an ordinary concert hall.

* * *

Among those present yesterday, besides Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, were Stravinsky, Melchior, Bach, Brahms, Mozart and their families. That's Harold Stravinsky, who runs a delicatessen in Manhattan; Ludwig Melchior, who is a truck dispatcher from Brooklyn; Benny Bach, George Brahms and Herman Mozart, who are partners in a bowling alley in Bayonne, N.J., and drove all the way up here.

There are two ways to go to Tanglewood concerts. You can buy a reserved seat and sit under the Shed or you can go the way Harold, Ludwig, Benny, George and Herman go. They pay $2 and rest on the lawn in whatever posture they choose and Harold's wife, for example, can choose some julus.

The cost per concert is lower this way, but the capital outlay is likely to be steep. Take the Harold Stravinskys. Harold's Tanglewood concert clothes — his striped Bermuda shorts, matching striped shirt, duckbill cap and flip-up smoked glasses — cost a pretty penny and that's just the start.

The Stravinskys—Harold, his wife Gladys, the two daughters and little Harold Jr. — arrived yesterday with the inflatable rubber surf boards that are so popular this season among those who like to listen from a prone position. These they spread out on a 6-by-8 alpaca pile rug, big enough for the whole family, and there was still room for a portable ice chest, a five-gallon thermos of refreshments and a picnic basket.

* * *

The Stravinskys had just stretched out and gotten little Harold quiet when Monteux took the Boston Symphony into the second of three excerpts from Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet."

This lively part of the symphony is generally known as "Queen Mab, the Fairy of Dreams," but at Tanglewood is known as "The Children's Movement."

Sure enough, after a few trumpet blasts, little Harold Stravinsky, who was almost asleep, sat bolt upright and began bawling. Big Harold and Gladys tried everything to get him quiet again, but it was no use.

"I'm awfully sorry," said Big Harold turning around to everybody with this frantic smile. Everybody glowered back.

"I'm going to put him in the ice chest," said big Harold, as little Harold's screams became horrible.

"You are not," said Gladys. "It will make the beer warm."

Finally, of course, they were forced to march back to the parking lot, lugging their inflated surf boards, the alpaca pile rug, the ice chest, the thermos jug, and the picnic basket, with Berlioz in the background. Scores of other families were retreating the same way, so the Stravinskys did not feel so bad.

* * *

"Honestly," said George Brahms to his friends Benny and Herman and their wives, "you'd think people would have better sense than to bring children to a concert. Why do they let people like that in here?"

By this time Monteux had taken the Boston Symphony into the third excerpt from "Romeo and Juliet." This part is often called "Romeo Alone," but is known at Tanglewood as the "f.16, 1/100, double-X panchromatic overture."

Sure enough, George Brahms had brought along his camera. He had sprawled out in a very uncomfortable position and one leg was cramped, and he decided to stand up and snap a few pictures of Benny, Herman and the wives.

"Hey, Benny," said George in that stage whisper of his, "move in here closer, so I can get everybody in the picture."

"Sh-h-h-h-h!" came voices from all sides.

"Wanna make something of it?" said George, picking out the oldest and most decrepit-looking shush he could find.

This fellow didn't want to make anything of it, but George's wife, Maureen, did.

Lester Trimble

THE directors of the Empire State Music Festival at Ellenville, New York, took a dangerous fling recently when they allowed the vitriolic sentiments of Richard Strauss's Elektra to sing forth in their mountainside music-tent. Audiences progressively dwindled on each of the three nights that the opera ran. Apparently the combined attractions of conductor Laszlo Halasz (who has been absent from the American scene for almost five years); the Symphony of the Air; and the young American soprano, Virginia Copeland (making her first appearance in the title role), were insufficient to offset public fright or disinterest regarding the opera. It was a pity, for Elektra is a masterpiece, and the performance, while not flawless, was on a high level of excellence.

The title role in Elektra is one of the most demanding in operatic literature. Hofmannsthal, Strauss's librettist, focused attention upon the character by having her on stage almost every one of the opera's ninety minutes. Strauss, for his part, gave her fiendishly difficult music to sing and then ranged against her an orchestral accompaniment that could drown out the sound of Niagara Falls. With due respect to the Festival tent's remarkable acoustical qualities, it was to Miss Copeland's credit that she could be heard at all. That she sang so fluently, with such warmth and beauty of tone was proof of the development she has made since her New York appearances in Menotti's Saint of Bleeker Street.

From a dramatic point of view, Elisabeth Hongen, of the Vienna State Opera, set the tone of the production with her portrayal of Klytemnestra. Her feeling for the opera's contorted, Medieval-Germanic stage postures was innate and deeply convincing. Miss Copeland, on the other hand, being young and native to a non-Germanic culture, had not completely assimilated this style of stage behavior. Her writhings carried with them an air of nervousness and "taught-by-rote." If she continues singing Elektra, she will certainly have to perfect the visual aspect of her characterization. But, for the moment, the mercurial quality of her singing provided a considerable compensation.

Among the shorter roles—all splendidly sung—were those of Ellen Faull (Crysothemis) and Marcello Di Giovanni (Aegisthus). Michael Bondon, who portrayed Orestes, did not inject much personal dynamism into his brief, climactic appearance on stage. But his singing, like that of the other principals, was consistently rich and secure.

AT THE Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood a few days later, the Boston Symphony presented a weekend of orchestral music devoted to Tchaikovsky and Igor Stravinsky. Tchaikovsky was represented by the Fifth and Sixth (Pathétique) Symphonies, the Romeo and Juliet Overture, the Violin Concerto; and the Variations on a Rococo Theme for Cello and Orchestra. Isaac Stern and Samuel Mayes were soloists, respectively, in the Concerto and in the Variations.

Three works by Stravinsky were programmed: his Jeu de Cartes, Le Sacre du Printemps, and the Canticum Sacrum, his latest opus, for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra.

Since Pierre Monteux presided on the podium when the first, riot-inspiring performance of Le Sacre took place in 1913, it was fitting that he should conduct this later playing in honor of the composer's seventy-fifth anniversary. And if anyone expected a flagging of energy to be apparent in either Le Sacre or in Monteux (who is seven years Stravinsky's senior) he was sadly misguided. Both struck sparks. Le Sacre seemed an even more sybaritic piece than I had remembered it to be. And Monteux, with his simple, unbombastic baton technique, showed himself to be a man who comprehends such phenomena; who can take them in hand with the eagerness of a youth and leaven them with the sagacity of age.

OF THE performance itself, I affirm that it was remarkable. The Boston orchestra, which has always a fine sense of cultural unanimity, offered its obedience like a friendly lap-dog, allowing itself to be controlled to the smallest nuance, so that quiet portions of the score hummed with pagan mysticism, while the orgiastic passages filled the air with fury, and yet did not split the eardrums. Indeed, Monteux has a way of drawing every ounce of sound from an orchestra without forcing or sharp-edging the tone. How he does this is his own secret, but I wish he would divulge it to some other conductors. His approach to Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony bespoke the same ability to keep a work within a rational (though not unemotional) framework while taming the brass and percussion section's latent explosiveness. I have not heard the Fifth put forth with such a morning-fresh sound in years. It was a distinct relief from all the syrup and braying that generally pass for Tchaikovsky.

The Canticum Sacrum, ad Honorem Sancti Marci Nominis, a seventeen-minute religious, choral work, was composed by Stravinsky in 1955 and premiered at the Venice Festival in the following year. Like many of Stravinsky's compositions, it falls disconcertingly upon the ear at first hearing. It is a cold, chiseled kind of music, seemingly devoid of even the restrained passion of the early church cantillations it occasionally invokes. Whether the work will warm up on further hearing is difficult to say. I suspect it will not.

Charles Munch, the small portion of the Boston Symphony required by the Canticum, the Festival Chorus (prepared by Hugh Ross), and the soloists, John McCollum and Donald Gramm, gave the work what seemed to be an exemplary performance. By limiting his instrumentation to woodwinds, brasses, harp, organ, violas and double-basses, Stravinsky set himself an instrumental framework not dissimilar from that of his Symphony of Psalms. But no two works could be more opposite in effect. Where the Symphony is warm and pulsating with energy, the Canticum is icy and reserved, its five minuscule sections giving an impression of brevity without compression.

The fact that Stravinsky has in these latter years hied over to the 12-tone system has both confounded his enemies and confused his friends. The Canticum is a product of this orientation. Discussions of it invariably abound in technical verbiage about tone-rows, retrograde movement, etc. But these do not solve the enigma of the composer's present aesthetic, nor tell us whether it has, indeed, changed. Throughout most of his career, Stravinsky has devoted himself to a search for utter objectivity. Perhaps he has merely drawn closer to this ideal. Perhaps he has even attained it. If there are subjective values in the Canticum, they do not reveal themselves easily.

August 17, 1957
THE NATION

[466]

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553
JUL 21 1957

MUSIC

New Type Scenery May Help Entire Theatrical World

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

Boris Goldovsky, director of the New England Opera Theater who is currently serving as the head of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, announced last week a new workshop program which should be of great interest to all lovers of opera and the theater. The announcement concerns the possible development of an entirely new kind of scenery which, if the results are successful, will materially benefit the entire theatrical world.

Sessions of this new workshop program for directors, designers, and conductors are now in progress at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood and will continue until the close of the Festival on August 11. While leadership training is an important phase of the workshop, its activities will concentrate on efforts to reduce one of the greatest costs of today's theater — the handling of scenery. This may be bad news for stagehands but progress is ever painful and no group is more aware of this fact than today's musicians.

Goldovsky's group will experiment with the making and designing of lightweight scenery which is easy to transport as well as to put together and take apart. Light metals, plastics, dacron, and other new industrial products will be used in the experiments which will reveal how materials can be used and re-used and what kinds of paint are best suited to different textures. Scenery made in the workshop will be used outdoors so that it may be exposed to all kinds of weather and different kinds of lighting will be tested

Special interest for us here is contained in the news that the workshop will also construct concert shells and collapsible platforms. Since we need a new concert shell for next year's Pop concerts in the Bowl, we'll surely be grateful if Goldovsky's group can come up with ideas for a more durable and less expensive one (not to mention an easier one to assemble) than those previously available. "Singing in the rain" was a frequent necessity for our Bowl artists but playing on wet strings, as the New Haven Symphony's musicians discovered when the shell in the Bowl leaked, is something else again! Since Goldovsky, in co-operation with the Alcoa and Owens-Corning Companies has already pre-tested most of the materials to be used in the current workshop program, it is a surety that any concert shell designed by his group will be at least—waterproof!

The first of three demonstrations for the purpose of showing the versatility of the new scenic materials will be held tomorrow evening in the Theater at Tanglewood. Some 14 singers will participate in a variety of operatic scenes of all styles and periods. Goldovsky will introduce each scene and explain to the audience the various problems involved regarding scenery and stage direction. Tomorrow evening's demonstration and the two subsequent ones on July 29 and August 5 will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a group made up of people who make a contribution for the support of the school.

The three Berkshire Festival concerts this coming weekend will feature the music of Hector Berlioz. The concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings are to be devoted entirely to his works while next Sunday's concert will permit a touch of modernity to intrude on an otherwise all-Berlioz weekend series. Sunday's program will include excerpts from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" and two works of Hindemith—Overture to the "News of the Day" and "Mathis der Maler." Pierre Monteux will conduct this concert.

Mr. Munch will conduct the week's first two programs by the orchestra. Friday's concert includes the "Le Corsair" Overture, "Harold in Italy," and the Fantastic Symphony. The huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony, will be heard in the latter performance as usual.

The highlight of the week comes with the first Tanglewood performance in Saturday evening's concert of the only Berlioz work based on a Biblical text, "L'Enfance du Christ." Cesare Valletti, celebrated Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will have the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, is to sing the role of Mary; Donald Gramm will assume the several bass roles including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of the Family. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be heard in this latest performance of a work which the Boston Symphony recently recorded for RCA Victor.

The regular Wednesday evening chamber music program this week will be given by the Kroll String Quartet, an ensemble which has made several Tanglewood appearances in past Festivals. In fact, William Kroll, director of the Quartet, has been a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty for many years. The program which his group will present on Wednesday evening includes the Haydn Quartet Op. 77, No. 1, Schubert's "Death and the Maiden" Quartet, and the Quartet No. 2, by Janacek.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047
JUL 21 1957

Music

Goldovsky's Workshop Open at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

For the past several years, Boris Goldovsky has offered something new, revolutionary —or both—to patrons of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. This year he is surpassing all previous efforts.

The only major new production that's been vaguely hinted is the "world premiere of a one-act American opera" on Aug. 5.

Beginning last Monday he inaugurated an entirely new plan for the opera department, supported jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the Leadership Program of the New England Opera Theater.

Ending Aug. 11, the program will provide a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

New Scenery

In addition to leadership training, Goldovsky hopes that his group also may develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world.

Made out of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron, and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart and impervious to weather.

When perfected, it should cut down on one of today's largest expenses in the theater —the handling of scenery. The group will experiment with how materials can be used an re-used and what kind of paints are best suited to the different textures (which ones can be washed off). They will test different kinds of lighting. They will expose the scenery to all kinds of weather, working with it in the open air.

Construct Platforms

In addition to stage scenery, they also will construct concert shells and collapsible platforms.

The results of the experiments will be demonstrated by a variety of operatic scenes of all styles and periods from the antique to the modern, the fantastic to the realistic, the rococo to the impressionistic.

A nucleus of 14 singers will perform the vocal parts with piano accompaniment. Goldovsky will introduce each scene, explaining the various problems involved in scenery and stage direction, and how they were worked out.

These workshops will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center on July 22 and 29 and Aug. 5.

Camaraderie

We like a story that's come to us from the small Swiss town of Gstaad. If famous for no other reason, it's been the European home for the last two years of Yehudi Menuhin.

Then there's Aldeburgh, England. That's the home town of composer Benjamin Britten.

Neither place is over-endowed with money with which to prosper music festivals that they've been sponsoring annually. Britten feels that the best is none to good for Aldeburgh, so he wrote to Menuhin, asking what his fee would be to play at the festival.

Menuhin feels just as strongly about Gstaad. He wrote back that he'd give two concerts in Aldeburgh without fee, if in return Britten would do the same at Gstaad. Britten also is an expert pianist.

That's what is going to happen, and all money collected will be used to restore the Saanen Church in Gstaad where the concerts are to be given.

All that's lost is managerial fees.

Weekend Events

Next Sunday's concert (4 p. m.) by the Berkshire Quartet at Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn. will have as soloist, soprano Helen Boatwright.

Chamber works will be Dittensdorf Quartet in E flat, and the Beethoven Quartet, Opus 127.

Tanglewood: Friday (8:30 p. m.) All-Berioz, "Corsair Overture," "Harold in Italy" (Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist) and "Fantastic" Symphony. Charles Munch conducting.

Saturday (8:30 p. m.) Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ," with soloists Florence Kopleff, Desare Valletti, Donald Gramm, and Gerard Souzay. Berkshire Festival Chorus, Munch conducting.

Sunday (2:30 p. m.) Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz, Hindemith's "News of the Day" Overture, and "Mathis der Maler." Pierre Monteaux conducting.

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee: National Ballet of Canada in "Les Rendez-Vous," "Dark Elegies," and Divertissements from "Sleeping Princess." July 23 through 27, all evenings at 9 p. m. and matinees on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at 4.

anglewood
Department
an Announced

dovsky, head of the tment of the Berk-
Center at Tangle-
, announces the com-
today of an entirely
for the department
as inaugurated, and
ported jointly by the usic Center and the Program of the New era Theatre. For a od, ending at the
Tanglewood season
11, the program will orkshop for stage di-
signers and conduct-

tion to the leadership
Mr. Goldovsky hopes group may also develop ely new kind of scenery
ill revolutionize not only
but the entire theatrical
Made out of such mas as light metals, plastics,
n and other new industrial ucts, the scenery will be tweight, easily transported,
to put together and take
t, impervious to weather,
when perfected should cut
on one of today's largest enses in the theatre — the
dling of scenery.
he group will experiment
how materials can be used reused, what kind of paints best suited to the different ures (what kind of paints be washed off); they will test rent kinds of lighting; and will expose the scenery to kinds of weather, working
it in the open air.
addition to stage scenery,
will also construct concert
ls and collapsible platforms.
e pre-testing of various ma-
ls has already been done.
Mr. Goldovsky has obtained
co-operation and interest of films whose aluminum foils fiberglas products will be nsively used in the experi-
ts.
r. Goldovsky will build a se-
s of three Monday evening
demonstrations in the theatre at Tanglewood around the various projects of the opera department and will attempt to show the versatility of the new scenic materials. A variety of operatic scenes of all styles and periods from the antique to the modern, the fantastic to the realistic, the rococo to the impressionistic, will demonstrate the results of the experiments.

A nucleus of 14 singers will perform the vocal parts with piano accompaniment, and Mr. Goldovsky will introduce each scene, explaining the various problems involved, in scenery and stage direction, and how they were worked out.

For example, his final program on Monday evening, Aug. 5, will include portions of Gluck's "Armide," the second act of Mozart's Marriage of Figaro, and the world premiere of a one-act American opera. These three selections provide a complete contrast in style, mood, period and musicale content to test the success of the opera department's work. This program and the other two demonstration programs on Monday evenings, July 22 and 29, are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Assisting Mr. Goldovsky on the opera department faculty will be Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep, staging division; Felix Wolfes, repertoire; Claude Marks, Elemer Nagy, scenic design; Leo Van Witsen, costume design, and Thomas de Gaetani, technical direction.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107
JUL 16 1957

Goldovsky Opens Opera Workshop

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, announces the start today of an entirely new plan for the department which he has inaugurated, and which is supported jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the Leadership Program of the New England Opera Theatre. For a four-week period, ending at the close of the Tanglewood season on August 11, the program will provide a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

In addition to operatic leadership training, Mr. Goldovsky hopes that his group may also develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world. Made out of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart, impervious to weather, and when perfected should cut down on one of today's largest expenses in the theatre —the handling of scenery.

The Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 19, 1957

New Techniques for Opera To Be Shown at Tanglewood

The first of three demonstrations of new techniques of opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center will take place on Monday evening at 8:30 in the theater-concert hall. It is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the department, will be master of ceremonies for the program, the first part of which will be devoted to five opera scenes staged by students of stage directing at the school. The scenes are from Bizet's "Carmen," Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and "Marriage of Figaro," Rossini's "Barber of Seville" and Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel." They have been staged by Karlos Moser, James Billings, Louis Huber, Benjamin Picone, Hope Christopoulos, Baird Hastings, Maude Curtis, Edward Purrington and Clarence Warrington. Mr. Goldovsky's staff includes Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep in the staging division; Felix Wolfes, repertoire; Claude Marks and Tom DeGaetani, scenic division; and Leo Van Witsen, costume division.

The second half of the program will be devoted to a demonstration of the new experimental scenery constructed of fiberglass and aluminum. Following an explanation by Mr. Goldovsky, scenes from Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" and Puccini's "La Boheme" will be presented, utilizing these materials.

All contributors are Friends of the Berkshire Center and are admitted to this and the other two opera demonstrations which will take place on Monday, July 29, and Monday, Aug. 5. Information about joining the Friends may be obtained from the Friends Office at Tanglewood.

MUSICAL
NEW YORK
AUGUST 1957

Opera Workshop In Scenic Experiments

Lenox, Mass.—Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, inaugurated on July 15, an entirely new plan for the department. For a four-week period, ending at the close of the Tanglewood season on Aug. 11, the program provided a workshop for stage directors, designers, and conductors. It also included experimentation for the development of a new kind of scenery made out of such materials as light metals, plastics, and dacron.

HERALD
glewo for sky, head of the of the Berkshire in "Tanglewood," announces a new department, sup-by the Berkshire
nd the Leadership
he New England
. For the period,
close of the Tan-on Aug. 11, there
shop for stage diers and conducleadership train-ldovsky hopes that develop a new to revolutionize but the theatrical such materials as stics, dacron and rial products, the ightweight, easily to put together impervious to when perfected,
on expenses of a large item in experiment with aterials may be which paints
o different lighting will be ers of workshop
enery in all
(in open air). In ad-scenery, they will con-concert shells and collapsi-latforms. Some pretesting terials has been done, and Goldovsky has obtained co-tion and interest of two industrial concerns whose num foils and fiberglas pro-are available for extensive n the Tanglewood experi-re will be a series of Mon-emonstrations on the the-"Tanglewood" around the projects of the opera de-

VARIETY
day, July 17, 1957
minum & Glass
r Scenery
Mass., July 16.
Monday (15) by the
f the Berkshire
at Tanglewood,
a workshop for
designers and con-
ned not only to training, but also tirely new kind of nery which will era and the whole
Goldovsky has co-
of Alcoa and Owens-
whose aluminum and
products will be exten-
ed in the experiments.
ed from light metals, plasron and other new indus-ducts, the scenery will be ansported, quickly assem-dismantled, impervious t

Times (c)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democra
Circ. 116,012
AUG 3 1957

Chills,

By TERE PASCONE

First it was the unexpect all he had to wear was h clothes.
And then, it was the
which had to be installed t
in the stable where they
Next came the noisy b
ing of carpenters fixing th had buckled up with the we repair so the dancers coul
And topping it all was spreading like wildfire amo preventing six of the leadi performing on opening nigh
Dr. Elemer Nagy, head
partment at Hartt College ford to grin now, as he was far from a laughing
City, Col., in late June, a stage and direct two opera
City Festival.
"It was awful trying to
for the ailing singers," he s open 'Rigoletto' without Vi ters in the role of Gilda. And 'Gypsy Baron', it was wors cipals — five of them — wer
Thompson, one of the sub

[466]

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553
JUL 21 1957

MUSIC

New Type Scenery May Help Entire Theatrical World

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

Boris Goldovsky, director of the New England Opera Theater who is currently serving as the head of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, announced last week a new workshop program which should be of great interest to all lovers of opera and the theater. The announcement concerns the possible development of an entirely new kind of scenery which, if the results are successful, will materially benefit the entire theatrical world.

Sessions of this new workshop program for directors, designers, and conductors are now in progress at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood and will continue until the close of the Festival on August 11. While leadership training is an important phase of the workshop, its activities will concentrate on efforts to reduce one of the greatest costs of today's theater — the handling of scenery. This may be bad news for stagehands but progress is ever painful and no group is more aware of this fact than today's musicians.

Goldovsky's group will experiment with the making and designing of lightweight scenery which is easy to transport as well as to put together and take apart. Light metals, plastics, dacron, and other new industrial products will be used in the experiments which will reveal how materials can be used and re-used and what kinds of paint are best suited to different textures. Scenery made in the workshop will be used outdoors so that it may be exposed to all kinds of weather and different kinds of lighting will be tested.

Special interest for us here is contained in the news that the workshop will also construct concert shells and collapsible platforms. Since we need a new concert shell for next year's Pop concerts in the Bowl, we'll surely be grateful if Goldovsky's group can come up with ideas for a more durable and less expensive one (not to mention an easier one to assemble) than those previously available. "Singing in the rain" was a frequent necessity for our Bowl artists but playing on wet strings, as the New Haven Symphony's musicians discovered when the shell in the Bowl leaked, is something else again! Since Goldovsky, in co-operation with the Alcoa and Owens-Corning Companies has already pre-tested most of the materials to be used in the current workshop program, it is a surety that any concert shell designed by his group will be at least—waterproof!

The first of three demonstrations for the purpose of showing the versatility of the new scenic materials will be held tomorrow evening in the Theater at Tanglewood. Some 14 singers will participate in a variety of operatic scenes of all styles and periods. Goldovsky will introduce each scene and explain to the audience the various problems involved regarding scenery and stage direction. Tomorrow evening's demonstration and the two subsequent ones on July 29 and August 5 will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a group made up of people who make a contribution for the support of the school.

The three Berkshire Festival concerts this coming weekend will feature the music of Hector Berlioz. The concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings are to be devoted entirely to his works while next Sunday's concert will permit a touch of modernity to intrude on an otherwise all-Berlioz weekend series. Sunday's program will include excerpts from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" and two works of Hindemith—Overture to the "News of the Day" and "Mathis der Maler." Pierre Monteux will conduct this concert.

Mr. Munch will conduct the week's first two programs by the orchestra. Friday's concert includes the "Le Corsair" Overture, "Harold in Italy," and the Fantastic Symphony. The huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony, will be heard in the latter performance, as usual.

The highlight of the week comes with the first Tanglewood performance in Saturday evening's concert of the only Berlioz work based on a Biblical text, "L'Enfance du Christ." Cesare Valletti, celebrated Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will have the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, is to sing the role of Mary; Donald Gramm will assume the several bass roles including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of the Family. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be heard in this latest performance of a work which the Boston Symphony recently recorded for RCA Victor.

The regular Wednesday evening chamber music program this week will be given by the Kroll String Quartet, an ensemble which has made several Tanglewood appearances in past Festivals. In fact, William Kroll, director of the Quartet, has been a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty for many years. The program which his group will present on Wednesday evening includes the Haydn Quartet Op. 77, No. 1, Schubert's "Death and the Maiden" Quartet, and the Quartet No. 2, by Janacek.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047
JUL 21 1957

Music

Goldovsky's Workshop Open at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MOREN
Telegram Music Critic

For the past several years, Boris Goldovsky has offered something new, revolutionary —or both—to patrons of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. This year he is surpassing all previous efforts.

The only major new production that's been vaguely hinted is the "world premiere of a one-act American opera" on Aug. 5.

Beginning last Monday he inaugurated an entirely new plan for the opera department, supported jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the Leadership Program of the New England Opera Theater.

Ending Aug. 11, the program will provide a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

New Scenery

In addition to leadership training, Goldovsky hopes that his group also may develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world.

Made out of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron, and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart and impervious to weather.

When perfected, it should cut down on one of today's largest expenses in the theater —the handling of scenery. The group will experiment with how materials can be used and re-used and what kind of paints are best suited to the different textures (which ones can be washed off). They will test different kinds of lighting. They will expose the scenery to all kinds of weather, working with it in the open air.

Construct Platforms

In addition to stage scenery, they also will construct concert shells and collapsible platforms.

The results of the experiments will be demonstrated by a variety of operatic scenes of all styles and periods from the antique to the modern, the fantastic to the realistic, the rococo to the impressionistic.

A nucleus of 14 singers will perform the vocal parts with piano accompaniment. Goldovsky will introduce each scene, explaining the various problems involved in scenery and stage direction, and how they were worked out.

These workshops will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center on July 22 and 29 and Aug. 5.

Comaraderie

We like a story that's come to us from the small Swiss town of Gstaad. If famous for no other reason, it's been the summer home for the last two years of Yehudi Menuhin.

Then there's Aldeburgh, England. That's the home town of composer Benjamin Britten.

Neither place is over-endowed with money with which to prosper music festivals that they've been sponsoring annually. Britten feels that the best is none too good for Aldeburgh, so he wrote to Menuhin asking what his fee would be to play at the festival.

Menuhin feels just as strongly about Gstaad. He wrote back that he'd give two concerts in Aldeburgh without fee, if in return Britten would do the same at Gstaad. Britten also is an expert pianist.

That's what is going to happen, and all money collected will be used to restore the Saanen Church in Gstaad where the concerts are to be given.

All that's lost is managerial fees.

Weekend Events

Next Sunday's concert (4 p. m.) by the Berkshire Quartet at Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn. will have as soloist, soprano Helen Boatwright.

Chamber works will be Dittendorf Quartet in E flat, and the Beethoven Quartet, Opus 127.

Tanglewood: Friday (8:30 p. m.) All-Berlioz, "Corsair Overture," "Harold in Italy" (Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist) and "Fantastic" Symphony. Charles Munch conducting.

Saturday (8:30 p. m.) Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ," with soloists Florence Kopleff, Desare Valletti, Donald Gramm, and Gerard Souzay. Berkshire Festival Chorus, Munch conducting.

Sunday (2:30 p. m.) Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz; Hindemith's "News of the Day" Overture, and "Mathis der Maler." Pierre Monteaux conducting.

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee: National Ballet of Canada in "Les Rendez-Vous," "Dark Elegies," and Divertissements from "Sleeping Princess." July 23 through 27, all evenings at 9 p. m. and matinees on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at 4.

anglewood
Department
an Announced

dovsky, head of the
tment of the Berk-
Center at Tangle-
, announces the com-
today of an entirely
for the department
as inaugurated, and pported jointly by the usic Center and the Program of the New ra Theatre. For a od, ending at the
Tanglewood season
11, the program will
orkshop for stage di-
signers and conduct-

on to the leadership
Mr. Goldovsky hopes roup may also develop
ely new kind of scenery
ill revolutionize not only
but the entire theatrical

Made out of such ma-
as light metals, plastics,
n and other new industrial
ucts, the scenery will be tweight, easily transported,
to put together and take rt, impervious to weather,
when perfected should cut
on one of today's largest enses in the theatre — the
dling of scenery.

he group will experiment
how materials can be used reused, what kind of paints
best suited to the different tures (what kind of paints be washed off); they will test
rent kinds of lighting; and
will expose the scenery to
kinds of weather, working
it in the open air.

addition to stage scenery,
will also construct concert
ls and collapsible platforms.
e pre-testing of various ma-
ls has already been done.
Mr. Goldovsky has obtained
co-operation and interest of films whose aluminum foils
fiberglas products will be nsively used in the experi-
ts.

r. Goldovsky will build a se-
s of three Monday evening
demonstrations in the theatre at Tanglewood around the various projects of the opera department and will attempt to show the versatility of the new scenic materials. A variety of operatic scenes of all styles and periods from the antique to the modern, the fantastic to the realistic, the rococo to the impressionistic, will demonstrate the results of the experiments.

A nucleus of 14 singers will perform the vocal parts with piano accompaniment, and Mr. Goldovsky will introduce each scene, explaining the various problems involved, in scenery and stage direction, and how they were worked out.

For example, his final program on Monday evening, Aug. 5, will include portions of Gluck's "Armide," the second act of Mozart's Marriage of Figaro, and the world premiere of a one-act American opera. These three selections provide a complete contrast in style, mood, period and musicale content to test the success of the opera department's work. This program and the other two demonstration programs on Monday evenings, July 22 and 29, are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Assisting Mr. Goldovsky on the opera department faculty will be Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep, staging division; Felix Wolfes, repertoire; Claude Marks, Elemer Nagy, scenic design; Leo Van Witsen, costume design, and Thomas de Gaetani, technical direction.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107
JUL 16 1957

Goldovsky Opens Opera Workshop

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, announces the start today of an entirely new plan for the department which he has inaugurated, and which is supported jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the Leadership Program of the New England Opera Theatre. For a four-week period, ending at the close of the Tanglewood season on August 11, the program will provide a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

In addition to operatic leadership training, Mr. Goldovsky hopes that his group may also develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world. Made out of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart, impervious to weather, and when perfected should cut down on one of today's largest expenses in the theatre —the handling of scenery.

The Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 19, 1957

New Techniques for Opera To Be Shown at Tanglewood

The first of three demonstrations of new techniques of opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center will take place on Monday evening at 8:30 in the theater-concert hall. It is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the department, will be master of ceremonies for the program, the first part of which will be devoted to five opera scenes staged by students of stage directing at the school. The scenes are from Bizet's "Carmen," Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and "Marriage of Figaro," Rossini's "Barber of Seville" and Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel." They have been staged by Karlos Moser, James Bi[illegible]gs, Louis Huber, Benjamin P[illegible]ne, Hope Christopoulos, Baird [illegible]stings, Maude [illegible] and Goldo[illegible] Gay, Ruth Glass and A[illegible] in the staging [illegible]

The second half of the program will be devoted to a demonstration of the new experimental scenery constructed of fiberglass and aluminum. Following an explanation by Mr. Goldovsky, scenes from Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" and Puccini's "La Boheme" will be presented, utilizing these materials.

All contributors are Friends of the Berkshire Center and are admitted to this and the other two opera demonstrations which will take place on Monday, July 29, and Monday, Aug. 5. Information about joining the Friends may be obtained from the Friends Office at Tanglewood.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK CITY
AUGUST 1957

Opera Workshop In Scenic Experiments

Lenox, Mass.—Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, inaugurated on July 15, an entirely new [illegible] for the department. For a four-week period, ending at the close of the Tanglewood season on Aug. 11 the program provided a workshop for stage directors, designers, and conductors. It also included experimentation for the development of a new kind of scenery made out of such materials as light metals, plastics, and dacron.

VARIETY
July 17, 1957

& Glass

r Scenery

Mass., July 16.
Monday (15) by the
the Berkshire
at Tanglewood,
a workshop for
esigners and con-
ned not only to training, but also tirely new kind of ery which will era and the whole

Goldovsky has co-
Alcoa and Owens-
whose aluminum and
products will be exten-
ed in the experiments
d from light metals, plasron and other new indus-
ducts, the scenery will be nsported, quickly assem-dismantled, impervious

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democra
Circ. 116,012
AUG 3 1957

Chills,

BY TERE PASCONE

First it was the unexpec
all he had to wear was clothes.

And then it was the
which had to be installed t
in the stable where they

Next came the noisy b ing of carpenters fixing t had buckled up with the repair so the dancers co

And topping it all was spreading like wildfire preventing six of performing on

Dr. Elemer
partment a ford to grin was far from City. Can. in it's one and

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 21, 1957

Tanglewood Has New Plan for Its Operas

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., announces a new plan for the department, supported jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the Leadership Program of the New England Opera Theater. For the period, ending with the close of the Tanglewood season on Aug. 11, there will be a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

In addition to leadership training, Director Goldovsky hopes that his group may develop a new kind of scenery to revolutionize, not only opera, but the theatrical world. Made of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart, impervious to weather and, when perfected, should cut down on expenses of handling scenery, a large item in the theater.

The group will experiment with ways in which materials may be used and reused, which paints are best suited to different textures. Types of lighting will be tested and members of workshop will work with scenery in all kinds of weather, (in open air). In addition to scenery, they will construct concert shells and collapsible platforms. Some pretesting of materials has been done, and Mr. Goldovsky has obtained cooperation and interest of two large industrial concerns whose aluminum foils and fiberglas products are available for extensive use in the Tanglewood experiments.

There will be a series of Monday demonstrations on the theater in "Tanglewood" around the various projects of the opera department. A nucleus of 14 singers will perform the vocal roles with piano accompaniment, Mr. Goldovsky introducing each scene, explaining various problems involved in scenery and stage direction and how they were worked out.

In the final program, Monday night, Aug. 5, portions of Gluck's "Armide," the second act of Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" and the world premiere of a one-act American opera will be included. This program and two other demonstration programs, July 22 and July 29 are open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Assisting Mr. Goldovsky on the opera department faculty: Robert Gay, Ruth Glass, Arthur Schoep, Felix Wolfes, Claude Marks, Elemer Nagy, Leo Van Witsen and Thomas de Gaetani.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
Circ. D. 202,715 - S. 208,222

JUL 21 1957

Tanglewood To Develop New Scenery

LENOX, Mass. (Sp.). — Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood has announced the inauguration of a new plan for the department which is supported jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the Leadership Program of the New England Opera Theater. For a four week period, ending at the close of the Tanglewood season Aug. 11, the program will provide a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

In addition to leadership training, Goldovsky hopes that his group may also develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world. Made of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easily put together and impervious to weather.

The group will experiment with how materials can be used and re-used and what kind of paints are best suited to different textures. They will also test different kinds of lighting and will expose the scenery to all kinds of weather.

GOLDOVSKY will build a series o fthree Monday evening demonstrations around the various projects of the opera department and will attempt to show the versatility of the new scenic materials. A variety of operatic scenes of all styles and periods will demonstrate results of the experiments. Fourteen singers will perform the vocal parts with piano accompaniment, Goldovsky will introduce each scene, explaining the various problems involved, in scenery and stage direction, and how they were worked out.

Assisting Goldovsky on the opera department faculty will be Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep, staging division; Felix Wolfes, repertoire; Claude Marks, Elemer Nagy, scenic design.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 206,408 - S. 279,780

JUL 31 1957

New Scenery Planned For Theater, Music

BORIS GOLDOVSKY, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., announces the commencement today of an entirely new plan for the department which he has inaugurated, and which is supported jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the leadership program of the New England Opera Theater. For a four-week period, ending at the close of the Tanglewood season August 11, the program will provide a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

★ ★ ★

IN ADDITION to the leadership training, Mr. Goldovsky hopes that his group may also develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world.

Made out of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be light weight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart, impervious to weather, and when perfected should cut down on one of today's largest expenses in the theater—the handling of scenery.

The group will experiment with how materials can be used and re-used, what kind of paints are best suited to the different textures (what kind of paints can be washed off); they will test different kinds of lighting, and they will expose the scenery to all kinds of weather, working with it in the open air.

In addition to stage scenery, they will also construct concert shells and collapsible platforms.

Some pretesting of variosu materials has already been done, and Mr. Goldovsky has obtained the cooperation and interest of Alcoa and Owens-Corning whose aluminum foils and fiberglas products will be extensively used in the experiments.

★ ★ ★

MR. GOLDOVSKY will build a series of three Monday evening demonstrations in the theater at Tanglewood around the various projects of the opera department and will show the versatility of the new scenic materials. A vartiey of operatic scenes of all styles and periods from the antique to the modern, the fantastic to the realistic, the rococo to the impressionistic, will demonstrate the results of the experiments. A nucleus of 14 singers will perform the vocal parts with piano accompaniment, and Mr. Goldovksy will introduce each scene, explaining the various problems involved in scenery and stage direction, and how they were worked out.

★ ★ ★

FOR EXAMPLE, his final program on Monday evening, August 5, will include portions of Gluck's "Armide," the second act of Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," and the world premiere of a one-act American opera. These three selections provide a complete contrast in style, mood, period and musical content to test the success of the Opera Department's work.

Assisting Mr. Goldovsky on the Opera Department faculty will be Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep, Staging Division; Felix Wolfes, Repertoire; Claude Marks, Elemer Nagy, Scenic Design; Leo Van Witsen, Costume Design, and Thomas de Gaetani, Technical Direction.

DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL-HERALD

JUL 20 1957

Workshop Plans Study Of Scenery

Boris Godolvsky who appeared in lecture recital last winter in the Town Hall series promoted by the Dayton Junior League is heading currently, at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors of operatic projects.

In addition to leadership training, Mr. Godolvsky and his group are working on a new kind of scenery which, he hopes, will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world.

Made from such materials as light metals, plastics and dacron, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to assemble or dismount and impervious to weather.

Mr. Godolvsky believes that such scenery when perfected would cut down on one of today's largest expenses in the theater — the handling of scenery.

In addition to stage scenery the group is constructing concert shells and collapsible platforms.

VARIETY
Wednesday, July 17, 1957

Aluminum & Glass Tested for Scenery

Lenox, Mass., July 16.

Inauguration Monday (15) by the Opera Dept. of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors is designed not only to foster leadership training, but also to develop an entirely new kind of lightweight scenery which will "revolutionize opera and the whole theatrical world."

Director Boris Goldovsky has cooperation of Alcoa and Owens-Corning, whose aluminum and fiberglass products will be extensively used in the experiments. Fabricated from light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be easily transported, quickly assembled and dismantled, impervious to weather.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democra
Circ. 116,012

AUG 3 1957

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUL 15 1957

Opera Workshop To Test Scenery

LENOX, Mass., July 14.— Experiments with new types of lightweight scenery will be a feature of a four-week opera workshop for stage directors and designers and conductors to be held by the Berkshire Music Center's opera department under Boris Goldovsky's direction at Tanglewood through Aug. 11.

The experiments will be demonstrated on Monday nights, July 22, 29 and Aug. 5, in performances of opera scenes with piano accompaniment. These will be open to friends of the center. The program for Aug. 5 will include part of Gluck's "Armide," Act II of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and the first performance of a one-act American opera.

The aim is to develop scenery of light materials, easy to transport and assemble and impervious to weather, which, when perfected, should lessen one of the theater's largest expenses. Besides experimenting with materials and paints, scenery will be exposed to all kinds of weather while working with it outdoors.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.

AUG 1957

Scenery Experiment at Tanglewood

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, hopes that his group may develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world. Made of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart, and impervious to weather. The group is experimenting with how materials can be used and re-used, various kinds of paints, different types of lighting; and they expose the scenery to all kinds of weather, working with it in the open air. In addition to stage scenery, they have also been constructing concert shells and collapsible platforms. Mr. Goldovsky has obtained the cooperation and interest of Alcoa and Owens-Corning whose aluminum foils and fiberglass products are used extensively in the experiments.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 345,684 - S. 477,285

AUG 4 1957

Boris Goldovsky, widely known opera producer and teacher, will augment his classes at the Berkshire music festival, Lenox, Mass. Starting Aug. 11 he will lead a four week workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors. He and his group hope to develop new, lighter scenery made out of plastics and synthetic fabrics.

* * *

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 68,623 - S. 78,467

JUL 21 1957

Goldovsky Seeks To Cut Scenery Costs

LENOX, Mass. — Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., announces a new plan for the department. For a four-week period ending at the close of the Tanglewood season Aug. 11, the program will provide a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

In addition to the leadership training, Goldovsky hopes his group may also develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world. Made out of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart, impervious to weather, and when perfected should cut down on one of today's largest expenses in the theatre—the handling of scenery. In addition to stage scenery, they will also construct concert shells and collapsible platforms.

Chills, Bedlam, Flu in Prelude to Nagy Operas

By TERE PASCONE

First it was the unexpected cold spell and all he had to wear was his light Summer clothes.

And then, it was the noisy oil burner which had to be installed to keep them warm in the stable where they rehearsed.

Next came the noisy banging and sanding of carpenters fixing the main floor that had buckled up with the weather and needed repair so the dancers could practice.

And topping it all was the Oriental flu, spreading like wildfire among the cast and preventing six of the leading singers from performing on opening night.

Dr. Elemer Nagy, head of the Opera Department at Hartt College of Music, can afford to grin now as he reminisces. But it was far from a laughing matter at Central City, Col., in late June, as he prepared to stage and direct two operas for the Central City Festival.

"It was awful trying to get substitutes for the ailing singers," he said. "We had to open 'Rigoletto' without Virginia MacWatters in the role of Gilda. And when we opened 'Gypsy Baron', it was worse. All our principals — five of them — were stricken. Hugh Thompson, one of the substitutes, had to learn the leading tenor role in three hours. We were constantly rehearsing with new people, some of whom dropped out because they, too, caught the flu.

"The characteristic about this flu is that the victim suffers severe laryngitis and respiratory difficulties along with a slight fever and just cannot sing. And the strange part of it was that it hit the singers only."

* * *

BUT ALL'S WELL that ends well and Dr. Nagy said that before the first week of the festival was over, the singers were back on their feet and ready to perform.

As for the other bedeviling problems, they were eased in time, too.

He telephoned home for his Winter slacks and woolen jackets and they were sent just as the snow on the mountains which greeted his arrival melted.

As for the noisy oil burner:

"The singers would put on the heat for 15 minutes until the stable got warm, then shut it off so they wouldn't hear the noise. Then they wouldn't put it on until they felt cold again."

As for the carpenters, they did a rush job, and took their banging with them when they were through.

THESE WERE ADVERSITIES behind the scenes only. They had no effect on the 23,000 that jammed the quaint 750-seat theater during the festival. The theater was erected in 1873. The show went on and the patrons loved it and praises were high in reports of the reviewers. In the Denver Post, Alex Murphee wrote:

"The breathtaking visual beauty of the settings and costumes (designed by Dr. Nagy) have set audiences to applauding as soon as the curtain goes up, before a single note is sung . . ."

And in another story, "Instead of a routine performance in the standard vein, Central City audiences see a miracle of artistic rejuvenation. It requires expert resuscitators to restore to vigor an opera (Rigoletto) which had become wan from long and unimaginative repetition. The vitality has been there all along, but the talents of Stage Director Elemer Nagy and Musical Director Emerson Buckley have served to bring it out and heighten it . . ."

Dr. Nagy is back East now but there is no rest for him. He's busy at Tanglewood on another project, directing the Tanglewood Opera Workshop at the invitation of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department.

For many weeks, he has been doing research in new materials for theatrical scenery, and on Monday night at Tanglewood, some of that research will be demonstrated in a set to be used for a scene from "Marriage of Figaro."

It's part of a program to be presented by the Tanglewood Opera Department in conjunction with the training program of the New England Opera Theater.

"We'll be experimenting with a new type of set," Dr. Nagy said. "Instead of the traditional lumber and canvas, we will use aluminum frames and plastic. The project is a long one with Mr. Goldovsky. We will just graze the surface this Summer. Right now we are experimenting with dyes to achieve on plastic, a transparent diffused effect. Our aim is to build sets easy to handle and transport without exorbitant cost so as to aid the travel of opera companies . . ."

Next Thursday, another experimental set will be used at Tanglewood in an open air performance of scenes from "Hansel and Gretel," Dr. Nagy said.

C1087

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 21, 1957

Tanglewood Has New Plan for Its Operas

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., announces a new plan for the department, supported jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the Leadership Program of the New England Opera Theater. For the period, ending with the close of the Tanglewood season on Aug. 11, there will be a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

In addition to leadership training, Director Goldovsky hopes that his group may develop a new kind of scenery to revolutionize, not only opera, but the theatrical world. Made of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart, impervious to weather and, when perfected, should cut down on expenses of handling scenery, a large item in the theater.

The group will experiment with ways in which materials may be used and reused, which paints are best suited to different textures. Types of lighting will be tested and members of workshop will work with scenery in all kinds of weather, (in open air). In addition to scenery, they will construct concert shells and collapsible platforms. Some pretesting of materials has been done, and Mr. Goldovsky has obtained cooperation and interest of two large industrial concerns whose aluminum foils and fiberglas products are available for extensive use in the Tanglewood experiments.

There will be a series of Monday demonstrations on the theater in "Tanglewood" around the various projects of the opera department. A nucleus of 14 singers will perform the vocal roles with piano accompaniment, Mr. Goldovsky introducing each scene, explaining various problems involved in scenery and stage direction and how they were worked out.

In the final program, Monday night, Aug. 5, portions of Gluck's "Armide," the second act of Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" and the world premiere of a one-act American opera will be included. This program and two other demonstration programs, July 22 and July 29 are open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Assisting Mr. Goldovsky on the opera department faculty: Robert Gay, Ruth Glass, Arthur Schoep, Felix Wolfes, Claude Marks, Elemer Nagy, Leo Van Witsen and Thomas de Gaetani.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
D. 202,715 - S. 208,222

JUL 21 1957

Tanglewood To Develop New Scenery

LENOX, Mass. (Sp.). — Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has announced the inauguration of a new plan for the department which is supported jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the Leadership Program of the New England Opera Theater. For a four-week period, ending at the close of the Tanglewood season Aug. 11, the program will provide a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

In addition to leadership training, Goldovsky hopes that his group may also develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world. Made of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easily put together and impervious to weather.

The group will experiment with how materials can be used and re-used, and what kind of paints are best suited to different textures. They will also test different kinds of lighting and will expose the scenery to all kinds of weather, (not to sing).

GOLDOVSKY will build a series o fthree Monday evening demonstrations around the various projects of the opera department and will also use to show the versatility of the new scenic materials. A variety of operatic scenes of all styles and periods will demonstrate results of the experiments. Fourteen singers will perform the vocal parts with piano accompaniment. Goldovsky will introduce each scene, explaining the various problems involved, in scenery and stage direction, and how they were worked out.

Assisting Goldovsky on the opera department faculty will be Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep, staging division; Felix Wolfes, repertoire; Claude Marks, Elemer Nagy, scenic design.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 206,408 - S. 279,780

JUL 31 1957

New Scenery Planned For Theater, Music

BORIS GOLDOVSKY, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., announces the commencement today of an entirely new plan for the department which he has inaugurated, and which is supported jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the leadership program of the New England Opera Theater. For a four-week period, ending at the close of the Tanglewood season August 11, the program will provide a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

★ ★ ★

IN ADDITION to the leadership training, Mr. Goldovsky hopes that his group may also develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world.

Made out of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be light weight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart, impervious to weather, and when perfected should cut down on one of today's largest expenses in the theater — the handling of scenery.

The group will experiment with how materials can be used and re-used, what kind of paints are best suited to the different textures (what kind of paints can be washed off); they will test different kinds of lighting, and they will expose the scenery to all kinds of weather, working with it in the open air.

In addition to stage scenery, they will also construct concert shells and collapsible platforms.

Some pretesting of various materials has already been done, and Mr. Goldovsky has obtained the cooperation and interest of Alcoa and Owens-Corning whose aluminum foils and fiberglas products will be extensively used in the experiments.

★ ★ ★

MR. GOLDOVSKY will build a series of three Monday evening demonstrations in the theater at Tanglewood around the various projects of the opera department and will show the versatility of the new scenic materials. A vartiey of operatic scenes of all styles and periods from the antique to the modern, the fantastic to the realistic, the rococo to the impressionistic, will demonstrate the results of the experiments. A nucleus of 14 singers will perform the vocal parts with piano accompaniment, and Mr. Goldovksy will introduce each scene, explaining the various problems involved in scenery and stage direction, and how they were worked out.

★ ★ ★

FOR EXAMPLE, his final program on Monday evening, August 5, will include portions of Gluck's "Armide," the second act of Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," and the world premiere of a one-act American opera. These three selections provide a complete contrast in style, mood, period and musical content to test the success of the Opera Department's work.

Assisting Mr. Goldovsky on the Opera Department faculty will be Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep, Staging Division; Felix Wolfes, Repertoire; Claude Marks, Elemer Nagy, Scenic Design; Leo Van Witsen, Costume Design, and Thomas de Gaetani, Technical Direction.

DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL-HERALD

JUL 20 1957

Workshop Plans Study Of Scenery

Boris Godolvsky who appeared in lecture recital last winter in the Town Hall series promoted by the Dayton Junior League is heading currently, at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors of operatic projects.

In addition to leadership training, Mr. Godolvsky and his group are working on a new kind of scenery which, he hopes, will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world.

Made from such materials as light metals, plastics and dacron, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to assemble or dismount and impervious to weather.

Mr. Godolvsky believes that such scenery when perfected would cut down on one of today's largest expenses in the theater — the handling of scenery.

In addition to stage scenery the group is constructing concert shells and collapsible platforms.

VARIETY
Wednesday, July 17, 1957

Aluminum & Glass Tested for Scenery

Lenox, Mass., July 16.

Inauguration Monday (15) by the Opera Dept. of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors is designed not only to foster leadership training, but also to develop an entirely new kind of lightweight scenery which will "revolutionize opera and the whole theatrical world."

Director Boris Goldovsky has cooperation of Alcoa and Owens-Corning, whose aluminum and fiberglass products will be extensively used in the experiments. Fabricated from light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be easily transported, quickly assembled and dismantled, impervious to weather.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUL 15 1957

Opera Workshop To Test Scenery

LENOX, Mass., July 14. — Experiments with new types of lightweight scenery will be a feature of a four-week opera workshop for stage directors and designers and conductors to be held by the Berkshire Music Center's opera department under Boris Goldovsky's direction at Tanglewood through Aug. 11.

The experiments will be demonstrated on Monday nights, July 22, 29 and Aug. 5, in performances of opera scenes with piano accompaniment. These will be open to friends of the center. The program for Aug. 5 will include parts of Gluck's "Armide," Act II of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and the first performance of a one-act American opera.

The aim is to develop scenery of light materials, easy to transport and assemble and impervious to weather, which, when perfected, should lessen one of the theater's largest expenses. Besides experimenting with materials and paints, scenery will be exposed to all kinds of weather while working with it outdoors.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.

AUG 1957

Scenery Experiment at Tanglewood

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, hopes that his group may develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world. Made of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart, and impervious to weather. The group is experimenting with how materials can be used and re-used, various kinds of paints, different types of lighting, and they expose the scenery to all kinds of weather, working with it in the open air. In addition to stage scenery, they have also been constructing concert shells and collapsible platforms. Mr. Goldovsky has obtained the cooperation and interest of Alcoa and Owens-Corning whose aluminum foils and fiberglass products are used extensively in the experiments.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 345,684 - S. 477,285

AUG 4 1957

Boris Goldovsky, widely known opera producer and teacher, will augment his classes at the Berkshire music festival, Lenox, Mass. Starting Aug. 11 he will lead a four week workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors. He and his group hope to develop new, lighter scenery made out of plastics and synthetic fabrics.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA
TIMES
Circ. D. 68,623 - S. 78,467

JUL 21 1957

Goldovsky Seeks To Cut Scenery Costs

LENOX, Mass. — Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., announces a new plan for the department. For a four-week period ending at the close of the Tanglewood season Aug. 11, the program will provide a workshop for stage directors, designers and conductors.

In addition to the leadership training, Goldovsky hopes his group may also develop an entirely new kind of scenery which will revolutionize not only opera, but the entire theatrical world. Made out of such materials as light metals, plastics, dacron and other new industrial products, the scenery will be lightweight, easily transported, easy to put together and take apart, impervious to weather, and when perfected should cut down on one of today's largest expenses in the theater — the handling of scenery. In addition to stage scenery, they will also construct concert shells and collapsible platforms.

Times (c)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

AUG 3 1957

Chills, Bedlam, Flu in Prelude to Nagy Operas

By TERE PASCONE

First it was the unexpected cold spell and all he had to wear was his light Summer clothes.

And then it was the noisy oil burner which had to be installed to keep them warm in the stable where they rehearsed.

Next came the noisy banging and sawing of carpenters fixing the main floor that had buckled up with the weather and needed repair so the dancers could practice.

And topping it all was the Oriental flu, spreading like wildfire among the cast and preventing six of the leading singers from performing on opening night.

Dr. Elemer Nagy, head of the Opera Department at Hartt College of Music, can afford to grin now at the recollections. But it was far from a laughing matter at Central City, Col., in late June, as he prepared to stage and direct two operas for the Central City Festival.

"It was awful trying to get substitutes for the ailing singers," he said. "We had to open 'Rigoletto' without Virginia MacWatters in the role of Gilda. And when we opened 'Gypsy Baron', it was worse. All our principals — five of them — were stricken. Hugh Thompson, one of the substitutes, had to learn the leading tenor role in three hours. We were constantly rehearsing with new people, some of whom dropped out because they, too, caught the flu.

"The characteristic about this flu is that the victim suffers severe laryngitis and respiratory difficulties along with a slight fever and just cannot sing. And the strange part of it was that it hit the singers only."

★ ★ ★

BUT ALL'S WELL that ends well and Dr. Nagy said that before the first week of the festival was over, the singers were back on their feet and ready to perform.

As for the other bedeviling problems, they were eased in time, too.

He telephoned home for his Winter slacks and woolen jackets and they were sent just as the snow on the mountains which greeted his arrival melted.

As for the noisy oil burner:

"The singers would put on the heat for 15 minutes until the stable got warm, then shut it off so they wouldn't hear the noise. Then they wouldn't put it on until they felt cold again."

As for the carpenters, they did a rush job, and took their banging with them when they were through.

THESE WERE ADVERSITIES behind the scenes only. They had no affect on the 23,000 that jammed the quaint 750-seat theater during the festival. The theater was erected in 1873. The show went on and the patrons loved it and praises were high in reports of the reviewers. In the Denver Post, Alex Murphee wrote:

"The breathtaking visual beauty of the settings and costumes (designed by Dr. Nagy) have set audiences to applauding as soon as the curtain goes up, before a single note is sung ..."

And in another story, "Instead of a routine performance in the standard vein, Central City audiences see a miracle of artistic rejuvenation. It requires expert resuscitators to restore to vigor an opera (Rigoletto) which had become wan from long and unimaginative repetition. The vitality has been there all along, but the talents of Stage Director Elemer Nagy and Musical Director Emerson Buckley have served to bring it out and heighten it ..."

Dr. Nagy is back East now but there is no rest for him. He's busy at Tanglewood on another project, directing the Tanglewood Opera Workshop at the invitation of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department.

For many weeks, he has been doing research in new materials for theatrical scenery, and on Monday night at Tanglewood, some of that research will be demonstrated in a set to be used for a scene from "Marriage of Figaro."

It's part of a program to be presented by the Tanglewood Opera Department in conjunction with the training program of the New England Opera Theater.

"We'll be experimenting with a new type of set," Dr. Nagy said. "Instead of the traditional lumber and canvas, we will use aluminum frames and plastic. The project is a long one with Mr. Goldovsky. We will just graze the surface this Summer. Right now we are experimenting with dyes to achieve on plastic, a transparent diffused effect. Our aim is to build sets easy to handle and transport without exorbitant cost so as to aid the travel of opera companies ..."

Next Thursday, another experimental set will be used at Tanglewood in an open air performance of scenes from "Hansel and Gretel," Dr. Nagy said.

- PHOTOGRAPH -
ORIGINAL STORED
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

[168]

Photographs of Window Display
Forbes and Wallace Company
Springfield, Massachusetts
July, 1957

C1697

FREEPORT, ILL.
Journal-Standard
Circ. D. 17,381

JUL 9 1957

Summer Music And Theater

Each year sees more projects for summer music or theaters. As the regular commercial theaters in New York and a few other American cities feel the pinch of rising costs, the summer projects enter the field on an amateur or semi-professional basis, partly as schools of music and acting, and without the same ghastly overhead. They also become try-out ventures for new music or plays.

The annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., opened last week. Thousands of Americans began "musical vacations" the same week, at such spots at Chicago's Ravinia Park, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Ipswich, Mass., Interlochen, Mich., and literally scores of other summer music centers.

These al fresco concerts have become central events around which many vacations are planned. More than 80 festivals of music are held during the summer months, without counting the many municipal outdoor concerts.

Attendance at the Tanglewood festival at Lenox, Mass., has grown from 15,000 to more than 136,000 since its first season in 1936. The six-week program, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra in weekend performances, ends Aug. 11.

And when the main show closes at Tanglewood this year, the hot men will take over on Aug. 12 for the first session of the School of Jazz at the Berkshire Music Barn, adjacent to Tanglewood. Lecturing will be such jazz stars as Duke Ellington, Wilbur De Paris and Lennie Tristano.

The king of the summer jazz festivals, though, is the one at Newport. This year more than 125 instrumentalists and singers will perform in the seven concerts. Louis Armstrong, who played at Newport on his birthday on July 4, then moved on to Lewisohn Stadium, New York City, where Satchmo's fans are whomping up what they call "Satchmo Festival Week" until next Saturday.

In Interlochen, Mich., the National Music Camp is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year in a season running from June 23 to Aug. 19. The camp is an outgrowth of a National High School Orchestra assembled in 1927 to play for a convention of school superintendents in Dallas, Tex.

The summer theaters in barns and similar structures, and in a few cases in plants built especially for their purpose, are even more numerous than the music projects. Prominent among them are the Shakespeare festivals at Stratford, Ont., and Stratford, Conn. Chicago has several such summer theaters, in which plays tried out have later had successful runs on Broadway.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 206,408 - S. 279,180

JUL 14 1957

Fabulous New Highways Are Opened For Motorists Seeking Nation's Scenery

WASHINGTON, D. C.: Some people go to Broadway openings or collect new postage stamps for kicks. Others—a lot more—like to be among the first to travel on the U. S. A.'s ever-increasing number of fabulous new highways.

The National Association of Travel Organizations says this is an especially good summer for Americans to automobile-adventure on brand-new roads, for Americans to automobile. Massachusetts, for instance, has a spanking new turnpike extending from Boston's suburbs to the New York state line. It's expected a lot of proper Bostonians this year will get a sudden urge to visit the Berkshires. This may not be so much because of the attraction of the Berkshire Music Festival—desirable as that may be—as to keep from being left out of the conversation when Massachusetts' new toll-road is compared with the thruways of neighbor states.

The Pocono resort area of Pennsylvania is likely to benefit, for the same reason from the new northeastern spur of the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

To your real road fancier there's an added inducement to visiting Virginia's Jamestown Festival. That's to drive over the long-planned, 22-mile scenic Colonial National Parkway, which links Jamestown, to Williamsburg, to Yorktown.

In Montana this summer, you can drive for the first time all the way around mountainous Flathead Lake. And in Hawaii there's a magnificent new road following an historic foot trail up the Nuuanu Pali. That's just a sampling.

Here is a state-by-state survey of what's new in American highway this summer:

★ ★ ★

ARIZONA: The paving of an old wagon road, Arizona 93, has cut off almost 100 miles from the drive between Phoenix and the Las Vegas-Hoover Dam area. The 123-mile stretch, much of it through Joshua forests, is described as "fast, safe and scenic" but there is only one point, Wickieup, where gasoline can be purchased.

★ ★ ★

CALIFORNIA: The 211 miles of U. S. 40 between San Francisco and the Nevada border is being converted to a full freeway . . . The lower deck of the new Richmond-San Rafael bridge across San Francisco Bay is open for traffic and both decks will be in use by September . . . Some $10 million is being spent to widen Redwood Highway (U. S. 101) between the Richardson Bay Bridge and San Rafael . . . The Redwood Empire Association reports: "Despite monumental road projects under way, tourists . . . will not encounter tedious detours thanks to skill of state highway engineers in blending new units with the old" . . . The 360 miles of U. S. 99 between Los Angeles and Sacramento has advanced to freeway status in rural areas . . . The Los Angeles area has two new convict-built roads leading to the Big Pines-Wrightwood and Mt. Baldy winter sports areas. One, the 8000-foot-high Angeles Crest Highway, has views of both Catalina Island, 65 miles to the southwest, and Mt. Whitney, almost 200 miles north.

★ ★ ★

FLORIDA: The 110-mile Florida Turnpike from Ft. Pierce to Miami was opened in January but a tremendous beautification program is still under way. It lops more than 1½ hours of driving time from the old U. S. 1 route . . . U. S. 1, too, is being spruced up. With 64 miles already done, intention is to four-lane it completely from the Georgia line to Miami by sometime next year.

GEORGIA: A new 33-mile stretch of U. S. 23 between Jackson and Macon is complete, and the stretch between Waycross and the Florida line is "primarily completed" . . . Only an eighth-mile stretch remains incomplete in improvement of U. S. 17 from the Florida line to Savannah . . . Georgia Route 17 is being paved from Unicoi Gap to the top of Brasstown Bald, highest point in Georgia.

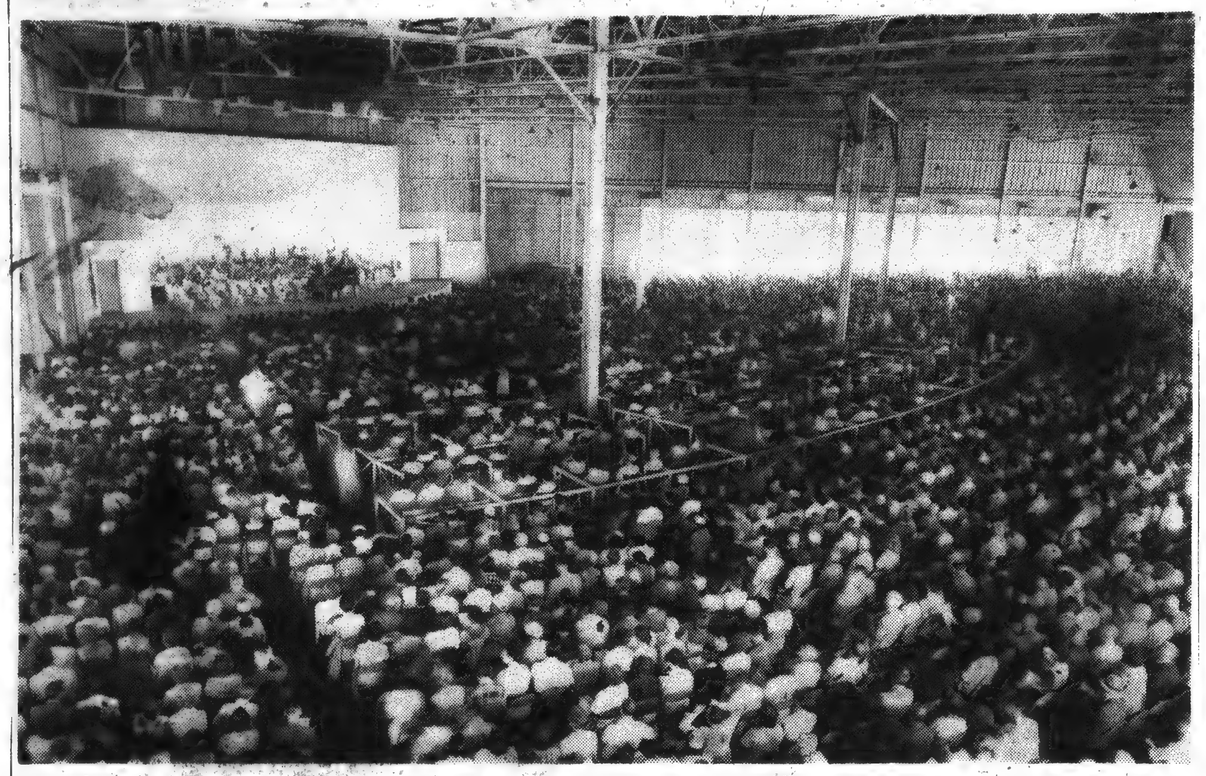
★ ★ ★

ILLINOIS: Chicago's eight-lane, divided Congress Street Expressway from the lake to the Western city limits is now three-quarters open. The last two of the eight miles should be carrying traffic late this year or early next . . . The Calumet Skyway Toll Bridge project, which will bring Indiana Turnpike traffic into the city, is scheduled for completion in March, 1958

C1705

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 28, 1957

Another Sunday of Music in the Shed at Tanglewood



Music under the moon, Friday and Saturday nights, and in the sun on Sunday afternoons by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox. Here is a view showing the orchestra on the stage and also some of the audience. The fourth Sunday concert takes place this afternoon with Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, on the podium. The Berkshire Music Festival has two weeks to go. The final Shed concert takes place Sunday, Aug. 11, when Charles Munch, music director, will lead the orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL, Section II, July 25, 1957

Berlioz To Be Featured At Tanglewood Weekend

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berloiz. Charles Munch, whose special affinity for the works of Berloiz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings, July 26-27, and Pierre Monteax will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

The special feature of this weekend will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, of Berloiz' "L'Enfrance du Christ." The only work of this composer based on biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew), "L'Enfrance du Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais. Cesare Valletti, the well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph and Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary.

At the concert on Friday evening at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berloiz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair," and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony." As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the Orchestra, will be heard in the last movement. Pierre Monteax guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert. He will open his program with excerpts from Berloiz' Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteaux will conduct two works of Paul Hindermith in the second half of the progarm, the Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the well-known Symphony "Mathis der Maler."

GERALD SOUZAY . . . baritone, makes his debut at Tanglewood this weekend as one of the soloists in a performance of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ," Saturday evening at 8:30.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,988

JUL 18 1957

VIOLIST — Joseph De Pasquale, who will be soloist in Berlioz' "Harold in Italy" at the Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, July 26, at 8:30 p.m. in the music shed. Charles Munch leads the Boston Symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 442,970

JUL 21 1957

Berkshire Festival

"L'Enfance du Christ" will be given first performance at Tanglewood next Saturday night by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Biblical work will be a feature of a weekend given largely to the music of Hector Berlioz. Soloists will be Cesare Valletti, Gerard Souzay, Florence Kopleff and Donald Gramm.

Complete programs of the fourth weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be as follows.

Today at 3:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting, Koussevitsky Memorial Concert, Tchaikovsky: Overture-Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet"; Stravinsky: Canticum Sacrum (soloists: John Mc[illegible], tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; the Berkshire Festival Chorus); Tchaikovsky: Violin Concerto (soloist: Isaac Stern).

Wednesday at 8:30, Theater-Concert Hall, The Kroll String Quartet: Haydn: Quartet Op. 77, No. 1; Janacek: String Quartet No. 2; Schubert: "Death and the Maiden" Quartet.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting, Berlioz program—Overture, "The Corsair"; "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist: Joseph De Pasquale); "Fantastic" Symphony.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting, Berlioz: "L'Enfance du Christ" (soloists: Cesare Valletti, tenor; Gerard Souzay, baritone; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Donald Gramm, bass.)

Sunday, July 28, at 2:30, Music Shed, Pierre Monteux conducting, Berlioz: Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith: Overture to "News of the Day;" "Mathis der Maler."

TUESDAY, JULY 23, 1957
NEW LEBANON, NEW YORK

Tanglewood Festival Enters Fourth Week

Concerts of the fourth week end of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berlioz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (July 26-27), and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

CHARLES MUNCH

The special feature of this week end will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ". The Boston Symphony Orchestra has recently recorded this work for RCA Victor.

At the concert on Friday evening (July 26) at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program. The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair", followed by "Harold in Italy," and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony." As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the Orchestra, will be heard in the last movement.

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert (July 28). He will open his program with excerpts from Berlioz' Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet", including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program.

The Kroll String Quartet will present the fourth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall tomorrow night.

Thursday, July 18, 1957
WALLINGFORD POST 11

JOSEPH DE PASQUALE, principal violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is soloist in a performance of Berloiz' "Harold in Italy", at the Berkshire Festival concert of Friday evening, July 26, at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed. Charles Munch leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Music Of Berloiz At Next Berkshire Festival Weekend

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berloiz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (July 26-27), and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

The special feature of this weekend will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ". The only work of this composer based on a Biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew).

Casare Valletti, the well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

At the concert on Friday evening (July 26) at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair", and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony". As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the orchestra, will be heard in the last movement.

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert (July 28). He will open his progrem with excerpts from Berloiz's Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet", including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program: the Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the well-known Symphony "Mathis der Maler".

C1702

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 28, 1957

Another Sunday of Music in the Shed at Tanglewood

Music under the moon, Friday and Saturday nights, and in the sun on Sunday afternoons by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox. Here is a view showing the orchestra on the stage and also some of the audience. The fourth Symphony concert takes place this afternoon with Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, on the podium. The Berkshire Music Festival has two weeks to go. The final Shed concert takes place Sunday, Aug. 11, when Charles Munch, music director, will lead the orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Thursday, July 18, 1957
WALLINGFORD POST 11

JOSEPH DE PASQUALE, principal violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is soloist in a performance of Berlioz' "Harold in Italy", at the Berkshire Festival concert of Friday evening, July 26, at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed. Charles Munch leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Music Of Berloiz At Next Berkshire Festival Weekend

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berloiz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (July 26-27), and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

The special feature of this weekend will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berloiz' "L'Enfance du Christ". The only work of this composer based on a Biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew).

Casare Valletti, the well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

At the concert on Friday evening (July 26) at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair", and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony". As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the orchestra, will be heard in the last movement.

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert (July 28). He will open his progrem with excerpts from Berloiz's Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet", including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program: the Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the well-known Symphony "Mathis der Maler".

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL, Section II, July 25, 1957

Berlioz To Be Featured At Tanglewood Weekend

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berloiz. Charles Munch, whose special affinity for the works of Berloiz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings, July 26-27, and Pierre Monteax will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

The special feature of this weekend will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, of Berloiz' "L'Enfrance du Christ." The only work of this composer based on biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew), "L'Enfrance du Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais. Cesare Valletti, the well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph and Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary.

At the concert on Friday evening at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berloiz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair," and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony." As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the Orchestra, will be heard in the last movement. Pierre Monteux guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert. He will open his program with excerpts from Berloiz' Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteaux will conduct two works of Paul Hindermith in the second half of the progarm, the Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the well-known Symphony "Mathis der Maler."

GERALD SOUZAY . . . baritone, makes his debut at Tanglewood this weekend as one of the soloists in a performance of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ," Saturday evening at 8:30.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,988
JUL 18 1957

VIOLIST — Joseph De Pasquale, who will be soloist in Berlioz' "Harold in Italy" at the Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, July 26, at 8:30 p.m. in the music shed. Charles Munch leads the Boston Symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 442,970
JUL 21 1957

Berkshire Festival

"L'Enfance du Christ" will be given first performance at Tanglewood next Saturday night by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Biblical work will be a feature of a weekend given largely to the music of Hector Berlioz. Soloists will be Cesare Valletti, Gerard Souzay, Florence Kopleff and Donald Gramm.

Complete programs of the fourth weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be as follows.

Today at 3:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting, Koussevitsky Memorial Concert: Tchaikovsky: Overture-Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet"; Stravinsky: Canticum Sacrum (soloists: John Mc[illegible], tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; the Berkshire Festival Chorus); Tchaikovsky: Violin Concerto (soloist: Isaac Stern).

Wednesday at 8:30, Theater-Concert Hall, The Kroll String Quartet: Haydn: Quartet in G, No. 1; Mozart: String Quartet No. 2; Schubert: "Death and the Maiden" Quartet.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting. Berlioz program—Overture, "The Corsair"; "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist: Joseph De Pasquale); "Fantastic Symphony."

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting. Berlioz: "L'Enfance du Christ" (soloists: Cesare Valletti, tenor; Gerard Souzay, baritone; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Donald Gramm, bass.)

Sunday, July 28, at 3:30, Music Shed, Pierre Monteux conducting. Berlioz: Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith: Overture to "News of the Day," "Mathis der Maler."

TUESDAY, JULY 23, 1957
NEW LEBANON, NEW YORK

Tanglewood Festival Enters Fourth Week

Concerts of the fourth week end of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berlioz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (July 26-27), and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

CHARLES MUNCH

The special feature of this week end will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ". The Boston Symphony Orchestra has recently recorded this work for RCA Victor.

At the concert on Friday evening (July 26) at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program. The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair", followed by "Harold in Italy," and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony." As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the Orchestra, will be heard in the last movement.

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert (July 28). He will open his program with excerpts from Berlios' Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet", and will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program.

The Kroll String Quartet will present the fourth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall tomorrow night.

PASQUALE, of the Bos- Orchestra, is rformance of in Italy", at Festival con- evening, July in the Music Munch leads mphony Orch-

Berlioz Berkshire Weekend

the fourth week- Berkshire Fes- ic Shed at Tan- Mass., will be ed to the music erlioz. Charles Director of the ony Orchestra, affinity for the is well known, the concerts of turday evenings nd Pierre Mon- guest conductor rnoon, July 28. feature of this e the first Tan- mance, on Sat- July 27, of Ber- e du Christ". of this compos- Biblical text el According to the well- tenor of the pera, will sing role of the Nar- ouzay, baritone, Florence Kop- tery; and a va- es will be tak- ramm, includ- dorus, and The mily.

ert on Friday 8) at 8:30, Dr. nduct another ram featuring Joseph de Pas- the solo part aly." The pro- with the Over- ", and will Fantastic Sym- s in Boston formances of huge bells, es- France for Dr. orchestra, will ast movement. r, guest con- his second nce at this Festival, di- afternoon's He will open excerpts from Symphony, ", including Love' Scene, zo, and Great Capulets.' Mr.

conduct two Hindemith in of the pro- ure to the Op- Day" and the phony "Mathis

The Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 26, 1957—17

SOLOIST TONIGHT at the Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood will be Joseph de Pasquale, principal violist with Boston Symphony Orchestra. He will play in the performance of Berlioz' "Harold in Italy." Munch will conduct.

First of 3 Berlioz Concerts Opens Tonight at Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present the first of three weekend concerts featuring the music of Berlioz at the Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood. The all-Berlioz concert in the Shed will include the Overture "Le Corsair," the symphony "Harold in Italy," with the Orchestra's principal violist, Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, and the "Fantastic Symphony."

Tomorrow evening at 8:30, Dr. Munch will present the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' sacred trilogy "L'Enfance du Christ." The soloists will include Cesaere Valletti, tenor, as narrator; Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary; Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph; and Donald Gramm, bass, as Herod, Polydorus, and the father of a family. The festival chorus has been prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon. The trio of the Young Ishmaelites in the third part of the work will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

Monteux Sunday

The closing concert of this weekend on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux who will open his program with excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz. These will include Introduction; Love Scene; The Capulets' Garden, Queen Mab; Romeo alone; Melancholy; Concert and Ball and Great Feast at the Capulets. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux will conduct two works by Paul Hindemith, the overture to the opera "News of the Day" and the symphony, "Mathis der Maler."

Tickets for all these concerts are available at the Tanglewood Box Office, and general admission to the grounds is sold on the day of each performance.

The rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock will be open to the public. The admission is for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. A concert of contemporary chamber music will be presented on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in the chamber music hall and will be performed by musicians attending the school under the auspices of the Rromm Music Foundation. Known as Fromm Fellows, these musicians devote themselves entirely to performance, study, and teaching of contemporary music. This concert, as well as the Sunday morning chamber music concert at 10 o'clock and the composer's forum on Sunday evening at 8:30, will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

JUL 21 1957

Berlioz Will Top List At Tanglewood

Concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon, will be devoted primarily to the works of Hector Berlioz.

Friday, at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Overture to "The Corsair" and in the "Fantastic" Symphony. The program will also include "Harold In Italy," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist.

Saturday at the same hour, Mr. Munch and the orchestra will be heard in Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ." Soloists will be Cesare Valletti, tenor, Gerard Souzay, baritone, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will also take part.

Monteux to Conduct

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony will direct performances of excerpts from "Romeo And Juliet," by Berlioz, as well as Hindemith's "News Of The Day" Overture and "Mathis der Maler."

Wednesday, at 8:30 in the concert hall at Tanglewood, the Kroll String Quartet will do the Haydn Opus 77, No. 1, and Schubert's "Death And The Maiden," as well as the Second Quartet by Janacek.

Transcript (e)
ORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 26 1957

Tanglewood Will Present All Berlioz This Weekend

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present the first of three weekend concerts, featuring the music of Berlioz at the Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood in Lenox. The all-Berlioz concert in the Music Shed will include the Overture "Le Corsair," the symphony "Harold in Italy," with the orchestra's principal violinist, Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, and the "Fantastic Symphony."

First Performance

Tomorrow evening at 8:30, Dr. Munch will present the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' Sacred Trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ." The soloists will include Cesare Valletti, tenor, as Narrator; Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary; Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph; and Donald Gramm, bass, as Herod, Polydorus, and the Father of a Family. The Festival Chorus has been prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon. The Trio of the Young Ishmaelites in the third part of the work will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

The closing concert of this weekend on Sunday afternoon, July 28, at 2:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux who will open his program with excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz. These will include Introduction; Love Scene; The Capulets' Garden, Queen Mab; Romeo alone; Melancholy; Concert and Ball and Great Feast at the Capulets. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux wil conduct two works by Paul Hindemith, the Overture to the opera "News of the Day" and the Symphony, "Mathis der Maler."

Open to Public

The rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock will be open to the public. A small admission charge will be taken for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

A concert of contemporary chamber music will be presented on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in the Chamber Music Hall and will be performed by musicians attending the school under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation. Known as Fromm Fellows, these musicians devote themselves entirely to performance, study and teaching of contemporary music. This concert, as well as the Sunday morning Chamber Music Concert at 10 o'clock and the Composer's Forum on Sunday evening at 8:30 will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, TUESDAY, JULY 23, 1957

Music of Berlioz Slated At Berkshire Festival

The first Tanglewood performance of Hector Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" will be given Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the Shed at the Berkshire Festival grounds near Lenox, Mass., with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

THE FOURTH weekend of the festival will feature the music of Berlioz and include on Friday evening, same hour, another all-Berlioz program featuring Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, in the solo part of "Harold in Italy."

Pierre Monteux will be the guest conductor Sunday and will present excerpts from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" and two works by Paul Hindemith.

* * *

DR. MUNCH has announced that Cesare Valletti, well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the role of the Narrator in "L'Enfance du Christ" with Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and a number of bass roles by Donald Gramm. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be performed by Lorna Cooke deVaron and the "Trio of the Young Ishmaelites" will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

THE WORK is the only one by Berlioz based on a biblical text (from the Gospel Acocrding to St. Matthew). It is in three parts, "Herod's Dream," "The Flight Into Egypt" and "The Arrival at Sais."

In addition to "Harold in Italy" the Friday evening program will include the overture, "Le Corsair" and the "Fantastic Symphony." The huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be heard in the last movement of the "Fantastic Symphony."

* * *

HINDEMITH'S "News of the Day" and "Mathis der Maler" will be presented by Pierre Monteux in the Sunday afternoon program, 2:30 p.m., in addition to the "Romeo and Juliet" music.

The Kroll String Quartet will present a program tomorrow at 8:30 o'clock in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Quartet members are William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello. The program will include the Haydn "Quartet opus 77, number 1" Janacek's "String Quartet number 2" and Schubert's "Death and the Maiden."

Tickets for all concerts are on sale at the Tanglewood box office.

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK CITY

AUG 1957

■ Cesare Valetti, Metropolitan Opera tenor, flew to Florence, Italy, for the Festival performances of Rossini's rarely heard "La Donna del Lago." He returned for the Puerto Rico Opera season, flew back to Rome for the RCA Victor recording of "Madama Butterfly," and, typifying the heading of this department, winged back to Tanglewood, Mass., July 24, for the Berkshire Festival.

Thursday, July 18, 1957
MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Notable Singers Will Be Heard at Tanglewood In "L'Enfance du Christ"

Cesare Valletti, well known lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will make his Berkshire Festival debut as the narrator in the performance of Berlioz' "Le'Enfance du Christ" with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, on Saturday evening, July 27. Mr. Valletti, who appeared for the first time with the Boston Symphony in a performance of the same work during the season just past, made his Metropolitan debut in the fall of 1953. Italian by birth, he divides his time between performances at La Scala, Milan, and the Metropolitan Opera in addition to many recital performances throughout the country. He made his Town Hall debut in New York in the fall of 1954.

Gerard Couzay, who sings the part of Joseph in the performance of July 27, also makes his first appearance at Tanglewood. He has sung with the Boston Symphony Orchestra a number of times since his first American concert appearances in 1950. Mr. Souzay was born in France and pursued his career there, becoming an outstanding recitalist and appearing with the London Philharmonic, the Belgian Philharmonic and the Societe des Concerts du Conservatoire du Paris, where the conductor was the present Music Director of the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch.

Florence Kopleff, contralto, is familiar to Berkshire Festival audiences, haivng appeared in many concerts at Tanglewood during the past few years. Miss Kopleff, a former student of the Berkshire Music Center, sang for many years with the Robert Shaw Chorale, touring with them all over the country and throughout Europe and the Near East. She will be heard in the role of Mary in the present performance of "L'Enfance du Christ."

Donald Gramm, bass, has also appeared often at the Berkshire Festival, having been soloist already this season in the St. Matthew Passion and the Brahms "Liebeslieder." American-born, Mr. Gramm has appeared with a number of orchestras in this country as well as on radio and television. He is a leading singer of the New York City Opera Company. Mr. Gramm will perform three roles in "Le'Enfance du Christ," Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

JUL 23 1957

Works Of Berlioz To Be Featured At Tanglewood

The works of Berlioz will be featured at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, over the coming weekend. Earlier in the week, on Wednesday, there will be a chamber music concert by the Kroll string quartet.

Program for the Wednesday night concert is: Haydn Quartet Op. 77, No. 1, Janacek String Quartet No. 2, and Schubert "Death and the Maiden" Quartet.

On Friday night the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will play Overturre "Le Corsair" from "Harold in Italy" with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, and the Fantastic Symphony, both by Berlioz. On Saturday night Dr. Munch will lead symphony and Berkshire Festival Chorus in "L'Enfance du Christ".

Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra in Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz, and Hindemith's "News of the Day" overture from "Mathis der Maler".

DORIOT ANTHONY DWYER, first flute of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be one of the soloists with BSO tonight in the Music Shed during the performance of Berlioz' Sacred Triology, "L'Enfance du Christ."

Berlioz' Works To Continue At Weekend Festival Concerts

TANGLEWOOD — Dr. Charles Munch will present the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' Sacred Triology, "L'Enfance du Christ," at the Berkshire Festival concert in the Music Shed tonight at 8:30.

Last night in the first of three weekend concerts featuring the music of Berlioz, the attendance was about 6,200. With fair weather over the weekend, another large crowd is expected at the Tanglewood concerts tonight and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

Tonight's soloists will include Cesare Valletti, tenor, as narrator; Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary; Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph; and Donald Gramm, bass, as Herod, Polydorus, and the father of a family.

The Festival Chorus has been prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon. The trio of the young Ishmaelites in the third part of the work will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes, and Bernard Zighera, harp.

Monteux Tomorrow

The closing concert of this weekend tomorrow will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux, who will open his program with excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz. These will include introduction, love scene, the Capulets' garden, Queen Mab, Romeo alone, melancholy, concert and ball and great feast at the Capulets. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux will conduct two works by Paul Hindemith, the overture to the opera, "News of the Day," and the symphony, "Mathis der Maler."

Cesare Valletti

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100

JUL 20 1957

Munch Conducts At Tanglewood

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berlioz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (July 26-27), and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

The special feature of this weekend will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ." The only work of this composer on a biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew), "L'Enfance due Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight Into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais. Dr. Munch has performed the work in full in Boston, and the Little Orchestra Society has made it a yearly tradition in New York. Cesare Valletti, the well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, and the "Trio of the Young Ishmaelites" will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighers, harp. The Boston Symphon Orchestra has recently recorded this work for RCA Victor.

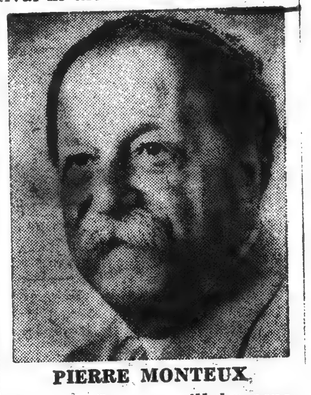
At the concert on Friday evening (July 26) at 8:3p, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair," and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony." As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the Orchestra, will be heard in the last movement.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550

JUL 18 1957

Berkshire Series Features Berlioz July 22 Weekend

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berlioz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings, July 26-27, and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor Sunday afternoon, July 28.



PIERRE MONTEUX

The special feaure of this weekend will be the first Tanglewood performance, Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ."

At the concert Friday evening, July 26, at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair," and and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony."

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert July 28. He will open his program with excerpts from Berlioz' Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet." Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program: the Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the Symphony "Mathis de Maler."

The Kroll String Quartet will present the fourth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall July 24 with a program of quartets by Haydn, Janacek and Schubert.

All proceeds of this concert, and the succeeding concerts in the Chamber Music Series on July 13 and Aug. 7, will be devoted to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 27 1957

Boston Symphony Is Giving Weekend Tanglewood Series

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra last evening presented an entire program of Hector Berlioz in the first concert of the second weekend series at the Tanglewood Music Shed.

An estimated 6,200 persons were present at the opening of a weekend festival which will feature the music of Paul Hindemith, conducted solely by Pierre Monteux, and Berlioz.

The evening began with the overture, "Le Corsa Re," and was followed by "Harold in Italy" a symphony with viola solo. Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, gave a repeat performance of this work after an initial playing at Tanglewood two years ago.

The program was concluded by the offering of Berlioz's famous composition, the "Fantastic Symphony."

Tonight at the Music Shed, Berlioz's sacred trilogy, "L'Enfante du Christ," will be introduced to the Tanglewood audience. The soloists will be the lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, Cesare Valetti; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Gerard Souzay, baritone; and Donald Gramm, bass. The festival chorus was trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

Tomorrow afternoon Pierre Monteux will conducted the Boston Symphony, presenting excerpts from Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" and "News of the Day" overture and "Mathis der Maler" by Hindemith.

The next weekend at Tanglewood will open with the debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, Aug. 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon next week will be conducted by Dr. Munch, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time. His program will include Brahms Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. Mr. Schuricht, prior to his tour last season with the Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, was known in this country principally by his many recordings. Earlier this summer Mr. Schuricht conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival, and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival.

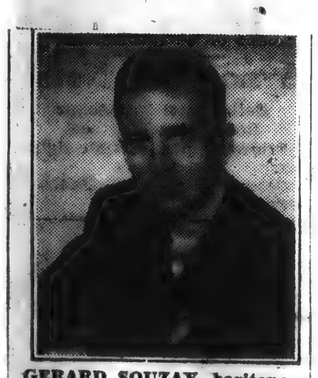
Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival next Saturday evening, Aug. 3, when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Dr. Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber. The ballet "Medea" from which this work is an excerpt was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it is dedicated, in 1946. The present scoring for full orchestra of "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" was completed in 1955.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Concerts on July 31 at 8:30 will be devoted to a song recital by the French baritone, Gerard Souzay, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408

JUL 18 1957



GERARD SOUZAY, baritone, makes his first appearance at Tanglewood as one of the soloists in a performance of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" on Saturday evening, July 27, at 8:30 p.m., in the Music Shed. Other soloists are Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm and Cesare Valletti. Charles Munch leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

C1720

SYRACUSE HERALD JOURNAL, July 18, 1957 27

MUSIC IN THE BERKSHIRES. Joseph de Pasquale, left, principal violinist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in a Festival concert in "Tanglewood" July 26 when the Boston Symphony plays the Berlioz "Harold in Italy." George Souzay, baritone, will be among soloists July 27 there in the Berlioz "L'Enfance du Christ." These concerts are in the Music Shed.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 28 1957

MONTEUX DIRECTS TODAY'S CONCERT

In His Final Program of Season

Lenox, July 27—The final concert of the fourth week end of The 1957 Berkshire Festival will take place in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon at 2.30. Pierre Monteux, veteran conductor, will appear for the last time this season.

Featured Composer

Mr. Monteux will devote the first half of his program to the featured composer of the week end, Hector Berlioz, with a performance of excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet." In the second half, Mr. Monteux will present two works by Paul Hindemith, the Overture to the opera, "News of the Day" and the Symphony, "Mathis der Maler."

Tickets are still available for this concert at the Tanglewood Box Office.

The Sunday morning Chamber Music concert at 10 a. m. and the Sunday evening Composer's Forum at 8.30 p. m. are both open to members of the Friends of Berkshire Music Center.

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN SPRINGFIELD MASS. JULY 28, 1957

In Spotlight at Tanglewood Events for This Week

On left: Cesare Valletti, tenor star of the Metropolitan Opera, who will be one of the soloists in the Tanglewood Music Shed performance of Berlioz' "L' Enfrance du Christ" Saturday night. Center: Boris Goldovsky, left, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center and Ralph Berkowitz, right, dean of the summer music school, make plans for the three demonstrations which the opera department will give at Tanglewood—the first tomorrow night at 8.30 and the others on July 29 and Aug. 5. On right: Joseph DePasquale, principal violist of the Boston Symphony, who will be soloist in a performance of Berlioz' "Harold in Italy" in the Music Shed next Friday night.

Festival's Next Week End Offers Music of Berlioz

Munch Directs Orchestra Friday in 'Harold in Italy,' and for Saturday It Will Be L'Enfance du Christ'; Kroll String Quartet Wednesday

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed, at Tanglewood, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berlioz is well known will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (July 26-27), and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

"L'Enfance du Christ"

The special feature of next week end will be first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday night, July 27, of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ." The only work of this composer based on a biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew), "L'Enfance du Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais.

Dr. Munch has performed the work in full in Boston, and the Little Orchestra Society has made it a yearly tradition in New York. Cesare Valletti, the well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

PIERRE MONTEUX

Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kofleff, contralto, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a family.

The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, and the Trio of the Young Ishmelites" will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes, and Bernard Zighera, harp. The Boston Symphony Orchestra has recently recorded this work for RCA Victor.

At the concert on Friday night (July 26) at 8.30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair," and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony." As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the orchestra will be heard in the last movement.

"Romeo and Juliet".

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert (July 28). He will open his program with excerpts from Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program; the overture to the opera "News of the Day" and the well-known symphony "Mathis der Maler."

The Kroll String Quartet will present the fourth in the series of Wednesday night chamber music concerts at 8.30 in the Chamber Music Hall on July 24 with a program of quartets by Haydn, Janacek and Schubert. The quartet has been heard often at Tanglewood, and its director, William Kroll, violin, has been for many years one of the heads of the chamber music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. Other members of the quartet are: Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello. All proceeds of this concert, and the succeeding concerts in the Chamber Music Series on July 31 and August 7, will be devoted to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Complete programs for the week are:

Wednesday, July 24, 8.30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall, Kroll String Quartet; Haydn, Quartet Op. 77, No. 1; Janacek, String Quartet No. 2; Schubert, "Death and the Maiden" Quartet.

Friday, July 26, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Berlioz, Overture "Le Corsair," "Harold in Italy" (Soloist: Joseph de Pasquale), Fantastic Symphony, conductor: Charles Munch.

Saturday, July 27, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Berlioz, "L'Enfance du Christ." (Soloists: Cesare Valletti, tenor; Gerard Souzay, baritone; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Donald Gramm, bass). Conductor: Charles Munch.

Sunday, July 28, 2.30 p. m. Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Berlioz, Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith, "News of the Day" Overture; Hindemith, "Mathis der Maler"; Conductor: Pierre Monteux.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 185,173
JUL 21 1957

Tanglewood Will Feature Berlioz Work

HECTOR BERLIOZ will be the featured composer at next weekend's concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Tchaikovsky is top man on the current weekend programs in the Shed.

Special prominence among the Berlioz programs is given the first Tanglewood performance Saturday evening of "L'Enfance du Christ," the only work Berlioz based on a Biblical script. Charles Munch will conduct. He has presented the composition in full in Boston, and the Little Orchestra Society in New York has made it a yearly tradition there.

Soloists for the Tanglewood performance are Cesare Valletti, Metropolitan Opera tenor; Gerard Souzay, baritone; Florence Kopleff, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass. Also taking part will be the Berkshire Festival Chorus, under the direction of Lorna Cooke de Varon, and the "Trio of the Young Ishmaelites," Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes, and Bernard Zighera, harp.

Friday night's all-Berlioz concert, also to be conducted by Munch, will include "Le Corsair" Overture, "Harold in Italy," featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, and the "Fantastic" Symphony.

Pierre Monteux will make his second and last appearance as guest conductor at Tanglewood at the Sunday afternoon concert, in which Hindemith will share the program with Berlioz. The first part of the program will consist of excerpts from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet." In the second half Hindemith's Overture to "News of the Day" and "Mathis der Maler" will be played.

Included in the week's program's is the fourth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall. This will be given by the Kroll String Quartet, playing Quartet, Op. 77, No. 1, Haydn; String Quartet No. 2, Janacek, and "Death and the Maiden" Quartet, Schubert.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408
JUL 18 1957

Music Of Berloiz At Next Berkshire Festival Weekend

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berlioz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (July 26-27), and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

The special feature of this weekend will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ". The only work of this composer based on a Biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew).

Casare Valletti, the well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

At the concert on Friday evening (July 26) at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair", and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony". As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the orchestra, will be heard in the last movement.

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert (July 28). He will open his program with excerpts from Berloiz's Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet", including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program: the Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the well-known Symphony "Mathis der Maler".

Daily Hampshire Gazette
7/19/57

Munch, Monteux To Wield Baton On July 26, 27

Concerts of the fourth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berlioz is well known, will conduct the concerts next Friday and Saturday evenings, July 26-27, and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

The special weekend feature will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ." The only work of this composer based on a biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew), "L'Enfance du Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais.

Dr. Munch has performed the work in full in Boston, and the Little Orchestra Society has made it a yearly tradition in New York. Cesare Valletti, the well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contrato, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, and the "Trio of the Young Ishmaelites" will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp. The Boston Symphony Orchestra has recently recorded this work.

At the concert next Friday evening at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violinist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair," and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony." As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work, the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the orchestra, will be heard in the last movement.

Florence Kopleff, contralto, is familiar to Berkshire Festival audiences, having appeared in many concerts at Tanglewood during the past few years. This season she already has appeared in Bach's St. Matthew Passion and a performance of Brahm's "Liebeslieder" in the chamber music series. She later will be heard once again in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the closing concert on Aug. 11.

Miss Kopleff, a former student of the Berkshire Music Center, sang for many years with the Robert Shaw Chorale, touring with them all over this country and throughout Europe and the Near East. She will be heard in the role of Mary in the present performance of "L'Enfance du Christ."

All three of these artists also may be heard in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's recording of the Berlioz work.

Donald Gramm, bass, has appeared often at the Berkshire Festival, having been soloist already this season in the St. Matthew Passion and the Brahms "Liebeslieder." He will also be heard in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" on July 21 and in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Aug. 11. American-born, Mr. Gramm has appeared with a number of orchestras in this country as well as on radio and television. He is a leading singer of the New York City Opera Company. Mr. Gramm will perform three roles in "L'Enfance du Christ," Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

N. Y. Staats-Zeitung und Herold, Freitag, 26. Juli 19

Sonntag deutsche Musik im Berkshire Festival

In Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., dirigiert Pierre Monteux Sonntag nachmittags 2.30 Uhr im Rahmen des Berkshire Festival, das noch bis zum 11. August läuft, "Neues vom Tage", Ouvertüre und "Mathis der Maler" von Paul Hindemith. — Einleitend werden Auszüge aus Berlioz' "Romeo et Juliette" zu Gehör gebracht. — Morgen Samstag dirigiert Charles Munch das Oratorium "L'Enfance du Christ" von Hector Berlioz, mit dem Berkshire Festival Chorus und den Solisten: Florence Kopleff, Cesare Valetti, Donald Gramm und Gerard Souzay. Der instrumentale Teil aller [illegible] wird bekanntlich durch das Symphony Orchester Boston be[illegible]

E174J

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 21, 1957.

The New York Times (by Sam Falk); Joe Petrovec

MID-SEASON AT TANGLEWOOD—The Boston Symphony Orchestra awaits the conductor in the Music Shed at Berkshire Festival. Pierre Monteux, at left, ascends the podium next Sunday. This Friday and Saturday Charles Munch, above, will direct two Berlioz programs.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 21, 1957

Left to right: Lehman Engel, guest conductor with the Goldman Band tonight; Rise Stevens, singing tomorrow at the Lewisohn Stadium, and Joseph De Pasquale, viola soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Friday night.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 27 1957

Carlet

Gérard Souzay, baritone, will make two appearances at Tanglewood this summer—tonight in the Berlioz "L'Enfance du Christ," and in recital Wednesday night.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

JUL 27 1957

Berlioz Trilogy Tonight, Berkshires

Tonight at 8:30 Charles Munch will present the first Tanglewood performances of Berlioz' Sacred Trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ." The soloists will include Cesare Valletti, tenor, as Narrator; Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary; Gerard Souzey, baritone, as Josepth, and Donald Gramm, bass, as Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family. The Festival Chorus has been prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon. The Trio of the Young Ishmaelites in the third part of the work will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

The rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra this morning at 10 will be open to the public. The admission is $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. A concert of contemporary chamber music will be presented this afternoon at 2:30 in the Chamber Music Hall and will be performed by musicians attending the school under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation.

NEW YORK POST, WEDNESDAY, JULY 24, 1957

'L'Enfance du Christ' At Tanglewood Saturday

Charles Munch, probably the most inspired living conductor of the music of Hector Berlioz, will feature the works of the composer during the coming week-end at Tanglewood home of the Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass.

At Friday night's concert, Munch will lead his Boston Symphony in an all-Berlioz program which includes the "Fantastic Symphony" and the tone poem, "Harold in Italy." Violist Joseph de Pasquale will be soloist. Saturday's bill is the Berlioz Oratorio, "L'Enfance du Christ," which describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts, including antiphonal choruses situated in different parts of the auditorium.

Metropolitan Opera tenor Cesare Valletti will sing the demanding role of the narrator. Baritone Gerard Souzay will be Joseph. Contralto Florence Kopleff will be Mary, while a variety of bass roles will be sung by Donald Gramm. The Berkshire Festival is to perform the choral portions.

Hindemith Sunday

Paul Hindemith will share Sunday's program with Berlioz. Opening with excerpts from the latter composer's "Romeo and Juliet," the concert also features Hindemith's "News of the Day" Overture and his symphony, "Mathis der Maler." Pierre Monteux will be on the podium. H. J.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 29 1957

Berlioz, Hindemith Music Draws 13,039 to Festival

Music by Berlioz and Hindemith was offered by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the second weekend of shed concerts in the current Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. There were 13,039 persons on hand for the programs Saturday night and yesterday afternoon.

Saturday Concert

The Saturday concert was devoted entirely to a performance of "L'Enfance Du Christ," the sacred trilogy by Berlioz. Charles Munch conducted the orchestra, the Festival Chorus and vocal soloists Florence Kopleff, Cesare Valetti, Donald Gramm and Gerald Souzay.

Yesterday's program opened with excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz. The second half was devoted to two works by Hindemith, "News of the Day" overture and "Mathis de Maler." The conductor was Pierre Monteux, making his second and final guest appearance of the season.

The festival continues this week with the customary Wednesday evening chamber music program in the theater-concert hall and shed concerts by the full orchestra Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Artists Wednesday

The artists on Wednesday evening will be Mr. Souzay, a baritone, and pianist Ralph Berkowitz.

The weekend programs will be devoted mainly to the music of Brahms.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

JUL 26 1957

This Week End At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present the first of three week-end concerts featuring the music of Berlioz at the Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood.

The all-Berlioz concert in the Music Shed will include the Overture "Le Corsair," the symphony, "Harold in Italy," with the orchestra's principal violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, and the "Fantastic Symphony."

Tomorrow evening at 8:30, Dr. Munch will present the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ." The soloists will include Cesare Vallett, tenor, as narrator, Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary, Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph; and Donald Gramm, bass, as Herod, Polydorus, and the father of a family. The Festival Chorus has been prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon. The trio of the Young Ishmaelites in the third part of the work will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

The closing concert of this week end on Sunday afternoon, at 2.30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux who will open his program with excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz. These will include Introduction; Love Scene; The Capulets' Garden, Queen Mab; Romeo alone; Melancholy; Concert and Ball and Great Feast at the Capulets. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux will conduct two works by Paul Hindemith, the overture to the opera, "News of the Day" and the symphony, "Mathis der Maler."

Tickets for all these concerts are available at the Tanglewood boxoffice. Tanglewood, and general admission to the grounds is sold on the day of each performance.

Public Rehearsal

The rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow morning at 10 will be open to the public.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independen
Circ. 2,443

JUL 25 195

FESTIVAL WEEK-E DEVOTED TO BE

'L'Enfance du Christ' Is At Tanglewood

Concerts of the fourth the 1957 Berkshire Fest usic Shed at Tanglewoo ill be especially devoted t of Hector Berlioz. Charl usic director of the Bos hony Orchestra, whose e y for the works of Ber hown, will conduct the o riday and Saturday even erre Monteux will be guest r on Sunday afternoon. The special feature of t d will be the first Tanglew rmance on Saturday even of Berlioz's "L'Enf hrist." The only work of t oser based on a biblical te e Gospel according to ), "L'Enfance du Chri es the flight into Egypt Family, and is in thre d's Dream; The Flig pt; and The Arrival at S ch has performed the in Boston, and the Little Society has made it a ye n in New York.

are Valletti, the wel n tenor of the Metr a, will sing the demand e Narrator; Gerard Sou , will be Joseph; Floren contralto, Mary; and a es roles will be taken Gramm, including Hero , and The Father of a Berkshire Festival Cho epared by Lorna Cooke d the "Trio of the Young will be performed by ny Dwyer and James P flutes; and Bernard The Boston Sympho a has recently record for RAC Victor, the concert on Friday 0, Dr. Munch will cond all-Berlioz program fo t violist, Joseph de P ming the solo part in ly." The program wil the Overture, "Le Corsa lose with the "Fantastic ." As always in Boston performances of this wo bells, especially cast in r. Munch and the Orc e heard in the last move re Monteux, guest con make his second and l ce at this year's Be l, directing Sunday concert. He will o n with excerpts from H tic Symphony, "Rome including the well- Scene, Queen Mab Scher Feast at the Capulets x will conduct two wo demith in the second m: the Overture s of the Day" a Symphony "Math concert of contem given on Saturd 27, at 2:30; by are engaged in a s ontemporary mus Tanglewood unde of the Fromm F weekly student o the student orc e Music Shed on at 8:30; the Ch on Sunday morn and the Sunde r's Forum at Music Hall. e open to Friends Music Center.

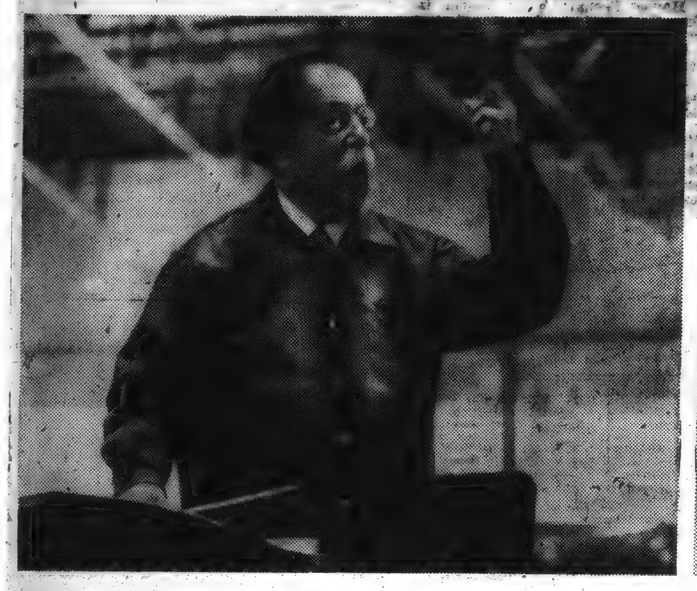
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independe
Circ. 6,159

JUL 26 1957

Music

Berlioz's "L'Enfance-du th Charles Munch c Boston Symphony The Berkshire Festival be presented at Tan box, Mass. on Satur at 8:30 p.m. Sunday's ducted by Pierre Mon lude excerpts from "Ro iet" by Berlioz, Hin ews of the Day", overt Mathis der Maler". On July 31, a song rard Souzay, baritone led by Ralph Berk will present groups by Schu hms and Ravel. t, Carl Schurich orchestra in the B erture and Symphony the Egk sonata for o

[174]



MID-SEASON AT TANGLEWOOD—The Boston Symphony Orchestra awaits the conductor in the Music Shed at Berkshire Festival. Pierre Monteux, at left, ascends the podium next Sunday. This Friday and Saturday Charles Munch, above, will direct two Berlioz programs.

The New York Times (by Sam Falk); Joe Petrovec

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

JUL 26 1957

This Week End At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present the first of three week-end concerts featuring the music of Berlioz at the Berkshire Festival tonight at 8.30 at Tanglewood.

The all-Berlioz concert in the Music Shed will include the Overture "Le Corsair," the symphony, "Harold in Italy," with the orchestra's principal violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, and the "Fantastic Symphony."

Tomorrow evening at 8.30, Dr. Munch will present the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ." The soloists will include Cesare Valletti, tenor, as narrator; Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary; Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph; and Donald Gramm, bass, as Herod, Polydorus, and the father of a family. The Festival Chorus has been prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon. The trio of the Young Ishmaelites in the third part of the work will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

The closing concert of this week end on Sunday afternoon, at 2.30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux who will open his program with excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz. These will include Introduction; Love Scene; The Capulets' Garden, Queen Mab; Romeo alone; Melancholy; Concert and Ball and Great Feast at the Capulets. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux will conduct two works by Paul Hindemith, the overture to the opera, "News of the Day" and the symphony, "Mathis der Maler."

Tickets for all these concerts are available at the Tanglewood boxoffice, Tanglewood, and general admission to the grounds is sold on the day of each performance.

Public Rehearsal

The rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow morning at 10 will be open to the public.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443

JUL 25 195

FESTIVAL WEEK-E
DEVOTED TO B

'L'Enfance du Christ' Is
At Tanglewood

Concerts of the fourth the 1957 Berkshire Fe
usic Shed at Tanglewo ll be especially devoted of Hector Berlioz. Cha usic director of the B ony Orchestra, whose for the works of Be own, will conduct the riday and Saturday eve
erre Monteux will be gue
r on Sunday afternoon.
The special feature of d will be the first Tang rmance on Saturday ev of Berlioz's "L'Enf ght." The only work of oser based on a biblical e Gospel according to

), "L'Enfance du Chri
s the flight into Egyp
Family, and is in thre
od's Dream; The Fl
pt; and The Arrival at ch has performed the
in Boston, and the Littl
Society has made it a ye in New York. are Valletti, the we an tenor of the Met a, will sing the deman
e Narrator; Gerard Sou
, will be Joseph; Flore contralto, Mary; and es roles will be taken Gramm, including Her
, and The Father of Berkshire Festival Ch
epared by Lorna Cooke
the "Trio of the Young will be performed
ny Dwyer and James flutes; and Bernard
The Boston Symph
has recently reco
for RAC Victor.
the concert on Friday
30, Dr. Munch will co
all-Berlioz program ist violist, Joseph de ming the solo parts in ly." The program wi
the Overture, "Le Corsa lose with the "Fantast
." As always in Bost performances of this w bels, especially cast in
r. Munch and the O
e heard in the last mov
re Monteux, guest co make his second and ce at this year's al, directing Sunday concert. He will o
m with excerpts from ic Symphony, "Rom including the wel
cene, Queen Mab Sche
Feast at the Capulets will conduct two w demith in the second m; the Overture
s of the Day" Symphony "Mat

concert of contem given on Satur
27, at 2:30; by are engaged in ontemporary mu
Tanglewood
f the Fromm

weekly student the student Music Shed on at 8:30; the
on Sunday mo
and the Sun
r's Forum at Music Hall.
open to Friend
Music Center.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
eekly Independ
Circ. 6,159

JUL 26 1957

Music

erlioz's "L'Enfance
h Charles Munch
Boston Symphon
the Berkshire Festiva be presented at Ta nox, Mass. on Satur
at 8:30 p.m. Sunday ducted by Pierre Mon
ude excerpts from "Ro
let" by Berlioz, Hin
ews of the Day" ove athis der Maler." On , July 21, a song
ard Souzay, baritone
ied by Ralph Berk
will present groups by hms and Ra t, Carl Schurz orchestra in the B
rture and Symp
the Egk sonata for

NEW YORK, HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 21, 1957.

Left to right: Lehman Engel, guest conductor with the Goldman Band tonight; Rise Stevens, singing tomorrow at the Lewisohn Stadium, and Joseph De Pasquale, viola soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Friday night.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 27 1957

Carlet

Gérard Souzay, baritone, will make two appearances at Tanglewood this summer—tonight in the Berlioz "L'Enfance du Christ," and in recital Wednesday night.

Berlioz Trilogy Tonight, Berkshires

Tonight at 8:30 Charles Munch will present the first Tanglewood performances of Berlioz' Sacred Trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ." The soloists will include Cesare Valletti, tenor, as Narrator; Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary; Gerard Souzey, baritone, as Josepth, and Donald Gramm, bass, as Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family. The Festival Chorus has been prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon. The Trio of the Young Ishmaelites in the third part of the work will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

The rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra this morning at 10 will be open to the public. The admission is $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. A concert of contemporary chamber music will be presented this afternoon at 2:30 in the Chamber Music Hall and will be performed by musicians attending the school under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

JUL 27 1957

NEW YORK POST, WEDNESDAY, JULY 24, 1957

'L'Enfance du Christ' At Tanglewood Saturday

Charles Munch, probably the most inspired living conductor of the music of Hector Berlioz, will feature the works of the composer during the coming week-end at Tanglewood home of the Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass.

At Friday night's concert, Munch will lead his Boston Symphony in an all-Berlioz program which includes the "Fantastic Symphony" and the tone poem, "Harold in Italy." Violist Joseph de Pasquale will be soloist. Saturday's bill is the Berlioz Oratorio, "L'Enfance du Christ," which describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts, including antiphonal choruses situated in different parts of the auditorium.

Metropolitan Opera tenor Cesare Valletti will sing the demanding role of the narrator. Baritone Gerard Souzay will be Joseph. Contralto Florence Kopleff will be Mary, while a variety of bass roles will be sung by Donald Gramm. The Berkshire Festival is to perform the choral portions.

Hindemith Sunday

Paul Hindemith will share Sunday's program with Berlioz. Opening with excerpts from the latter composer's "Romeo and Juliet," the concert also features Hindemith's "News of the Day" Overture and his symphony, "Mathis der Maler." Pierre Monteux will be on the podium. H. J.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 29 1957

Berlioz, Hindemith Music Draws 13,039 to Festival

Music by Berlioz and Hindemith was offered by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the second weekend of shed concerts in the current Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. There were 13,039 persons on hand for the programs Saturday night and yesterday afternoon.

Saturday Concert

The Saturday concert was devoted entirely to a performance of "L'Enfance Du Christ," the sacred trilogy by Berlioz. Charles Munch conducted the orchestra, the Festival Chorus and vocal soloists Florence Kopleff, Cesare Valetti, Donald Gramm and Gerald Souzay.

Yesterday's program opened with excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz. The second half was devoted to two works by Hindemith, "News of the Day" overture and "Mathis de Maler." The conductor was Pierre Monteux, making his second and final guest appearance of the season.

The festival continues this week with the customary Wednesday evening chamber music program in the theater-concert hall and shed concerts by the full orchestra Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Artists Wednesday

The artists on Wednesday evening will be Mr. Souzay, a baritone, and pianist Ralph Berkowitz.

The weekend programs will be devoted mainly to the music of Brahms.

News (e)
NGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

JUL 26 1957

s Week End
At Tanglewo

rles Munch, music dir
Boston Symphony Or
ill present the first of end concerts featuring
of Berlioz at the Berk
al tonight at 8.30 at Ta

all-Berlioz concert in
Shed will include the Le Corsair," the symp
d in Italy," with th
's principal violist, J quale, as soloist, an
stic Symphony."

rrow evening at 8.30
will present the first l performance of Be trilogy, "L'Enfanc
The soloists will in
Valletti, tenor, as na
orence Kopleff, contral
y; Gerard Souzay, bar
s Joseph; and Donal
, bass, as Herod, Poly
and the father of a fam
Festival Chorus has beer
d by Lorna Cooke d
The trio of the Youn ites in the third part o k will be performed b
Anthony Dwyer and Jame sakis, flutes; and Bernard
harp.

closing concert of thi
d on Sunday afternoon, a l be under the direction o Monteux who will open hi with excerpts from "Ro
nd Juliet" by Berlioz;
will include Introduction;
ene; The Capulets' Gar
een Mab; Romeo alone;
oly; Concert and Ball and
east at the Capulets. In nd half of the program,
nteux will conduct two
y Paul Hindemith, the
to the opera, "News of
," and the symphony,
der Maler."
for all these concerts.

able at the Tanglewood
Tanglewood, and gen-
ission to the grounds is
he day of each perform-

Public Rehearsal
ehearsal of the Boston
y Orchestra tomorrow
at 10 will be open to the

mith Music
to Festival

day and Saturday even
Sunday afternoon.

Artists Wednesday

The artists on Wedne
ning will be Mr. Souzay,
and pianist Ralph Berko

The weekend program devoted mainly to the
Brahms.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443

JUL 25 1957

FESTIVAL WEEK-END DEVOTED TO BERLIOZ

"L'Enfance du Christ" Is Featured At Tanglewood

Concerts of the fourth week-end of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berlioz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon.

The special feature of this week-end will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ." The only work of this composer based on a biblical text (from the Gospel according to St. Matthew), "L'Enfance du Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais. Dr. Munch has performed the work in full in Boston, and the Little Orchestra Society has made it a yearly tradition in New York.

Cesare Valletti, the well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, and the "Trio of the Young Ishmaelites" will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp. The Boston Symphony Orchestra has recently recorded this work for RAC Victor.

At the concert on Friday evening at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair," and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony." As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work, the huge bass especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the Orchestra, will be heard in the last movement.

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival directing Sunday afternoon's concert. He will open his program with excerpts from Berlioz's Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program: the Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the well-known Symphony "Mathis der Maler."

An added concert of contemporary music will be given on Saturday afternoon, July 27, at 2:30, by Fromm Fellows who are engaged in a special program in contemporary music this summer at Tanglewood under the sponsorship of the Fromm Foundation.

The usual weekly student concerts will include the student orchestra concert in the Music Shed on Thursday evening at 8:30; the Chamber Music concert on Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock; and the Sunday evening Composer's Forum at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. All these events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

JUL 26 1957

Music

Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ," with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus, will be presented at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday, July 27, at 8:30 p.m. Sunday's concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux will include excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz, Hindemuth's "News of the Day" overture and "Mathis der Maler." On Wednesday, July 31, a song recital by Gerard Souzay, baritone, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, will present early French airs, and groups by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms and Ravel. On Friday night, Carl Schurlicht will conduct the orchestra in the Brahms Tragic Overture and Symphony No. 1, and the Eger sonata for orchestra.

Concerts Listed At Tanglewood For This Week

Lenox, July 22 — The Kroll String Quartet will open the fourth week of concerts at Tanglewood Wednesday at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, featuring music of Haydn, Janacek and Schubert.

Concerts on Friday, Saturday and Sunday will be played in the Music Shed, the first two with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.30. The concert Sunday will be at 2.30 with Pierre Monteax conducting.

Complete programs for the week are:

Wednesday, 8:30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall, Kroll String Quartet
Haydn .... Quartet Op. 77, No. 1
Janacek .... Spring Quartet No. 2
Schubert .... "Death and the Maiden" Quartet

Friday, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra.
Berlioz ... Overture "Le Corsair"
"Harold in Italy"
(Soloist: Joseph De Pasquale)
Fantastic Symphony
Conductor: Charles Munch

Saturday, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Berlioz ... "L'Enfance du Christ"
(Soloists: Cesare Valletti, tenor; Gerard Souzay, baritone; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Donald Gramm, bass)
Conductor: Charles Munch

Sunday, 2:30 p. m. Music Shed, Boston, Symphony Orchestra.
Berlioz ... Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet"
Hindemith ... "News of the Day": Overture
Hindemith ... "Mathis der Maler"
Conductor: Pierre Monteux

Times (c)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

JUL 27 1957

Munch Conducting Tonight at Lenox

The special feature this weekend of Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be the first performance there of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" tonight.

The only work of this composer based on a biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew), "L'Enfance du Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais. Charles Munch has performed the work in full with the Boston Symphony in Boston, and the Little Orchestra Society has made it a yearly tradition in New York.

Cesaro Valletti, Metropolitan Opera tenor, will sing the role of the Narrator; Gerald Souzey, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, and the "Trio of the Young Ishmaelites" will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighers, harp. The Boston Symphony Orchestra has recently recorded this work for RCA Victor.

Pierre Monteux will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival conducting Sunday afternoon's concert: excerpts from Berlioz' Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Paul Hindemith's Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the "Mathis der Maler."

Trio of the Young Ishmaelites in the third part of the work will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

The closing concert of this weekend at 2:30 Sunday afternoon, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux who will open his program with excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz. These will include Introduction; Love Scene; The Capulets' Garden, Queen Mab; Romeo Alone; Melancholy; Concert and Ball and Great Feast at the Capulets. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux will conduct two works by Paul Hindemith: the Overture to the opera "News of the Day" and the Symphony, "Mathis der Maler."

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., TUESDAY, JULY 23, 1957

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,330

JUL 25 1957

Weekend Programs at the Summer Music Festivals

Helen Boatwright, soprano, who has been called "a nearly perfect singer of baroque music" will be assisting artist with the Berkshire Quartet in its fifth chamber music concert of the current series at Music Mountain, Falls Village, this Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Berkshire Quartet will perform the Quartet in E flat Major by Dittersdorf and the Quartet in E Flat Major, Opus 127, by Beethoven, and will assist Helen Boatwright in the following selections: "Wachet auf! ruft uns die Stimme" and "An Wasserfluessen Babylon" by Bender; "Stahat Mater" by Virgil Thomson, contemporary American composer, and "Three Rondels" by Ralph Vaughan Williams, contemporary British composer.

Tanglewood

Berlioz will be the featured composer this weekend at the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood.

Tomorrow night the full orchestra conducted by Charles Munch will perform the nineteenth century French composer's overture "Le Corsair", "Harold in Italy" and Fantastic Symphony.

There will be the usual public orchestra rehearsal in the Shed, Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, proceeds to go to the orchestra's pension fund. In the evening Berlioz choral work "L'Enfance du Christ", will be presented, with Florence Kopleff, Cesare Valletti, Donald Gramm and Gerard Souzy, soloists, assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus. The evening concerts are scheduled for 8:30.

For the Sunday afternoon concert, Pierre Monteux, conductor, Berlioz and Hindemith will share the program. Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz and "News of the Day", Overture "Mathis der Maler" by Hindemith will be performed.

July 25, 1957

Millbrook

ROOK ROUND TABLE

Music of Berlioz to Be Featured at Tanglewood

Concerts of the fourth week end of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (July 26-27), and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

The special feature of this week end will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ." The only work of this composer based on a biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew), "L'Enfance du Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais.

At the concert on Friday evening (July 26) at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy."

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert (July 28). He will open his program with excerpts from Berlioz' Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program: the Overture to the Opera, "News of the Day" and the well-known Symphony, "Mathis der Maler."

• • • •

Seed your garden cover crop in August. Put the ryegrass over everything. It will come up through the vegetables and make good growth in the fall.

THE NEWTOWN BEE, FRIDAY, JULY 26, 1957

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,950

JUL 27 1957

Berlioz Music To Be Featured At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present the first of three weekend concerts featuring the music of Berlioz at the Berkshire Festival at 8:30 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The all-Berlioz concert in the Music Shed will include the Overture "Le Corsair," the symphony "Harold in Italy," with the Orchestra's principal violist, Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, and the "Fantastic Symphony."

Saturday evening, at 8:30, Dr. Munch will present the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' sacred Trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ." The soloists will include Cesare Valletti, tenor, as narrator; Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary; Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph; and Donald Gramm, bass, as Herod, Polydorus, and the Father of a Family. The Festival Chorus will be prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon. The

Music

Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ," with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus, will be presented at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday, July 27, at 8:30 p.m. Sunday's concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux will include excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz, Hindemuth's "News of the Day" overture and "Mathis der Maler." On Wednesday, July 31, a song recital by Gerard Souzay, baritone, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, will present early French airs, and groups by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms and Ravel. On Friday night, Carl Schurlicht will conduct the orc
Overtu
and the

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 101,254

JUL 21 1957

Valleti Debuts At Tanglewood

Cesare Valletti, widely known lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will make his Berkshire Festival debut as the narrator in the performance of Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ" with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday evening.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor Sunday afternoon, July

RED HOOK, N. Y.
ADVERTISER
Circ. W. 1,225

JUL 18 1957

Met Opera Tenor To Debut At Tanglewood

CESARE VALLETTI

Cesare Valletti, well known lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will make his Berkshire Festival debut as the narrator in the performance of Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ" with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, on Saturday evening, July 27. Mr. Valletti, who appeared for the first time with the Boston Symphony in a performance of the same work during the season just past, made his Metropolitan debut in the fall of 1953. Italian by birth, he divides his time between performances at La Scala, Milan, and the Metropolitan Opera in addition to many recital performances throughout the country. He made his Town Hall debut in New York in the fall of 1954.

Gerard Souzay, who sings the part of Joseph in the performance of July 27, also makes his first appearance at Tanglewood. He has sung with the Boston Symphony Orchestra a number of times since his first American concert appearances in 1950. Mr. Souzay was born in France and pursued his career there, becoming an outstanding recitalist and appearing with the London Philharmonic, the Belgian Philharmonic and the Societe des Concerts du Conservatoire du Paris, where the conductor was the present Music Director of the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch. Mr. Souzay is also a popular radio and recording artist. In addition to his appearance with the Orchestra, he will present a song recital at Tanglewood on Wednesday evening, July 31, assisted by Ralph Berkowitz at the piano. His program will include early French airs and groups of songs by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms, and Ravel.

Florence Kopleff, contralto, is familiar to Berkshire Festival audiences, having appeared in many concerts at Tanglewood during the past few years. This season she has already appeared in Bach's St. Matthew Passion and a performance of Brahms's "Liebeslieder" in the Chamber Music Series. She will later be heard once again in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the closing concert on August 11. Miss Kopleff, a former student of the Berkshire Music Center, sang for many years with the Robert Shaw Chorale, touring with them all over the country and throughout Europe and the Near East. She will be heard in the role of Mary in the present performance of "L'Enfance du Christ."

All three of these artists may also be heard in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's recording of the Berlioz work for RCA Victor.

Donald Gramm, bass, has also appeared often at the Berkshire Festival, having been soloist already this season in the St. Matthew Passion and the Brahms' "Liebeslider." He will also be heard in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" on July 21 and in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on August 11. American-born, Mr. Gramm has appeared with a number of orchestras in this country as well as on radio and television. He is a leading singer of the New York City Opera Company. Mr. Gramm will perform three roles in "L'Enfance du Christ": Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

News (e)
NGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,585

JUL 26 1957

s Week End
At Tanglewo

rles Munch, music dir
Boston Symphony Or
ill present the first of
end concerts featuring
of Berlioz at the Berk
al tonight at 8.30 at Ta

all-Berlioz concert in
Shed will include the Le Corsair," the symph d in Italy," with the
's principal violist, Jo quale, as soloist, and
stic Symphony."

rrow evening at 8.30,
will present the first performance of Be trilogy, "L'Enfance
The soloists will in Valletti, tenor, as na
orence Kopleff, contralt
y; Gerard Souzay, bar
s Joseph; and Donald
, bass, as Herod, Poly
and the father of a fam
Festival Chorus has been d by Lorna Cooke de
The trio of the Young ites in the third part of k will be performed by nthony Dwyer and James
sakis, flutes; and Bernard
harp.

losing concert of this d on Sunday afternoon, at be under the direction of fonteux who will open his
with excerpts from "Ro-
nd Juliet" by Berlioz.
ill include Introduction;
ene; The Capulets' Gar-
en Mab; Romeo alone;
oly; Concert and Ball and
east at the Capulets. In nd half of the program,
nteux will conduct two
y Paul Hindemith, the
to the opera, "News of
" and the symphony,
der Maler."

for all these concerts

able at the Tanglewood
Tanglewood, and gen-
ission to the grounds is
he day of each perform-

Public Rehearsal
hearsal of the Boston
y Orchestra tomorrow
at 10 will be open to the

mith Music
to Festival

day and Saturday ever
Sunday afternoon.

Artists Wednesday

The artists on Wedn
ning will be Mr. Souzay,
and pianist Ralph Berko

The weekend progra devoted mainly to the
Brahms.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443

JUL 25 1957

FESTIVAL WEEK-END DEVOTED TO BERLIOZ

"L'Enfance du Christ" Is Featured At Tanglewood

Concerts of the fourth week-end of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose special affinity for the works of Berlioz is well known, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon.

The special feature of this week-end will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ." The only work of this composer based on a biblical text (from the Gospel according to St. Matthew), "L'Enfance du Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais. Dr. Munch has performed the work in full in Boston and the Little Orchestra Society has made it a yearly tradition in New York.

Cesare Valletti, the well-known Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing the demanding role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, and the "Trio of the Young Ishmaelites" will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp. The Boston Symphony Orchestra has recently recorded this work for RAC Victor.

At the concert on Friday evening at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy." The program will open with the Overture, "Le Corsair," and will close with the "Fantastic Symphony." As always in Boston Symphony performances of this work, the huge bells, especially cast in France for Dr. Munch and the Orchestra, will be heard in the last movement.

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival directing Sunday afternoon's concert. He will open his program with excerpts from Berlioz's Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program: the Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the well-known Symphony "Mathis der Maler."

An added concert of contemporary music will be given on Saturday afternoon, July 27, at 2:30, by Fromm Fellows who are engaged in a special program in contemporary music this summer at Tanglewood under the sponsorship of the Fromm Foundation.

The usual weekly student concerts will include the student orchestra concert in the Music Shed on Thursday evening at 8:30; the Chamber Music concert on Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock; and the Sunday evening Composer's Forum at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. All these events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Bee
EWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

JUL 26 1957

Music

Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ," with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus, will be presented at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday, July 27, at 8:30 p.m. Sunday's concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux will include excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz, Hindemuth's "News of the Day" overture and "Mathis der Maler." On Wednesday, July 31, a song recital by Gerard Souzay, baritone, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, will present early French airs, and groups by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms and Ravel. On Friday night, Carl Schuricht will conduct the orchestra in the Brahms Tragic Overture and Symphony No. 1, and the Egk sonata for orchestra.

Concerts Listed At Tanglewood For This Week

Lenox, July 22 — The Kroll String Quartet will open the fourth week of concerts at Tanglewood Wednesday at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, featuring music of Haydn, Janacek and Schubert.

Concerts on Friday, Saturday and Sunday will be played in the Music Shed, the first two with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:30. The concert Sunday will be at 2:30 with Pierre Monteax conducting.

Complete programs for the week are:

Wednesday, 8:30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall, Kroll String Quartet
Haydn .... Quartet Op. 77, No. 1
Janacek .... Spring Quartet No. 2
Schubert .... "Death and the Maiden" Quartet

Friday, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra.
Berlioz ... Overture "Le Corsair"
"Harold in Italy"
(Soloist: Joseph De Pasquale)
Fantastic Symphony
Conductor: Charles Munch

Saturday, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Berlioz ... "L'Enfance du Christ"
(Soloists: Cesare Valletti, tenor; Gerard Souzay, baritone; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Donald Gramm, bass)
Conductor: Charles Munch

Sunday, 2:30 p. m. Music Shed, Boston, Symphony Orchestra.
Berlioz ... Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet"
Hindemith ... "News of the Day" Overture
Hindemith..."Mathis der Maler"
Conductor: Pierre Monteux

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

JUL 27 1957

Munch Conducting Tonight at Lenox

The special feature this weekend of Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be the first performance there of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" tonight.

The only work of this composer based on a biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew), "L'Enfance du Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais. Charles Munch has performed the work in full with the Boston Symphony in Boston, and the Little Orchestra Society has made it a yearly tradition in New York.

Cesaro Valletti, Metropolitan Opera tenor, will sing the role of the Narrator; Gerald Souzey, baritone, will be Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and a variety of bass roles will be taken by Donald Gramm, including Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, and the "Trio of the Young Ishmaelites" will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighers, harp. The Boston Symphony Orchestra has recently recorded this work for RCA Victor.

Pierre Monteux will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival conducting Sunday afternoon's concert: excerpts from Berlioz' Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Paul Hindemith's Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the "Mathis der Maler."

Trio of the Young Ishmaelites in the third part of the work will be performed by Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

The closing concert of this weekend at 2:30 Sunday afternoon, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux who will open his program with excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz. These will include Introduction; The Capulets' Love Scene; The Capulets' Garden, Queen Mab; Romeo Alone; Melancholy; Concert and Ball at the Great Feast at the Capulets. The trio of the Young Ishmaelites in the second half of the program will be performed by Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program: the Overture to the Opera "News of the Day" and the well-known Symphony "Mathis der Maler."

An added concert of contemporary music will be given on Saturday afternoon, July 27, at 2:30, by Fromm Fellows who are engaged in a special program in contemporary music this summer at Tanglewood under the sponsorship of the Fromm Foundation.

The usual weekly student concerts will include the student orchestra concert in the Music Shed on Thursday evening at 8:30; the Chamber Music concert on Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock; and the Sunday evening Composer's Forum at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. All these events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,330

JUL 25 1957

Weekend Programs at the Summer Music Festivals

Helen Boatwright, soprano, who has been called "a nearly perfect singer of baroque music" will be assisting artist with the Berkshire Quartet in its fifth chamber music concert of the current series at Music Mountain, Falls Village, this Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Berkshire Quartet will perform the Quartet in E flat Major by Dittersdorf and the Quartet in E Flat Major, Opus 127, by Beethoven, and will assist Helen Boatwright in the following selections; "Wachet auf! ruft uns die Stimme" and "An Wasserfluessen Babylon" by Bruckner; "Stahat Mater" by Virgil Thomson, contemporary American composer, and "Three Rondels" by Ralph Vaughan Williams, contemporary British composer.

Tanglewood

Berlioz will be the featured composer this weekend at the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood.

Tomorrow night the full orchestra conducted by Charles Munch will perform the nineteenth century French composer's overture "Le Corsair", "Harold in Italy" and Fantastic Symphony.

There will be the usual public orchestra rehearsal in the Shed, Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, proceeds to go to the orchestra's pension fund. In the evening Berlioz choral work "L'Enfance du Christ", will be presented, with Florence Kopleff, Cesare Valletti, Donald Gramm and Gerard Souzy, soloists, assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus. The evening concerts are scheduled for 8:30.

For the Sunday afternoon concert, Pierre Monteux, conductor, Berlioz and Hindemith will share the program. Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz and "News of the Day", Overture "Mathis der Maler" by Hindemith will be performed.

July 25, 1957
Millbrook
ROOK ROUND TABLE

Music of Berlioz to Be Featured at Tanglewood

Concerts of the fourth week end of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will be especially devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (July 26-27), and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, July 28.

The special feature of this week end will be the first Tanglewood performance, on Saturday evening, July 27, of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ." The only work of this composer based on a biblical text (from the Gospel According to St. Matthew), "L'Enfance du Christ" describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family, and is in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight into Egypt; and The Arrival at Sais.

At the concert on Friday evening (July 26) at 8:30, Dr. Munch will conduct another all-Berlioz program featuring his first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, performing the solo part in "Harold in Italy."

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will make his second and last appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival, directing Sunday afternoon's concert (July 28). He will open his program with excerpts from Berlioz' Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," including the well-known Love Scene, Queen Mab Scherzo, and Great Feast at the Capulets. Mr. Monteux will conduct two works of Paul Hindemith in the second half of the program: the Overture to the Opera, "News of the Day" and the well-known Symphony, "Mathis der Maler."

* * *

Seed your garden cover crop in August. Put the ryegrass over everything. It will come up through the vegetables and make good growth in the fall.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,950

JUL 27 1957

Berlioz Music To Be Featured At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present the first of three weekend concerts featuring the music of Berlioz at the Berkshire Festival at 8:30 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The all-Berlioz concert in the Music Shed will include the Overture "Le Corsair," the symphony "Harold in Italy," with the Orchestra's principal violist, Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, and the "Fantastic Symphony."

Saturday evening, at 8:30, Dr. Munch will present the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' Sacred Trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ." The soloists will include Cesare Valletti, tenor, as narrator; Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary; Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph; and Donald Gramm, bass, as Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family. The Festival Chorus will be prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon. The

Music

Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ," with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus, will be presented at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday, July 27, at 8:30 p.m. Sunday's concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux will include excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz, Hindemuth's "News of the Day" overture and "Mathis der Maler." On Wednesday, July 31, a song recital by Gerard Souzay, baritone, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, will present early French airs, and groups by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms and Ravel. On Friday night, Carl Schuricht will conduct the orchestra in the Brahms Tragic Overture and Symphony No. 1, and the Egk sonata for orchestra.

Valleti Debuts At Tanglewood

Cesare Valletti, widely known lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will make his Berkshire Festival debut as the narrator in the performance of Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ" with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday evening.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor Sunday afternoon, July

RED HOOK, N. Y.
ADVERTISER
Circ. W. 1,225

JUL 18 1957

Met Opera Tenor To Debut At Tanglewood

CESARE VALLETTI

Cesare Valletti, well known lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will make his Berkshire Festival debut as the narrator in the performance of Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ" with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, on Saturday evening, July 27. Mr. Valletti, who appeared for the first time with the Boston Symphony in a performance of the same work during the season just past, made his Metropolitan debut in the fall of 1953. Italian by birth, he divides his time between performances at La Scala, Milan, and the Metropolitan Opera in addition to many recital performances throughout the country. He made his Town Hall debut in New York in the fall of 1954.

Gerard Souzay, who sings the part of Joseph in the performance of July 27, also makes his first appearance at Tanglewood. He has sung with the Boston Symphony Orchestra a number of times since his first American concert appearances in 1950. Mr. Souzay was born in France and pursued his career there, becoming an outstanding recitalist and appearing with the London Philharmonic, the Belgian Philharmonic and the Societe des Concerts du Conservatoire du Paris, where the conductor was the present Music Director of the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch. Mr. Souzay is also a popular radio and recording artist. In addition to his appearance with the Orchestra, he will present a song recital at Tanglewood on Wednesday evening, July 31, assisted by Ralph Berkowitz at the piano. His program will include early French airs and groups of songs by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms, and Ravel.

Florence Kopleff, contralto, is familiar to Berkshire Festival audiences, having appeared in many concerts at Tanglewood during the past few years. This season she has already appeared in Bach's St. Matthew Passion and a performance of Brahm's "Liebesliederer" in the Chamber Music Series. She will later be heard once again in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the closing concert on August 11. Miss Kopleff, a former student of the Berkshire Music Center, sang for many years with the Robert Shaw Chorale, touring with them all over the country and throughout Europe and the Near East. She will be heard in the role of Mary in the present performance of "L'Enfance du Christ."

All three of these artists may also be heard in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's recording of the Berlioz work for RCA Victor.

Donald Gramm, bass, has also appeared often at the Berkshire Festival, having been soloist already this season in the St. Matthew Passion and the Brahms' "Liebeslider." He will also be heard in Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" on July 21 and in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on August 11. American-born, Mr. Gramm has appeared with a number of orchestras in this country as well as on radio and television. He is a leading singer of the New York City Opera Company. Mr. Gramm will perform three roles in "L'Enfance du Christ"—Herod, Polydorus, and The Father of a Family.

The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 27, 1957 [176]

Berlioz at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND weekend of the big concerts at Tanglewood began last night with an all-Berlioz program played in the Shed by the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

The three programs of this weekend will be concentrated on Berlioz except for some of Hindemith's music, which will be played on tomorrow afternoon's program.

It seems that of all composers, Berlioz is one with whom an audience ought to have some acquaintence. His life was eventful and strife-torn. He was one of the first literate composers and his books on and concerning music are as well if not better known than his compositions. He had tremendous difficulties getting recognition and earning a living and was reduced at one time to doing music criticisms which, for posterity, was fortunate.

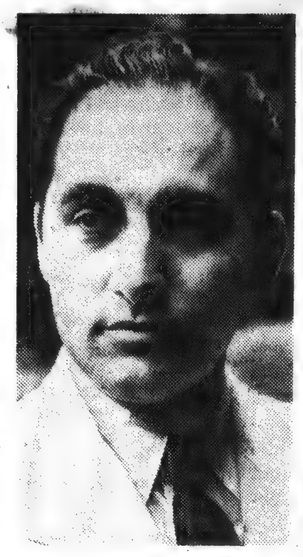
* * *

BUT PRACTICALLY everything he wrote had a story behind it, or at least its inspiration came from his association with literary characters or familiarity with fictional ones. The music played last night was all from his late 20s and early 30s, music that would have been remarkable from a composer of any age, but certainly more so from one just emerging from his apprenticeship.

He knew his Byron well as did, evidently, every learned young person of the day. Byron may have been, one can not be sure, the inspiration of both the opening overture on last night's program "Le Corsaire" and the "Harold in Italy" symphony. It is conjectured that his "Symphonie Fantastique," with which the program closed, was inspired by both Goethe's "Faust" and by the composer's infatuation with the leading lady in an Irish company doing Shakespeare in Paris. Berlioz gave it the additional title of "Episode in the Life of an Artist."

* * *

MUNCH has been a Berlioz champion for many years and has used the "Fantastique" on many occasions, especially on those when he wanted to make the best impression. He plays a terrifically excited Berlioz and often, particularly at the final page, works up into a vertiginous frenzy. Yet with all his intimacy and authenticity, it was not a satisfying "Fantastique." The waltz was decidedly not "dolce e tenero," and our ears missed the lovely descending sixths in



Joseph de Pasquale

the harps which introduce the ball scene and we seriously question whether anyone condemned to the gallows would be so eager to get there as fast as Mr. Munch would have had them march.

The scenes in the country give beautiful melodic material to the English horn which Louis Speyer played with outstanding rounded tone and graceful inflections.

* * *

THE "HAROLD" symphony with viola solo is a tantalizing piece. Joseph de Pasquale played his short and scarce solos with beautiful sonority and spacious eloquence but the chances for the viola soloist are insufficient. He must wait for long pages of symphonic story-telling before he has an entrance and Munch was more concerned last night with the symphony than with the soloist. De Pasquale declaimed his opening declaration like an experienced orator. He varied his tone and heroically disdained show in his adherence to Berlioz' wishes. In such instances as the famous arpeggios, he played ponticello as indicated when a slight disregard of the composer's indications would have given him much greater scope to display his luscious tone.

There was a slight delay at the beginning of the "Harold" while de Pasquale raised the music stand to eye level. The operation required several musicians including a harpist. On his fourth recall Munch suggested that the soloist lower the rack to its original level.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

JUL 27 1957

Berkshire Program Is Superlative

TANGELWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 26 — Charles Munch is Berlioz's man. The conductor of the Boston Symphony has an affinity with this composer that he exhibits for no other. As a result, tonight's concert at the Berkshire Music Festival, which opens a weekend of Berlioz programs, was a superlative event.

Just where this affinity arises between conductor and composer is difficult to say. In any event, it carries Mr. Munch, and with him the Boston Symphony, to heights of brilliance, invention style, taste. Naturally, these are the components, the attributes of Berlioz's writing. Among all composers, Berlioz is the handsomest blend of classicism and the romantic. No matter to what degree of emotion the sentiment of his music may rise, its writing remains utterly lucid, clean, clear, spare. No matter how carried away, Berlioz the man, Berlioz the musician remains in shining control of all he feels and does.

The Corsair

Tonight's program opened with the overture to "The Corsair," a work which gathers in interest and impact as it goes. The first part is not especially stimulating or communicative, but the close is a magnificent outrushing of sounds, swirling and racing up the strings and clamoring out of the brass. The scudding, opening measures provide a tough start to any concert, and even tonight's splendid performance was not foretold in the first moments of playing. The orchestra had not quite settled in for the evening. But in the flaring closing pages, all the splendors that were to last across the rest of the performance were in full blaze. Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony were off and running.

Joseph DePasquale, first violist for the orchestra since 1947, was soloist for the "Harold in Italy" which followed. He gave a wonderful account of this charming work. Before and in between the solo pages, Mr. DePasquale was the most nervous or restless man you could imagine. But in playing, he was all composure. His account of the score was a model of elegance, of muted eloquence. He made no false attempt to raise the viola part to concerto proportions, Instead, he kept it in a continually reflective vein , a combination of communication and remoteness.

Philosophic Vein

Nothing could have better suggested the philosophic vein in which Berlioz, or Harold if you prefer, purportedly saw Italy. This was a performance full of poise and beautifully played on an instrument of incomparable quality, a Gasparo DaSalo, from which the tones simply welled up and floated away. Mr. Munch's reading of this "Harold", the orchestra's playing, were completely compelling, and with Mr. DePasquale, they received an ovation at the close of the work as well as spontaneous outbursts of applause between movements.

The evening finished out with an impassioned performance of the "Fantastic" symphony, in which the third movement was of particularly haunting beauty, and in which the close was hugely vivid. This is of course one of the greatest duties in the Boston Symphony's repertoire since the coming of Mr. Munch. Conductor, orchestra and work were heard at their peak on this occasion.

If we could only have gone on to "Lelio" from there—

T.H.P

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, JULY 27, 1957

BERLIOZ PROGRAM OFFERED AT LENOX

De Pasquale Is Viola Soloist in 'Harold in Italy'—Munch Leads Boston Symphony

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 26—Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony orchestra here tonight in the first of three Berkshire Festival week-end concerts devoted principally to music of Berlioz.

Tonight's all-Berlioz program offered the Overture to "The Corsair," Opus 21; "Harold in Italy," with Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, as soloist and the "Fantastic" Symphony.

Mr. de Pasquale performed with distinction the music allotted to the viola as soloist-narrator in "Harold in Italy." This extraordinary, fascinating, imaginative work, a chief ornament of the somewhat limited repertory for solo viola and orchestra, poses many problems for soloist and conductor, both of a technical and interpretative sort. The skill with which they were met did credit to the individual gifts of conductor and soloist, as well as to the rapport achieved by their longtime association in the orchestra.

Mr. de Pasquale's playing had a dark, rich-toned timbre altogether appropriate to the gloomy musings of the Byronic hero. He solved the work's many technical problems with admirable fluency. It was a performance of "Harold in Italy" that reflected credit on all concerned.

The "Fantastic" Symphony was one of Mr. Munch's big successes in his first season here. With the passing of time he has not lost his touch. Nor has he, to judge from tonight's performance, grown tired of it.

Although today the "Fantastic" Symphony is familiar, even over-familiar, in its time it was unique. There had been nothing quite like it in orchestra literature. It is the special merit of Mr. Munch's interpretation that there is a sort of freshness of discovery about it. He leads the "Fantastic" as if he had but recently made its acquaintance, and still remained fascinated by its novel splendor.

The "Corsair" Overture, blood and thunder in Berlioz' most theatrical style, got the evening's music off to a rousing start.

BERLIOZ WORKS HOLD AUDIENCE AT TANGLEWOOD

Brilliant Performance by Boston Symphony Is Acclaimed

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, July 26—Tonight Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave the first concert in the second week-end series in the Music Shed. This week end is being devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz and Paul Hindemith, with the compositions of the latter being conducted by Pierre Monteux. Tonight Berlioz had the program to himself and one listened to some wonderful music magnificently performed. An audience estimated at over 6200 persons was on hand for this initial program.

Brilliant Performance

There seems to be an affinity between Berlioz and Charles Munch, for the French conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has offered some of his finest readings as he conducted the music of Berlioz. Tonight, he did it again particularly in the readings of the symphony with viola solo, "Harold in Italy" and the ever-startling "Fantastic Symphony."

The program opened with the overture "Le Corsa Re" and it received the dashing and debonair treatment, which is so right for this music. The strings were brilliant and witty. It was dramatic in its intensity.

"Harold in Italy" was inspired by a visit from Paganini who had heard the "Fantastic Symphony" and, having acquired a fine viola, asked Berlioz to write a concerto for that instrument. Berlioz was intriqued, but, unable to produce a traditional vehicle for a virtuoso, he solved the problem by using the viola as a distinct voice like a sympathetic spectator at a scene. Sometimes it is a leading voice, while at other times, it is an evocative background of arpeggios. Joseph De Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, was the soloist. He repeated the splendid success he had a couple of years ago at Tanglewood. His playing was smooth, beautifully colored and in perfect rapport with the orchestra.

The orchestra revealed the dark beauty of this music in all its magic. The music was allowed to speak for itself, which it did eloquently. Mr. De Pasquale and his colleagues won a tremendous round of applause, which they richly deserved.

There have been many reasons given as to what prompted Berlioz to write the "Fantastic Symphony." It would seem that it came into being as the result of some sort of wild phantasmagoria which involved the composer's experiences in love, literature, the stage and a lot more. Since the symphony in question was a forerunner of a century of "program music," Berlioz has been blamed for what many felt was a dubious practice. Be that as it may, in his symphony he has written powerful, vital and, at times, horrifying music, softening its impact through use of an exquisite "fixed idea" which interposes itself persistently as an episodic, passionate thought in the midst of scenes which are foreign to it until it blends into the other songs that run through the work.

Mr. Munch gave himself wholeheartedly to the communication of this gigantic work. The orchestra gave instant response and the result was a powerful, arresting listening experience not to be forgotten for a long time.

Saturday night, we shall hear for the first time at Tanglewood Berlioz's beautiful sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ." The soloists will be the lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, Cesare Valetti; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Gerard Souzay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass. The festival chorus was trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1957

Boston Symphony Offers Berlioz

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL.
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Joseph De Pasquale, violist. The program:
Overture "Le Corsair"; "Harold in Italy"; Fantastic Symphony .....Berlioz

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 27.—Pursuing its new policy of presenting on every week end several masterpieces by a featured composer, in conjuction with other works by other men, the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood last night entered the Berlioz phase of its plan.

By definition, therefore, it was an occasion for the Boston Symphony Orchestra to make the most of its genious for swashbuckling sonority and silken sound, and Charles Munch, who conducted, gave his men their head whenever and wherever he was able. For the hard score of Berlioz devotees that has sprung up in the last twenty-five years, that, surely, is information enough; the picture need be filled in only in details.

* * *

"The Corsair" overture, with which the program began, was shot from the stage onf the Music Shed like a cannon, the heavenly noise it made throughout being the result of the judicious balances betwene choirs effected by Mr. Munch. Myself, I confess I have never felt entirely comfortable listening to the piece, possibly because as a lad I had been led to believe it was founded on Byron's poems.

Learning later that it was not—that the title was an afterthought—I felt, and continue to feel, somewhat cheated, only if because "The Corsair's" windswept tunes and spectral clashes of thunder are imagined so wholly in the manner of the great poet. And Mr. Munch's reading, with its vigor and snorting passion, only served to renew the suspicion that Byron one way or another laid his hand on Berlioz' work.

* * *

Ironic, too, of course, is the symphony with viola solo, "Harold in Italy," with which the evening continued. All told, it was given a stirring al-fresco reading that made the trees around Tanglewood bend with its ferocity. This energy, however, related more directly to the playing of the band that it did to the solo work of Joseph De Pasquale, for the violist, in his role of wanderer about the Italian countryside, preferred not to grow overwrought unless it was absolutely demanded by the score.

As it happens in the case of Harold, this works out perfectly well, since there are, essentially, only two kinds of sentiments in the score, bravado and melancholio, the former being the business of the orchestra and the latter the chief occupation of the soloist.

At any rate, Mr. De Pasquale is a violinist who allows his instrument to speak with its natural voice. He does not try to make it appear as though it were a low pitched and cumbersome violin; rather he concentrates on its darker colors, on its warmer, riper, more luminous tone. His rendition, as a result, emerged as gr tr ge

The symphony, in consequence, makes a direct assault on the ears and nerves, and leaves the listener aurally and notionally fagged by the time has run its course. But that, precisely, is what Berlioz had in mind, which indicates clearly that Mr. Munch is the composer's most devoted servant and is most successful spokesman.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

JUL 27 1957

Boston Symphony Heard By 6,268 at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The second weekend of Berkshire Festival Music Shed Concerts, featuring the music of Hector Berlioz, was given at Tanglewood last night.

Joseph De Pasquale, first violist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was soloist in "Harold in Italy," opus 16. Charles Munch was conductor. There was an audience of 6,268.

Balance of the progarm was the "Corsair" overture, opus 21, and "Fantastic" symphony, opus 14A.

The "Harold" score is far from a "whiz-bang" for the soloist. De Pasquale gave it as much import as it contains, or at least, what can be expected from it. He received a most gratifying reception. It was a musicianly and sensitive performance.

Assisted by Zighera

In the first movement De Pasquale received admirable assistance from Bernard Zighera in the secondary harp score. Munch and the orchestra gave him equally stable and brilliant-sounding support.

Actually, the first movement doesn't have much to say of real import. It is more of a display counter for Berlioz' orchestral effects even to slightly irritating trespassings by triangle. Tunes for solo viola are sentimental to a fault, interspersed with obvious technical difficulties.

The "Pilgrim's March" had charm and stateliness. It was euphoniously splendid and brought out beautiful duet-balances between strings and winds. Neither De Pasquale nor any other violinist could enrich the methodical sameness of the solo.

Best Examples

"Serenade of a Mountaineer" (third movement) was a successful embodiment of the bucolic, effervescent and emotional. The soloist's best examples of rich tonal production appeared here, equal to those at the start of the opening movement.

Interesting studies in contrast appeared in the finale, the "Orgy of Brigands." De Pasquale romanticized the "Harold" theme to the hilt, against the shouting, banging attacks in full orchestra.

As evidenced during last weekend's concerts, greater concentration (or attention) is being drawn away from the strings to the brass of the Boston Symphony than during the Koussevitsky era. This was again noted in the "Corsair" overture. It received a brilliant, brazen performance, opening at breakneck speed.

Low Strings

An overflow of expressivity was released by low strings. Swift passages were sounded with a brilliance that approached harshness. These were results of ferocious challenges in brass. One of the attractive highlights was agile and impeccably accurate work in bassoon.

Summary of the performance was a conductor who insisted upon sound that aproached the brittle stage, emphasis on ...ely put solos in woodwinds, piercing brasses, and "super-duper" work in strings.

This is probably what the insatiable Berlioz would have smacked his lips over. The virtuosity of the Boston Symphony was brought out into the wide open for the "Fantastic" symphony. Berlioz is as much "specialty" to Munch as Tchaikovsky was to Koussevitzky.

Remarkable Cohesion

Remarkable cohesion existed in the opening movement which tends to be spasmodic and loosely jointed. It was a palette of brilliant and subdued colors. The "leitmotif," or "Henrietta Theme" was sharply contrasted in the five movements — affectionate, amorous, sadly reminiscent, sarcastic and brutal.

It is certainly worthy of note that the huge bells used in the finale "Witches Sabbath" were especially cast in Europe for Munch and the orchestra. In last summer's performance of the same work they were just enough off-pitch to upset the witches themselves.

Tonight's program will be Berlioz' sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ," opus 25. The Boston Symphony Festival Chorus will be assisted by Cesare Velletti, tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Gerard Souzay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass.

The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 27, 1957 [176]

Berlioz at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND weekend of the big concerts at Tanglewood began last night with an all-Berlioz program played in the Shed by the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

The three programs of this weekend will be concentrated on Berlioz except for some of Hindemith's music, which will be played on tomorrow afternoon's program.

It seems that of all composers, Berlioz is one with whom an audience ought to have some acquaintance. His life was eventful and strife-torn. He was one of the first literate composers and his books on and concerning music are as well if not better known than his compositions. He had tremendous difficulties getting recognition and earning a living and was reduced at one time to doing music criticisms which, for posterity, was fortunate.

* * *

BUT PRACTICALLY everything he wrote had a story behind it, or at least its inspiration came from his association with literary characters or familiarity with fictional ones. The music played last night was all from his late 20s and early 30s, music that would have been remarkable from a composer of any age, but certainly more so from one just emerging from his apprenticeship.

He knew his Byron well as did, evidently, every learned young person of the day. Byron may have been, one can not be sure, the inspiration of both the opening overture on last night's program "Le Corsaire" and the "Harold in Italy" symphony. It is conjectured that his "Symphonie Fantastique," with which the program closed, was inspired by both Goethe's "Faust" and by the composer's infatuation with the leading lady in an Irish company doing Shakespeare in Paris. Berlioz gave it the additional title of "Episode in the Life of an Artist."

* * *

MUNCH has been a Berlioz champion for many years and has used the "Fantastique" on many occasions, especially on those when he wanted to make the best impression. He plays a terrifically excited Berlioz and often, particularly at the final page, works up into a vertiginous frenzy. Yet with all his intimacy and authenticity, it was not a satisfying "Fantastique." The waltz was decidedly not "dolce e tenero," and our ears missed the lovely descending sixths in

Joseph de Pasquale

the harps which introduce the ball scene and we seriously question whether anyone condemned to the gallows would be so eager to get there as fast as Mr. Munch would have had them march.

The scenes in the country give beautiful melodic material to the English horn which Louis Speyer played with outstanding rounded tone and graceful inflections.

* * *

THE "HAROLD" symphony with viola solo is a tantalizing piece. Joseph de Pasquale played his short and scarce solos with beautiful sonority and spacious eloquence but the chances for the viola soloist are insufficient. He must wait for long pages of symphonic story-telling before he has an entrance and Munch was more concerned last night with the symphony than with the soloist. De Pasquale declaimed his opening declaration like an experienced orator. He varied his tone and heroically disdained show in his adherence to Berlioz' wishes. In such instances as the famous arpeggios, he played ponticello as indicated when a slight disregard of the composer's indications would have given him much greater scope to display his luscious tone.

There was a slight delay at the beginning of the "Harold" while de Pasquale raised the music stand to eye level. The operation required several musicians including a harpist. On his fourth recall Munch suggested that the soloist lower the rack to its original level.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

JUL 27 1957

Berkshire Program Is Superlative

TANGELWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 26 — Charles Munch is Berlioz's man. The conductor of the Boston Symphony has an affinity with this composer that he exhibits for no other. As a result, tonight's concert at the Berkshire Music Festival, which opens a weekend of Berlioz programs, was a superlative event.

Just where this affinity arises between conductor and composer is difficult to say. In any event, it carries Mr. Munch, and with him the Boston Symphony, to heights of brilliance, invention, style, taste. Naturally, these are the components, the attributes of Berlioz's writing. Among all composers, Berlioz is the handsomest blend of classicism and the romantic. No matter to what degree of emotion the sentiment of his music may rise, its writing remains utterly lucid, clean, clear, spare. No matter how carried away, Berlioz the man, Berlioz the musician remains in shining control of all he feels and does.

The Corsair

Tonight's program opened with the overture to "The Corsair," a work which gathers in interest and impact as it goes. The first part is not especially stimulating or communicative, but the close is a magnificent outrushing of sounds, swirling and racing up the strings and clamoring out of the brass. The scudding, opening measures provide a tough start to any concert, and even tonight's splendid performance was not foretold in the first moments of playing. The orchestra had not quite settled in for the evening. But in the flaring closing pages, all the splendors that were to last across the rest of the performance were in full blaze. Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony were off and running.

Joseph DePasquale, first violist for the orchestra since 1947, was soloist for the "Harold in Italy" which followed. He gave a wonderful account of this charming work. Before and in between the solo pages, Mr. DePasquale was the most nervous or restless man you could imagine. But in playing, he was all composure. His account of the score was a model of elegance, of muted eloquence. He made no false attempt to raise the viola part to concerto proportions. Instead, he kept it in a continually reflective vein, a combination of communication and remoteness.

Philosophic Vein

Nothing could have better suggested the philosophic vein in which Berlioz, or Harold if you prefer, purportedly saw Italy. This was a performance full of poise and beautifully played on an instrument of incomparable quality, a Gasparo DaSalo, from which the tones simply welled up and floated away. Mr. Munch's reading of this "Harold", the orchestra's playing, were completely compelling, and with Mr. DePasquale, they received an ovation at the close of the work as well as spontaneous outbursts of applause between movements.

The evening finished out with an impassioned performance of the "Fantastic" symphony, in which the third movement was of particularly haunting beauty, and in which the close was hugely vivid. This is of course one of the greatest things in the Boston Symphony's repertoire since the coming of Mr. Munch. Conductor, orchestra and work were heard at their peak on this occasion.

If we could only have gone on to "Lelio" from there—

T.H.P

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION SPRINGFIELD, MASS. SATURDAY, JULY 27

BERLIOZ WORKS HOLD AUDIENCE AT TANGLEWOOD

Brilliant Performance by Boston Symphony Is Acclaimed

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, July 26—Tonight Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave the first concert in the second week-end series in the Music Shed. This week end is being devoted to the music of Hector Berlioz and Paul Hindemith, with the compositions of the latter being conducted by Pierre Monteux. Tonight Berlioz had the program to himself and one listened to some wonderful music magnificently performed. An audience estimated at over 6200 persons was on hand for this initial program.

Brilliant Performance

There seems to be an affinity between Berlioz and Charles Munch, for the French conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has offered some of his finest readings as he conducted the music of Berlioz. Tonight, he did it again particularly in the readings of the symphony with viola solo, "Harold in Italy" and the ever-startling "Fantastic Symphony."

The program opened with the overture "Le Corsa Re" and it received the dashing and debonair treatment, which is so right for this music. The strings were brilliant and witty. It was dramatic in its intensity.

"Harold in Italy" was inspired by a visit from Paganini who had heard the "Fantastic Symphony" and, having acquired a fine viola, asked Berlioz to write a concerto for that instrument. Berlioz was intrigued, but, unable to produce a traditional vehicle for a virtuoso, he solved the problem by using the viola as a distinct voice like a sympathetic spectator at a scene. Sometimes it is a leading voice, while at other times, it is an evocative background of arpeggios. Joseph De Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, was the soloist. He repeated the splendid success he had a couple of years ago at Tanglewood. His playing was smooth, beautifully colored and in perfect rapport with the orchestra.

The orchestra revealed the dark beauty of this music in all its magic. The music was allowed to speak for itself, which it did eloquently. Mr. De Pasquale and his colleagues won a tremendous round of applause, which they richly deserved.

There have been many reasons given as to what prompted Berlioz to write the "Fantastic Symphony." It would seem that it came into being as the result of some sort of wild phantasmagoria which involved the composer's experiences in love, literature, the stage and a lot more. Since the symphony in question was a forerunner of a century of "program music," Berlioz has been blamed for what many felt was a dubious practice. Be that as it may, in his symphony he has written powerful, vital and, at times, horrifying music, softening its impact through use of an exquisite "fixed idea" which interposes itself persistently as an episodic, passionate thought in the midst of scenes which are foreign to it until it blends into the other songs that run through the work.

Mr. Munch gave himself wholeheartedly to the communication of this gigantic work. The orchestra gave instant response and the result was a powerful, arresting listening experience not to be forgotten for a long time.

Saturday night, we shall hear for the first time at Tanglewood Berlioz's beautiful sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ." The soloists will be the lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, Cesare Valetti; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Gerard Souzay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass. The festival chorus was trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

E NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, JULY 27,

BERLIOZ PROGRAM OFFERED AT LENOX

De Pasquale Is Viola Soloist in 'Harold in Italy'—Munch Leads Boston Symphony

By JOHN BRIGGS

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 26—Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony orchestra here tonight in the first of three Berkshire Festival week-end concerts devoted principally to music of Berlioz.

Tonight's all-Berlioz program offered the Overture to "The Corsair," Opus 21; "Harold in Italy," with Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, as soloist and the "Fantastic" Symphony.

Mr. de Pasquale performed with distinction the music allotted to the viola as soloist-narrator in "Harold in Italy." This extraordinary, fascinating, imaginative work, a chief ornament of the somewhat limited repertory for solo viola and orchestra, poses many problems for soloist and conductor, both of a technical and interpretative sort. The skill with which they were met did credit to the individual gifts of conductor and soloist, as well as to the rapport achieved by their longtime association in the orchestra.

Mr. de Pasquale's playing had a dark, rich-toned timbre altogether appropriate to the gloomy musings of the Byronic hero. He solved the work's many technical problems with admirable fluency. It was a performance of "Harold in Italy" that reflected credit on all concerned.

The "Fantastic" Symphony was one of Mr. Munch's big successes in his first season here. With the passing of time he has not lost his touch. Nor has he, to judge from tonight's performance, grown tired of it.

Although today the "Fantastic" Symphony is familiar, even over-familiar, in its time it was unique. There had been nothing quite like it in orchestra literature. It is the special merit of Mr. Munch's interpretation that there is a sort of freshness of discovery about it. He leads the "Fantastic" as if he had but recently made its acquaintance, and still remained fascinated by its novel splendor.

The "Corsair" Overture, blood and thunder in Berlioz' most theatrical style, got the evening's music off to a rousing start.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1957

Boston Symphony Offers Berlioz

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL.
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Joseph De Pasquale, violist. The program:
Overture "Le Corsair"; "Harold in Italy"; Fantastic Symphony ..... Berlioz

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 27.—Pursuing its new policy of presenting on every week end several masterpieces by a featured composer, in conjuction with other works by other men, the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood last night entered the Berlioz phase of its plan.

By definition, therefore, it was an occasion for the Boston Symphony Orchestra to make the most of its genious for swashbuckling sonority and silken sound, and Charles Munch, who conducted, gave his men their head whenever and wherever he was able. For the hard score of Berlioz devotees that has sprung up in the last twenty-five years, that, surely, is information enough; the picture need be filled in only in details.

* * *

"The Corsair" overture, with which the program began, was shot from the stage onf the Music Shed like a cannon, the heavenly noise it made throughout being the result of the judicious balances betwene choirs effected by Mr. Munch. Myself, I confess I have never felt entirely comfortable listening to the piece, possibly because as a lad I had been led to believe it was founded on Byron's poems.

Learning later that it was not—that the title was an afterthought—I felt, and continue to feel, somewhat cheated, only if because "The Corsair's" windswept tunes and spectral clashes of thunder are imagined so wholly in the manner of the great poet. And Mr. Munch's reading, with its vigor and snorting passion, only served to renew the suspicion that Byron one way or another laid his hand on Berlioz' work.

* * *

Ironic, too, of course, is the symphony with viola solo, "Harold in Italy," with which the evening continued. All told, it was given a stirring al-fresco reading that made the trees around Tanglewood bend with its ferocity. This energy, however, related more directly to the playing of the band that it did to the solo work of Joseph De Pasquale, for the violist, in his role of wanderer about the Italian countryside, preferred not to grow overwrought unless it was absolutely demanded by the score.

As it happens in the case of Harold, this works out perfectly well, since there are, essentially, only two kinds of sentiments in the score, bravado and melancholio, the former being the business of the orchestra and the latter the chief occupation of the soloist.

At any rate, Mr. De Pasquale is a violinist who allows his instrument to speak with its natural voice. He does not try to make it appear as though it were a low pitched and cumbersome violin; rather he concentrates on its darker colors, on its warmer, riper, more luminous tone. His rendition, as a result, emerged as a kind of plaintive idyl that grew endlessly while the orchestra seethed about him. And the general effect was tonic.

* * *

The "Fantastic" symphony, as Mr. Munch has given it to us time and time again, is every bit fantastic. It is a high personal performance he provides, markedly blatant and raucous at moments, soft as dew at others, but never less than exciting. Mostly he sees the piece as a vehement, demonic, savage orchestral spectacle to which are added several of the expressive elements of Grand Guignol.

The symphony, in consequence, makes a direct assault on the ears and nerves, and leaves the listener aurally and emotionally fagged by the time it has run its course. But that, precisely, is what Berlioz had in mind, which indicates clearly that Mr. Munch is the composer's most devoted servant and his most successful spokesman.

ony Heard Tanglewood

LENOX — The second weekend of Berkshire Festival Music Shed Concerts, featuring the music of Hector Berlioz, was given at Tanglewood last night.

Joseph De Pasquale, first violist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was soloist in "Harold in Italy," opus 16. Charles Munch was conductor. There was an audience of 6,268.

Balance of the progarm was the "Corsair" overture, opus 21, and "Fantastic" symphony, opus 14A.

The "Harold" score is far from a "whiz-bang" for the soloist. De Pasquale gave it as much import as it contains, or at least, what can be expected from it. He received a most gratifying reception. It was a musicianly and sensitive performance.

Assisted by Zighera

In the first movement De Pasquale received admirable assistance from Bernard Zighera in the secondary harp score. Munch and the orchestra gave him equally stable and brilliant-sounding support.

Actually, the first movement doesn't have much to say of real import. It is more of a display counter for Berlioz' orchestral effects even to slightly irritating trespassings by triangle. Tunes for solo viola are sentimental to a fault, interspersed with obvious technical difficulties.

The "Pilgrim's March" had charm and stateliness. It was euphoniously splendid and brought out beautiful duet-balances between strings and winds. Neither De Pasquale nor any other violinist could enrich the methodical sameness of the solo.

Best Examples

"Serenade of a Mountaineer" (third movement) was a successful embodiment of the bucolic, effervescent and emotional. The soloist's best examples of rich tonal production appeared here, equal to those at the start of the opening movement.

Interesting studies in contrast appeared in the finale, the "Orgy of Brigands." De Pasquale romanticized the "Harold" theme to the hilt, against the shouting, banging attacks in full orchestra.

As evidenced during last weekend's concerts, greater concentration (or attention) is being drawn away from the strings to the brass of the Boston Symphony than during the Koussevitsky era. This was again noted in the "Corsair" overture. It received a brilliant, brazen performance, opening at breakneck speed.

Low Strings

An overflow of expressivity was released by low strings. Swift passages were sounded with a brilliance that approached harshness. These were results of ferocious challenges in brass. One of the attractive highlights was agile and impeccably accurate work in bassoon.

Summary of the performance was a conductor who insisted upon sound that aproached the brittle stage, emphasis on lonely put solos in woodwinds, ercing brasses, and "super-iper" work in strings.

This is probably what the insatiable Berlioz would have smacked his lips over. The virtuosity of the Boston Symphony was brought out into the wide open for the "Fantastic" symphony. Berlioz is as much "specialty" to Munch as Tchaikovsky was to Koussevitzky.

Remarkable Cohesion

Remarkable cohesion existed in the opening movement which tends to be spasmodic and loosely jointed. It was a palette of brilliant and subdued colors. The "leitmotif," or "Henrietta Theme" was sharply contrasted in the five movements — aff[illegible]ionate, amorous, sadly re[illegible]niscent, sarcastic and brutal.

It is certainly worth of note that the huge bells us[illegible] in the finale "Witches Sabbath" were especially cast in E[illegible]ce for Munch and the orche[illegible]ra. In last summer's perfor[illegible]nce of the same work they were just enough off-pitch to upset the witches themselves.

Tonight's program will be Berlioz' sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ," opus 25. The Boston Symphony Festival Chorus will be assisted by Cesare Velletti, tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Gerard Souzay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047
JUL 28 1957

NDAY, JULY

ers Berlio

time and time again, is fantastic. It is a high performance he provides edly blatant and raucous ments, soft as dew at oth never less than exciting.
he sees the piece as a ve demonic, savage orchestr tacle to which are added of the expressive elem
Grand Guignol.

The symphony, in quence, makes a direct on the ears and nerve leaves the listener aura motionally fagged by t has run its course. B recisely, is what Berlioz ind, which indicates hat Mr. Munch is th
oser's most devoted serv is most successful spoke hony Heard Tanglewo

piercing brasses, and duper" work in string
This is probably w
nsatiable Berlioz wou
smacked his lips ove virtuosity of the Bosto phony was brought o
the wide open for the tastic" symphony. Berli much "specialty" to M Tchaikovsky was to vitsky.

Remarkable Cohes

Remarkable cohesion
ed in the opening mo which tends to be sp
and loosely jointed.
palette of brilliant a dued colors. The "lei or "Henrietta Theme sharply contrasted in movements — affec
amorous, sadly remi sarcastic and brutal.

It is certainly worthy that the huge bells used finale "Witches Sabbath especially cast in Era
Munch and the orches
last summer's perform the same work they w enough off-pitch to u
witches themselves.

Tonight's program
Berlioz' sacred trilogy,
fance du Christ," opus
Boston Symphony
Chorus will be assis
Cesare Velletti, tenor;
Kopleff, contralto; Gera
zay, baritone, and
Gramm, bass.

Berkshire Premiere

Berlioz Trilogy Heard By 6,823 At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Hector Berliotz sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance d Christ" (The Childhood of Christ) was presented at Tanglewood last night at the second concert in Series "B" of the Berkshire Music Festival. The audience numbered 6,823.

Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the festival chorus which had been prepared by Lorna Cooke De Varnon. The role of the narrator was sung by Cesare Valletti tenor; contralto Florence Kopleff was Mary; Gerard Souzay, was Joseph; the bass roles of Herod, Polydorus, and the father of a family were sung by Donald Gramm.

Premier Performance

This was the Tanglewood premiere of "L'Enfance" although Munch has given a complete performance of the work in Boston. Messrs Valetti and Souzay made their Berkshire Festival debuts.

Berlioz drew his subject from the second chapter of the Gospel According to St. Matthew. The work describes the flight into Egypt of the Holy Family. It's in three parts: Herod's Dream; The Flight Into Egypt; The Arrival at Sais.

The main departure from the story of St. Matthew is the replacement of the Oriental magi with soothsayers of Judea, who are thoroughly evil characters. When the Holy Family is sheltered a Sais by an infidel, he is entertained by a trio of the young Israelites. This was played last night by Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

So much for the factual information.

Deal With Berlioz

When these facts are sifted from the total and tonal effects of last night's performance, one has to deal soley with Berlioz.

However devout he may have been in selecting his subject for his musical "discussion" and treatment, it was certainly subject to his stated temptations to depict hair-raising conjurations.

At no time in the performance did one feel exposed to deeply pious religious narration. Therein lay its authenticity, however limited in inspiration. Any attempt to convert this glossy vehicle (with the exception of the angel chorus and farewell to the shepherds) into anything resembling a religious service, or even a concertized oratorio, would have been ineffectual.

It would make as much sense as to how solemnly before Berlioz' treatment of the "Dies Irae" theme that was irreverently used in the "Fantastic" symphony, played here on Friday night.

Chorus Praised

To Mrs. DeVaron we extend a whopping compliment for an academically and efficiently trained chorus. These 150 students from the Berkshire Music Center include few voice majors. But they do have an abundance of zeal and musical intelligence.

Finest caliber apeared in the combined chorus' performance of "Farewell to the Shepherds." It was produced in warm, quiet tones of pure quality and was harmonically exact.

The "Chorus of Soothsayers" had ragged phrase openings as sung by the men. Attacks and rhythms jarred from the beat. Some justification may have been the very nature of the matter incantations that the chorus represents.

Beautiful Work

Beautiful work was accomplished by the off-stage women's group in the "Angel Chorus," and it was effectively correlated to Miss Kopieff and and Souzay's devotional phrases as Mary and Joseph.

The orchestra read a subdued quality into the "Night March" but the emotional impact remained. Some of its most inspired and technically admirable playing was the overture to the work's second part.

For the most part, the soloists approached their task with effective results. Gramm provided his triple roles with a voice of resonance, matched with smooth delivery. There was an even substance throughout his wide range. His French pronunciation needs perfecting.

Reverent Approach

Miss Kopleff is more settled in a mezzo soprano range. She approached the snore of Mary with reverence, although the "Stable in Bethlehem" aria was slightly pallid in effect.

We weren't particularly impressed with Souzay's interpretation of the Josep text, or with his vocal acumen. It sounded more like a well-rehearsed narrative than an inspired reading.

Valletti was quite magnificent as the narrator. His tenor is full-bodied, powerful, and sensitive. It was fine interpretation.

This afternoon, beginning at 2:30, Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony in excerpts from Berlioz, dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet."

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052
JUL 27 1957

Excellent Concert Delights Thousands At Tanglewood

An evening of music making at its finest was offered to an enthusiastic audience of more than 6,000 last night in the music shed at Tanglewood. Conductor, composer, orchestra—all combined in a most happy union, and the results were delightful in every respect.

Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony, has obviously a very special affinity for Hector Berlioz, the avantgarde French Romantic. This affinity is evidenced in the loving care he lavishes on the Berlioz music, in the devotion and understanding he manifests, and in the exquisitely detailed performances he extracts from his charges.

For last night's program, three works were selected, one dashing, the second lyric, the third bold. It was the rather unfamiliar "Corsair Overture" which began the evening. This music is slashed in strong strokes, alternating the quiet with the somewhat bombastic featuring brilliant writing for strings. The Boston group presented it in true debonair fashion, molding it in firm out line. Its worthiness was only an indication of the magic to come.

After "Le Corsaire," Mr. Munch and the orchestra turned their attention to one of the two major works of the evening, the "Harold in Italy," symphony with viola solo. A lovely work, it is essentially lyrical in content. The composer first wished to write a concerto for viola, ended up instead by writing a four-movement symphony with the instrument as a solo voice.

The soloist last night was Joseph De Pasquale, first violist for the Boston Symphony. After some amusing difficulty with the music stand, Mr. De Pasquale, Mr. Munch and the orchestra played in superb style, giving a performance that was breath-taking in beauty. The audience broke into spontaneous applause at the end of the second movement (which ends on a long sustained high note) and the whole was magnificent in aspect.

The final work on the program was the "Fantastic Symphony," a work which is banal and empty in spots, but which is eminently listenable and likeable nonetheless. Mr. Munch made it vital and alive, thrilling (in the fourth and fifth movements), lilting (in the second movement), and haunting and intense (in the first and third movements). It was a fitting climax to one of the finest concerts presented thus far this season. After taking several bows, Mr. Munch was seen to clasp his hands in a gesture of victory—and he was right.

This evening, soloists, chorus and orchestra will present the sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ" by Berlioz. Mr. Munch will again be on the podium.—R. D.

NEW YORK POST, SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1957 20

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Munch Leads Bostonians in Berlioz

Lenox, Mass., July 27—The cool temperature here Friday night had no dampening influence on Charles Munch, leading the Boston Symphony in the opening concert of the Berlioz week-end, the fourth of the current Berkshire Festival season. Munch could be said to be type cast when he conducts the music of this Frenchman whom he understands better than any other living conductor.

The crowd of 6,000 plus was mostly inside the gigantic music shed rather than outside on the grass, since the weather didn't invite night listening under the sky. Many came armed with blankets rather than evening coats, while the more adventurous, who preferred the great open spaces, varied between those who relished the crispness minus even a sweater and those who bundled under a few layers of blankets.

Opening with the debonair but superficial Overture, "The Corsair," the program continued with "Harold in Italy," Symphony With Viola Solo, Op. 16. Joseph De Pasquale, the Bostonians' first chair on this instrument, was featured as soloist.

The audience treated itself to a few chuckles at the outset when he couldn't fix his music stand properly, finally necessitating a change with one of the men behind him in the ensemble. Not one of Berlioz' most exciting pieces, the work's four movements are interesting, nonetheless, for the expressive possibilities they afford the amber-colored viola. Munch also has a genius for making even a lesser Berlioz work sound better than it is. He knows exactly when to whip up the tempo to create the unique electricity he communicates with this composer.

His ability to dramatize the prism of instrumental color, in which the composer is so wealthy, is another of his special gifts, and his assets were in shining evidence on this occasion. De Pasquale performed with mastery and with a velvety tone which gave significance to the different moods of the dreamer, who was really Berlioz, himself, wandering around in the Italian mountains.

After the "Fantastic Symphony," which concluded the evening, the audience cheered with good reason. When Munch first conducted the work in this country, he roused listeners to fever pitch, and he hasn't lost the touch since.

Monteux Sunday

Sunday afternoon's concert will begin with excerpts from the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," and will be followed by two works of Paul Hindemith, the only other composer to be heard on the three programs: Overture to the opera, "News of the Day," and the symphony, "Mathis Der Maler." Pierre Monteux will conduct.

The festival's annual "Tanglewood on Parade," a day's musical celebration for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, takes place Thursday, Aug. 8, when both the Boston Symphony, under Munch's direction, and the Boston

Sunday Music...

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. Mary Mackenzie, contralto. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1957

BERLIOZ WORKS GIVEN NEW LIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

Composer's Other Personality Shown in Performance of Trilogy

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 27 — Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony orchestra, the Tanglewood chorus and a quartet of distinguished soloists provided tonight a tender, inspired performance of "L'Enfance Du Christ," the sacred trilogy by Hector Berlioz. An estimated 1823 persons attended the performance.

This was the second of the three week-end concerts by the orchestra.

The trilogy depicts another side of Berlioz. The composer's other works reveal a turbulent personality who delights in evoking the furies. Simply and sincerely he relates the story of the flight of the holy family into Egypt following the decree of Herod that all new-born male children should be killed. Berlioz takes his text from the second chapter of the Gospel according to St. Mark, making only one distinct change. In place of the three wise men, Herod is told of the birth of the Babe who may yet take his throne by soothsayers of Judea. As the music progresses, it is evident that the changes are made for dramatic interest and inclusion of some rather horrifying musical passages.

For the most part, the music flows smoothly. There are some exquisite passages such as the angels' chorus, the "Farewell of the Shepherds" and the Holy Family at rest, the trio for two flutes and harp and the final chorus and words of the narrator.

Mr. Munch was fortunate in his choice of soloists. Florence Kopleff as Mary sang with warm and beautiful tones, those in the upper register ringing out like silver bells. The fine lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, Cesare Valletti, gave lavishly of his beautiful voice and fine musicianship to the role of the "narrator."

The eminent French baritone Gerard Souzay provided a stylistically sound, finely-enunciated and skillfully conceived portrayal of Joseph. Eonad Gramo, the young basso whose singing this summer has materially added to the musical values of all performances he has been in, undertook three roles, those of Herod, Olydor and the father of the family with whom the holy family found sanctuary. He sharply defined each personality and was particularly successful in his projection of the clinging, possessive King Herod.

Admirably Prepared

The Tanglewood chorus had been admirably prepared by Lorna Cooke De Varon. The voices of the Angel chorus were ethereal and there were mighty sonorities in the house of soothsayers.

One of the most attractive moments in the score occurs as the trio of two flutes and harp is played in the story when three Ishmaelite youths guard the Holy Family. The trio was played with an exquisite sense of [illegible] tion by Doriot Anthony Dwye and James Pappoutsakis, flutists and Bern[illegible] harpist. The orchestra was at its very best.

Mr. Munch dwelt lovingly on every phrase. Not a note was lost during almost intimate communication between conductor and audience, and this, in spite of the size of the house in shed.

Tomorrow afternoon Pierre Monteux returns to conduct excerpts from the symphony "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz and to give us his conception of Hindemiths symphony "Mathis der Maler" and the overture to the same composer's "News of the Day."

BERLIOZ PROGRAM OFFERED AT LENOX

De Pasquale Is Viola Soloist in 'Harold in Italy'—Munch Leads Boston Symphony

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 26—Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony orchestra here tonight in the first of three Berkshire Festival week-end concerts devoted principally to music of Berlioz.

Tonight's all-Berlioz program offered the Overture to "The Corsair," Opus 21; "Harold in Italy," with Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, as soloist and the "Fantastic" Symphony.

Mr. de Pasquale performed with distinction the music allotted to the viola as soloist-narrator in "Harold in Italy." This extraordinary, fascinating, imaginative work, a chief ornament of the somewhat limited repertory for solo viola and orchestra, poses many problems for soloist and conductor, both of a technical and interpretative sort. The skill with which they were met did credit to the individual gifts of conductor and soloist, as well as to the rapport achieved by the ragtime association in the orchestra.

Mr. de Pasquale's playing had a dark, rich-toned timbre altogether appropriate to the gloomy musings of the Byronic hero. He solved the work's many technical problems with admirable fluency. It was a performance of "Harold in Italy" that reflected credit on all concerned.

The "Fantastic" Symphony was one of Mr. Munch's big successes in his first season here. With the passing of time he has not lost his touch. Nor has he, to judge from tonight's performance, grown tired of it.

Although today the "Fantastic" Symphony is familiar, even over-familiar, in its time it was unique. There had been nothing quite like it in orchestra literature. It is the special merit of Mr. Munch's interpretation that there is a sort of freshness of discovery about it. He leads the "Fantastic" as if he had but recently made its acquaintance, and still remained fascinated by its novel splendor.

The "Corsair" Overture, blood and thunder in Berlioz' most theatrical style, got the evening's music off to a rousing start.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1957

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 143,181
JUL 28 1957

Berkshire Program Is Superlative

TANGELWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 26 — Charles Munch is Berlioz's man. The conductor of the Boston Symphony has an affinity with this composer that he exhibits for no other. As a result, tonight's concert at the Berkshire Music Festival, which opens a weekend of Berlioz programs, was a superlative event.

Just where this affinity arises between conductor and composer is difficult to say. In any event, it carries Mr. Munch, and with him the Boston Symphony, to heights of brilliance, invention, style, taste. Naturally, these are the components, the attributes of Berlioz's writing. Among all composers, Berlioz is the handsomest blend of classicism and the romantic. No matter to what degree of emotion the sentiment of his music may rise, its writing remains utterly lucid, clean, clear, spare. No matter how carried away, Berlioz the man, Berlioz the musician remains in shining control of all he feels and does.

The Corsair

Tonight's program opened with the overture to "The Corsair," a work which gathers in interest and impact as it goes. The first part is not especially stimulating or communicative, but the close is a magnificent outpushing of sounds, swirling and racing up the strings and clamoring out of the brass. The scudding, opening measures provide a tough start to any concert, and even tonight's splendid performance was not foretold in the first moments of playing. The orchestra had not quite settled in for the evening. But in the blaring closing pages all the splendors that were to cut across the rest of the performance were in full blaze. Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony were off and running.

Joseph DePasquale, first violist for the orchestra since 1947, was soloist for the "Harold in Italy" which followed. He gave a wonderful account of this charming work. Before and in between the solo pages, Mr. DePasquale was the most nervous or restless man you could imagine. But in playing, he was all composure. His account of the score was a model of elegance, of muted eloquence. He made no false attempt to raise the viola part to concerto proportions. Instead he kept it in a continually reflective vein, a combination of communication and remoteness.

Philosophic Vein

Nothing could have better suggested the philosophic vein in which Berlioz, or Harold if you prefer, purportedly saw Italy. This was a performance full of poise and beautifully played on an instrument of incomparable quality, a Gasparo DaSalo, from which the tones simply welled up and floated away. Mr. Munch's reading of this "Harold", the orchestra's playing, were completely compelling, and with Mr. DePasquale, they received an ovation at the close of the work as well as spontaneous outbursts of applause between movements.

The evening finished out with an impassioned performance of the "Fantastic" symphony, in which the third movement was of particularly haunting beauty, and in which the close was hugely vivid. This is of course one of the greatest things in the Boston Symphony's repertoire since the coming of Mr. Munch. Conductor, orchestra and work were heard at their peak on this occasion.

If we could only have gone on to "Lelio" from there—

T.H.P.

[C177]

Music Review

Berlioz at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FOURTH weekend at Tanglewood, devoted mainly to Berlioz, came to a close yesterday afternoon with the audience giving the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, a tremendous ovation.

This final of three concerts actually closed with two Hindemith works, although the beginning of the program had been excerpts from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet." Much of Berlioz' fame rests on the music of yesterday afternoon and that of the previous evening when Charles Munch led the orchestra and chorus in "L'Enfance du Christ." Indeed, his reputation as an originator can well be supported by these very examples.

The Love Scene is an unbroken stream of song flowing from the instruments as they replace the lovers' voices. Wagner considered it the most beautiful love-song of the 19th century and in the copy of "Tristan" which he presented his French colleague he inscribed "to the dear and great composer of 'Romeo and Juliet' from the grateful composer of 'Tristan and Isolde'."

* * *

THE QUEEN MAB scherzo postdates Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream", by more than a decade, but it exploits instrumental virtuosity to a degree not often attempted. It was a source of deep satisfaction to hear Monteux take it at the restrained pace where it sounds best. The Boston strings deserve to be given these opportunities and not raced for the sole reason that they are capable of it.

At this distance from Berlioz we are apt to forget what his position was in the regard of his fellow-musicians in Europe. Liszt sent him the score of the "Tannhauser" overture with a note "You will rediscover your own," and Saint-Saens said "The refinement of Mendelssohn in the "Midsummer Dream" seems to thicken by comparison."

A composer does not exist in a desert or a vucuum. A man is the product of his times. Just as Stravinsky has flourished in his field alongside of others in parallel arts, just so did Berlioz thrive alongside of other romantic pioneers.

ON THE PREVIOUS evening a completely different and almost unrecognizable Berlioz was heard. It is hard to explain the sudden change in style in so volcanic a musician as was revealed in Friday night's "Symphony Fantastic." In the "Enfance" he becomes a poet of serenity. In his other religious works he made use of a flashy manner, completely different from the tranquility of this sacred trilogy.

Berlioz was content here to use a small orchestra with soloists and chorus in which his usual excessive ardor was reduced to placidity. His sure instinct for orchestration guided him in choosing a simplicity which makes that used only the previous week in the Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum," much more intelligible.

His disregard for precedent and use of his own invention is apparent in endless details. His resort to irregular rhythms in the Cabalistic processions and his vocal lines for the solos, often unaccompanied or with just a few violins, show not only his sense of sound-values but his affecting esteem of the sacred subject.

* * *

THE FESTIVAL chorus, trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon, responded to Munch's baton in faithful reflection of his slightest wish. The epilogue, in which the voices sing a cappella, was breathtaking in its sustained beatific consecration.

The soloists were especially happily chosen for the performance. Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary, found the "Manger at Bethlehem" one of the most favorable vehicles assigned her in her several appearances here in this festival. Cesare Valletti, tenor, as the Narrator, Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph, and Donald Gramm, bass, as both Herod and Polydorus, were extremely capable in their various roles.

Berlioz arrives at the surest way to express sublimity by discarding intricacy. His craftsmanship in modulation and the fusion and balance of his instruments and voices here far outweigh the occasional defects of his continuity and the arid stretches in his developments. The trio for two flutes, played by Doriot Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, and harp, played by Bernard Zighera, to be performed by the young Ishmaelites, was an interlude enjoyed by the entire large audience.

* * *

YESTERDAY afternoon Munch closed his program with Hindemith's overture to his opera "Neues vom Tage" (News of the Day) and his symphony "Mathis der Maler" (Matthias the Painter). The symphony has been on several previous programs. It was a first time for the "News."

This latter overture is a pert, almost smart-aleck short effort written 30 years ago and might have served as pattern for the music as well as for the essential character of the play of Bernstein's "Trouble in Tahiti." Hindemith, indeed, asks that it begin "fairly fast, very brisk and concise." He needs no help in being flippant unless it is a collaborator such as Monteux.

The story concerns a couple who desire to get divorced. Suddenly tired of the scandal, they decide to drop the suit but "the chorus of newspaper readers" claiming they are entitled to their "rights" demand that they go through with the suit as planned. Hindemith matches the mockery of the libretto with perfectly complementary satire with his glib facility. He furthers the spirit of smart fluency by designating a reduced orchestra and only a part of the string section.

"Mathis" is music of another sphere. The sonority of the opening bars was one of the best effects of resonance the Bostonians have produced. Monteux kept the balance beautifully adjusted as he did whenever similar occasions occurred later in the score. Hindemith writes for divided strings and achieves a breadth and depth of tone an organ strives for. The subject of the opera from which the three movements are taken is of a much more serious and devout nature than the preceding overture. Monteux understood the distinction clearly and conveyed it to his audience with fidelity.

[178]

Berlioz 'Romeo and Juliet' Is Played at Tanglewood

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloists, Cesare Valletti, tenor; Gerard Souzay, baritone; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Donald Gramm, bass, Saturday night. The program:

"L'Enfance du Christ".....Berlioz
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting Sunday afternoon. The program:
Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet"..Berlioz
"News of the Day" Overture: "Mathis der Maler".....Hindemith

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 28.—The Berkshire Music Festival's week end in homage of Hector Berlioz concluded this afternoon with excerpts from his "Romeo and Juliet," played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Pierre Monteux. By way of varying the all-Berlioz diet that has been served at Tanglewood these three days past, Maitre Monteux chose to close his program with two pieces by Hindemith—the unfamiliar overture to the opera "Neues vom Tage" and the widely known beloved "Mathis der Maler" suite. Last night, however, was the French composer's own and was devoted in its entirety to a performance of his sacred trilogy, Opus 25, "L'Enfance du Christ," with Charles Munch conducting.

It is difficult to imagine a more appropriate salute to the grandeur of Berlioz's instrumental instincts than a rendition of "Romeo" with Monteux at the head of it. So, at any rate, it seemed on this occasion, for every existent nuyed — there were four in all—took on, under the life-giving light of his baton, precisely the aspect of sentiment that Berlioz had in mind as he turned into tone his version of Shakespeare's tragedy.

Incredible Love Scene

There was first the pulsing introductory fugato rattled off, as it was meant to, to suggest sundry duels and combats in old Verona; and this was followed by the incredible love scene in which the fragrance of night, the tenderness of romance and the warmth of love were conjured up in a blanket of sonority such as Monteux alone is able to command, and that only on his best days. It seems rather unfair of the maestro that he makes us turn to him, a gentleman several years into his eighties, to discover how youthful ardor can be distilled into music, but you will go far before encountering orchestra passion as genuine as that exhibited yesterday. And similarly the "Queen Mab" Scherzo—a piece that no mortal man ever wrote without the connivance of elves—was straight out of the land of wonwer, so magically did it rustle and weave. Then, too, the ache of loneliness, as displayed by Romeo on straying before the Capulet palace, was idealized in sound to a truly remarkable degree. All told, the performance—lest I have forgotten to mention it—was a corker.

Hindemith's overture, "Neues vom Tage," proved to be a bumptious, jocular work of no particular significance, though it is snappy and breezy in a perfectly acceptable Hindemithian way. "Mathis der Maler," on the other hand, is an accredited contemporary masterwork, though that is hardly as important as the fact that people actually like to hear it. It was performed by all concerned in the grand manner—with exaltation and triumph ringing through every measure.

"L'Enfance du Christ"

Saturday's rendition of "L'Enfance du Christ," though its appearance on a summer festival certainly counts as a high-born and noble gesture, was curiously uneven and uneventful in effect. Largely, if I interpret it correctly, this was due to the performance's general inconsistency, its lack of over-all refinement, moments of great poetry being joined arm-in-arm with others that were perfunctory and no more. It was strange, inexplicable.

For example, the small male chorus when heard alone was neither accurate nor in tune, while the larger choir, of which it forms a part, sang with quite strict reference to the notes and perfect intonation. And again—basso Donald Gramm, who has been doing extraordinary work at Tanglewood the summer through, delivered his first number, "Herod's Dream," in a manner all casual, but dealt with his later episodes as though he were born to sing them. More damaging still was the unsettled and unsettling behavior of the orchestra itself, which was able, on reading the overture to the trilogy's second part, to produce a tone of vibrant color, and yet read some of its passages as though the men were either bored with them or found them little to their liking.

Very Special Work

The truth is, of course, that "L'Enfance du Christ" is a very special work, demanding very special treatment. As opposed to most cloak-and-dagger Berlioz it is as gossamer as a spider's web, as delicate as a wren's egg. As such, it needs no great musical calamity to destroy it: the least indiscretion will do. Also—and here was the heart of Saturday's irregular showing—"L'Enfance" breathes a serenity of spirit that is nigh-on continuous and Mr. Munch seemed not always attuned to the spirit of the piece as implied in the score.

This is not to say that he was anywhere careless or clumsy—that could never be. It was simply the expressive depths of the work, as they are known to exist, were not always available to the hearer. Even at that moment where the surface calm of "L'Enfance" emerged perfect and unruffled, those inner intensities that result from Berlioz's piety and his concern with the devoutness of the text were presented as mere echoes of their true selves.

And some of this, alas, rubbed off on the evening's soloists. Gerard Souzay, whose sense of French styling was far in advance of anything on the stage, sang rather drily, dispassionately, with colors muted; and Cesare Valletti, though his voice, as ever, was pure gold, found his supreme bel canto training an obstacle in adjusting to the far different requirements of French vocal tradition. But Florence Kopleff apparently could do no wrong. Without effort or strain she floated out ribbon after ribbon of gorgeous tone, all of them filling the hall with a bright and billowing beauty.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, MONDAY, JULY 29, 1957

NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, JULY 29, 1957.

Music: Berlioz Week-End

Monteux Leads 'Romeo and Juliet' in Lenox

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 28—The Berlioz week-end of the Berkshire Music Festival ended this afternoon with a concert by Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra that featured excerpts from Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet."

To students of cause and effect in orchestral playing there is no conductor more fascinating to watch than Mr. Monteux. In the matter of economy of means his only close rival is Fritz Reiner. His beat is crisp and precise but has no superfluous movement. Cues are given sparingly, often with a flick of the wrist almost imperceptible from the audience. The outstanding trait of Mr. Monteux' conducting is its aplomb. He does not belong to the clenched-fist-crescendo school of conducting.

Yet what comes out in performance sounds exactly right. This afternoon the orchestra was equally ready with the delicacy of the "Queen Mab" Scherzo, the impressive brazen solemnities of the introduction (Mr. Monteux' affection for the trombone is hardly inferior to that of Berlioz) and all tonal gradations in between.

To judge from the results, although Mr. Monteux does not appear to work as hard as some of his colleagues, the orchestra knows exactly what he wants and gives it to him.

•

This afternoon's concert was rounded out by two Hindemith works, the Overture of the opera "Neues vom Tage" and the symphony "Mathis der Mahler."

Cesare Valletti

Last night the orchestra, led by its regular conductor, Charles Munch, offered a splendid performance of Berlioz' sacred trilogy "L'Enfance du Christ."

It was a stirring rendition of the work, which also emphasized its dramatic aspects to the full. Although "L'Enfance du Christ" is Berlioz in a somewhat subdued vein, it has its moments of powerful impact, and Mr. Munch made the most of them.

•

Outstanding among the evening's capable soloists was the tenor Cesare Valletti, who sang the music of the Narrator and the Centurion with fine musicianship and agreeable vocal quality.

The arduous role of Mary was well performed by Florence Kopleff, mezzo-soprano; Gerard Souzay, baritone, sang Joseph with fine quality and admirably clear [illegible] of the French text.

Donald Gramm, bass, gave an excellent account of himself as Herod, Polydorus and the Father of a Family.

A highlight of the evening's music was the admirably spirited and disciplined singing of the chorus, trained for the occasion by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

NEW YORK POST, MONDAY, JULY 29, 1957

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Monteux Leads Bostonians in Lenox

Lenox, Mass., July 29—The Berlioz-Hindemith programs at the Berkshire Festival here yesterday afternoon and Saturday night added pungency to other aspects of pleasurable listening. Conductors Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch (yesterday and Saturday respectively) induced special spice because of their contrasting personalities, while Hindemith's overture to his opera, "News of the Day," a satire on what can happen to a newspaper story when the juice of the scandal effervesces too fast, was riotous and unique.

Monteux led the Boston Symphony in this fast-moving "Newsy" overture with hardly the flick of an eyelash, much less the wave of the arm or hand. Hindemith's symphony, "Mathis Der Maler," and excerpts from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" took on an easy magnificence with the wide-eyed, imperturbable maestro still seeming to inspire the ensemble by remote control. There was velvet and shimmer in the beautiful love scene from the Shakespeare tragedy followed by a mercurial brilliance in the initial movement of the Hindemith symphony, "Angelic Concert." Monteux was most impressive in matching his absolute mastery of orchestral technique with the ability to produce magic of color and [illegible]tion. This was especially true in the Berlioz.

'L'Enfance du Christ'

The fiery Munch, on the other hand, volatile and dynamic, and dramatic in gesture as well as personality, conducted the serene oratorio, "L'Enfance du Christ," with the projection of an actor. He obviously was absorbed and dedicated so this observation means no detraction from his remarkable powers in extracting the essence of meaning from Berlioz' music.

Trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon, the Festival Chorus was especially effective in the concluding portions of the first section where the invisible angels warn Joseph and Mary of the danger to Jesus and urge them to flee toward Egypt. A quartette of soloists sang the French text with sincerity and generally suave vocalism. Gerard Souzay's enunciation was admirable in the role of Joseph, while Donald Gramm interpreted the part of Herod with unusual sensitivity. Florence Kopleff, as Mary, lent poignancy of feeling to the beauty of her quality. Cesare Valletti, singing the narrator, lacked dramatic fervor in his high voice but was otherwise successful.

In observing the reactions of the audience and listening to their comments, however, this listener is convinced that such narrative works would achieve more significant listener participation if they were presented in English, granting the loss of some subtle artistic satisfactions. The necessity for Eng[illegible] even [illegible] presented earlier during the Tanglewood season in German.

Continuing for two more weekends, the festival concludes Sunday afternoon, Aug. 11, with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

TIGHT BINDING

C1793

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

JUL 29 1957

...liet'
...ood

...omance and
... were con-
...t of sonority
...one is able
...t only on
...ms rather
...tion that he
...him, a gentle-
...ears, into his
...ver how youth-
...distilled into
...will go far before
...tra passion
...t exhibited yes-
...rly the "Queen
...a piece that no
...r wrote without
...c of eyes—was
...the land of won-
...dy did it rustle
...n, too, the ache
...as displayed by
...ing before the
..., was idealized in
...y remarkable de-
... the performance
...orgotten to men-
... corker.

...overture, "Neues
...ved to be a bump-
...work of no par-
...nce, though it is
...esy in a perfectly
...ndemithian way.
...ler," on the other
...redited contempo-
...r, though that is
...rtant as the fact
...ually like to hear
...ormed by all con-
... grand manner—
...n and triumph
...h every measure.

...e du Christ"

...ndition of "L'En-
..." though its ap-
... summer festival
...s as a high-born
...re, was curiously
...ventful in effect.
...interpret it cor-
... due to the per-
...neral inconsist-
... over-all refine-
... of great poetry
...rm-in-art with
...ere perfunctory
... It was strange,

... the small male
...heard alone was
...te nor in tune,
... choir, of which
... sang with quite
... to the notes and
...ion. And again
... Graham, who has
...raordinary work
... the summer
...ed his first num-
...ream," in a man-
... but dealt with
...ies as though he
...ing them. More
... was the unsett-
...ling behavior of
...itself, which was
...ng the overture
... second part, to
... of vibrant color,
...some of its pas-
...th the men were
... their liking.

...ecial Work

..., of course, that
...Christ" is a very
... demanding very
...nt. As opposed
...nd-dagger Berlioz
...ner as a spider's
...e as a wren's egg.
...s no great musi-
...o destroy it; the
...on will do. Also
...as the heart of
...rgular showing—
...eathes a serenity
... is nigh-on con-
...r. Munch seemed
...ned to the spirit
... implied in the

...o say that he was
...less or clumsy—
...r be. It was sim-
...ve depths of the
...e known to exist,
... available to the
...s that moment
...e calm of "L'En-
... perfect and un-
...inner intensities
...n Berlioz's piety
... with the devout-
..., were presented
... of their true

...his, also, rubbed
...ning's soloists,
... whose sense of
..., was far in ad-
...s on the stage.
... dispassion-
...s muted; and
...ough his voice,
..., found his
... training an
...r to the far
...s of French
...s. Florence
...could do no
...ort or strain
...on after rib-
..., all of them
... a bright and

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE,
MONDAY JULY 29, 1957

Berlioz Featured by Munch at Festival

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

The power of music to suggest was amply demonstrated in the Saturday evening concert at Tanglewood of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Charles Munch conducted the performance of Hector Berlioz "L'Enfance du Christ," Sacred Trilogy, opus 25.

* * *

WORKS OF Berlioz were featured during the weekend with an all-Berlioz program on Friday including "Harold in Italy" with Joseph dePasquale as the viola soloist; the overture, "Le Corsair" and the "Fantastic Symphony." Yesterday afternoon Pierre Monteux opened his second program with the Boston musicians with excerpts from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" and conducted two works of Paul Hindemith, the overture to the opera "News of the Day" and the symphony "Mathis der Maler."

"L'Enfance du Christ" was given its first Tanglewood performance on Saturday. Dr. Munch has also performed the work in full in Boston and it has become a yearly tradition in New York through the performances there by the Little Orchestra Society.

* * *

SOLOISTS on Saturday were Cesare Valletti, Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera in the role of the Narrator; Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph; Florence Kopleff, contralto, Mary; and Donald Gramm in the roles of Herod, Polydorus and "the father of a family." The huge Berkshire Festival Chorus was prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

Performing in the instrumental "Trio of Young Ishmaelites" with its pure line and simplicity of appeal were Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutes; and Bernard Zighera, harp.

The nobility of conception of the work is amazing, its purity of form astounding and its utter simplicity most striking.

* * *

THE MOVEMENTS include "Herod's Dream," "The Flight into Egypt" and "The Arrival at Sais." Numbers in the first movement include a "Recitative," "Night March," "Herod's Dream," "Chorus of Soothsayers," "The Stable in Bethlehem" and "Angel Chorus."

"Overture," "Farewell of the Shepherds" and "The Holy Family at Rest" form the second movement. "Recitative," "The Arrival at Sais," the "Trio of the Young Ishmaelites" and a final "Chorus" are included in the last movement.

We have endeavored over the years to hear most of the major writings of Berlioz and each and every time we are amazed at the complete "differentness" of each.

* * *

"L'ENFANCE" is beautiful music, a quiet music in keeping with its subject matter yet marked by subtle complexities. It has its moments of brass but they are brief and the vocal line is never strained. The chorus is a chorus that in spite of its size sings quietly and an echo section offstage produces a fine effect.

One feels privileged to hear the work under the baton of Dr. Munch and to realize the authority which he brings to its interpretation.

The Tanglewood premier was received with a high enthusiasm from an audience that had listened acutely.

* * *

PROGRAMS IN this week's series will open Friday under the direction of Carl Schuricht, German conductor, and concerts of Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon will be conducted by Dr. Munch. Works of Brahms will be featured with Isaac Stern as soloist on Saturday evening and Rudolf Serkin as soloist in the Sunday afternoon program.

Mr. Souzay, baritone, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, will be heard in a song recital on Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall as a benefit for the music school conducted by the orchestra.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

JUL 29 1957

Hindemith Work Delights at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Pierre Monteux, gave its first performance of Paul Hindemith's "News of the Day" overture in the closing concert of Series B of the Berkshire Music Festival, yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood.

The audience of 6,176 brought the weekend total to 19,307, which is not spectacular for Tanglewood.

Except for the two Hindemith scores played yesterday, the concerts have been all-Berlioz programs.

Whimsical

Hindemith wrote "News of the Day" as an opera in 1929. Its subject matter rotates around a married couple who institute divorce proceedings and try to call them off. Their affairs make such a juicy bit for press and public that they find it difficult to revise their plans because they have become "news of the day." A pretty flimsy plot, but a good subject for mirth.

Assuming that the overture is based on extracts from the opera, it is a problem indeed to find melodies that might serve as vocal arias or even recitatives. It is far less in the nature of a properly conceived overture than a scherzo—thinly voiced and consistenly capricious. That should be amended to include a crash-bang finish.

While all did not go well at the rehearsal we attended Saturday morning, the overture was played with authority, converting it into a whimsical bit of nonsense, chatty in high woodwind solos, and consistently delightful.

Magnificent

The balance of the program was excerpts from Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," and the three-movement suite taken from Hindemith's opera "Matthias the Painter."

It was magnificent performance.

Most impressive were the crystal-clear objectives attained by Monteux in the Berlioz, which, incidentally, he conducted from memory. The fugue in the introduction was unravelled in voices each possessed of its own personality, and none imposing itself on the structure of the tapestry. Long recitativos in horns were stentorean but richly qualified.

Rich Intonation

The "love scene" was described in rich viola intonation, with perfectly balanced counterpoint in woodwinds.

It covered a span from elegiac to impassioned statements in cellos, creating a study in calculated effects. The "Queen Mab" scherzo buzzed at a swift gait in muted strings, embellished with frivolous woodwind solos.

A large-scaled rhapsodic serenade was developed in the "Romeo alone" sequences, and the "Capulets' feast" was drama at its most brilliant — stampeding string passages, shouting brass and smashing percussion.

Strings Revel

The strings revelled in the "Matthias" work. Most fruitful passage of the opening movement, "Angelic Concert," was the fugue, a marvel of precision as the theme travelled through sections, amassing tone and momentum.

We've heard no more beautiful sounds during the past two weekends than Doriot Anthony Dwyer's flute solo in the "Entombment"—and nothing more gripping than the frantic passages in strings that begin the "Temptation of St. Anthony," growing in crescendo to shattering climaxes.

Silhouetted against these were bird-like trills in violin that sounded like brilliant harmonics and were absolutely true to pitch.

Beginning Friday, Series C will feature the music of Brahms. Friday night's programs will include the "Tragic" overture, Egk's "Sonata for Orchestra," and the Brahms First Symphony. The conductor will be Carl Schuricht.

ADVERTISEMENT

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

JUL 29 1957

Works Of Berlioz Was Latest 3-Day Feature At Tanglewood

The second weekend of the big concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox saw a three-concert tribute to the works of Hector Berlioz which in turn brought much praise to conductors Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux for their understanding of the French composer. Attendance ran somewhat over 6,000 for the Friday night and Sunday concerts, more for Saturday night.

Friday evening's concert under the baton of Charles Munch amounted to a festival of strings, something the Boston Symphony Orchestra is extremely well qualified to handle. The program started with a bright overture "The Corsair" that seemed a little rushed but was a brilliant display of strings.

Then came the "Harold in Italy" Symphony, attuned to the register of the viola, for which it was written and which plays an unusual kind of leading role in the composition. Joseph de Pasquale of the orchestra was the viola soloist, handling with much finesse the instrument's dominant but not domineering position in this piece. The music was full of charm.

The showpiece of the concert was the Fantastic Symphony, a composition of fabulous color and interest in which Berlioz allows the strings to have the company of horns in some magnificently imaginative passages. The composition never spills over in spite of colorful effects, growing to take the full force of the orchestra in the fourth movement and concluding with a fanstasia in full bloom in the last one. It was an exciting experience.

On Saturday night Mr. Munch was again on the podium for a Berlioz program including choral work done by the Festival Chorus, trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon. This was "L'Enfance du Christ", a sacred trilogy including the nativity, the flight into Egypt, and the arrival at Sais. Instrumental soloists were Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappotsakis, and Bernard Zighera at the harp. Vocal soloes were by Cesare Valletti, tenor, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Gerard Souzay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Sunday afternoon concert, which added the works of Hindemith to the weekend program. The lovely melodies of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" were presented in a number of excerpts from the dramatic symphony. Then from the works of Hindemith the orchestra played the "News of the Day" overture, and the Symphony "Mathis der Maler."

The Berkshire Festival will continue for two more weeks. Next weekend's programs will lean heavily on Brahms, and the final weekend will present two Beethoven symphonies.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

JUL 29 1957

Berlioz Work Has Premiere in Festival at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — Charles Munch's predilection for Berlioz was sufficient guarantee of a Tanglewood performance of "The Infancy of Chirst," which had its Festival premiere Saturday night.

In the context of the composer's works this is perhaps the most episodic, lacking the artistic unity of greatness. Someone has called it a "triptych on a sacred theme," an apt characterization, and one might even call it a series of vignettes.

* * *

BERLIOZ WROTE the second section, "The Flight into Egypt," initially and this remains the quintessence of the score. One can hardly imagine a more tender evocation than the tenor narrative or a more touching bit of choral writing than the "Farewell of the Shepherds."

Unfortunately, the whole thing is not on the same rarefied plane Art creates its own logic, but it is never pedestrain, which is sometimes the fault of "The Infancy." But Berlioz, like Stravinsky, was always the innovator and the listener will find many things to intrigue him in this score, despite its unevenness.

Mr. Munch, rather surprisingly, employed the full symphony orchestra and the large Festival Chorus. While the choristers did a sensitive job with the Shepherd's Farewell, such a large battery of instrumentalists and singers militated against the essentially small-scale spirit of the work.

Competing against these forces, the soloists did remarkably well. Florence Kopleff's mellifluous contralto was ideally suited to the role of Mary, Donald Gramm's beautifully projected bass was flexible and expressive.

* * *

GERARD SOUZAY, singing the parts of Joseph, was the most at home in the French text but he had trouble being heard over the orchestral tuttis. Cesare Valletti did as well as could be expected in the role of the Narrator.

Lorna Cooke de Varon had prepared the Festival Chorus for this performance and she elicited some remarkable gradations of sound particularly in the Shepherd's Farewell. The Boston Symphony on this occasion played with its accustomed finesse and rounded sonority.

Some 6,800 people gathered at Lenox to enjoy this unfamiliar Berlioz in a setting of cool breezes and pleasant temperatures.

New York Journal-American
Mon., July 29, 1957-13

drama—Music—

Monteux Presents Contrasting Music

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 29.—Two styles of music were brilliantly contrasted in Pierre Monteux's program with the Boston Symphony in the Music Shed yesterday afternoon. A masterpiece each from Berlioz and Hindemith juxtaposed the 19th and 20th Centuries clearly.

The only relative acceptance of these works excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" (Berlioz) and "Mathis der Maler" (Hindemith) kept the audience down to just over 6,000.

Audiences of similar size characterized the weekend devoted to Berlioz. His drawing power is still not at full strength, evidently. Yet some who heard the Friday program for the first time grew excited about "Harold in Italy" and the "Fantastic" symphony.

Those who heard the "L'Enfance du Christ" on Saturday night were transported. The applause after the "Romeo and Juliet" indicated that the performance had mesmerized the audience. The simple fact is that Berlioz wears extremely well, especially as played with the BSO under Charles Munch and Monteux.

Renewal of Faith

The simplicity, the delicacy, and the purity of "L'Enfance du Christ" provided a rewewal of faith in the good, the true, and the beautiful in this performance. Munch was most fortunate in his soloist: Cesare Valletti, tenor, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Gerard Souzay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass. The festival chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, did credit to her as well as to Munch. But why did it have to be sung in French? English versions should be compulsory with works like this.

How the Bostonians played for Monteux in the Berlioz should be a story in itself. This incredible young man of 82 drew the most sensuous beauty from the famous love scene and created the utmost magic in the Queen Mab Scherzo. This was something to experience. Yet the musicians responded, too, in the Hindemith, especially in the quality of the "Entombment" movement.

Music Radiant

The program also included the less familiar overture of the opera "News of the Day" which served chiefly as a warmup for "Mathis der Maler."

Hindemith's chattering counterpoint yields less in the overture than the symphony, but then the subject-matter of the latter strikes deeper.

Dubious weather over the weekend may have had some dampening effects, but the luminosity of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's performance made the music radiant. What they played almost became secondary, except that the conductors made certain that the composers were devotedly served.

New England Newspaper Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
JUL 29 1957

Berlioz Music at Tanglewood

Monteux And Munch On Podium

By Jules Wolffers
Lenox, Mass.

With the programs at Tanglewood this past weekend given over almost completely to music by Hector Berlioz, both Charles Munch and his close associate, Pierre Monteux, had ample opportunity to indulge their strong preference for the brilliant and innovating French composer.

Although most musicians admire and respect Berlioz, it is a moot point whether or not the general public cares enough about the composer to sit through the lengthy pages of his scores. In any event, attendance for all three of the Berkshire Festival concerts was below what might have been expected. Whole rows of seats were empty in the Shed.

This is all the more surprising when one considers that the new Massachusetts Turnpike makes it possible for residents of the Boston area to reach Tanglewood in a little more than two hours by automobile, instead of the four hours and more it used to take over a narrow and difficult road. It is probable that other summer music festivals are drawing their quota, and the vast increase in European travel must also be having its effect.

It is only by Tanglewood's own standards that attendance was small. By Symphony Hall standards all three audiences were large indeed, and there was much enthusiasm shown for the fine music and the excellent performances.

Mr. Munch opened the Friday concert with a Berlioz curtain-raiser, the Overture to "The Corsair," Op. 21, which set the stage for the exciting works to follow. "Harold in Italy" found the soloist, Joseph de Pasquale, playing his viola with all his wonted warmth and beauty of tone for results that brought him an ovation. The conductor's way with the programatic score was characteristically fervent and enthusiastic, knowing and understanding.

This item also served to establish Mr. Munch as a quick-witted humorist. When Mr. de Pasquale came on stage he attempted to adjust the music stand, which was set about two feet too low. Hampered by the necessity of holding his instrument and bow, the violinist found himself in a somewhat embarrassing position. Bernard Zighera and his harp had been placed close by. The harpist sprang forward to help his colleague, but his efforts also proved unavailing. Mr. Munch then made as if to offer his own conductor's stand to the soloist, a gesture that brought laughter and applause, removing any tension the soloist and his eager helpers may have felt. A substitution was quickly effected with a less recalcitrant stand taken from the cello section.

Two other Berlioz works completed Mr. Munch's weekend stint—the "Fantastic" Symphony at the Friday concert, and "L'Enfance du Christ" on Saturday, with Cesare Valleti, tenor, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Gérard Souzay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass, for soloists, and with the Festival Chorus prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

Mr. Monteux opened the Sunday concert with a poised and balanced interpretation of the excerpts from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet." The conductor led the orchestra through the long and intricate score by memory to much audience recognition, not only at the end but also between the sections.

After intermission came the only non-Berlioz items with two works by Hindemith to provide a contemporary touch. New to this reviewer was the overture to the opera, "Neues vom Tage" ("News of the Day") in which the composer satirizes the special attention given by some elements of the newspaper world to a suit for divorce.

According to John N. Burk's excellent program notes, the opera has never been a popular success. After hearing the overture, it was easy to recognize the reason. Mr. Hindemith's score shows a sophisticated and keen musical intellect holding itself aloof while heaping some acid commentary and pointed witticisms in unobvious and polyphonized terms of great skill, fine workmanship, and subtle orchestral effects. While not geared to immediate public acceptance, this is nevertheless an exceedingly clever and enjoyable piece of music.

Hindemith's symphony, "Mathis der Maler," brought the concert and weekend to a close.

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 21,025
JUL 30 1957

Berlioz Works Featured At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 29 — It was "B" for Berlioz and for brilliant performances by the Boston Symphony orchestra at the three weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" with the Berkshire Festival Chorus of some 150 voices was presented by Conductor Charles Munch on Saturday evening before some 6,900 who were deeply appreciative of the fine blending of voices with the excellence of the orchestra.

Friday evening Munch gave the playing of the "Fantastic Symphony" before some 6,300 such a brilliant reading that as one listened he was aware he was watching musical history being written. Such beauty did the orchestra give this selection one felt Mr. Munch was truly inspired. Six times the audience called him back and "bravos" rang through the huge music shed. Berlioz left nothing out of the score filled with the sound of effects not often presented. The Boston did it to perfection with all of the fine shadings and rich coloring. In the first half of the program Joseph De Pasquale, a member of the string section, gave a finished performance in "Harold in Italy:" Symphony with viola solo.

Saturday night's performance of Berlioz' Sacred Trilogy presented Cesare Valleti, tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Gerard Souzay, baritone; and Donald Gramm, bass. There was off-stage singing to heighten effectiveness of the presentation.

Monteux On Podium

Pierre Monteux conducted the concert yesterday afternoon in presenting Berlioz' Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet." For variety there were two Hindemith selections, including "Matthias the Painter."

Attendance at the concerts is sure to pick up this week with the Brahms' programs to be presented by guest artists, Isaac Stern on Saturday evening, and Rudolf Serkin on Sunday afternoon. Carl Schuricht, guest conductor from abroad, will conduct Friday night when Brahms' "Tragic Overture" and his "Symphony No. 1" will be given. Munch will conduct Saturday and Sunday concerts. Isaac Stern, heard here earlier this season, will perform Brahms' "Violin Concerto" and Rudolph Serkin will make his only appearance in Brahms' "Piano Concerto No. 2."

Plans for the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade when music lovers have an opportunity to see the entire Berkshire Festival facilities functioning have been announced for Aug. 8 from 6 until 11 p. m.

S. M.

Tanglewood Program Well Received

Lenox, Mass., July 29 — It was "B" for Berlioz and for brilliant performances by the Boston Symphony orchestra at the three weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" with the Berkshire Festival Chorus of some 150 voices was presented by Conductor Charles Munch on Saturday evening before some 6,900 who were deeply appreciative of the fine blending of voices with the excellence of the orchestra.

Friday evening Munch gave the playing of the "Fantastic Symphony" before some 6,300 such a brilliant reading that as one listened he was aware he was watching musical history being written. Such beauty did the orchestra give this selection one felt Mr. Munch was truly inspired. Six times the audience called him back and "bravos" rang through the huge music shed. Berlioz left nothing out of the score filled with the sound of effects not often presented. The Boston did it to perfection with all of the fine shadings and rich coloring. In the first half of the program Joseph De Pasquale, a member of the string section, gave a finished performance in "Harold in Italy:" Symphony with viola solo.

Saturday night's performance of Berlioz' Sacred Trilogy presented Cesare Valleti, tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Gerard Souzay, baritone; and Donald Gramm, bass. There was off-state singing to heighten effectiveness of the presentation.

Pierre Monteux conducted the concert Sunday afternoon in presenting Berlioz' Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet." For variety there were two Hindemith selections, including "Matthias the Painter."

Attendance at the concerts is sure to pick up this week with the Brahms' programs to be presented by guest artists, Isaac Stern on Saturday evening, and Rudolf Serkin on Sunday afternoon. Carl Schuricht, guest conductor from abroad, will conduct Friday night when Brahms' "Tragic Overture" and his "Symphony No. 1" will be given. Munch will conduct Saturday and Sunday concerts. Isaac Stern, heard here earlier this season, will perform Brahms' "Violin Concerto" and Rudolph Serkin will make his only appearance in Brahms' "Piano Concerto No. 2."

Plans for the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade when music lovers have an opportunity to see the entire Berkshire Festival facilities functioning have been announced for Aug. 8 from 6 until 11 p. m.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,017
JUL 29 1957

Berlioz Works Featured At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 29 — It was "B" for Berlioz and for brilliant performances by the Boston Symphony orchestra at the three weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" with the Berkshire Festival Chorus of some 150 voices was presented by Conductor Charles Munch on Saturday evening before some 6,900 who were deeply appreciative of the fine blending of voices with the excellence of the orchestra.

Friday evening Munch gave the playing of the "Fantastic Symphony" before some 6,300 such a brilliant reading that as one listened he was aware he was watching musical history being written. Such beauty did the orchestra give this selection one felt Mr. Munch was truly inspired. Six times the audience called him back and "bravos" rang through the huge music shed. Berlioz left nothing out of the score filled with the sound of effects not often presented. The Boston did it to perfection with all of the fine shadings and rich coloring. In the first half of the program Joseph De Pasquale, a member of the string section, gave a finished performance in "Harold in Italy:" Symphony with viola solo.

Saturday night's performance of Berlioz' Sacred Trilogy presented Cesare Valleti, tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Gerard Souzay, baritone; and Donald Gramm, bass. There was off-stage singing to heighten effectiveness of the presentation.

Monteux On Podium

Pierre Monteux conducted the concert yesterday afternoon in presenting Berlioz' Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet." For variety there were two Hindemith selections, including "Matthias the Painter."

Attendance at the concerts is sure to pick up this week with the Brahms' programs to be presented by guest artists, Isaac Stern on Saturday evening, and Rudolf Serkin on Sunday afternoon. Carl Schuricht, guest conductor from abroad, will conduct Friday night when Brahms' "Tragic Overture" and his "Symphony No. 1" will be given. Munch will conduct Saturday and Sunday concerts. Isaac Stern, heard here earlier this season, will perform Brahms' "Violin Concerto" and Rudolph Serkin will make his only appearance in Brahms' "Piano Concerto No. 2."

Plans for the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade when music lovers have an opportunity to see the entire Berkshire Festival facilities functioning have been announced for Aug. 8 from 6 until 11 p. m.

S. M.

NEWTOWN BEE, FRIDAY, AUGUST 2, 1957

Berlioz Trilogy At Tanglewood Lauded

"L'Enfance Du Christe" Conducted By Munch

Last Saturday's performance at Tanglewood of the Berlioz sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ," by the Berkshire Festival Chorus and the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch was one of the most deeply rewarding musical experiences this reviewer has had since first hearing Bach's B Minor Mass with the late Serge Koussevitsky conducting the orchestra and chorus at Tanglewood.

The Berlioz score itself is magnificent; powerful, majestic and tenderly haunting, and Dr Munch's sensitive interpretation did full justice to the music, weaving a rich pattern of voice and orchestra, as if the entire ensemble were one great instrument.

The soloists were all outstanding; with Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary, and Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph, who carried the greater part of the solo work, particularly memorable. Cesare Valletti, tenor, as Narrator and Centurion, and Donald Gramm, singing three parts, Herod, Polydorus and the Father of a Family, were completely satisfying, their voices perfectly balanced against the other two.

The orchestra's shadings and nuances, its sweeping, full climaxes were superbly controlled and elicited by the conductor.

The trilogy is divided into Herod's Dream, The Flight into Egypt and The Arrival At Sais.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 30 1957

Nearly 20,000 In Audiences At Tanglewood Concerts

Hector Berlioz was the composer chosen to honor the fourth weekend of the Berkshire Festival concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch at Tanglewood. More than 19,000 enthusiastic listeners came, in spite of some wet and threatening weather on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

The first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ," Sacred Trilogy, was the complete program for Saturday evening. A beautifully conceived, intricately coordinated choral and orchestral work, it was quietly absorbing through all its illustrative episodes. Taken from the second chapter of the Gospel according to Saint Matthew, Berlioz has related the story in his own words, enlarging, but keeping always a simple and folk-like mood in words and music, except for the three wise men, whose characters he changes to quite evil soothsayers. In three parts, the first, called Herod's Dream, included the chorus of soothsayers and the angel chorus heard offstage most effectively. The second, Flight into Egypt," was most touching for its ineffable pastoral quality from the Farwell of the Shepherds to the Holy Family at Rest "by a spring in the desert." After intermission the third and final part "The Arrival at Said," sung with tender feeling and fine restraint by Gerard Souzay as Joseph and Florence Kopleff as Mary, joined by Donald Gramm as Father of a Family who finally agrees to give food and shelter to the Holy Family. The Festival Chorus was prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon and Cesare Valetti assisted most ably in the role of narrator and centurion. It is an obviously difficult work to coordinate, and Dr. Munch handled its intricate simplicity with great sensitivity and deep concentration.

Sunday's concert saw the second and last appearance of the lovable Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. He was greeted with a prolonged ovation by both audience and orchestra. Mr. Monteux opened the program with Berlioz' "Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" Dramatic Symphony, Op. 17, including the love scene, Queen Mab, and the Concert and Ball. At first there was a feeling of tension between orchestra and conductor, but gradually the pressure was equalized and Mr. Monteux expertly and firmly guided the virtuoso musicians in an impeccably musical performance. One is always intrigued to hear in this work strains of Wagner's "Rienzi" Overture, and the motive of the Prelude to Tristan and Isolde.

The final half of the program saw no restraint on either side; Hindemith was the composer, and his frothy, fast-moving overture to the opera "News of the Day" sparkled and pranced throughout its short span. In the repeatedly interesting Symphony "Mathis der Mahler," Mr. Monteux drew all the tonal cloring possible from each section of the orchestra. The constantly changing polyphony was clearly followed, from the sweetly gay Angelic Concert, through the hushed quiet of the Entombment to the final Temptation of Saint Anthony and the concluding exalted Hallelulh Hymn. The audience was vociferously appreciative.

The coming week-end will be devoted to the music of Brahms, with the debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct Friday evening's program, including the Tragic Overture and First Symphony and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk.— M. deB. B.

N. Y. Staats-Zeitung und Herold, Mittwoch, 31. Juli 1957

Berlioz, Hindemith bei Berkshire-Fest

Aus Tanglewood wird uns von wahren Festkonzerten, im Rahmen des langsam seinem Ende zugehenden Berkshire-Festival, berichtet. Charles Munch, in quecksilberner Laune und offenbar jeden Sommer jünger werdend, ließ im Nur-Berlioz-Programm auf die Ouvertüre "Le Corsaire" die symphonische Dichtung "Harold en Italie" folgen, in welcher Joseph de Pasquala den Violasolo spielte. Er entlockte der Bratsche traumhaft-weiche orientalische Töne und der Dirigent gab allen vier Sätzen an ihren (bekannten) wunden Punkten aus eigenem neuen frischen Auftrieb; das Ganze wurde zum persönlichen Bekenntnis, somit wahrhaft romantisches Musizieren. Die "Symphonie Fantastique" unter Munchs Händen ist, nach wie vor, vulkanischer Ausbruch, hinreißendes Erleben und löste begeisterte Dankkundgebungen aus.

Glücklicherweise wurde das Oratorium "L'Enfance du Christ" mit dem französischen Originaltext geboten — hoffentlich verfällt kein lokalpatriotischer Fanatiker auf die Idee einer Übersetzung ins Englische. "Englisch" ist diese Musik an sich schon in höchstem erhebendem Maße — 'ihre Rhythmen und Harmonien sind ausschlaggebend, und dann: sollen diese verklärten pariserischen Engel auf ihre "alten Tage" amerikanisch lernen? — Eine ergreifende, aufrüttelnde Komposition, in dieser Aufführung dafür, daß Devotion nirgends die Dramatik unterdrückt, weiß ein Charles Munch zu sorgen. Lorna Cooke de Varon hatte den Musikfestchor im ganzen wie, bei gewissen Solostellen, einzelnen musterhaft einstudiert. Donald Gramm (Herodes), Florence Kopleff (Maria), Gerard Souzay als Josef und zumal Cesare Valetti als Erzähler und Centurio waren perfekte Solisten.

*

Der 80jährige Pierre Monteux, ein Dirigent, der Meisterschaft ohne Podiumtanz und Gliederverrenkung bekundet, ist mit der Delikatesse (zum Beispiel der "Queen Mab"-Szene) wie mit dem Kraft-Delirium der Berlioz-Instrumentation in "Romeo et Juliet" vertraut, ja verwachsen. Überraschend und imponierend jedoch, wie er die freche Satire in "Neues vom Tage" von Hindemith auszuschöpfen und darzureichen wußte. Das Engelskonzert aus "Mathis der Maler" — Hindemiths Hauptwerk — schien in Innigkeit, seelischer Ergebung und magisch gebrochenen Klangfarben aus dem siebenten Himmel herabzuschweben. P.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
AUG. 1, 1957

Berkshire Festival All-BerliozConcert Featured July 26

Members of the audience at the all-Berlioz concert given at the Berkshire Music Festival, at Tanglewood last Friday evening heard a superlative peformance of three Berlioz works by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch.

The evening's program opened with the Berlioz overture "The Corsair," Op 21, as a lively first edition in the concert's musical fare. The excellent brass section poured forth exhuberant music, particularly in the coda, and there was plenty of lively bowing from the string section in the well-received opening work.

Next, the Symphony with Viola Solo, Op. 16, or "Harold In Italy," was heartily received by the audience, which broke into spontaneous applause between movements of the symphony. Joseph de Pasquale of the orchestra's viola section was the soloist for this work which is in the best traditions of musical romanticism. He handled his instrument with great feeling for the special qualities of the mellow viola, expressing the great delicacy and subtleties of tone of which the instrument is capable without obtruding upon the symphonic "whole" of the work in an unnecessarily self-assertive manner.

That the audience appreciated this highly was evident in the volume of applause they bestowed upon the violist. The alpine scenes of the first movement were brilliantly evoked by the famed orchestra, conductor and soloist. The second movement or "March of the Pilgrims", grew and faded under the skilled hands of Mr. Munch in a manner clearly underlining their passage into the distance. The lively serenade of the impassioned mountaineer in movement 3 was marked by some fine work in the woodwind section, and the vigorous and virile finale brought the work to an exciting close.

The program closed with the intriguing Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony," Op. 14A. The conductor excelled here, controlling the huge musical organization like some massive instrument, bent to his will. Munch was called back by the audience for several "curtain calls" in an uproar of applause.

The Berkshire Festival will go into its final two week-ends beginning tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the 6,000 seat Music Shed as guest conductor Carl Schurict conducts the orchestra in the Brahms "Tragic" overture, the Egk "Sonata For Orchestra," and the Brahms Symphony No. 1.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m. will see Charles Munch back on the podium conducting the Brahms "Haydn Variations," Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" and the lovely Brahm's Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Dr. Munch will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Brahms "Academic Festival Overture," the Piston Symphony No. 5, and the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, with Rudolp Serkin as soloist.

Final Weekend

The annual feature "Tanglewood On Parade" will be an event of August 8, with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" Symphony as a headliner on the program. The event begins at 5:45 p.m. with numerous attractions listed.

The final week-end of concerts begins August 9 at 8:30 p.m. when Charles Munch will lead the orchestra in the Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 3, the Honegger Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique"), and the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

On August 10 at 8:30 p.m., Carl Schuricht will conduct the Blacher "Concertante Music," the Schubert "Unfinished" symphony, and the Beethoven Symphony No. 3, (Eroica).

On Sunday August 11, the final performance of the season will find Munch leading the symphony orchestra in Copland's "Quiet City", and the Beethoven Symphony No. 9, with soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Donald Gramm and the Berkshire Festival Chorus. —L. F. M.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 2 1957

Berlioz Trilogy At Tanglewood Lauded

"L'Enfance Du Christe" Conducted By Munch

Last Saturday's performance at Tanglewood of the Berlioz sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ," by the Berkshire Festival Chorus and the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch was one of the most deeply rewarding musical experiences this reviewer has had since first hearing Bach's B Minor Mass with the late Serge Koussevitsky conducting the orchestra and chorus at Tanglewood.

The Berlioz score itself is magnificent; powerful, majestic and tenderly haunting, and Dr Munch's sensitive interpretation did full justice to the music, weaving a rich pattern of voice and orchestra, as if the entire ensemble were one great instrument.

The soloists were all outstanding; with Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary, and Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph, who carried the greater part of the solo work, particularly memorable. Cesare Valletti, tenor, as Narrator and Centurion, and Donald Gramm, singing three parts, Herod, Polydorus and the Father of a Family, were completely satisfying, their voices perfectly balanced against the other two.

The orchestra's shadings and nuances, its sweeping, full climaxes were superbly controlled and elicited by the conductor.

The trilogy is divided into Herod's Dream, The Flight into Egypt and The Arrival At Sais.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.
LEADER-HERALD
Circ. D. 14,270

AUG 1 1957

Roamin' Round

By Etaoin Shrdlu

A local resident back from a weekend at the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., recently told Etaoin of an incident worthy of note.

The concert-goer and his companions had spread their blanket on the lawn at Tanglewood alongside another blanket occupied by two young college girls.

"They looked like the Vassar type," he recalled.

As the concert began, ("L'Enfance du Christ" by Hector Berlioz was the major work) the girls were staring raptly out into space and grimly concentrating on the rhythms of the French composer.

But as the concert neared its end, Etaoin's informant was startled by a strange rasping noise. He looked over at the girls and was amazed to see them both sprawled out on the blanket — sound asleep. One of the girls was snoring loudly, providing a tender counterpoint to the chords of the last movement.

As the final notes rose into the starry night, the large audience expressed its approval with loud and enthusiastic "bravos." The girls, aroused by the tumultous applause, sheepishly arose and began to clap their hands wildly. Then they staggered away into the night.

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 31 1957

Broadway

The rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Lenox, Mass., Saturday morning (26) was open to the public, at $1 admision—for the benefit of the orchetra's pension fund. Dr. Charles Munch batoned the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' Sacred Trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ," that night.

TANGLEWOOD
Friday and Saturday, July 26, 27
By A. C. S.

A stirring performance of the Corsair Overture began the series of programs devoted to the music of Hector Berloiz. In the first concert, Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appeared as soloist in Harold in Italy and achieved rapport with the orchestra that is possible only through years of mutual acquaintance. The work is not particularly grateful for the soloist, but Mr. de Pasquale met the technical difficulties and created more sense of coherence than is often heard.

Charles Munch is obviously at home with the music of Berlioz. Fortunately, the friendship has not dulled in enthusiasm over the years. He has played the Fantastic Symphony many times but each performance has freshness. There were debatable points Friday evening: was the opening of the "Ball" spacious enough; were some tempi in the final movement fair to the orchestra? None theless, the total effect was eminently satisfying.

A rare treat was provided Saturday evening: a full performance of the rarely heard L'Enfrance du Christ with Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm, Gerard Souzy, and Cesare Valletti as vocal soloists. The "sacred trilogy" is a disjointed work which was composed in piece-meal fashion and can sound it all too easily. Thanks to Dr. Munch and the excellence of all concerned, every fragment was gathered in and all technical dangers were overcome. The soloists were uniformly good, but special commendation must be extended to the full singing of the Festival Chorus, trained for this occasion by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

TANGLEWOOD
Sunday, July 28
By C. N. D.

The Sunday afternoon concert was led by the 82-year old conductor Pierre Monteux, now at the height of his powers as an interpreter of modern music. The first half of the program was devoted to excerpts from Romeo and Juliet, a dramatic symphony by Berlioz. To Berlioz fans, and there were many in the audience, this music was sheer heaven. To others, including this writer, the music was interminable and dull.

But after the intermission came two pieces by Hindemith and that was a different story. The overture to this opera, News of the Day, in spite of its erudite counterpoint, was as saucy and perky as music can be and should be put in the same class as the overtures to Mozart's Figaro and Smetana's Bartered Bride. After this came Mathis der Maler. All three movements of this great work were given a searching and powerful reading. The first, describing the painting of Mathias called the "Angelic Concert" was calmly exultant; the next, "The Entombment," was deeply felt; and the final movement depicting the "Temptation of St. Anthony," had the cumulative power that the final movement to an already great work should have. Needless to say, there were cheers and endless recalls for Mr. Monteux.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052
JUL 30 1957

Nearly 20,000 In Audiences At Tanglewood Concerts

Hector Berlioz was the composer chosen to honor the fourth weekend of the Berkshire Festival concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch at Tanglewood. More than 19,000 enthusiastic listeners came, in spite of some wet and threatening weather on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

The first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ," Sacred Trilogy, was the complete program for Saturday evening. A beautifully conceived, intricately coordinated choral and orchestral work, it was quietly absorbing through all its illustrative episodes. Taken from the second chapter of the Gospel according to Saint Matthew, Berlioz has related the story in his own words, enlarging, but keeping always a simple and folk-like mood in words and music, except for the three wise men, whose characters he changes to quite evil soothsayers. In three parts, the first, called Herod's Dream, included the chorus of soothsayers and the angel chorus heard offstage most effectively. The second, Flight into Egypt," was most touching for its ineffable pastoral quality from the Farwell of the Shepherds to the Holy Family at Rest "by a spring in the desert." After intermission the third and final part "The Arrival at Said," sung with tender feeling and fine restraint by Gerard Souzay as Joseph and Florence Kopleff as Mary, joined by Donald Gramm as Father of a Family who finally agree to give food and shelter to the Holy Family. The Festival Chorus was prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon and Cesare Valetti assisted most ably in the role of narrator and centurion. It is an obviously difficult work to coordinate, and Dr. Munch handled its intricate simplicity with great sensitivity and deep concentration.

Sunday's concert saw the second and last appearance of the lovable Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. He was greeted with a prolonged ovation by both audience and orchestra. Mr. Monteux opened the program with Berlioz' "Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" Dramatic Symphony, Op. 17, including the love scene, Queen Mab, and the Concert and Ball. At first there was a feeling of tension between orchestra and conductor, but gradually the pressure was equalized and Mr. Monteux expertly and firmly guided the virtuoso musicians in an impeccably musical performance. One is always intrigued to hear in this work strains of Wagner's "Rienzi" Overture, and the motive of the Prelude to Tristan and Isolde.

The final half of the program saw no restraint on either side; Hindemith was the composer, and his frothy, fast-moving overture to the opera "News of the Day" sparkled and pranced throughout its short span. In the repeatedly interesting Symphony "Mathis der Mahler," Mr. Monteux drew all the tonal coloring possible from each section of the orchestra. The constantly changing polyphony was clearly followed, from the sweetly gay Angelic Concert through the hushed quiet of the Entombment to the final Temptation of Saint Anthony and the concluding exalted Hallelujah Hymn. The audience was vociferously appreciative.

The coming week-end will be devoted to the music of Brahms, with the debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct Friday evening's program, including the Tragic Overture and First Symphony and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk.— M. deB. B.

TANGLEWOOD
Friday and Saturday, July 26, 27
By A. C. S.

A stirring performance of the Corsair Overture began the series of programs devoted to the music of Hector Berloiz. In the first concert, Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appeared as soloist in Harold in Italy and achieved a rapport with the orchestra that is possible only through years of mutual acquaintance. The work is not particularly grateful for the soloist, but Mr. de Pasquale met the technical difficulties and created more sense of coherence than is often heard.

Charles Munch is obviously at home with the music of Berlioz. Fortunately, the friendship has not dulled in enthusiasm over the years. He has played the Fantastic Symphony many times but each performance has freshness. There were debatable moments Friday evening:

N. Y. Staats-Zeitung und Herold, Mittwoch, 31. Juli 1957

Aus Tanglewood wird uns vo[n] [d]rei[n]en Festkonzerten, im Rah[m]en des langsam seinem End[e] zugehenden Berkshire-Festival[s] berichtet. Charles Munch, in quecksilberner Laune und offen[b]ar jeden Sommer jünger wer[d]end, ließ im Nur-Berlioz-Pro[g]ramm auf die Ouvertüre "L[e] Corsaire" die symphonische Dich[tung] "Harold en Italie" folgen[.] Solocher Joseph de Pasquale [s]pielte. Er entlockte [s]einer Bratsche traumhaft-weiche [u]ngarische Töne und der Diri[g]ent gab allen vier Sätzen a[n] ihren (bekannten) wunde[r] Punkten aus eigenem neuen frischen Auftrieb; das Ganz[e] wurde aus persönlichen Be[k]enntnis, somit wahrhaft ro[m]antisches Musizieren. Die "Symphonie Fantastique" unte[r] Munchs Händen ist, nach wie vor, vulkanischer Ausbruch, hin[r]eißendes Erleben und löste be[g]eisterte Dankkundgebungen aus.

Glücklicherweise wurde das Oratorium "L'Enfance du Christ" mit dem französischen Originaltext geboten — hoffentlich verfällt kein lokalpatriotischer Fanatiker auf die Idee einer Übersetzung ins Englische. "Englisch" ist diese Musik an sich schon in höchstem erhebendem Maße — ihre Rhythmen und Harmonien sind ausschlaggebend, und dann: sollen diese verklärten pariserischen Engel auf ihre "alten Tage" amerikanisch lernen? — Eine ergreifende, aufrüttelnde Komposition, in dieser Aufführung dafür, daß Devotion nirgends die Dramatik unterdrückt, wenn ein Charles Munch zu sorgen. Lorna Cooke de Varon hatte den Musikfestchor im ganzen wie, bei gewissen Solostellen, einzelnen musterhaft einstudiert. Donald Gramm (Herodes), Florence Kopleff (Maria), Gerard Souzay als Josef und zumal Cesare Valletti als Erzähler und Centurio waren perfekte Solisten.

*

Der 82jährige Pierre Monteux, ein Dirigent, der Meisterschaft ohne Podiumtanz und Gliederverrenkung bekundet, ist mit der Delikatesse (zum Beispiel der "Queen Mab"-Szene) wie mit dem Kraft-Delirium de[s] Berlioz-Instrumentation in "Romeo et Juliet" vertraut, j[a] verwachsen. Überraschend und imponierend jedoch, wie er die freche Satire in "Neues vom Tage" von Hindemith auszuschöpfen und darzureichen wußte. Das Engelskonzert aus "Mathis der Maler" — Hindemiths Hauptwerk — schien in Innigkeit, seelischer Ergebung und magisch gebrochenen Klangfarben aus dem siebenten Himmel herabzuschweben. F.

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL, Section II, August 1, 1957

was the opening of the "Ball" [t]he [s]pace enough; were som[e] tempi in the final movement fair to the orchestra? None theless, the total effect was eminently satisfying.

A rare treat was provided Saturday evening: a full performance of the rarely heard L'Enfrance du Christ with Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm, Gerard Souzy, and Cesare Valletti as vocal soloists. The "sacred trilogy" is a disjointed work which was [c]ompiled piece-meal fashion and [s]ound it all too easily. Thanks to Dr. Munch and the [e]xcellence of all concerned, every fragment was gathered in and all technical dangers were overcome. The soloists were uniformly good, but special commendation must be extended to [o]f the Fe[s]tival for this occ[a]sion by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

TANGLEWOOD
Sunday, July 28
By C. N. D.

The Sunday afternoon concert was led by the 82-year old conductor Pierre Monteux, now at the height of his powers as an interpreter of modern music. The first half of the program was devoted to excerpts from Romeo and Juliet, a dramatic symphony by Berlioz. To Berlioz [f]ans, and there were many in the audience, this music was sheer heaven. To others, including this writer, the music was interminable and dull.

But after the intermission came two pieces by Hindemith and that was a different story. The overture to this opera, News of the Day, in spite of its erudite counterpoint, was as saucy and perky as music can be and should be put in the same class as the overtures to Mozart's Figaro and Smetana's Bartered Bride. After this came Mathis der Maler. All three movements of this great work were given a searching and powerful reading. The first, describing the painting of Mathias called the "Angelic Concert" was calmly exultant, the next, "The Entombment," was deeply felt; and the final movement depicting the "Temptation of St. Anthony," had the cumulative power that the final movement to an already great work should have. Needless to say, there were cheers and endless recalls for Mr. Monteux.

WATERTOWN, CONN.), AUG. 1, 1957
TOWN TIMES
Watertown Times

Berkshire Festival

All-BerliozConcert Featured July 26

Members of the audience at the all-Berlioz concert given at the Berkshire Music Festival, at Tanglewood last Friday evening heard a superlative peformance of three Berlioz works by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch.

The evening's program opened with the Berlioz overture "The Corsair," Op 21, as a lively first edition in the concert's musical fare. The excellent brass section poured forth exhuberant music particularly in the coda, and there was plenty of lively bowing from the string section in the well-received opening work.

Next, the Symphony with Viola Solo, Op. 16, or "Harold In Italy," was heartily received by the audience, which broke into spontaneous applause between movements of the symphony. Joseph de Pasquale of the orchestra's viola section was the soloist for this work which is in the best traditions of musical romanticism. He handled his instrument with great feeling for the special qualities of the mellow viola, expressing the great delicacy and subtleties of tone of which the instrument is capable without obtruding upon the symphonic "whole" of the work in an unnecessarily self-assertive manner.

That the audience appreciated this highly was evident in the volume of applause they bestowed upon the violist. The alpine scenes of the first movement were brilliantly evoked by the famed orchestra, conductor and soloist. The second movement or "March of the Pilgrims", grew and faded under the skilled hands of Mr. Munch in a manner clearly underlining their passage into the distance. The lively serenade of the impassioned mountaineer in movement 3 was marked by some fine work in the woodwind section, and the vigorous and virile finale brought the work to an exciting close.

The program closed with the intriguing Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony," Op. 14A. The conductor excelled here, controlling the huge musical organization like some massive instrument, bent to his will. Munch was called back by the audience for several "curtain calls" in an uproar of applause.

The Berkshire Festival will go into its final two week-ends beginning tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the 6,000 seat Music Shed as guest conductor Carl Schuricht conducts the orchestra in the Brahms "Tragic" overture, the Egk "Sonata For Orchestra," and the Brahms Symphony No. 1.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m. will see Charles Munch back on the podium conducting the Brahms "Haydn Variations," Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" and the lovely Brahm's Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Dr. Munch will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Brahms "Academic Festival Overture," the Piston Symphony No. 5, and the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2 with Rudolp Serkin as soloist.

Final Weekend

The annual feature "Tanglewood On Parade" will be an event of August 8, with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" Symphony as a headliner on the program. The event begins at 5:45 p.m. with numerous attractions listed.

The final week-end of concerts begins August 9 at 8:30 p.m. when Charles Munch will lead the orchestra in the Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 3, the Honegger Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique"), and the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

On August 10 at 8:30 p.m. Carl Schuricht will conduct the Blacher "Concertante Music," the Schubert "Unfinished" symphony and the Beethoven Symphony No. 3 (Eroica).

On Sunday August 11, the final performance of the season will find Munch leading the symphony orchestra in Copland's "Quiet City", and the Beethoven Symphony No. 9, with [A]delaide Addison, Florence [M]arsh, John McCollum, Donald Gramm and the Berkshire Festival Chorus. E. M.

Newtown, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159
AUG 2 1957

Berlioz Trilogy At Tanglewood Lauded

"L'Enfance Du Christe" Conducted By Munch

Last Saturday's performance at Tanglewood of the Berlioz sacred trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ," by the Berkshire Festival Chorus and the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch was one of the most deeply rewarding musical experiences this reviewer has had since first hearing Bach's B Minor Mass with the late Serge Koussevitsky conducting the orchestra and chorus at Tanglewood.

The Berlioz score itself is magnificent; powerful, majestic and tenderly haunting, and Dr Munch's sensitive interpretation did full justice to the music, weaving a rich pattern of voice and orchestra, as if the entire ensemble were one great instrument.

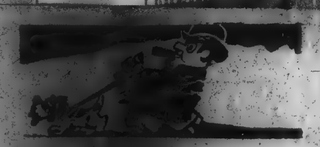
The soloists were all outstanding; with Florence Kopleff, contralto, as Mary, and Gerard Souzay, baritone, as Joseph, who carried the greater part of the solo work, particularly memorable. Cesare Valletti, tenor, as Narrator and Centurion, and Donald Gramm, singing three parts, Herod, Polydorus and the Father of a Family, were completely satisfying, their voices perfectly balanced against the other two.

The orchestra's shadings and nuances, its sweeping, full climaxes were superbly controlled and elicited by the conductor.

The trilogy is divided into Herod's Dream, The Flight into Egypt and The Arrival At Sais.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.
LEADER-HERALD
Circ. D. 14,270
AUG 1 1957

Roamin' Round



By Etaoin Shrdlu

A local resident back from a weekend at the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., recently told Etaoin of an incident worthy of note.

The concert-goer and his companions had spread their blanket on the lawn at Tanglewood alongside another blanket occupied by two young college girls.

"They looked like the Vassar type," he recalled.

As the concert began, ("L'Enfance du Christ" by Hector Berlioz was the major work) the girls were staring raptly out into space and grimly concentrating on the rhythms of the French composer.

But as the concert neared its end, Etaoin's informant was startled by a strange rasping noise. He looked over at the girls and was amazed to see them both sprawled out on the blanket — sound asleep. One of the girls was snoring loudly, providing a tender counterpoint to the chords of the last movement.

As the final notes rose into the starry night, the large audience expressed its approval with loud and enthusiastic "bravos." The girls, aroused by the tumultous applause, sheepishly arose and began to clap their hands wildly. Then they staggered away into the night.

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 31 1957
Broadway

The rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Lenox, Mass., Saturday morning (27) was open to the public, at $1 admission—for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. Dr. Charles Munch batoned the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' Sacred Trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ," that night.

CR27

Springfield Republican 8/4

Second Thoughts On Music

Lyric Cantata by Berlioz Rated Season's High Light

'L'Enfance du Christ' Given Rich and Balanced Performance by Charles Munch and Soloists at Tanglewood; Monteux Also in Top Form

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 3 — Fine performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch and guest conductor Pierre Monteux are the order of the day. Berlioz and Tchaikowsky have been given fine service by both conductors, with Monteaux adding a spice of Hindemith.

We will not soon forget the beautiful dark tones Joseph de Pasquale drew from his instrument during the performance of "Harold in Italy" or the stunning reading Charles Munch gave the "Fantastic" symphony. This reading was perhaps the finest Munch achievement thus far.

Lyric Cantata

High-lighting the season to date was the performance of the lyric cantata "L'Enfance du Christ." Beautifully proportioned, rich in sentiment, reverent in approach and performed with unmistakable sincerity by all the participants, it was a performance to treasure in one's memory. Florence Kopleff as "Mary" sang as though the part were tailor-made for her. Donald Gramm as "Herod" was persuasive as ever. He has enhanced every performance he has sung here.

Cesare Valletti, tenor of the Metropolitain Opera, sang with his accustomed perfection of vocal opulence and sterling musicianship. Gerard Souzay revealed anew his distinguished art, although he is more effetcive as a recitalist. Mr. Munch and the orchestra were lavish in their total absorption of the score.

Pierre Monteux at 82 years of age seems younger and more vital than he did last year. He provided a magnificent performance of excerpts from the Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet," crystal clear as to detail and rich in imagination. Everything was just as it should be, all this with a minimum of effort on his part.

Then turning to the works of an equally fine orchestral craftsman, he provided exciting and penetrating readings of the overture to the Hindemith opera "News of the Day" and to that superb symphony entitled "Mathis der Maler." This work, written by Hindemith in 1934 has gained steadily in popularity and now has a secure place in the symphonic repertoire. Time was when audiences either liked or disliked this work. There seemed to be no middle ground. Today, its admirers are in the ascendency.

Ravel's "Sheherazade"

Concerts by the student orchestra, under student conductors and directors Eleazar de Carvalho and Seymour Lipkin, have been most interesting this season. One of the best so far gave us the rare opportunity of hearing a very fine performance of Ravel's "Sheherazade," conducted by the Swiss student-conductor Gastav Meier and sung by his American wife, Shirley Sudock. Meier is a conductor of operas in Zurich, Switzerland. He is a sensitive, musical and dynamic conductor who comes to the podium thoroughly prepared. One will hear more of him.

Shirley Sudock obtained her vocal instruction in Switzerland, and admirable it has been. The voice is of fine quality and admirably projected. It carried to the far corners of the Music Shed. She gave, vocally, a more satisfying performance than did Jennie Tourel several seasons ago in the same place.

The orchestra also provided a stunning performance of "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky, under the knowing direction of Mr. Carvalho. The orchestra is one of the finest to be heard here in several years and the music school has a right to be proud of it.

BLANK PAGE

Register (e)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 95,656
AUG 1 1957

[184]

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Old Men Who Stay Young Are Workers, Not Hobbyists

On Sunday, I watched Pierre Monteux conduct the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. Monteux is 82. He has had a continuous schedule this summer at Tanglewood after a very difficult season in New York, including conducting at the Metropolitan Opera which is no light chore.

Leading an orchestra of a hundred or more men, and as at Tanglewood also one woman, is not only an intellectual task of the highest order but also involves violent physical effort, tremendous capacity for memory, self-control, and the simultaneous response to composer, player and audience. It is surprising that a man can do this at 82, yet look so fresh and even buoyant after the performance is over.

No Fixed Rules

Age is, of course, as much of the spirit as of the arteries. Those who grow old quickest are surely those who have least to interest and concern them; yet I have known loafers who grow old, if not gracefully; that is, they live long. Therefore, there are apparently no fixed rules. But it is possible to note, in our own country, the amazing spectacle of Bernard Baruch writing his memoirs at 87, the first volume coming out in August, and Herbert Hoover, 83, writing his definitive work on Woodrow Wilson which will shortly be published, and Arthur Vining Davis, 90, still engaging in enormous real estate transactions.

Age apparently has nothing to do with capacity to work if the spirit and desire are still alive.

Of course, such men as I describe do not pursue hobbies. They need no toys. They keep working at their tasks, Monteux, music; Baruch, the economy of nations; Hoover, government; Davis, business—the activities they know and understand and are able to do competently. The fellow who retires and pursues a hobby may expend as much physical effort on the hobby as on his life-work, but the interest is not keen although it may be exciting, and the effort is often without result—the kind of result that is really meaningful to him. Those who hate what they are doing, do it not well at all, and do themselves no good at all. They are playing games.

That is why so many rich women go in for toys. Before they found the toys they did nothing themselves, delegating their responsibilities to hirelings and consuming time in the peripheral activities of the search for clothes, the gossip of the hair-dressing parlor, auctions for pictures, luncheons with other women whom they hate or dinners with the husband's associates whom they find to be bores. They have lived according to the necessities and proprieties of their station.

Group Fallacies

Then comes the day when they want to do something themselves, to find themselves, as the phrase may be. So, they go in for all sorts of movements, not because they believe in them, but because somebody they know believes in them. It is a group relationship rather than individual conviction. So, one suddenly discovers that a large number of women were anti-Communist and they thought that Joe McCarthy would save the world, but when Eisenhower ran for President in 1952, they thought that Eisenhower would save the world. As the human race cannot be saved by two disparate saviours simultaneously, they dumped McCarthy. Now, most of them believe that either Billy Graham, Nehru or Dr. Schweitzer will save the world depending upon their group affiliations and their most recent dinner conversations.

The oldsters still at work, such as Monteux, Baruch, Hoover, Davis and many others, do not require such sublimations. They do not live in a toyland world. They continue their life-work as long as they can without being diverted by the temporary errors of their neighbors who believe that they can achieve long life by retiring from life. It is the fallacy of our industrial establishment that men are retired at 62 or 65, just when experience has accumulated and matured into wisdom, just when a proper balance of intellect and spirit is producing wisdom. Wisdom is a quality that comes to few.

I suppose that I should have concentrated on Berlioz and Hindemith on Sunday, but I could not avoid thinking of what men can do in their eighties if the will to do is not shrunk by life's petty battles and small affairs and by the fears of illness and death.

Copyright 1957, King Features Syndicates, Inc.

Times (e)
BARRE, Vt.
Republican
Circ. 8,212
AUG 1 1957

Chronicle (e)
WILLIMANTIC, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 5,700
AUG 1 1957

Post (e)
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 78,029
AUG 1 1957

Express (e)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 30,373
AUG 1 1957

Bulletin (m)
NORWICH, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 24,038
AUG 1 1957

Sentinel (m)
WATERVILLE, Me.
Independent
Circ. 17,542
AUG 1 1957

Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,281

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 21,025

Gazette
EAST HARTFORD
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 4,725
JUL 25 1957

A Trip To Tanglewood

Place To Enjoy Fine Music, But With Hazards As Well

By JOHN ROHRBACH

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood is in its 20th season, and once again it is proving to be something more than a spot for music lovers. In fact, if the weekend audience is any guide, it might almost be said to be a spot for lovers of any kind.

The concert series, which generally features the [illegible] Boston Symphony beg[illegible] early July and continues through August 11th, a period of about six weeks.

This year the Festival programs week by week stress the works of specific composers. This weekend, for example, Berlioz and Hindemith hold court; next week it is to be Brahms; and the series concludes the following week with Beethoven.

While we should not want to depreciate the very fine music that is being offered, last Saturday night's experience gave us some instruction that had very little to do with the concert itself.

One of the pleasantest parts of a trip to Tanglewood is the trip itself. The drive on the one hand is short enough to be comfortable, and the countryside between Hartford and the Berkshires is something to enjoy even on the warmest day.

But prepare yourself. Those quaint little wayside inns and eateries that seem to blossom so profusely along the road are a serious delusion the closer you get to your Tanglewood goal. If they're any good, they're jammed, and if they aren't crowded, you don't want to make the mistake of stopping.

Next item, time of arrival. If you have seats, you're in good shape, but if you propose to relax on the considerable lawn, you'd better be early, that is if you want to hear much of anything. We discovered that long before concert time, 8:30, the regular patrons had generally found all the right spots.

It is unbelievable to see literally acres of greensward absolutely covered with blankets and bodies. Somehow this is not as unpleasant as it may sound, for in a sense the audience tends to be as fascinating as the music. And in general, once the music gets under way, it proves to be as quiet and appreciative as any music-loving audience can be.

The concert moves along most happily. Good music, and last weekend, a handsome starlit Saturday night. By 10:15 when the last note fades away, you've almost forgotten the last trouble you had.

But if you've waited to savour that last note, you've got real trouble ahead. The knowledgeable lawn tenant has long since disappeared, and that's whom you've felt for the preceding 15 minutes stomping across your ankles or worse.

Where are they going? To their cars, and you'll wish you had joined them unless you picked that lucky parking slot that guarantees you a quick exit.

What we're saying is that Tanglewood is fun; you can indeed hear some mighty fine music. But forewarned is forearmed, and we encourage you to be that way.

Register (e)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 95,656
AUG 1 1957

[184]

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Old Men Who Stay Young Are Workers, Not Hobbyists

On Sunday, I watched Pierre Monteux conduct the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. Monteux is 82. He has had a continuous schedule this summer at Tanglewood after a very difficult season in New York, including conducting at the Metropolitan Opera which is no light chore.

Leading an orchestra of a hundred or more men, and as at Tanglewood also one woman, is not only an intellectual task of the highest order but also involves violent physical effort, tremendous capacity for memory, self-control, and the simultaneous response to composer, player and audience. It is surprising that a man can do this at 82, yet look so fresh and even buoyant after the performance is over.

No Fixed Rules

Age is, of course, as much of the spirit as of the arteries. Those who grow old quickest are surely those who have least to interest and concern them; yet I have known loafers who grow old, if not gracefully; that is, they live long. Therefore, there are apparently no fixed rules. But it is possible to note, in our own country, the amazing spectacle of Bernard Baruch writing his memoirs at 87, the first volume coming out in August, and Herbert Hoover, 83, writing his definitive work on Woodrow Wilson which will shortly be published, and Arthur Vining Davis, 90, still engaging in enormous real estate transactions.

Age apparently has nothing to do with capacity to work if the spirit and desire are still alive.

Of course, such men as I describe do not pursue hobbies. They need no toys. They keep working at their tasks, Monteux, music; Baruch, the economy of nations; Hoover, government; Davis, business—the activities they know and understand and are able to do competently. The fellow who retires and pursues a hobby may expend as much physical effort on the hobby as on his life-work, but the interest is not keen although it may be exciting, and the effort is often without result—the kind of result that is really meaningful to him. Those who hate what they are doing, do it not well at all, and do themselves no good at all. They are playing games.

That is why so many rich women go in for toys. Before they found the toys they did nothing themselves, delegating their responsibilities to hirelings and consuming time in the peripheral activities of the search for clothes, the gossip of the hair-dressing parlor, auctions for pictures, luncheons with other women whom they hate or dinners with the husband's associates whom they find to be bores. They have lived according to the necessities and proprieties of their station.

Group Fallacies

Then comes the day when they want to do something themselves, to find themselves, as the phrase may be. So, they go in for all sorts of movements, not because they believe in them, but because somebody they know believes in them. It is a group relationship rather than individual conviction. So, one suddenly discovers that a large number of women were anti-Communist and they thought that Joe McCarthy would save the world, but when Eisenhower ran for President in 1952, they thought that Eisenhower would save the world. As the human race cannot be saved by two disparate saviours simultaneously, they dumped McCarthy. Now, most of them believe that either Billy Graham, Nehru or Dr. Schweitzer will save the world depending upon their group affiliations and their most recent dinner conversations.

The oldsters still at work, such as Monteux, Baruch, Hoover, Davis and many others, do not require such sublimations. They do not live in a toyland world. They continue their life-work as long as they can without being diverted by the temporary errors of their neighbors who believe that they can achieve long life by retiring from life. It is the fallacy of our industrial establishment that men are retired at 62 or 65, just when experience has accumulated and matured into wisdom, just when a proper balance of intellect and spirit is producing wisdom. Wisdom is a quality that comes to few.

I suppose that I should have concentrated on Berlioz and Hindemith on Sunday, but I could not avoid thinking of what men can do in their eighties if the will to do is not shrunk by life's petty battles and small affairs and by the fears of illness and death.

Copyright 1957, King Features Syndicates, Inc.

Times (e)
BARRE, Vt.
Republican
Circ. 8,212
AUG 1 1957

Chronicle (e)
WILLIMANTIC, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 5,700
AUG 1 1957

Post (e)
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 78,029
AUG 1 1957

Express (e)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 30,373
UG 1 1957

Bulletin (m)
NORWICH, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 24,038
G 1 1957

entinel (m)
TERVILLE, Me.
Independent
Circ. 17,542
G 1 1957

Hour (e)
RWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,281

Republican (m)
ATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 21,025

Gazette
EAST HARTFORD
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 4,725
JUL 25 1957

A Trip To Tanglewood

Place To Enjoy Fine Music, But With Hazards As Well

By JOHN ROHRBACH

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood is in its 20th season, and once again it is proving to be something more than a spot for music lovers. In fact, if the weekend audience is any guide, it might almost be said to be a spot for lovers of any kind.

The concert series, which generally features the [illegible] Boston Symphony beg[illegible] July and continues through August 11th, a period of about six weeks.

This year the Festival programs week by week stress the works of specific composers. This weekend, for example, Berlioz and Hindemith hold court; next week it is to be Brahms; and the series concludes the following week with Beethoven.

While we should not want to depreciate the very fine music that is being offered, last Saturday night's experience gave us some instruction that had very little to do with the concert itself.

One of the pleasantest parts of a trip to Tanglewood is the trip itself. The drive on the one hand is short enough to be comfortable, and the countryside between Hartford and the Berkshires is something to enjoy even on the warmest day.

But prepare yourself. Those quaint little wayside inns and eateries that seem to blossom so profusely along the road are a serious delusion the closer you get to your Tanglewood goal. If they're any good, they're jammed, and if they aren't crowded, you don't want to make the mistake of stopping.

Next item, time of arrival. If you have seats, you're in good shape, but if you propose to relax on the considerable lawn, you'd better be early, that is if you want to hear much of anything. We discovered that long before concert time, 8:30, the regular patrons had generally found all the right spots.

It is unbelievable to see literally acres of greensward absolutely covered with blankets and bodies. Somehow this is not as unpleasant as it may sound, for in a sense the audience tends to be as fascinating as the music. And in general, once the music gets under way, it proves to be as quiet and appreciative as any music-loving audience can be.

The concert moves along most happily. Good music, and last weekend, a handsome starlit Saturday night. By 10:15 when the last note fades away, you've almost forgotten the last trouble you had.

But if you've waited to savour that last note, you've got real trouble ahead. The knowledgeable lawn tenant has long since disappeared, and that's whom you've felt for the preceding 15 minutes stomping across your ankles or worse.

Where are they going? To their cars, and you'll wish you had joined them unless you picked that lucky parking slot that guarantees you a quick exit.

What we're saying is that Tanglewood is fun; you can indeed hear some mighty fine music. But forewarned is forearmed, and we encourage you to be that way.

Music Review — The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 25, 1957—7

Kroll Quartet at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE KROLL String Quartet played a program in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night, which was the fourth event in the Wednesday evening chamber music series.

The Krolls, William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins, David Mankowitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello, have been on Tanglewood schedules more often and more regularly than any other ensemble and their appearance is always one of the high points of the chamber music season. Kroll, co-director of the chamber music section of the Berkshire Music Center, is considered in many places to be dean of chamber musicians in America. A player of unique elegance, he has chosen to devote his talents to this specialized field of music and by dint of the cultivation of his endowments and experience he now dominates a quartet whose performances have a consistency which is matched by their brilliance.

* * *

THE Haydn G major quartet, Opus 77, No. 1, was marked by a basic validity which raised the performance to unsurpassed heights. The moderation of the tempo, the meticulous adherence to degree of dynamics, were evidences of scholarly discipline upon which the refinement of their playing was all the more salient.

William Kroll

Haydn does not write equal opportunities for all four instruments, and thus the first violin's leadership is more apparent here than in works of composers of later eras. Thus the distinction of Kroll's playing was enhanced by Haydn's method and a reticent of assertion by his three colleagues was ameliorated in the works which followed. His natural inclination to insert a slight curlicue was held in restraint in most cases, although he does them with such a light, fantastic flourish that they might be allowed and even relished in this period of music.

THE SECOND quartet of Czech Leos Janacek, written in 1928, is very little known, possibly because of its appalling difficulty, and possibly, also, because of its limitations. It came in the last year of a curious career which started at the age of 40, one whose span began in mid-nineteenth century but whose productive period postdated all of his younger fellow-composers.

Janacek gives his quartet the designation of "Intimate Letters," which may explain partially its romantic and lush manner. It is full and almost orchestral in its scope, particularly after a neat and lucid Haydn. Janacek does not write in variation style, yet he seems to juggle the same idea in innumerable ways by utilizing all the conventional resources of the instruments and some of the less usual, particularly the device of ponticello, and by bowing very close to the bridge, an effect more often used for tone effects than, as here, in long solo passages.

* * *

THE KROLLS gave this uninhibited and ardor-filled playing in which their virtuosity had complete latitude.

Their program ended with the Schubert D minor quartet. The same distinction which had stamped their Haydn here was again clearly perceptible. The conviction of their conception and authority of the performance were intensely satisfying. The "Death and the Maiden" slow movement was sung with poignant discrimination and the variations with ineffable grace and symmetry.

In response to the outburst of acclamation by the audience, they offered an additional short movement, the third, from Hindemith's third quartet which, by chance, happened to be on their music stands. Incidentally, and strange to relate, this particular quartet was written before that of Janacek, although Hindemith was born more than two score years later than the Czech.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 24 1957

Kroll String Quartet To Give Tanglewood Chamber Concert

The Kroll String Quartet will appear tonight in the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of Chamber Music concerts at 8:30 in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox. The program will include Haydn's Quartet in G major, Op. 77 No. 1; Janacek's Quartet No. 2 ("Intimate Letters") and Schubert's "Death and the Maiden" Quartet in D minor.

The Kroll String Quartet consisting of William Kroll, violin; Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello, has appeared in the Tanglewood Chamber Music Concerts both under the present plan and in earlier years in the series sponsored by the late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. Proceeds from the series are donated to the scholarship fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

William Kroll, founder and leader of the quartet is co-director with Richard Burgin of the Chamber Music department of the school. He was born in New York City and studied with Henri Marteau at the Royal Conservatory in Berlin and with Franz Kneisel at the Institute of the Musical Arts in New York. Both Louis Graeler and David Mankovitz are native New Yorkers and have been associated with the Kroll Quartet for many years. Avron Twerdowsky has been a member of the faculty of the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore.

Tickets for this concert and for the remaining two concerts in the chamber music series on July 31 (Song Recital by Gerard Souzay) and Aug. 6 (Zimbler Sinfonietta) are available at the box office at Tanglewood. General admission also will be sold on the day of the concert.

The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, July 23, 1957—9

Kroll Quartet At Tanglewood Tomorrow Night

The Kroll String Quartet will appear tomorrow night in the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of Chamber Music concerts at 8:30 in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood. Their program will include Haydn's Quartet in G major, Op. 77 No. 1; Janacek's Quartet No. 2 ("Intimate Letters"); and Schubert's "Death and the Maiden" Quartet in D minor.

The Kroll String Quartet consisting of William Kroll, violin; Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello, has appeared in the Tanglewood Chamber Music concerts both under the present plan and in earlier years in the series sponsored by the late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. Proceeds from the series are donated to the scholarship fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

Quartet Members

William Kroll, founder and leader of the quartet, is codirector with Richard Burgin of the Chamber Music department of the school. He was born in New York City and studied with Henri Marteau at the Royal Conservatory in Berlin and with Franz Kneisel at the Institute of the Musical Arts in New York. Both Louis Graeler and David Mankovitz are native New Yorkers and have been associated with the Kroll Quartet for many years. Avron Twerdowsky has been a member of the faculty of the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

JUL 24 1957

Kroll String Quartet

The Kroll String Quartet will appear tonight at 8:30 in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The program includes Haydn's Quartet in G major, Op. 77 No. 1; Janacek's Quartet No. 2 (Intimate Letters"); and Schubert's "Death and the Maiden" Quartet in D minor.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 25, 1957

1410 HEAR KROLL STRING QUARTET AT TANGLEWOOD

Fourth in Series of Chamber Music Concerts Draws Largest Audience

By WILLARD CLARK

Lenox, July 24—The Kroll Quartet, playing the fourth in the series of chamber music concerts, drew the largest audience to date, 1410 persons, tonight.

The audience heard vigorous performances of quartets by Haydn, Janacek and Schubert. Members of this quartet are William Kroll and Louis Grabler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

Improved Performance

The playing of the ensemble was much better than it was when heard here last summer. Mr. Kroll's violin does not predominate so much as it did, yet the particularly shrill tone which he draws from his instrument still tends to focus attention upon it.

The program opened with a full-blooded performance of Haydn's "Quartet in G Major, Op. 77, No. 1." It was a reading rich in contrasts, while retaining the earthy aspects of a strong score.

The Czech composer, Jancek, seems to be gaining the notice in this country he has so richly deserved. His "Quartet No. 2" subtitled "Intimate Letters," is a fascinating, discursive piece of music. It has its raucous passages, as if the writers were in total disagreement, but every once in awhile, there appear passages of lyrical, eloquent beauty.

The concert concluded with Schubert's greatest quartet, the D Major Quartet, titled "Death and the Maiden." We listened to a well balanced performance, less sensitive that some we have heard, but one which was consistent throughout.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 23 1957

C185

Paul Duckworth

The Kroll String Quartet—William Kroll, David Mankowitz, Avron Twerdowsky, and Louis Graeler—will be heard at Tanglewood Wednesday evening.

LD, MASS., WEDNESDAY, JULY 24, 1957
THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIE

Kroll String Quartet Today At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 23 — The Kroll String Quartet will appear Wednesday night in the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music concerts at 8:30 in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The program will include Haydn's Quartet in G major, Op. 77 No. 1; Janacek's Quartet No. 2 ("Intimate Letters"); and Schubert's "Death and the Maiden" Quartet in D minor.

The Kroll String Quartet, consisting of William Kroll, violin; Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello, has appeared in the Tanglewood Chamber Music Concerts both under the present plan and in earlier years in the series sponsored by the late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. Proceeds from the series are donated to the scholarship fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tickets for this concert and for the remaining two concerts in the chamber music series on July 31 (Song Recital by Gerard Souzay) and August 6 (Zimbler Sinfonietta) are available at the box office, Tanglewood. General admission also will be sold on the day of the concert.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 23 1957

Music Review

Opera Unit Gives First Demonstration

THE OPERA Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood presented the first of three consecutive Monday evening programs in the theater-concert hall last night. Boris Goldovsky, head of the department since the establishment of the school, this year has inaugurated a new curriculum specialized and concentrated on training young students in the art of stage direction.

The first half of the program was devoted to scenes of four operas in which a different student was responsible for the direction. Mr. Goldovsky, in his usual inimitable way, gave short talks at various times during the evening to explain the purposes of the new plan and, later, to tell about the experimental materials and devices several agencies and sponsors have made it possible for him to develop.

* * *

MR. GOLDOVSKY presided at the piano for all the actual music-making. The singers were all talented students and some were beyond that tentative point in their careers, but the training of vocalists is not a declared function of the department this year. In any case, the evening provided considerable enjoyment to an audience of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center which filled the theater.

Although the Tanglewood season is now in its fourth week, the Opera Department assembled only a week ago and thus it was found impossible to prepare the entire program originally laid out for the initial evening's exhibit. In the two evenings to follow Mr. Goldovsky plans to elaborate on his intentions and to show how the fulfillment will be of benefit to that part of the production of opera which up to now has been more a matter of chance than of planning. B. R.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. UNION, SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1957

[180]

First Opera Scenes At Tanglewood Monday

Lenox, July 19—The first of three demonstrations of new techniques of opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center will take place on Monday evening at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the department, will be master of ceremonies for the program, the first part of which will be devoted to five opera scenes staged by students of stage directing at the school. The scenes are from Bizet's "Carmen," Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and "Marriage of Figaro," Rossini's "Barber of Seville" and Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel." They have been staged by Karlos Moser, James Billings, Louis Huber, Benjamin Picone, Hope Christopoulos, Baird Hastings, Maude Currey, Edward Purrington and Clarence Warrington. Mr. Goldovsky's staff includes Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep in the staging division; Felix Wolfes, repertoire; Claude Marks and Tom DeGaetani, scenic division; and Leo Van Witsen, costume division.

The second half of the program will be devoted to a demonstration of the new experimental scenery constructed of fiberglass and aluminum. Following an explanation by Mr. Goldovsky, scenes from Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" and Puccini's "La Boheme" will be presented, utilizing these materials.

Opera Scenes Set In Berkshires

THE BOSTON HERALD, SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1957

The first of three demonstrations of new techniques of opera production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will take place on Monday evening at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the department, will be master of ceremonies for the program, the first part of which will be devoted to five opera scenes staged by students of stage directing at the school. The scenes are from Bizet's "Carmen," Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and "Marriage of Figaro," Rossin's "Barber of Seville" and Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel." They have been staged by Karlos Moser, James Billings, Louis Huber, Benjamin Picone, Hope Christopoulos, Baird Hastings, Maude Currey, Edward Purrington and Clarence Warrington. Mr. Goldovsky's staff includes Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep in the staging division; Felix Wolfes, repertoire; Claude Marks, and Tom DeGaetani, scenic division; and Leo Van Witsen, costume division.

THE HARTFORD TIMES, MONDAY, JULY 22, 1957

Tanglewood Shows Opera Experiments

The first of three demonstrations of new techniques of opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center will take place tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., and is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the department, will be master of ceremonies for the program. The first part will be devoted to five opera scenes staged by students of stage directing at the school. The scenes are from Bizet's "Carmen," Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and "Marriage of Figaro," Rossini's "Barber of Seville" and Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel."

The second half of the program will be devoted to a demonstration of the new experimental scenery constructed of fibreglas and aluminum. Following an explanation by Mr. Goldovsky, scenes from Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" and Puccini's "La Boheme" will be presented, utilizing these materials.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
DAILY FREEMAN
JUL 20 1957

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

SOCIETIES • CLUBS • PERSONALS

First of Chamber Music Concerts Scheduled At Tanglewood's Berkshire Festival July 23

The first of two concerts of modern chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago will be given on Tuesday evening, July 23, at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. These concerts, which were a new and outstandingly successful feature of last year's Berkshire Festival season, are repeated again this year through the generosity of Paul Fromm, president of the Fromm Music Foundation. The concert, performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other soloists, is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose donations help to support the school, and to the general public. Seats are unreserved.

The program will include two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation, one a first performance. The Fantasia for String Trio by Irving Fine was commissioned for the University of Illinois Festival of Contemporary Arts and performed there in 1957. The Trio will be performed by George Zazofsky, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello.

The String Quartet No. 1 by Easley Blackwood which has its first performance at this concert was also composed in 1957. Mr. Blackwood, a student at Tanglewood in the years 1948, 1949 and 1950, received a master's degree in Music at Yale in 1954 and has studied composition with Bernhard Heiden, Paul Hindemith and Nadia Boulanger. The players will be the Boston Symphony String Quartet; Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello

The program will open with the Sonata No. 2 for Violin and Piano by Bela Bartok, performed by Ruth Posselt, violin, and Luise Vosgerchian, piano. Following the Irving Fine Trio, a performance of Maurice Ravel's "Chansons Madecasses" will be presented by Patricia Neway, soprano; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Samuel Mayes, cello; and Luise Vosgerchian, piano. Miss Neway (well-known for her performance in the leading role of Menotti's "The Consul" on Broadway and in Europe) and Miss Vosgerchian are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center, and Mrs. Dwyer and Mr. Mayes are principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The second half of the program will open with the Blackwood String Quartet, continuing with the Suite for Soprano and Violin by Heitor Villa Lobos (performed by Miss Neway and Miss Posselt), closing with Roy Harris' Concerto for Piano, Clarinet and String Quartet. The performers will include Luise Vosgerchian, piano; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; and the Boston Symphony String Quartet.

The program for the second of the Modern Chamber Music concerts under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation on Tuesday, August 6, will be announced shortly and will include works by Walter Piston, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Robert Palmer, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky.

Fromm Chamber Music Concerts to Start Tuesday

Lenox, July 20 — The first two concerts of modern chamber music under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation will be held at Tanglewood Tuesady evening at 8.30. Works by Bela Bartok, Irving Fine, Maurice Ravel, Easley Blackwood, Heitor Villa-Lobos and Roy Harris will be performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, aided by Patricia Neway, soprano; Ruth Posselt, violin; and Luise Vosgerchian, piano.

One of the works, the "Fantasia for String Trio by Irving Fine and the String Quartet No. 1 by Easley Blackwood (a former student of the Berkshire Music Center), were commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation, and the latter work will receive its first performance at this concert, which is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

An added concert of contemporary music will be given on Friday afternoon, the 27th at 4:15 by Fromm Fellows who are participating in a special program in contemporary music this summer at Tanglewood under the sponsorship of the Fromm Foundation.

Lectures Listed

An illustrated lectures in the Seminar in Contemporary Music will also be open to Friends on Monday and Friday afternoons at 4:15 in the Chamber Music Hall. Karl Kohn, on the faculty of the Tanglewood Study Group, who has just returned from a year on a Fulbright Scholarship in Finland, will speak on "Nationalist trends" with emphasis on Bartok, Britten, and the Russians and Scandinavians (July 24) and Aaron Copland will speak on the same subject, emphasizing the American phase (July 26).

The first of three demonstrations of the opera leadership program being carried on at Tanglewood this summer by Boris Goldovsky and the Berkshire Music Center Opera department, will take place at 8.30 p. m. Monday in the theater. Scenes from operas will be used to illustrate the results of experiments in stage direction and a new type of mobile scenery which is being tested by this program.

The usual weekly student concerts will include the student orchestra concert in the Music Shed Thursday evening at 8.30; the chamber music concert on Sunday morning at 10 and the Sunday evening composer's forum at 8.30 in the Chamber Music Hall. All these events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tickets and information may be secured by writing to Tanglewood, Lenox.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

JUL 22 1957

Modern Chamber Music Tuesday At Tanglewood

The first of two concerts of modern chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago will be given on Tuesday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. These concerts, which were a new feature of last year's Berkshire Festival season, are repeated again this year through the generosity of Paul Fromm, President of the Fromm Music Foundation. The concert, performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other soloists, is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose donations help to support the school, and to the general public. Seats are unreserved.

The program will include two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation. The Fantasia for String Trio by Irving Fine will be performed by George Zazofsky, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello. The String Quartet No. 1 by Easley Blackwood will be played by the Boston Symphony String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola: Samuel Mayes, cello.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1957

Tanglewood Lists Modern Chamber Music for Tuesday

The first of two free concerts of modern chamber music sponsored by the Fromm Foundation of Chicago will be given Tuesday night, July 23, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Irving Fine's Fantasia for String Trio and Easley Blackwood's first String Quartet will have first performances; music by Bartok, Ravel, Villa-Lobos and Roy Harris will also be heard. The second concert is scheduled for Tuesday night, Aug. 6.

The Berkshire Music Center's opera department will give the first of three demonstrations of new opera production techniques at Tanglewood Monday night, presenting scenes from "Carmen," "Don Giovanni," "The Marriage of Figaro," "The Barber of Seville," "Hansel and Gretel," "Pelleas and Melisande" and "La Boheme." This program and the others set for Mondays, July 29 and Aug. 5, are open to contributors to the Berkshire Music Center.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

JUL 19 1957

Fromm Concert At Tanglewood Tuesday Night

TANGLEWOOD—The first of two concerts of modern chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago will be given on Tuesday evening, at 8:30 in the theater-concert hall.

These concerts, which were a new and outstandingly successful feature of last year's Berkshire Festival season, are repeated again this year through the generosity of Paul Fromm, president of the Fromm Music Foundation. The concert, performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other soloists, is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose donations help to support the school, and to the general public. Seats are unreserved.

The program will include two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation, one a first performance. The Fantasia for String Trio by Irving Fine was commissioned for the University of Illinois Festival of Contemporary Arts and performed there in 1957. The Trio will be performed by George Zazofsky, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello.

Music Center Student

The String Quartet No. 1 by Easley Blackwood which has its first performance at this concert was also composed in 1957. Mr. Blackwood, a student at Tanglewood in the years 1948, 1949 and 1950, received a master's degree in music at Yale in 1954 and has studied composition with Bernhard Heiden, Paul Hindemith and Nada Boulanger. The players will be the Boston Symphony String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

The program will open with the Sonata No. 2 for Violin and Piano by Bela Bartok, performed by Ruth Posselt, violin, and Luise Vosgerchian, piano. Following the Irving Fine Trio, a performance of Maurice Ravel's "Chanson Madecasses" will be presented by Patricia Neway, soprano; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Samuel Mayes, cello; and Luise Vosgerchian, piano. Miss Neway, well-known for her performance in the leading role of Menotti's "The Consul" on Broadway and in Europe, and Miss Vosgerchian are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center, and Mrs. Dwyer and Mr. Mayes are principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The second half of the program will open with the Blackwood String Quartet, continuing with the Suite for Soprano and Violin by Heitor Villa Lobos, performed by Miss Neway and Miss Posselt, and closing with Roy Harris' Concerto for Piano, Clarinet and String Quartet. The performers will include Luise Vosgerchian, piano; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; and the Boston Symphony String Quartet.

The program for the second of the Modern Chamber Music concerts, under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation on Tuesday, Aug. 6, will be announced shortly and will include works by Walter Piston, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Robert Palmer, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky.

SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1957

NGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Contemporary Concerts At Tanglewood July 23

Lenox, July 19—The first two concerts of modern chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago will be given on Tuesday evening, at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Being Repeated

These concerts, which were a new and outstandingly successful feature of last year's Berkshire Festival season, are repeated again this year through the generosity of Paul Fromm, president of the Fromm Music Foundation. The concert, performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other soloists, is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose donations help to support the school, and to the general public. Seats are unreserved.

The program will include two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation, one a first performance. The Fantasia for String Trio by Irving Fine was commissioned for the University of Illinois Festival of Contemporary Arts and performed there in 1957. The Trio will be performed by George Zazofsky, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello.

The String Quartet No. 1 by Easley Blackwood which has its first performance at this concert was also composed in 1957. Mr. Blackwood, a student at Tanglewood in the years 1948, 1949 and 1950, received a master's degree in music at Yale in 1954 and has studied composition with Bernhard Heiden, Paul Hindemith and Nadia Boulanger. The players will be the Boston Symphony String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

The program will open with the Sonata No. 2 for Violin and Piano by Bela Bartok, performed by Ruth Posselt, violin, and Luise Vosgerchian, piano. Following the Irving Fine Trio, a performance of Maurice Ravel's "Chanson Madecasses" will be presented by Patricia Neway, soprano; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Samuel Mayes, cello; and Luise Vosgerchian, piano. Miss Neway (well-known for her perfomance in the leading role of Menotti's "The Consul" on Broadway and in Europe) and Miss Vosgerchian are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center, and Mrs. Dwyer and Mr. Mayes are principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The second half of the program will open with the Blackwood String Quartet, continuing with the Suite for Soprano and Violin by Heitor Villa Lobos (performed by Miss Neway and Miss Posselt), and closing with Roy Harris' Concerto for Piano, Clarinet and String Quartet. The performers will include Luise Vosgerchian, piano; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; and the Boston Symphony String Quartet.

The program for the second of the Modern Chamber Music concerts under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation on Tuesday, Aug. 6, will be announced shortly and will include works by Walter Piston, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Robert Palmer, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

JUL 20 1957

LENOX CHAMBER WORKS

Concerts Tuesday and Aug. 6 to Be Given at Tanglewood

The first of two contemporary chamber music concerts sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago will be given Tuesday in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The program will include the first performance of Easley Blackwood's First String Quartet, commissioned by the Fromm Foundation, and Irving Fine's Fantasia for String Trio, a Fromm Foundation commission for the University of Illinois Festival of Contemporary Arts last spring, Bartók's Second Sonata for Violin and Piano and Ravel's "Chansons Madécasses," with Patricia Neway, soprano, complete the program.

The instrumental performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The second Fromm Foundation concert will be presented Tuesday evening, Aug. 6.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 20 1957

Chamber Music Concert Tuesday At Tanglewood

The first of two concerts of modern chamber music, presented under auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, will be given on Tuesday evening at 8:30 in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood. These concerts, which were a new and outstandingly successful feature of last year's Berkshire Festival season, are repeated again this year through the generosity of Paul Fromm, president of the Fromm Music Foundation. The concert, performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other soloists, is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose donations help to support the school, and to the general public. Seats are unreserved.

The program will include two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation, one a first performance. The Fantasia for String Trio by Irving Fine was commissioned for the University of Illinois Festival of Contemporary Fine Arts and performed there in 1957. The Trio will be performed by George Zazofsky, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello.

The String Quartet No. 1 by Easley Blackwood, which has its first performance at this concert, was also composed in 1957. Mr. Blackwood, a student at Tanglewood in the years 1948, 1949 and 1950, received a master's degree in music at Yale in 1954 and has studied composition with Bernhard Heiden, Paul Hindemith and Nadia Boulanger. The players will be the Boston Symphony String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 44,706

JUL 21 1957

Chamber Music At Tanglewood

The first of two concerts of modern chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago will be given Tuesday evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. These concerts, which were a new and outstandingly successful feature of last year's Berkshire Festival season, are repeated again this year through the generosity of Paul Fromm, president of the Fromm Music Foundation. The concert, performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other soloists, is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose donations help to support the school, and to the general public. Seats are unreserved.

The program will include two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation, one a first performance. The Fantasia for String Trio by Irving Fine was commissioned for the University of Illinois Festival of Contemporary Arts and performed there in 1957. The trio will be performed by George Zazofsky, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,017

JUL 22 1957

KINGSTON, N. Y.
DAILY FREEMAN

JUL 31 1957

Fromm Fellowship Players Present Tanglewood Concert

Eleven Fromm Fellowship Players will present the first of two concerts of modern chamber music at Tanglewood on Saturday, Aug. 3 at 2:30 p. m. in the Chamber Music Hall. The young professional musicians, who are spending the summer at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, will present a program of works by Mel Powell, Revueltas, Webern, Copland, Milhaud and Lester Trimble. The concert is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The instrumentalists who will take part in this concert also perform works by Tanglewood composition students at the weekly Composers' Forums, and work with students and teachers in composition classes at the Berkshire Music Center. Four of the musicians come from California, two from Utah, two from Illinois, two from Washington, one from Pennsylvania, and one from Connecticut.

From California are Jean Zeiger, flute, of Berkeley; Howard Colf, cello, of Los Angeles; William O. Smith, clarinet, of Manhattan Beach; Robert Goldstein, oboe, of Oakland. Lowell Farr, piano, and Naomi Farr, soprano, are from Salt Lake City, Utah. George Andrix, viola, and Peggy Andrix, violin, are from Chicago, Illinois. Richard Lottridge, bassoon, is from Havertown, Pennsylvania, and Paul Ingraham, French horn, comes from Wallingford, Connecticut.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 20 1957

First of Modern Chamber Concerts At Lenox Tuesday

The first of two concerts of modern chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago will be given on Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Fromm Foundation

These concerts, which were a new and outstandingly successful feature of last year's Berkshire Festival season, are repeated again this year through the generosity of Paul Fromm, president of the Fromm Music Foundation. The concert, performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other soloists, is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose donations help to support the school, and to the general public. Seats are unreserved.

The program will include two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation, one a first performance. The Fantasia for String Trio by Irving Fine was commissioned for the University of Illinois Festival of Contemporary Arts and performed there in 1957. The Trio will be performed by George Zazofsky, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello.

The String Quartet No. 1 by Easley Blackwood which has its first performance at this concert was also composed in 1957. Mr. Blackwood, a student at Tanglewood in the years 1948, 1949 and 1950, received a master's degree in Music at Yale in 1954 and has studied composition with Bernhard Heiden, Paul Hindemith and Nadia Boulanger. The players will be the Boston Symphony String Quartet; Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Bartok Sonata

The program will open with the Sonata No. 2 for Violin and Piano by Bela Bartok, performed by Ruth Posselt, violin, and Luise Vosgerchian, piano. Following the Irving Fine Trio, a performance of Maurice Ravel's "Chansons Madecasses" will be presented by Patricia Neway, soprano; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Samuel Mayes, cello; and Luise Vosgerchian, piano. Miss Neway (well-known for her performance in the leading role of Menotti's "The Conus" on Broadway and in Europe) and Miss Vosgerchian, are both former students of the Berkshire Music Center, and Mrs. Dwyer and Mr. Mayes are principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The second half of the program will open with the Blackwood String Quartet, continuing with the Suite for Soprano and Violin by Heitor Villa Lobos (performed by Miss Neway and Miss Posselt), and closing with Roy Harris' Concerto for Piano, Clarinet and String Quartet. The performers will include Luise Vosgerchian, piano; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; and the Boston Symphony String Quartet.

The program for the second of the Modern Chamber Music concerts under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation Tuesday, Aug. 6, will be announced shortly and will include works by Walter Piston, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Robert Palmer, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 24 1957

Music Review

Fromm Chamber Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST of two concerts of modern chamber music under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation was played in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night. Music of a third of a century ago alternated with two Fromm commissions played by a group of Boston Symphony Orchestra members assisted by violinist Ruth Posselt, pianist Luise Vosgerchian, and soprano Patricia Neway.

This is the second season that Tanglewood has been the grateful recipient of the interest of Paul Fromm, the far-seeing founder and dynamic motive force behind the creative policies of the Foundation that bears his name. This is the most valuable contribution of the season in the field where Serge Koussevitzky, the founder of the Berkshire Music Center, and Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, in a neighboring enterprise, were pioneers, an area in which composers are encouraged and supported.

* * *

MR. FROMM, who had come from his home in Chicago for the concert, could not have failed to sense the pulse of the evening and to derive from it the great reassurance that not only were his efforts appreciated but the cause, which he so strongly champions, was importantly advanced.

Last night's program included two Fromm commisions, one of which had received four previous performances this year, and the other which was being played for the first time. Both were written this year. One is a Fantasia for string trio by 42-year-old Irving Fine of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, and the other is the first string quartet by a 24-year-old former Tanglewood student, Easley Blackwood.

Fine's trio consists of a very rhythmical and energetic scherzo between slow and maturely introspective movements in which the composer shows a keen insight into the best registers and texture of the instruments he employs. He writes long, tenuous, melodic lines for the slow movements, and assigns the introductory ones in both instances to the viola. Double stops near the end of the third movement are deeply impressive. A profoundly felt emotional content covers his consistent but, at previous times, more apparent erudition. His music had the advantage of an outstandingly excellent performance by George Zazofsky, Joseph de Pasquale and Samuel Mayes.

* * *

BLACKWOOD'S quartet enlisted the same viola and 'cello with violinists Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips. This is zestful and lively music, on the facile side. His inspiration is fresh and vigorus and his tone colors have spontaneity. Both composers were called to the front of the hall to acknowledge the unreserved approval of the enthusiastic audience.

The whole program was played with consummate artistry. The Bartok second and atonal sonata for violin and piano was a strikingly superior delineation of a potentially amorphous quantity of notes. Miss Posselt later in the program joined Miss Neway in the Villa-Lobos suite for soprano and violin in an exhilarating and superlative performance.

Miss Neway also displayed a remarkable sense of drama in the Ravel "Chansons Madecasses," a 1926 commission of the late Mrs. Coolidge. Miss Neway's admonition "Aoua! Meriez vous des blancs" was spectacularly awesome.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052
JUL 26 1957

Three Programs At Tanglewood

An illustrated lecture on contemporary music, a chamber music program and a composer's forum are open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this weekend. This afternoon in the chamber music hall, Aaron Copland will speak about "Nationalist Trends: American Phase"; this lecture will be illustrated musically by Fromm Fellowship Players who are spending the summer working in contemporary music at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation.

A concert of chamber music on Sunday morning at 10 a.m. in the chamber music hall features works by Thuille, Beethoven and Faure. The composers' forum on Sunday evening at 8:30 in the chamber music hall offers works by student composers Marvin Salzberg of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Simon Sargon of Winthrop, Mass.; Richard Fenner of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Joel Mandelbaum of New York City; Gordon Sherwood of Ann Arbor, Mich.; and Harold Farberman of Boston. Mr. Farberman, a member of the percussion section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is studying composition this summer with Milton Babbitt.

Student Orchestra Plays Tonight At Tanglewood

The fourth weekly concert by the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center will occur tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood features works by Roy Harris, Ravel, Bartok and Stravinsky. Three student conductors will direct the orchestra, and the evening's program will conclude with a performance of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" Ballet Suite, conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the orchestral conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The program:

Roy Harris — Symphony No. 3
Dr. Crawford Gates, conductor
Provo, Utah

Ravel — Scheherazade
Shirley Sudock, mezzo suprano
Zurich, Switzerland
Gustav Meier, conductor
Zurich, Switzerland

Bartok — Violin Concerto, 1st movement
Hyman Bress, violin
Montreal, Canada
David Wooldridge, conductor
London, England

Intermission

Stravinsky — Petrouchka
Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor

10—The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 25, 1957

Eagle, Friday, July 19, 1957—3

Chamber Concerts Are Announced For Tanglewood

There will be chamber music concerts at Tanglewood Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall, and Sunday evening at 8:30 in the same hall.

The morning concert will feature works of Karl Kohn of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, Prokofieff and Brahms. The evening concert will feature works by students of the composition group.

The program follow:

DEPARTMENT I—CHAMBER MUSIC
SUNDAY MORNING AT 10.
CHAMBER MUSIC HALL.

Adagio and Allegro — Kohn
Merrill Debski, trumpet, Ansonia, Conn.
Robert Hause, trombone, Shelby, N.C.
Gerald Conrath, trumpet, Portland, Ore.
Robert Stephenson, trombone, Floresville, Texas.
Joanna Marsh, piano, Seattle, Wash.

Quintet — Prokofieff
Peter Angelo, oboe, Bronxville, N.Y.
Hyman Bress, violin, Montreal, Canada.
Homer Lee, clarinet, San Francisco, Calif.
Jesse Levine, viola, Bronx, N.Y.
David Bethe, double bass, Appleton, Wis.

Quartet, Opus 51, No. 2 — Brahms
Leo Ahramjian, violin, San Francisco, Calif.
Roy Nickrenz, viola, Hamburg, N.Y.
Joyce Pollard, violin, Chicago, Ill.
Chester Wood, cello, Port Orchard, Wash

DEPARTMENT III—COMPOSERS' FORUM
SUNDAY EVENING AT 8:30.
CHAMBER MUSIC HALL.

String Quartet No. 2
Richard Hensel, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

Suite Canina for oboe, clarinet and bassoon.
Jose Serebrier, Montevideo, Uruguay.

SONG GROUP
Gordon Sherwood, Ann Arbor, Mich.
Malcolm Peyton, Princeton, N.J.
David Ward-Steinman, Alexandria, La.
Joseph Lukewitz, Chicago, Ill.
NAOMI FARR, soprano, New York, N.Y.

Suite for solo clarinet
MALCOLM PEYTON, Princeton, N.J.

Sonata for two flutes and piano
Ramon Zupko, Youngstown, Ohio

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 25 1957

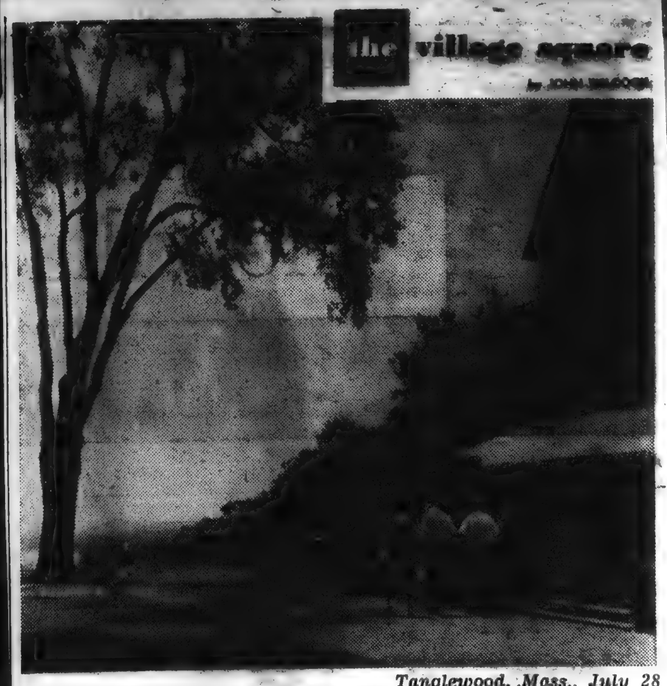
Student Orchestra Concert is Tonight

The fourth weekly concert by the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, features works by Roy Harris, Ravel, Bartok and Stravinsky. Three student conductors will direct the orchestra, and the evening's program will conclude with a performance of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" Ballet Suite, conducted by Eleazer de Carvalho, head of the orchestral conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

the village VOICE, July 31, 1957

the village square

by JOHN WILCOCK



Tanglewood, Mass., July 28

A noisy airliner roared overhead during the performance of some Berlioz here last night, and conductor Charles Munch promptly halted the orchestra until the spluttering intruder had passed by. It wouldn't happen in New York, even with such a reverential attitude toward the music. Too many airliners.

Apart from this minor interruption, last night's concert went off without a visible hitch—as concerts at Tanglewood have been apt to do for 20 summers. I can't imagine more pleasant conditions under which to listen to music than this: lying comfortably on blankets under the stars, with a faint breeze rustling through the trees and canned beer at one's elbow.

They are the sort of conditions, in fact, that sometimes bring up to 20,000 visitors here on a week-end, and with such support you would imagine that the Boston Symphony Orchestra would be one of the few able to break even on a year-round operation.

It doesn't, though. Like most symphony orchestras, the Boston's degree of public-spiritedness is far beyond its means, and an excellent (money-losing) music school coupled with the massive operations of the symphony itself keep it consistently in the red. Ironically, the popularity of the open-air concerts in the orchestra's summer home contribute to the deficit, but ocials philosophically shrug it off with the consoling thought that it does at least keep the musicians working for more of the year than otherwise possible.

The people who attend are interesting, and somehow seem to have a commoner bond than a love of music. The only way I can describe it is to say that they seem like representatives of an "in-group" from the four neighboring states. Intelligent, alert, and, mainly, young, they are of a type I would unhesitatingly seek out in any corner of the world I happened to find myself. (But they wouldn't be found dead in the places that you and I dislike).

Among the few interlopers that had crept in were a couple of cigar-smoking refugees from the clubroom of some local racetrack, along with their middle-aged, bejewelled wives. To prove they were squares, they'd brought folding chairs.

As most of you undoubtedly know, there are many fringe activities taking place near here during the summer, among them being ballet at Jacob's Pillow and jazz at the Berkshire Music Barn. A well-planned week-end therefore can offer a great deal of variety in what the travel agents like to call "relaxed surroundings."

My own relaxation has extended to hiring a tent and cooking meals over an outdoor grill at adjoining October Mountain state park, and although I'm getting a little old for such Boy Scout activities (I'll be 30 next Sunday), it does same money.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

JUL 29 1957

$2 Tanglewood Serenade: Kids' Chorus, Lovers' Coos

By A STAFF REPORTER

Some wag, whose visa has since been revoked by Berkshire County, once called Tanglewood the Coney Island of the New York University set.

Anyone who has ever attended the Berkshire Music Festival can tell you this is unfair. You can't buy hot dogs at Tanglewood.

But you can find music fans massed haunch to paunch sometimes on the lawn outside the Tanglewood Music Shed. Like yesterday afternoon for instance, when 6176 people came to hear Pierre Monteux conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

About 2000 of them listened from the lawn. Dress is very informal at Tanglewood concerts and people on the lawn can stretch out wherever they find space. Most people consider it a wholly delightful institution and point out that it attracts a good, democratic cross-section of American music lovers who seldom go near an ordinary concert hall.

See $2 TANGLEWOOD Page Six

Continued From Page 1

Among those present yesterday, besides Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, were Stravinsky, Melchior, Bach, Brahms, Mozart and their families. That's Harold Stravinsky, who runs a delicatessen in Manhattan; Ludvig Melchior, who is a truck dispatcher from Brooklyn; Benny Bach, George Brahms and Herman Mozart, who are partners in a bowling alley in Bayonne, N. J., and drove all the way up here.

Two Ways to Go

There are two ways to go to Tanglewood concerts. You can buy a reserved seat and sit under the shed or you can go the way Harold, Ludwig, Benny, George and Herman go. They pay $2 and rest on the lawn in whatever posture they choose and Harold's wife, for example, can choose some lulus.

The cost per concert is lower this way, but the capital outlay is likely to be steep. Take the Harold Stravinskys. Harold's Tanglewood concert clothes—his striped Bermuda shorts, matching striped shirt, duckbill cap and flip-up smoked glasses—cost a pretty penny and that's just the start.

The Stravinskys—Harold, his wife Gladys, the two daughters and little Harold, Jr.—arrived yesterday with the inflatable rubber surf boards that are so popular this season among those who like to listen from a prone position. These they spread out on a 6-by-8 alpaca pile rug, big enough for the whole family, and there was still room for a portable ice chest, a five-gallon thermos of refreshments and a picnic basket.

Little Harold Quiet

The Stravinskys had just stretched out and gotten little Harold quiet when Monteux took the Boston Symphony into the second of three excerpts from Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet."

This lively part of the symphony is generally known as "Queen Mab, the Fairy of Dreams," but at Tanglewood is known as "The Children's Movement."

Sure enough, after a few trumpet blasts, little Harold Stravinsky, who was almost asleep, sat bolt upright and began bawling. Big Harold and Gladys tried everything to get him quiet again, but it was no use.

Everyone Glowers

"I'm awfully sorry," said big Harold, turning around to everybody with this frantic smile. Everybody glowered back.

"I'm going to put him in the ice chest," said big Harold, as little Harold's screams became horrible.

"You are not," said Gladys. "It will make the beer warm."

Finally, of course, they were forced to march back to the parking lot, lugging their inflated surf boards, the alpaca pile rug, the ice chest, the thermos jug, and the picnic basket, with Berlioz in the background and little Harold in the foreground. Scores of other families were retreating the same way, so the Stravinskys did not feel so bad.

"Honestly," said George Brahms to his friends Benny and Herman and their wives, "you'd think people would have better sense than to bring children to a concert. Why do they let people like that in here?"

By this time, Monteux had taken the Boston Symphony into the third excerpt from "Romeo and Juliet." This part is often called "Romeo Alone," but is known at Tanglewood as the "f.16, 1/100, double-X, panchromatic overture."

Sure enough, George Brahms had brought along his camera. He had sprawled out in a very uncomfortable position and one leg was cramped, and he decided to stand up and snap a few pictures of Benny, Herman and the wives.

Move in Closer

"Hey, Benny," said George in that stage whisper of his, "move in here closer, so I can get everybody in the picture."

"Sh-h-h-h-h!" came voices from all sides.

"Wanna make something of it?" said George, picking out the oldest and most decrepit-looking shusher he could find.

This fellow didn't want to make anything of it, but George's wife, Maureen, did.

"Good grief, you big lug," said Maureen, 'whaddya think this is, a baseball game? Sit down and put that silly camera away."

"Yeah, whaddya think this is, George," said Benny, nudging his wife, Debra Louise.

"Whazzat?" said Herman Mozart, just waking up.

"Will you people please keep quiet," said Ludwig Melchior from nearby, in an even stagier whisper than George Brahms'.

"Honestly," said Ludwig, turning to his girl friend, Paulette Schwartz, "I don't know why they let people like that in here."

Not long after, Monteux led the Boston Symphony in "Mathis der Maler," a symphony by Hindemith. The second movement is actually called "Entombment," but many people at Tanglewood call it "The Lovers' Arpeggio Giggle Impromptu."

Berlioz Is Keen

Sure enough, Ludwig had leaned over to whisper something in Paulette's ear and pretty soon they were both stretched out on their blanket and Ludwig was still whispering in her ear. It was what, anywhere else, would be called a clinch.

Between cycles, Ludwig said, "I think Berlioz is keen, honey."

"They're through playing Berlioz, sweets," said Paulette, "that's Hindemith."

"Well, anyway, I like the romantic movement," said Ludwig.

"Honestly," said Harold Stravinsky, who had put little Harold to sleep and was back for the end of the concert, "I can't see why they let people like that in

Eagle, Friday, July 26, 1957

Notes and Footnotes

RATTLING AROUND: Coincidence that a Randy Weston piano record came out same day Ted Muller started his new program on WBEC. Includes "A Theme for Teddy," and dedicated to Mr. M, who has been close friend since he did radio interview of Weston three years ago . . . Frequently seen at Tanglewood but rarely recognized as designer of the Shed is Joseph Franz, though plaque on center column bears his name.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

First Church Soloist

Mrs. Kathryn Rector, a soprano, will be soloist at the 10:30 service tomorrow morning at the First Congregational Church. She will sing Little's "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings."

Wife of the assistant manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mrs. Rector has been soprano soloist at the Mozart Festival in Asheville, N.C.

Eagle, Saturday, July 27, 1957

Tanglewood Couple To Sing at St. Stephen's

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dash will sing a duet from "The Creation" by Haydn at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church tomorrow morning at 10.

The Dashes have been recitalists in New York City on Broadway and are both voice teachers. Mr. Dash is head of the music department at Dillard University in New Orleans, La.

This summer, Mr. and Mrs. Dash are studying in the choral department at Tanglewood under the direction of Hugh Ross.

Eagle, Saturday, July 27, 1957

Son Is Born To De Carvalhos

A son, their first child, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Eleazar de Carvalho yesterday in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Mr. De Carvalho is head of the orchestral conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center, and director of the Rio de Janeiro Symphony Orchestra. Mrs. de Carvalho, the concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, made her American debut at a Berkshire Festival concert last summer, when she played the Ravel Piano Concerto with the Boston Symphony under her husband's direction.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

JUL 25 1957

CITY STANDS FIRM ON PACKAGE TOURS

Insists on Licenses to Sell Tickets for State Events, but Exempts Other Shows

Travel agents won one round from the city yesterday but lost another. The city is attempting to license them to resell tickets to theatres and other amusement places as part of package tours. These tours include hotel, transportation and sight-seeing.

License Commissioner Bernard J. O'Connell allowed agents to continue selling tours to the Berkshire Music Festival in Massachusetts and other events outside the state. However, he insisted that licenses were needed for all agents, in or out of New York, who sold tours including tickets for events taking place here.

Commissioner O'Connell and his aides met with attorneys for two groups of travel agents at conferences in his office. One group represented Bingler Vacation Tours, Inc., which sells tours to the Berkshire Festival and similar events. The other represented the American Society of Travel Agents.

Robert E. Goldstein, attorney for Bingler, said Commissioner O'Connell had disclaimed any effort to control the sale of tickets for events outside the state. This left Bingler unhampered in its sale of the Berkshire tours.

Exemption Brief Due

The only Bingler tour that includes an event in New York State is one that takes in the Saratoga races, Mr. Goldstein said. He said he would submit a brief to the Commissioner stressing special circumstances that, he contended, should exempt this tour also from the need for a license.

John S. Russell, attorney for the travel agents, said the conference dealt with the status of out-of-town agents who sold package tours to New York.

Commissioner O'Connell previously had demanded that New York travel agents take out licenses for the resale of tickets for events within the state. At yesterday's conference he took the position that such resale of tickets by out-of-town agents for events here also required a license, according to Mr. Russell.

Mr. Russell maintained that any resale by out-of-town agents did not take place in New York but outside the state, and therefore did not come under the city's jurisdiction.

Mr. Russell said he assumed there would be another conference with the Commissioner.

Agency Won Suit

Last year the Court of Special Sessions dismissed a suit brought by the license commission against Paul Tausig & Son, travel agents. Tausig had been charged with having resold tickets without a license.

Later, the commission shut off tickets to package-tour operators by enforcing a regulation that prohibits the sale of more than ten tickets to unlicensed

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 29 1957

Miss Florence A. Dunn Organist in Dalton

Miss Florence A. Dunn, daughter of Mrs. Harland Dunn of Thomas St., and the late Mr. Dunn, was guest organist yesterday at the worship service at the First Congregational Church, Dalton.

Miss Dunn is assistant to the head of the study group at Tanglewood, a position she has held for the past six years. A graduate of Larson Junior College, New Haven, Conn., and the Boston Conservatory of Music, she is now a voice teacher at the Conservatory.

She is a member of the professional choir of Trinity Church and accompanist for the Cecilia Cociety and Appollo Club of Boston.

Soloist at the service was John Hornor, who is in the opera department at Tanglewood. He is a graduate of Williams College and has returned to Williamstown since his graduation as a soloist with the Berkshire Choral Society.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 26 1957

[190]

Tague

PROMOTIONAL DISPLAY of Berkshire Hills Conference advertising-news release program is inspection by officials of the area promotional agency. In the usual order are William H. Clifford, a director; John F. Downing, executive director; John Burbank, treasurer, and Carl A. Beers, president. Conference directors met last night at the Curtis Hotel in Lenox.

Item (e)
WAKEFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,975
JUL 24 1957

To Appear In Music Festival

Miss Patricia L. Capone, 18-year-old soprano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis P. Capone of 351 Lowell st, an honor student at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, is [illegible] Thursday, July 25 [illegible]wood," the Berkshire [illegible] Festival in Lenox, which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch.

Miss Capone has been called by Mme. Lorna Cooke de Varon, conductor of the New England Conservatory of Music chorus, who is conducting at Tanglewood, to appear in the Festival Chorus and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's performances of Hector Berlioz, "L. force du Christ." This, the featured performance of the festival, will be conducted by Charles Munch, conductor of the famed Boston Symphony Orchestra.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535
JUL 30 1957

TANGLEWOOD BUS TO LEAVE HOLYOKE SATURDAY, SUNDAY

Busses to the Tanglewood concerts will leave Kathleen Smith's Music Shop, Maple St., Holyoke, Saturday at 5 p. m. and Sunday morning at 11. Reservations or information may be obtained from Kathleen Smith or Steinert's Music Store, Springfield. Admission and bus fare are included in the tickets with concert goers asked to bring box lunches.

Featured soloist Saturday night will be Isaac Stern, with Rudolph Serkin as soloist Sunday afternoon.

The same schedule will prevail the week end of the 10th and 11th. Carl Schurecht will conduct Saturday night, the 10th, and Charles Munch the 11th.

Tanglewood, Furcolo Praised For Aid to County Promotion

In a report to the Berkshire Hills Conference directors at the Curtis Hotel in Lenox last night, John F. Downing, executive director of the organization, lauded Tanglewood management and Gov. Furcolo for contributions to the Berkshires' vacation-travel trade.

"The Boston Symphony Orchestra," said Mr. Downing, "followed a suggestion of the Conference and this year included with their mailings a listing of other attractions in the Berkshires.

"We hail this unselfish cooperation," said the Conference executive, "and hope that next year will find more of our members following the lead of the management of the BSO."

Bigger Budget

In praising efforts of the state administration, Mr. Downing said Gov. Furcolo "sought and obtained for fiscal 1958 a promotional budget, which is three times as large as any previous year," and also opened a Massachusetts information office of Rockefeller Center in New York City.

"The Berkshires," said Mr. Downing, "should be grateful to Gov. Furcolo for these two vital contributions to their second largest industry, both of which the Conference has advocated for years.

"The New York office, which will be open year round, will be a particularly important asset to the Berkshires because we are the only major resort area in the state doing a year-round business."

Reporting on the results thus far of the Conference's 1957 promotional efforts, Mr. Downing said the organization has processed a record number of 39,628 inquiries.

An expanded program of weekly and spot news and photo releases, he said, has resulted in the "greatest total free lineage in the 31-year history of the Conference."

An Advertising First

He also reported that "for the first time," Berkshire advertising reached full-page size in both Boston and New York papers.

"This was possible," said Mr. Downing, "only because of the fine cooperation of Conference members who tied in with our program."

The Conference executive also credited The Eagle summer Saturday supplement, "Berkshire Week," with being "of inestimable value both in attracting people to the Berkshires and in keeping them in all sections of the area for longer stays."

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366
JUL 30 1957

[illegible]ple will reside at [illegible] St., Fitchburg.

Berkshire Week End

Twenty-five members of the Quota Club of Springfield spent the past week end in the Berkshires. On Saturday morning they attended a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood; had lunch at the Rose Guest House in Stockbridge at noon, and in the afternoon attended a matinee performance of "Time Limit" starring William Roerick and Tom Coley at the Berkshire Playhouse. The outing was held in lieu of a regular meeting.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 27 1957

Mr. and Mrs. Andre Girard of Nyack, N.Y., are house guests of noted violinist Zino Francescatti and Mrs. Francescatti at their summer home, Fiddletop, Monterey. The Francescattis will entertain tomorrow at a dinner and cocktails for some of the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Francescatti's mother, Mrs. Ernesta Francescatti, recently was honored at a party at Fiddletop and was guest of honor at a dinner given by BSO Conductor Charles Munch at Elm Court, Lenox.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 26 1957

Downing Praises Governor, Boston Symphony for Boost

Directors of the Berkshire Hills Conference were told last night that the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Gov. Foster Furcolo deserved praise for the manner in which they have helped boost Berkshire County as a vacation center.

39,628 Inquiries

That report was made by John F. Downing, executive director of the Conference, at a meeting at the Curtis Hotel in Lenox, where he also revealed that the Conference so far this year has processed a record total of 39,628 inquiries and, through weekly and spot news releases and photographs, has achieved the highest total of free lineage in its 31-year history. In addition, he said, full-page advertising status in Boston and New York papers has been reached for the first time.

"The Boston Symphony Orchestra," said Mr. Downing, "has followed a Conference suggestion and this year included with its mailings a listing of all other attractions in the Berkshires. We hail this unselfish contribution and hope next year will find more members following that lead."

Gov. Furcolo helped, Mr. Downing said, by obtaining a promotional budget in the state three times as large as that of any previous year, and also authorized opening of a Massachusetts information office at Rockefeller Center in New York. The latter is of particular importance, he said, because Berkshire County is the only resort area in the state operating on a year-round basis.

Area Directors

Northern Berkshire directors attending the meeting were Robert Hardman of this city, Ernest Brundage of Williamstown, and Frank Sweeney of Adams. Also on hand were County Commissioner James A. Bowes and Roger Jewett, the city's industrial development coordinator.

$2 Tanglewood Serenade: Kids' Chorus, Lovers' Coos

By A STAFF REPORTER

Some wag, whose visa has since been revoked by Berkshire County, once called Tanglewood the Coney Island of the New York University set.

Anyone who has ever attended the Berkshire Music Festival can tell you this is unfair. You can't buy hot dogs at Tanglewood.

But you can find music fans massed haunch to paunch sometimes on the lawn outside the Tanglewood Music Shed. Like yesterday, afternoon for instance, when 6176 people came to hear Pierre Monteuz conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

About 2000 of them listened from the lawn. Dress is very informal at Tanglewood concerts and people on the lawn can stretch out wherever they find space. Most people consider it a wholly delightful institution and point out that it attracts a good, democratic cross-section of American music lovers who seldom go near an ordinary concert hall.

Among those present yesterday, besides Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, were Stravinsky, Melchior, Bach, Brahms, Mozart and their families. That's Harold Stravinsky, who runs a delicatessen in Manhattan; Ludwig Melchior, who is a truck dispatcher from Brooklyn; Benny Bach, George Brahms and Herman Mozart, who are partners in a bowling alley in Bayonne, N. J., and drove all the way up here.

Two Ways to Go

There are two ways to go to Tanglewood concerts. You can buy a reserved seat and sit under the shed or you can go the way Harold, Ludwig, Benny, George and Herman go. They pay $2 and rest on the lawn in whatever posture they choose and Harold's wife, for example, can choose some lulus.

The cost per concert is lower this way, but the capital outlay is likely to be steep. Take the Harold Stravinskys. Harold's Tanglewood concert clothes—his striped Bermuda shorts, matching striped shirt, duckbill cap and flip-up smoked glasses—cost a pretty penny and that's just the start.

The Stravinskys—Harold, his wife Gladys, the two daughters and little Harold, Jr.—arrived yesterday with the inflatable rubber surf boards that are so popular this season among those who like to listen from a prone position. These they spread out on a 6-by-8 alpaca pile rug, big enough for the whole family, and there was still room for a portable ice chest, a five-gallon thermos of refreshments and a picnic basket.

Little Harold Quiet

The Stravinskys had just stretched out and gotten little Harold quiet when Monteux took the Boston Symphony into the second of three excerpts from Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet."

This lively part of the symphony is generally known as "Queen Mab, the Fairy of Dreams," but at Tanglewood is known as "The Children's Movement."

Sure enough, after a few trumpet blasts, little Harold Stravinsky, who was almost asleep, sat bolt upright and began bawling. Big Harold and Gladys tried everything to get him quiet again, but it was no use.

Everyone Glowers

"I'm awfully sorry," said big Harold, turning around to everybody with this frantic smile. Everybody glowered back.

"I'm going to put him in the ice chest," said big Harold, as little Harold's screams became horrible.

"You are not," said Gladys. "It will make the beer warm."

Finally, of course, they were forced to march back to the parking lot, lugging their inflated surf boards, the alpaca pile rug, the ice chest, the thermos jug, and the picnic basket, with Berlioz in the background and little Harold in the foreground. Scores of other families were retreating the same way, so the Stravinskys did not feel so bad.

"Honestly," said George Brahms to his friends Benny and Herman and their wives, "you'd think people would have better sense than to bring children to a concert. Why do they let people like that in here?"

By this time, Monteux had taken the Boston Symphony into the third excerpt from "Romeo and Juliet." This part is often called "Romeo Alone," but is known at Tanglewood as the "f.16, 1/100, double-X, panchromatic overture."

Sure enough, George Brahms had brought along his camera. He had sprawled out in a very uncomfortable position and one leg was cramped, and he decided to stand up and snap a few pictures of Benny, Herman and the wives.

Move in Closer

"Hey, Benny," said George in that stage whisper of his, "move in here closer, so I can get everybody in the picture."

"Sh-h-h-h-h!" came voices from all sides.

"Wanna make something of it?" said George, picking out the oldest and most decrepit-looking shusher he could find.

This fellow didn't want to make anything of it, but George's wife, Maureen, did.

UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., MONDAY, JULY 29, 1957

Eagle, Saturday, July 27, 1957

In Brief . . .

that [illegible] has ma[illegible]ves the rule . . . That only so-so attendance figure at Tanglewood last evening indicates once again that the problem of selling [illegible]riday night concerts is still largely unsolved. Maybe the four-day week is the only answer . . . On the

BERKSHIRE NIGHTS' second concert of the series was attended by 6,200 last night at Tanglewood. Among them are Professor and Mrs. Whitney S. Stoddard and Miss Kathleen O'Connell of Williamstown. Profesor Stoddard, of Williams College faculty, is on Tanglewood advisory board.

GREETING FRIENDS at intermission are Mr. and Mrs. John W. Talbot of Richmond, front, and Dr. and Mrs. Henry J. Wheelwright, rear. The series of four Friday evening concerts was offered to area residents at a special subscription rate of four concerts for the price of three.

Tanne

ST. STEPHEN'S RECTOR, the Rev. Malcolm W. Eckel, chats with Mrs. Shaun Kelly of Richmond and Mrs. Eckel before the second half of the concert. Many from Berkshire County who are supporting the series inaugurated this summer gave cocktail and dinner parties before the concert.

TANGLEWOOD on RECORDS

Works Already Performed

MOZART: SINFONIA CONCERTANTE IN E FLAT, K. 297B. Warwick Symphony Orchestra, 1.98

BEETHOVEN: TRIO NO. 7 IN B FLAT, OP. 97 ("ARCHDUKE"). Rubinstein, Heifetz, 3.98
Istomin, Schneider, Casals, 3.98
Badura-Skoda, Fournier, Janigro, 3.98

TCHAIKOVSKY: SYMPHONY NO. 6 IN B MINOR ("PATHETIQUE"). Star Symphony Orchestra, 1.98

SYMPHONY NO. 5 IN E MINOR. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Koussevitsky, 3.98
New York Philharmonic, Mitropoulos, 3.98
BBC Orchestra, Sir Malcolm Sargent, 3.98

ROMEO AND JULIET." Boston Symphony, Munch, 3.98
Philadelphia Orchestra, Ormandy, 3.98

VIOLIN CONCERTO IN D. Heifetz, Philharmonia Orchestra, Susskind, 3.98
Michael Rabin, Philharmonia Orch., Alceo Galliera, 3.48
Francescatti, New York Philharmonic, Mitropoulos, 3.98
(with Mendelssohn Concerto)

MENDELSSOHN: FINGAL'S CAVE OVERTURE. Berlin Philharmonic, Lehmann, 2.98
(with "Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage")

STRAVINSKY: "SACRE DU PRINTEMPS." World Wide Symphony Orchestra, 1.98

SCHUBERT: QUARTET NO. 14 IN D MINOR ("DEATH AND THE MAIDEN"). Budapest String Quartet, 3.98
Works to Be Performed This Weekend

BERLIOZ: HAROLD IN ITALY. Heinz Kirchner, Berlin Philharmonic, Markevitch, 3.98
Primrose, Royal Philharmonic, Beecham, 3.98

SYMPHONIE FANTASTIQUE. Boston Symphony, Munch, 3.98
Berlin Philharmonic, Willem Van Otterloo, 3.98

"L'ENFANCE DU CHRIST." Mary Davenport, Martial Singher, Leopold Simoneau, Donald Gramm, The Little Orchestra Society, and Choral Art Society, Thomas Scherman conducting

"ROMEO AND JULIET." New York Philharmonic, Mitropoulos, 3.98

HINDEMITH: "MATHIS DER MALER." Berlin Philharmonic, Hindemith, 3.98
Pittsburgh Symphony, Steinberg, 3.98

The MUSIC HOUSE of NORTHAMPTON
143 MAIN STREET DIAL JU 4-1210
Specialists in Music for Over Thirty Years

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

JUL 30 1957

11 French Students Visit Governor On City Tour

Eleven engineering students from the University of Grenoble, France, said here Monday that they are impressed by the "gentillesse" and "grandeur" of American industry.

That first Gallicism means they have found U.S. industrialists and workmen right friendly. The second implies they're sure that when they make bigger and better elephants, American plants will make them.

But the Frenchmen, who visited Remington Rand's Univac in New York City last week and The Courant Monday afternoon, had a criticism of American life as well.

Work Too Hard

"You work too hard," a good-natured member of the troupe scolded in broken English. "Why, some of your men do not even take the half an hour for lunch!"

In France lunch lasts two hours and is the main meal of the day, he exlained. Between noon and 2 p.m., all commerce and industry stop.

On the second leg of a jaunt that will take them to Tanglewood, Cornell University, Niagara Falls, Ohio steel mills and Washington D.C. in the next five weeks, the students were guests for the day of Mr. and Mrs. Hohn Tyler of Knobb Hill, Glastonbury.

They visited Governor Ribicoff and Secretary of State Mildred P. Allen Monday, then returned to the Tylers' home and an evening of American square-dancing with friends of 17-year-old Jane Elizabeth Tyler.

Tour arrangements for the French students are made by the U.S. Department of State, which pays one-fourth the cost of the trip. Remaining expenses are paid equally by the French government, a foundation established by leading French factories, and the students themselves.

Their Hartford itinerary was set up by the Service Bureau for Women's Organizations.

Isabel Bishop Paintings Shown At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, July 31, 1957

Paintings by Isabel Bishop are being exhibited this week in the Glass Reception Room at Tanglewood. The exhibition has been arranged by the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield.

Internationally known for her figure paintings and oils, Miss Bishop is an accomplished draftsman and etcher. She is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and her works are on view in many of the nation's well known museums, including the Metropolitain Museum and the Whitney Museum in New York, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Springfield Museum.

In 1945, Miss Bishop was awarded a prize at the Corcoran Biennial Exhibition, and in 1943 she received an award from the American Academy of Arts and Letters. She won the First Altman Prize in 1955. Her paintings will be shown at Tanglewood through Aug. 4, and will also be exhibited at the ... um in Pittsfield t... of August.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 29 1957

New Sign Directs Tanglewood Traffic Over Prospect Hill

The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 27, 1957

STOCKBRIDGE—The state Department of Public Works has changed the directional signs here for Tanglewood traffic coming from the east on Route 102 and from the south on Route 7.

The traffic was previously directed west to Interlaken and north on Route 183. A sign which has been erected at the corner of Main and Pine streets now directs the traffic up over Prospect Hill and by Stockbridge Bowl to the festival grounds.

Tanglewood traffic entering Stockbridge from the east follows signs at the intersection of Routes 102 and 20 in East Lee. Signs outside the Lee interchange of the Massachusetts Turnpike also direct traffic into Stockbridge.

Most of the Turnpike traffic bound from the east to Tanglewood, however, follows signs on the Turnpike to the West Stockbridge interchange.

At the corner of Pine and Main streets here, another new sign has been erected to direct traffic to Heaton Hall. The Selectmen recently issued a temporary permit for this sign. A third sign on the same metal pole at the corner directs traffic to the Marian Fathers Seminary.

Berkshire Week in Review

Around the County

IT WAS poor weather for ducks and farmers, but fine for summer visitors. Although the continuing drought caused water shortages in a number of Berkshire communities and closed the forests to blueberry pickers and hikers, the tourists kept coming in near-record numbers. Evidence was provided last weekend at Tanglewood, where attendance was up 50 per cent over 1956, and at such lodging places as Pittsfield's Wendell - Sherwood, which reported the busiest weekend in three years. The Berkshire Hills Conference said requests for reservations and information, which usually drop off sharply before mid-summer, are "still pouring in." . . . On the less cheerful

The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 27, 1957

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 24 1957

Isabel Bishop Work Shown at Tanglewood

Paintings by Isabel Bishop are being exhibited this week in the glass reception room at Tanglewood, Lenox. The exhibition has been arranged by the Berkshire Museum of Pittsfield.

International known for her figure paintings and oils, Miss Bishop is an accomplished draftsman and etcher. She is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and her works are on view in many of the nation's largest museums, including the Metropolitan Museum and the Whitney Museum in New York, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Springfield Museum.

In 1945, Miss Bishop was awarded a prize at the Corcoran Biennial Exhibition, and in 1943 she received an award from the American Academy of Arts and Letters. She won the Lippincott Prize in 1953 and the First Altman Prize in 1955. Her paintings will be shown at Tanglewood from July 29 through August 4, and will also be exhibited at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield through the month of August.

Tanglewood Signs Are Changed

STOCKBRIDGE—The state Department of Public Works has changed the directional signs here for Tanglewood traffic coming from the east on Rt. 102 and from the south on Rt. 7.

The traffic was previously directed west to Interlaken and north on Rt. 183. A sign which has been erected at the corner of Main and Pine Streets now directs the traffic up over Prospect Hill and by Stockbridge Bowl to the festival grounds.

BERKSHIRE NIGHTS' second concert of the series was attended by 6,200 last night at Tanglewood. Among them are Professor and Mrs. Whitney S. Stoddard and Miss Kathleen O'Connell of Williamstown. Profesor Stoddard, of Williams College faculty, is on Tanglewood advisory board.

GREETING FRIENDS at intermission are Mr. and Mrs. John W. Talbot of Richmond, front, and Dr. and Mrs. Henry J. Wheelwright, rear. The series of four Friday evening concerts was offered to area residents at a special subscription rate of four concerts for the price of three.

ST. STEPHEN'S RECTOR, the Rev. Malcolm W. Eckel, chats with Mrs. Shaun Kelly of Richmond and Mrs. Eckel before the second half of the concert. Many from Berkshire County who are supporting the series inaugurated this summer gave cocktail and dinner parties before the concert.

TANGLEWOOD on RECORDS

Works Already Performed

MOZART: SINFONIA CONCERTANTE IN E FLAT, K. 297B. Warwick Symphony Orchestra, 1.98

BEETHOVEN: TRIO NO. 7 IN B FLAT, OP. 97 ("ARCHDUKE"). Rubinstein, Heifetz, 3.98
Istomin, Schneider, Casals, 3.98
Badura-Skoda, Fournier, Janigro, 3.98

TCHAIKOVSKY: SYMPHONY NO. 6 IN B MINOR ("PATHETIQUE"). Star Symphony Orchestra, 1.98

SYMPHONY NO. 5 IN E MINOR. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Koussevitsky, 3.98
New York Philharmonic, Mitropoulos, 3.98
BBC Orchestra, Sir Malcolm Sargent, 3.98

ROMEO AND JULIET." Boston Symphony, Munch, 3.98
Philadelphia Orchestra, Ormandy, 3.98

VIOLIN CONCERTO IN D. Heifetz, Philharmonia Orchestra, Susskind, 3.98
Michael Rabin, Philharmonia Orch., Alceo Galliera, 3.48
Francescatti, New York Philharmonic, Mitropoulos, 3.98
(with Mendelssohn Concerto)

MENDELSSOHN: FINGAL'S CAVE OVERTURE. Berlin Philharmonic, Lehmann, 2.98
(with "Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage")

STRAVINSKY: "SACRE DU PRINTEMPS." World Wide Symphony Orchestra, 1.98

SCHUBERT: QUARTET NO. 14 IN D MINOR ("DEATH AND THE MAIDEN"). Budapest String Quartet, 3.98
Works to Be Performed This Weekend

BERLIOZ: HAROLD IN ITALY. Heinz Kirchner, Berlin Philharmonic, Markevitch, 3.98
Primrose, Royal Philharmonic, Beecham, 3.98

SYMPHONIE FANTASTIQUE. Boston Symphony, Munch, 3.98
Berlin Philharmonic, Willem Van Otterloo, 3.98

L'ENFANCE DU CHRIST." Mary Davenport, Martial Singher, Leopold Simoneau, Donald Gramm, The Little Orchestra Society, and Choral Art Society, Thomas Scherman conducting

"ROMEO AND JULIET." New York Philharmonic, Mitropoulos, 3.98

HINDEMITH: "MATHIS DER MALER." Berlin Philharmonic, Hindemith, 3.98
Pittsburgh Symphony, Steinberg, 3.98

The MUSIC HOUSE of NORTHAMPTON
143 MAIN STREET DIAL JU 4-1210
Specialists in Music for Over Thirty Years

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

JUL 30 1957

11 French Students Visit Governor On City Tour

Eleven engineering students from the University of Grenoble, France, said here Monday that they are impressed by the "gentillesse" and "grandeur" of American industry.

That first Gallicism means they have found U.S. industrialists and workmen right friendly. The second implies they're sure that when they make bigger and better elephants, American plants will make them.

But the Frenchmen, who visited Remington Rand's Univac in New York City last week and The Courant Monday afternoon, had a criticism of American life as well.

Work Too Hard

"You work too hard," a good-natured member of the troupe scolded in broken English. "Why, some of your men do not even take the half an hour for lunch!"

In France lunch lasts two hours and is the main meal of the day, he exlained. Between noon and 2 p.m., all commerce and industry stop.

On the second leg of a jaunt that will take them to Tanglewood, Cornell University, Niagara Falls, Ohio steel mills and Washington D.C. in the next five weeks, the students were guests for the day of Mr. and Mrs. Hohn Tyler of Knobb Hill, Glastonbury.

They visited Governor Ribicoff and Secretary of State Mildred P. Allen Monday, then returned to the Tylers' home and an evening of American square-dancing with friends of 17-year-old Jane Elizabeth Tyler.

Tour arrangements for the French students are made by the U.S. Department of State, which pays one-fourth the cost of the trip. Remaining expenses are paid equally by the French government, a foundation established by leading French factories, and the students themselves.

Their Hartford itinerary was set up by the Service Bureau for Women's Organizations.

The Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, July 31, 1957

Isabel Bishop Paintings Shown At Tanglewood

Paintings by Isabel Bishop are being exhibited this week in the Glass Reception Room at Tanglewood. The exhibition has been arranged by the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield.

Internationally known for her figure paintings and oils, Miss Bishop is an accomplished draftsman and etcher. She is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and her works are on view in many of the nation's well known museums, including the Metropolitain Museum and the Whitney Museum in New York, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Springfield Museum.

In 1945, Miss Bishop was awarded a prize at the Corcoran Biennial Exhibition, and in 1943 she received an award from the American Academy of Arts and Letters. She won the First Altman Prize in 1955. Her paintings will be shown at Tanglewood through Aug. 4, and will also be exhibited at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield through the month of August.

The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 27, 1957

New Sign Directs Tanglewood Traffic Over Prospect Hill

STOCKBRIDGE—The state Department of Public Works has changed the directional signs here for Tanglewood traffic coming from the east on Route 102 and from the south on Route 7.

The traffic was previously directed west to Interlaken and north on Route 183. A sign which has been erected at the corner of Main and Pine streets now directs the traffic up over Prospect Hill and by Stockbridge Bowl to the festival grounds.

Tanglewood traffic entering Stockbridge from the east follows signs at the intersection of Routes 102 and 20 in East Lee. Signs outside the Lee interchange of the Massachusetts Turnpike also direct traffic into Stockbridge.

Most of the Turnpike traffic bound from the east to Tanglewood, however, follows signs on the Turnpike to the West Stockbridge interchange.

At the corner of Pine and Main streets here, another new sign has been erected to direct traffic to Heaton Hall. The Selectmen recently issued a temporary permit for this sign. A third sign on the same metal pole at the corner directs traffic to the Marian Fathers Seminary.

Berkshire Week in Review

The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 27, 1957

Around the County

IT WAS poor weather for ducks and farmers, but fine for summer visitors. Although the continuing drought caused water shortages in a number of Berkshire communities and closed the forests to blueberry pickers and hikers, the tourists kept coming in near-record numbers. Evidence was provided last weekend at Tanglewood, where attendance was up 50 per cent over 1956, and at such lodging places as Pittsfield's Wendell - Sherwood, which reported the busiest weekend in three years. The Berkshire Hills Conference said requests for reservations and information, which usually drop off sharply before mid-summer, are "still pouring in." . . . On the less cheerful

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 24 1957

Tanglewood Signs Are Changed

STOCKBRIDGE—The state Department of Public Works has changed the directional signs here for Tanglewood traffic coming from the east on Rt. 102 and from the south on Rt. 7.

The traffic was previously directed west to Interlaken and north on Rt. 183. A sign which has been erected at the corner of Main and Pine Streets now directs the traffic up over Prospect Hill and by Stockbridge Bowl to the festival grounds.

[192]

O GLOBO — 30-7-57

Trezentas Mil Almas Invadem Anualmente Uma Cidade Que Tem Apenas Quatro Ruas

Orquestras Sinfônicas, Companhias de Ópera, Conjuntos Corais, Conferencistas Enchem a Pequenina Lenox, em Julho e Agôsto, Para o "Festival Berkshire" — Diàriamente a Multidão se Renova, Para Ouvir Música

(De Eleazar de Carvalho — Especial, Para O GLOBO)

LENOX, Estado de Massachusetts (Julho) — A música, nos Estados Unidos, conseguiu estabelecer-se durante todo o ano. Se, no inverno, as temporadas de concertos, de música de câmara, de recitalistas, ópera e bailado são regularmente realizadas nas grandes e pequenas cidades, no verão essas temporadas se transportam para o ar livre, nas montanhas e nos vales de todo o país.

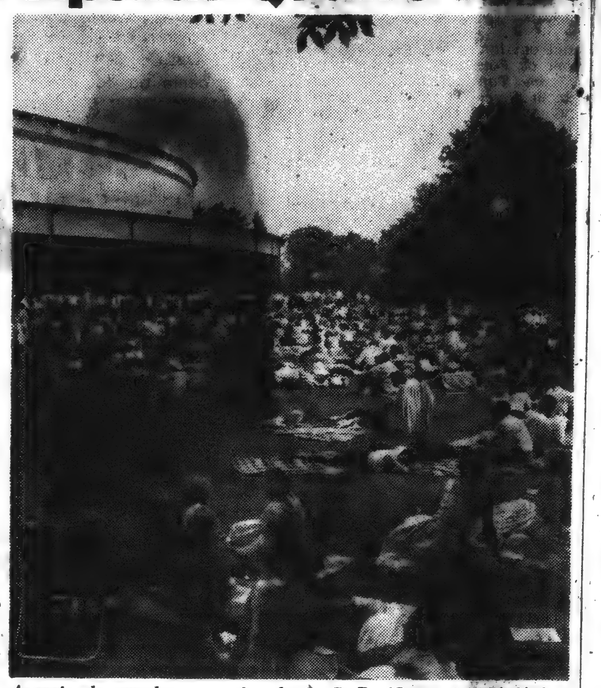
As mais importantes realizações musicais são chamadas de "Festivais" e destes o mais importante é, sem dúvida, o "Berkshire Festival", que a sociedade Orquestra Sinfônica de Boston organiza e realiza na região que toma o nome da cadeia de montanhas denominada "Berkshire".

Aqui na minúscula cidade de Lenox, no Estado de Massachusetts, onde uma população de 1 200 pessoas, apenas, vive permanentemente, está sendo realizado o "Berkshire Festival — 1957". A população de Lenox, cujas pessoas se conhecem como se fôssem uma única família, já está preparada para verificar o milagre que anualmente, pela 20.ª vez, acontece durante os meses de julho e agôsto: hospedar uma média de trinta mil visitantes, que invadem as suas ruas, permanentemente tranqüilas e desertas durante dez meses no ano, mas que enchem os seus quatro cantos de sons musicais. Esses sons já se tornaram indispensáveis e serviram para transformar êste local em um recanto de arte, cuja fama e importância são conhecidas em todo o mundo.

Lenox é, portanto, muito menor que a cidade de Guaratinguetá, em São Paulo, na qual se projeta edificar um local idêntico ao daqui, onde já estamos realizando um vigésimo festival. Não há em Lenox sequer um cinema. Há, apenas, quatro ruas. Entretanto, nelas se encontrou lugar para construir uma biblioteca, um museu, um correio, um hotel e várias escolas. Não há telégrafo. O serviço perfeito da "Western Union" para todos os lugares do mundo é feito pelo telefone.

Quando Serge Koussevitzky imaginou realizar concertos numa cidade dêste tamanho, situada a 250 quilômetros de distância de Nova York, 250 de Boston e 75 de Albany, para falar nas cidades mais próximas, chamaram-no de louco, de sonhador, idealista, visionário. Vencendo os obstáculos, — os mais difíceis — conseguiu realizar o seu sonho, e hoje os Estados Unidos devem à vontade férrea dêsse homem a existência de uma das realizações culturais das mais importantes, para onde convergem multidões de todos os países do mundo (trezentas mil pessoas, ao todo, no ano passado) para assistir a 48 concertos, durante seis semanas, e que aqui deixam uma média de quinhentos mil dólares, ou sejam, aproximadamente, 35 milhões de cruzeiros.

A cinco quilômetros da cidade de Lenox está o local batizado pelo nome de Tanglewood, onde a Orquestra Sinfônica de Boston, a Orquestra Sinfônica do Berkshire Music Center, um grupo de música de câmara, conferencistas, conjuntos corais, companhias de ópe-
ras etc., constituem
Berkshire — 1957", d



Aspecto de um dos concertos da O. S. B. (Orquestra Sinfônica de Boston) durante o "Berkshire Festival", vendo-se a "Music Shed", onde estão sentadas cêrca de dez mil pessoas. Ao ar livre, deitadas ou sentadas em volta do teatro, estão outras dez mil pessoas

SATURDAY REVIEW
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 17 1957

MUSIC TO MY EARS

Schuricht and Egk at Tanglewood

—LENOX, MASS.

TO start a tour of American festivals with a visit to Tanglewood is, unquestionably, to put first things first. Perhaps it is the wish of the ever-modest management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to pass without celebration the twentieth season of musicmaking in this choice locale, but that need not be binding on one who was present when the late Serge Koussevitzky subjected Eliel Saarinen's shed to its first pragmatic test. It was not by music, but with two blocks of wood which he picked up from the still unfinished floor.

What he heard when he clicked them together brought a satisfied nod. It was the first of perhaps millions of satisfied nods that patrons have since exchanged with friends (not neighbors, for all neighbors are friends within these hospitable gates). For one whose Tanglewood-going of recent years has been infrequent, it was soul-satisfying to spend an hour before the concert touring the grounds and noting how the human intrusion on the peaceful landscape has sunk roots and become a part of nature's own picture. Changes there have been, of course, but almost all of them have been improvements — easier access, better parking facilities, longer vistas.

Nobody ever had to be told the Stockbridge-Lenox-Lee area was beautiful, even when a sudden downpour meant ankle-deep mud in the parking lots pre-World War II. How beautiful it is can only be reckoned by the standards of its counterparts in Europe—fabled Salzburg, antique Amsterdam, edifying Edinburgh. Not one of them can provide the surpassing quiet of Tanglewood's green acres, acoustics to equal the ones built into the wedge-shaped shed (the funnel-effect makes the unamplified oboe audible a quarter of a mile away), or patrons with comparable decorum. Glyndebourne has its charms, of course, but what would John Christie think of listeners seated in his gardens in shorts and pull-over sweaters?

Of a recent evening it also had Carl Schuricht, the venerable conductor whose Polish stock has been soaked in so many national juices as to make him—at seventy-seven—that distinguished thing, a citizen of Europe. Celebrating his seventy-sixth birthday at his Swiss home in July 1956, Schuricht could have had little notion that his next birthday would find him what he had not been for all his previous musical life—a celebrity in America. Certain natural causes, including the death of numerous colleagues (mostly his junior), provided the unexpected opportunity to share the direction of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra on its memorable tour of the United States last winter. A round fifty-five years of professional experience equipped Schuricht with the skills not only to make a success of that venture, but also to earn the invitations he has been filling this summer (at Chicago's Ravinia, prior to Tanglewood).

As an admirer of Schuricht's attractive performances with the Vienna visitors, I made the trip to Tanglewood with the expectation of hearing the kind of good old-fashioned music-making only a good old-fashioned conductor can produce. I heard some, but not as much as I had hoped for. A member of the orchestra with whom I exchanged a few casual words answered, to a query as to his impressions of the visitor: "I don't know—we haven't played a concert with him yet." These were wise words, from a professional lexicon as pragmatic as Koussevitzky's clicking together of two pieces of wood. Namely, a performance is the product of the interaction of men and music—and who can tell, before it happens, how they will interact?

An oddly balanced program, beginning and ending with Brahms (the "Tragic" Overture and the First Symphony) had the contemporary Bavarian Werner Egk's "Three Peasant Pieces" as a somewhat gritty filling. As first announced, the Egk work was his "Orchestersonate" of 1948: the substitution of the earlier (1934) music provided a view of what he was before he became what he is. We don't have a sufficiently clear picture of Egk's accomplishment to say what he is, but it is certainly better than what he was.

Despite some allusions to the "Georgica Carmina" of Virgil (recalling that his countryman Orff has had more than a little success with the "Carmina" motif), Egk's work amounts to no more than a suite based on Bavarian folk tunes treated in parodistic style. It was played by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Otto Klemperer as long ago as November 1934. It may have sounded spicy in those days, but the off-key dissonances and rhythmic distortions are rather rudimentary techniques of musical caricature at this time. Schuricht's comprehension of its broadly humorous plan was unquestionable, but it did not contribute much to the distinction of his program.

His direction of the two works of Brahms struck me as only partially successful. It is a maxim of the prize ring that "Styles make fights." The gist of this is that two skillful performers whose methods are at variance will never come to close quarters and a decisive outcome. Something of the sort seemed to separate the orchestra, long accustomed to conductors of the French school (Koussevitzky, Munch, Monteux, etc.), and Schuricht, whose concepts are certainly Germanic. This is not to say that good will did not exist on both sides, or that the audience did not hear a suitable amount of fine orchestral performance. It did: but it did not (in this opinion) hear either the Boston Symphony or the Schuricht kind of Brahms.

The former is spry, lightfooted, luminous: the latter is weighty, slightly ponderous, and dark. In the "Tragic" Overture, the problem—in terms of time expanse—is relatively manageable, and it came off well. Schuricht's way of drawing a ground plan is comprehensive. He knows, infallibly, the points and joints on which the success of an interpretation depends, and how to prepare them. The longer expanse of the symphony, however, introduced other complications.

At times one had the feeling Schuricht's conception of the Brahms No. 1, played by the Vienna Philharmonic, might have been superbly expressive. Played by the Boston Symphony, it was solid but somewhat lumpy, unquestionably sincere but slightly tedious. What might have been eloquence in a sympathetic response of an individuated orchestra became sentimental in the tentative response of one which was trying very hard but wasn't quite at one with the man in charge. The effort on both sides was beyond complaint: not, however, the result.

—JOHN KOUSSER

In the weeks to come Mr. K[illegible] will report on further aspects of music in America as reflected in the activities at [illegible] Festival, Blossom Creek, Wisconsin; the North American premiere of Benjamin Britten's "The Turn of the Screw" at Stratford, Ontario, and other events.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,794
AUG 2 - 1957

Guest Editorial

Flanagan Plan— Welcome, Berkshire!

(Hartford Courant)

Daniel J. Flanagan, the Springfield machinist leading a one-man crusade to annex four Western Massachusetts counties to Connecticut, seems to feel his plan is falling on deaf ears.

Mr. Flanagan invited Governor Foster Furcolo of the Bay State and the commissioners of Hampden, Hampshire, Franklin and Berkshire counties to meet and discuss the idea with him. Their absence was notable. When he passed the suggestion along to Governor Ribicoff, he received a reply that Connecticut has no jurisdiction in the matter. And none of the 600,000 inhabitants of the communities marked for secession has yet been observed tossing a hat in the air.

We understand how Mr. Flanagan must feel. He is encountering the historic passivity which so often greets the pioneer. In fact, all Connecticut knows, this state once tried to annex Fisher's Island. But it is not only this rebuff that makes us sympathize with Mr. Flanagan's idea. We think it a plan of high imagination and daring scope. Possibly it is just a little too comprehensive. We should be willing to settle for one county, Berkshire. We should feel it presumptuous for example, to ask for Hampden, where Governor Furcolo makes his home in nearby Longmeadow.

But to join Berkshire County with Connecticut seems, in the popular phrase, a "natural." Contiguous to our own Litchfield County, its topography is hewn from the same mountainous grandeur, refreshed with the same invigorating upland streams. The people of both pursue similar agricultural and industrial livelihoods. Indeed, numerous residents of lower Berkshire County daily journey to work in Connecticut. They live in the same white houses of stalwart Colonial architecture. Their temper, like that of their Connecticut neighbors, is sober, eschewing such vices as legalized horse-betting condoned in the more worldly, eastern end of Massachusetts.

The cultural affinities would be great, too. By joining with Connecticut, Berkshire County would bring us well-bred Williams College, and we in turn would share high-minded Yale and Trinity 'Neath the Elms, entwining them all in ivy-clad amity. The celebrated Berkshire Music Festival, the Connecticut Opera, the Hartford and New Haven symphonies would become at least kissin' cousins.

And the ties between the Massachusetts and Connecticut counties are as ancient as they are broad. For during the days of the Revolutionary War, mounted couriers of The Courant bore throughout the neighboring Berkshires, weekly issues of America's oldest newspaper, linking us all in news and counsel during the birth of our nation.

But Mr. Flanagan's plan of annexation needs no such special, immodest pleading as this. Its merits are as intrinsic as they are lengthy. We should like to call attention to just one more thing. If one examines the contours on a map, of Connecticut with Berkshire County joined to it, the effect is singularly like a hand with upthrust thumb. "Thumbs up" it seems to say symbolically. "Thumbs up, for Mr. Flanagan's daring plan!"

A ... THE BOSTON SU...

...man Con...
Tanglewood

...th weekend of the 1957 ...Festival at Tanglewood, ...lass., will open with the ...od debut of the German ...Carl Schuricht, who ...ct the Boston Symphony ... in the first of three ... emphasizing the music ...ns on Friday evening, ...he concerts in the Music ...Saturday evening (Aug. ...nday afternoon (Aug. ...conducted by Charles ...usic director of the Bos...hony Orchestra, and the ...ill be Isaac Stern and ...erkin.

...churicht, who arrived in ...try on July 12, will come ...lewood from Chicago, ... has appeared in four ... with the Chicago Sym... Ravinia Park, to con... Boston Symphony Or... for the first time. His ... will include Brahms ...verture and First Sym... and "Georgica" by the ... composer Werner Egk. ...a" was written in 1934 ...ubtitled "Three peasant ...r Orchestra" since it is ... folk tunes of the com... native Bavaria.

...churicht, prior to his tour ...on with the Vienna Phil... through the United ...d Canada, was known in ...ntry principally by his ...ecordings. His first ap... in the United States was ... St. Louis Symphony in ...rlier this summer he con... the two opening concerts ...Vienna Festival, and the ...weeks of the Zurich June ...

Stern

...Stern will make his sec... ...earance of the season at ...ival on Saturday evening, ...at 8:30 when he will close ...ram with a performance ...s Violin Concerto. Charles ...will conduct this concert, ...the program with the Va... on a Theme by Haydn, ...ntinuing with "Medea's ...on and Dance of Venge... Samuel Barber. The bal... ...edea" from which this ... an excerpt was commis...

Berkshire Eagle, T...

...ST CONDUCTOR Ca...
...ymphony Orchestra A...

NEW YORK TIMES SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1957.

GERMA...
Carl Sch...
Tanglew...

(192)

O GLOBO — 30-7-57

Trezentas Mil Almas Invadem Anualmente Uma Cidade Que Tem Apenas Quatro Ruas

Orquestras Sinfônicas, Companhias de Ópera, Conjuntos Corais, Conferencistas Enchem a Pequenina Lenox, em Julho e Agôsto, Para o "Festival Berkshire" — Diàriamente a Multidão se Renova, Para Ouvir Música

(De Eleazar de Carvalho — Especial, Para O GLOBO)

LENOX, Estado de Massachusetts (Julho) — A música, nos Estados Unidos, conseguiu estabelecer-se durante todo o ano. No inverno, as temporadas de concertos, de música de câmara, de recitalistas, ópera e bailado são regularmente realizadas nas grandes e pequenas cidades, no verão essas temporadas se transportam para o ar livre, nas montanhas e nos vales de todo o país.

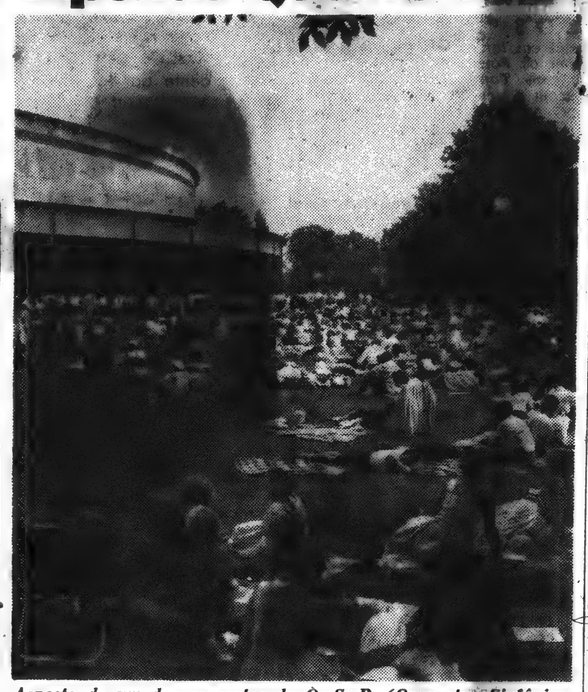
As mais importantes realizações musicais são chamadas de "Festivais" e destes o mais importante é, sem dúvida, o "Berkshire Festival", que a sociedade Orquestra Sinfônica de Boston organiza e realiza na região que toma o nome da cadeia de montanhas denominada "Berkshire".

Aqui na minúscula cidade de Lenox, no Estado de Massachusetts, onde uma população de 1 200 pessoas, apenas, vive permanentemente, está sendo realizado o "Berkshire Festival — 1957". A população de Lenox, cujas pessoas se conhecem como se fôssem uma única família, já está preparada para verificar o milagre que anualmente, pela 20.ª vez, acontece durante os meses de julho e agôsto: hospedar uma média de trinta mil visitantes, que invadem as suas ruas, permanentemente tranqüilas e desertas durante dez meses no ano, mas que enchem os seus quatro cantos de sons musicais. Êsses sons já se tornaram indispensáveis e serviram para transformar êste local em um recanto de arte, cuja fama e importância são conhecidas em todo o mundo.

Lenox é, portanto, muito menor que a cidade de Guaratinguetá, em São Paulo, na qual se projeta edificar um local idêntico ao daqui, onde já estamos realizando um vigésimo festival. Não há em Lenox sequer um cinema. Há, apenas, quatro ruas. Entretanto, nelas se encontrou lugar para construir uma biblioteca, um museu, um correio, um hotel e várias escolas. Não há telégrafo. O serviço perfeito da "Western Union" para todos os lugares do mundo é feito pelo telefone.

Quando Serge Koussevitzky imaginou realizar concertos numa cidade dêste tamanho, situada a 250 quilômetros de distância de Nova York, 250 de Boston e 75 de Albany, para falar nas cidades mais próximas, chamaram-no de louco, de sonhador, idealista, visionário. Vencendo os obstáculos, — os mais difíceis — conseguiu realizar o seu sonho, e hoje os Estados Unidos devem à vontade férrea dêsse homem a existência de uma das realizações culturais das mais importantes, para onde convergem multidões de todos os países do mundo (trezentas mil pessoas, ao todo, no ano passado) para assistir a 48 concertos, durante seis semanas, e que aqui deixam uma média de quinhentos mil dólares, ou sejam, aproximadamente, 35 milhões de cruzeiros.

A cinco quilômetros da cidade de Lenox está o local batizado pelo nome de Tanglewood, onde a Orquestra Sinfônica de Boston, a Orquestra Sinfônica do Berkshire Music Center, um grupo de música de câmara, conferencistas, conjuntos corais, companhia de óperas etc., constituem os elementos que tomam parte no "Festival Berkshire — 1957", do qual nos ocuparemos a seguir.



Aspecto de um dos concertos da O. S. B. (Orquestra Sinfônica de Boston) durante o "Berkshire Festival", vendo-se a "Music Shed", onde estão sentadas cêrca de dez mil pessoas. Ao ar livre, deitadas ou sentadas em volta do teatro, estão outras dez mil pessoas

SATURDAY REVIEW
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 17 1957

Schuricht and Egk at Tanglewood

...MASS.
...American
...t to Tangle-
...donably, to put first ...perhaps it is the wish o... modest management of the Bo... Symphony Orchestra to pass without celebration the twentieth season of musicmaking in this choice locale, but that need not be binding on one who was present when the late Serge Koussevitzky subjected Eliel
Saarinen's shed to its first pragmatic test. It was not by music, but with two blocks of wood which he picked up from the still unfinished floor.

What he heard when he clicked them together brought a satisfied nod. It was the first of perhaps millions of satisfied nods that patrons have since exchanged with friends (not neighbors, for all neighbors are friends within these hospitable gates). For one whose Tanglewood-going of recent years has been infrequent, it was soul-satisfying to spend an hour before the concert touring the grounds and noting how the human intrusion on the peaceful landscape has sunk roots and become a part of nature's own picture. Changes there have been, of course, but almost all of them have been improvements — easier access, better parking facilities, longer vistas.

Nobody ever had to be told the Stockbridge-Lenox-Lee area was beautiful, even when a sudden downpour meant ankle-deep mud in the parking lots pre-World War II. How beautiful it is can only be reckoned by the standards of its counterparts in Europe—fabled Salzburg, antique Amsterdam, edifying Edinburgh. Not one of them can provide the surpassing quiet of Tanglewood's green acres, acoustics to equal the ones built into the wedge-shaped shed (the funnel-effect makes the unamplified oboe audible a quarter of a mile away), or patrons with comparable decorum. Glyndebourne has its charms, of course, but what would John Christie think of listeners seated in his gardens in shorts and pull-over sweaters?

Of a recent evening it also had Carl Schuricht, the venerable conductor whose Polish stock has been soaked in so many national juices as to make him—at seventy-seven—that distinguished thing, a citizen of Europe. Celebrating his seventy-sixth birthday at his Swiss home in July 1956, Schuricht could have had little notion that his next birthday would find him what he had not been for all his previous musical life—a celebrity in America. Certain natural causes, including the death of numerous colleagues (mostly his junior), provided the unexpected opportunity to share the direction of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra on its memorable tour of the United States last winter. A round fifty-five years of professional experience equipped Schuricht with the skills not only to make a success of that venture, but also to earn the invitations he has been filling this summer (at Chicago's Ravinia, prior to Tanglewood).

As an admirer of Schuricht's attractive performances with the Vienna visitors, I made the trip to Tanglewood with the expectation of hearing the kind of good old-fashioned music-making only a good old-fashioned conductor can produce. I heard some, but not as much as I had hoped for. A member of the orchestra with whom I exchanged a few casual words answered, to a query as to his impressions of the visitor: "I don't know—we haven't played a concert with him yet." These were wise words, from a professional lexicon as pragmatic as Koussevitzky's clicking together of two pieces of wood. Namely, a performance is the product of the interaction of men and music—and who can tell, before it happens, how they will interact?

An oddly balanced program, beginning and ending with Brahms (the "Tragic" Overture and the First Symphony) had the contemporary Bavarian Werner Egk's "Three Peasant Pieces" as a somewhat gritty filling. As first announced, the Egk work was his "Orchestersonate" of 1948: the substitution of the earlier (1934) music provided a view of what he was before he became what he is. We don't have a sufficiently clear picture of Egk's accomplishment to say what he is, but it is certainly better than what he was.

Despite some allusions to the "Georgica Carmina" of Virgil (recalling that his countryman Orff has had more than a little success with the "Carmina" motif), Egk's work amounts to no more than a suite based on Bavarian folk tunes treated in parodistic style. It was played by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Otto Klemperer as long ago as November 1934. It may have sounded spicy in those days, but the off-key dissonances and rhythmic distortions are rather rudimentary techniques of musical caricature at this time. Schuricht's comprehension of its broadly humorous plan was unquestionable, but it did not contribute much to the distinction of his program.

His direction of the two works of Brahms struck me as only partially successful. It is a maxim of the prize ring that "Styles make fights." The gist of this is that two skillful performers whose methods are at variance will never come to close quarters and a decisive outcome. Something of the sort seemed to separate the orchestra, long accustomed to conductors of the French school (Koussevitzky, Munch, Monteux, etc.), and Schuricht, whose concepts are certainly Germanic. This is not to say that good will did not exist on both sides, or that the audience did not hear a suitable amount of fine orchestral performance. It did: but it did not (in this opinion) hear either the Boston Symphony or the Schuricht kind of Brahms.

The former is spry, lightfooted, luminous: the latter is weighty, slightly ponderous, and dark. In the "Tragic" Overture, the problem—in terms of time expanse—is relatively manageable, and it came off well. Schuricht's way of drawing a ground plan is comprehensive. He knows, infallibly, the points and joints on which the success of an interpretation depends, and how to prepare them. The longer expanse of the symphony, however, introduced other complications.

At times one had the feeling Schuricht's conception of the Brahms No. 1, played by the Vienna Philharmonic, might have been superbly expressive. Played by the Boston Symphony, it was solid but somewhat lumpy: unquestionably sincere but slightly tedious. What might have been eloquence in a sympathetic response of an understimated orchestra became sentimental in the tentative response of one which was trying very hard but wasn't quite at one with the man in charge. The effort on both sides was beyond complaint: not, however, the results.

—Irving Kolodin

In the weeks to come Mr. K... will report on further aspects ... in America as reflected ... cities ... Festival ... Creek, Wisconsin; the North American premiere of Benjamin Britten's "The Turn of the Screw" at Stratford, Ontario, and other events.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,794
AUG 2 - 1957

Guest Editorial

Flanagan Plan— Welcome. Berkshire!

(Hartford Courant)

Daniel J. Flanagan, the Springfield machinist leading a one-man crusade to annex four Western Massachusetts counties to Connecticut, seems to feel his plan is falling on deaf ears.

Mr. Flanagan invited Governor Foster Furcolo of the Bay State and the commissioners of Hampden, Hampshire, Franklin and Berkshire counties to meet and discuss the idea with him. Their absence was notable. When he passed the suggestion along to Governor Ribicoff, he received a reply that Connecticut has no jurisdiction in the matter. And none of the 600,000 inhabitants of the communities marked for secession has yet been observed tossing a hat in the air.

We understand how Mr. Flanagan must feel. He is encountering the historic passivity which so often greets the pioneer. In fact, all Connecticut knows, this state once tried to annex Fisher's Island. But it is not only this rebuff that makes us sympathize with Mr. Flanagan's idea. We think it a plan of high imagination and daring scope. Possibly it is just a little too comprehensive. We should be willing to settle for one county, Berkshire. We should feel it presumptuous for example, to ask for Hampden, where Governor Furcolo makes his home in nearby Longmeadow.

But to join Berkshire County with Connecticut seems, in the popular phrase, a "natural." Contiguous to our own Litchfield County, its topography is hewn from the same mountainous grandeur, refreshed with the same invigorating upland streams. The people of both pursue similar agricultural and industrial livelihoods. Indeed, numerous residents of lower Berkshire County daily journey to work in Connecticut. They live in the same white houses of stalwart Colonial architecture. Their temper, like that of their Connecticut neighbors, is sober, eschewing such vices as legalized horse-betting condoned in the more worldly, eastern end of Massachusetts.

The cultural affinities would be great, too. By joining with Connecticut, Berkshire County would bring us well-bred Williams College, and we in turn would share high-minded Yale and Trinity 'Neath the Elms, entwining them all in ivy-clad amity. The celebrated Berkshire Music Festival, the Connecticut Opera, the Hartford and New Haven symphonies would become at least kissin' cousins.

And the ties between the Massachusetts and Connecticut counties are as ancient as they are broad. For during the days of the Revolutionary War, mounted couriers of The Courant bore throughout the neighboring Berkshires, weekly issues of America's oldest newspaper, linking us all in news and counsel during the birth of our nation.

But Mr. Flanagan's plan of annexation needs no such special, immodest pleading as this. Its merits are as intrinsic as they are lengthy. We should like to call attention to just one more thing. If one examines the contours, on a map, of Connecticut with Berkshire County joined to it, the effect is singularly like a hand with upthrust thumb. "Thumbs up" it seems to say symbolically. "Thumbs up, for Mr. Flanagan's daring plan!"

...man Con... Tanglewood

...th weekend of the 1957 ...Festival at Tanglewood, ...lass., will open with the ...od debut of the German ... Carl Schuricht, who ...uct the Boston Symphony ... in the first of three ... emphasizing the music ...ns on Friday evening, ...he concerts in the Music ... Saturday evening (Aug. ...nday afternoon (Aug. 4) ... conducted by Charles ...usic director of the Bos...phony Orchestra, and the ...will be Isaac Stern and ...erkin.

...huricht, who arrived in ...try on July 12, will come ...lewood from Chicago, ... has appeared in four ... with the Chicago Sym... Ravinia Park, to con... Boston Symphony Or... for the first time. His ... will include Brahms ...verture and First Sym... and "Georgica" by the ... composer Werner Egk. ...a" was written in 1934 ...ubtitled "Three peasant ...r Orchestra" since it ... folk tunes of the com... native Bavaria.

...huricht, prior to his tour ...on with the Vienna Phil... through the United ...d Canada, was known in ...ntry principally by his ...ecordings. His first ap... in the United States was ... St. Louis Symphony in ...rlier this summer he con... the two opening concerts ...Vienna Festival, and the ...weeks of the Zurich June ...

...Stern

...Stern will make his sec... ...earance of the season at ...ival on Saturday evening, ...at 8:30 when he will close ...gram with a performance ...is Violin Concerto. Charles ...will conduct this concert, ...the program with the Va... ...on a Theme of Haydn, ...ntinuing with "Medea's ...on and Dance of Venge... ...Samuel Barber. The bal... ...edea" from which this ...an excerpt was commis...

...Berkshire Eagle, ...

...ST CONDUCTOR ...ymphony Orchestra ...

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1957.

TIGHT BINDING

THE BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 28, 1957

...man Conductor in Debut ...Tanglewood This Week

...of the 1957 ... Tanglewood ... with the German ... Symphony ... Music ... Charles ... the Bos... Stern and ... arrived in ... will come ... from Chicago, ... as appeared in four ... the Chicago Sym... Ravinia Park, to con... Boston Symphony Or... the first time. His ... Brahms ... and Five Sym... "Georgica" by the ... composer Werner Egk. ... written in 1934 ... "Three peas...ant ...estra" since it is ... ...ses of the com... Bavaria.

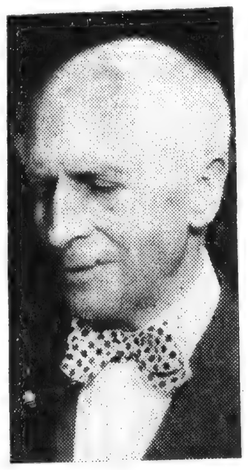
...prior to his tour ... with the Vienna Phil... through the United ... Canada, was known in ... principally by his ...dings. His first ap... the United States was ... St. Louis Symphony in ... this summer he con... two opening concerts ... Festival, and the ... ...es of the Zurich June

...Stern

...will make his sec... ...e of the season at ... on Saturday evening, ...:30 when he will close ... with a performance ...Violin Concerto. Charles ... will conduct this concert, ...the program with the Va... ...n a Theme of Haydn, ...ning with "Medea's ... and Dance of Venge... ...Samuel Barber. The bal... ...from which this ...e excerpt was commis-sioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it is dedicated, in 1946. The present scoring for full orchestra of "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" was completed in 1955.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5, at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. The symphony was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music and was first performed there in 1956 by the Juilliard Orchestra conducted by Jean Morel. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concert No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

A public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held on Saturday morning, Aug. 3, at 10 a.m. Admission is $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

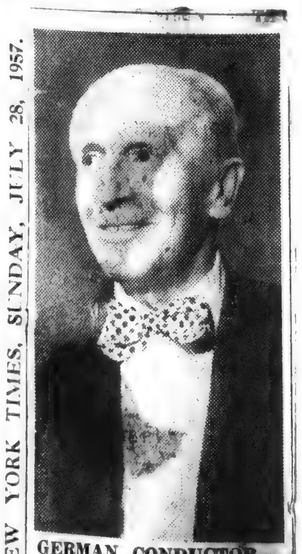


VIENNESE CONDUCTOR — Carl Schuricht will make his first Tanglewood appearance on Friday evening with the Boston Symphony.

...dshire Eagle, Tuesday, July 9, 1957—15

...CONDUCTOR Carl Schuricht will lead the Bos...phony Orchestra Aug. 2 and 10 at Tanglewood.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1957.



GERMAN CONDUCTOR— Carl Schuricht makes his Tanglewood debut Friday.

German Conductor to Debut at Tanglewood

Carl Schuricht, German conductor, will make his Tanglewood debut Friday evening conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts in the Music Shed with Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin as soloists.

Schuricht, who will also conduct the Tanglewood concert of Aug. 10, arrived in this country on July 12. He will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park.

His program on Friday at 8:30 o'clock will include the Brahms "Tragic Overture" and "First Symphony" and the work known as "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. "Georgica" was written in 1934 and is subtitled "Three peasant pieces for Orchestra." It is based on folk tunes of the composer's native Bavaria.

* * *

SCHURICHT, who toured this country last season with the Vienna Philharmonic, had been known here prior to that time principally by his many recordings. His first appearance in this country was in 1929 with the St. Louis Symphony.

Earlier this summer Schuricht conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the program Saturday at 8:30 p.m. which he will close with a performance of the Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct the concert, opening the program with the "Variations on a Theme of Haydn" and continuing with Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance."

* * *

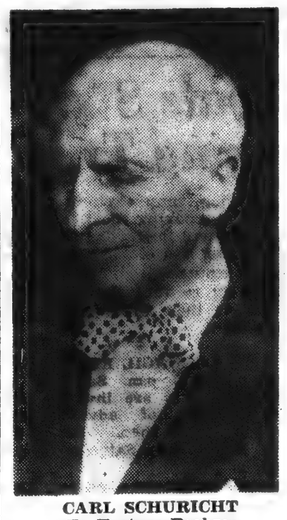
DR. MUNCH will conduct the Sunday 2:30 p.m. program with Rudolf Serkin as soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto number 2. The program will also include the Brahms "Academic Festival Overture" and the Walter Piston Symphony number 5.

Tomorrow's Chamber Music program will be devoted to a song recital by the French baritone, Gerard Souzay, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano.

A public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held in the Shed Saturday at 10 a.m. with proceeds benefiting the orchestra's pension fund.

Tickets for all events may be purchased at the Tanglewood box office and admission to the grounds tickets will be sold prior to each concert.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, TUESDAY, JULY 30, 1957



CARL SCHURICHT
To Feature Brahms

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 28 1957

EMINENT GERMAN CONDUCTOR DUE IN BERKSHIRE DEBUT

Carl Schuricht to Make Two Appearances at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 27— The eminent German conductor, Carl Schuricht, makes two appearances as guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival this summer on his first visit to Tanglewood. On Friday evening, August 2, he will direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of works by Brahms and Egk, and on Saturday evening, Aug. 2, he will conduct a program devoted to works by Blacher, Shubert and Beethoven. Mr. Schuricht conducted the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra on its triumphal tour of the United States during the winter of 1956-57.

Born in 1880

Born in Danzig in 1880, Carl Schuricht comes from a long line of musicians. His mother was the well known oratorio soloist, Amanda Wusinowski. Schuricht began his musical training at the age of six, as a student of violin and piano. He began composing at the age of 11 and wrote two short operas with original libretti when he was 15. He continued his musical studies in Wiesbaden, with the great pianist and conductor, Franz Mannstaedt.

At the age of 20 Schuricht became rehearsal accompanist at the Stadttheater in Mainz. Two years later he was award a composition prize and received further honors from Franz von Mendelssohn, nephew of the composer. In Berlin, Schuricht continued to study composition under the guidance of Engelbert Humperdinck and Max Reger, in Leipzig, a prolific composer, he wrote a large number of sonatas, chamber music, songs and orchestral works.

CARL SCHURICHT

Schuricht was subsequently drawn to conducting, and for some years traveled across Germany, directing performances of operas, operettas, and leading oratorio societies, chamber and symphony orchestras. In 1909 he became director of the Ruhlschen Oratorio Society in Frankfurt. At the age of 31 he was appointed principal director of music in Wiesbaden. He conducted the city's orchestra, and under his guidance Wiesbaden became internationally known as a center of music activity. Schuricht organized great music festivals there, featuring modern works by Strauss, Reger, Mahler and Schoenberg, and also stressing classical and romantic works, as, for example, the Brahmsfest of 1921.

Simultaneously, Schuricht pursued his career as guest conductor of orchestras throughout Europe. In 1914 he had scored successes in London and at La Scala in Milan; after the First War he led the Berlin Philharmonic, The Dresden Philharmonic and the Gewandhausorchester and Leipzig Symphony in Leipzig, the Vienna Philharmonic and Vienna Symphony. Other engagements took him to Greece, Hungary, the Scandinavian countries, Holland, Italy, England and France. From 1930 until 1939, he conducted the summer symphony concerts in Scheveningen, Holland, with the Residence Orchestra of The Hague.

In 1944 Schuricht fled from Germany to Switzerland, where he was welcomed by his colleague and friend, Ernest Ansermet. At the end of World War II he reopened the Salzburg Festival (1946), and resumed his schedule of appearances as guest conductor, scoring successes at festivals in Holland, Lucerne, Aix-en-Provence, Besancon, Montreux, Ascona.

Mr. Schuricht has made recordings with the Vienna Philharmonic, the Berlin Philharmonic, the London Philharmonic and the Paris Conservatoire Orchestras. Shortly before coming to the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, he conducted four concerts at the Ravinia Festival in Chicago.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 143,181

JUL 28 1957

Carl Schuricht To Make Debut At Tanglewood

Carl Schuricht, noted German conductor, will make his Berkshire Music Festival debut this Mr. Schuricht will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday night at Tanglewood.

The evening's program will be the first of three devoted principally to the music of Brahms. Mr. Schu icht will conduct the "Tragic" Overture and First Symphony, as well as Werner Egk's "Georgica," three works based on Bavarian folk music.

Charles Munch will conduct the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The Saturday event will offer Brahms' Haydn Variations and Violin Concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist.

On Sunday, the music will include the Brahms "Academic Festival" Overture and Second [illegible] Concerto, with Rudolf [illegible] as soloist. In addition, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 5 will be performed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30. The Sunday performance is at 2:30.

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,742

JUL 28 1957

C193]

Carl Shuricht to Conduct Symphony at Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 27 — The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on next Friday night.

The concerts in the Music Shed next Saturday night and the afternoon of Sunday, Aug. 4, will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time. His program will include Brahms "Tragic Overture" and "First Symphony," and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. "Georgica" was written in 1934 and is subtitled "Three peasant pieces for orchestra" since it is based on folk tunes of the composer's native Bavaria.

Mr. Schuricht, prior to his tour last season with the Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, was known in this country principally by his many recordings. His first appearance in the United States was with the St. Louis Symphony in 1929. Earlier this Summer Mr. Schuricht conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival, and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 26 1957

Fifth Weekend At Tanglewood

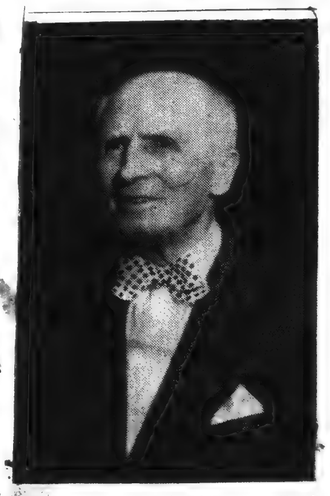
The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, Aug. 2. The concerts in the music shed on Saturday evening, Aug. 3, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 4, will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time. His program will include Brahms Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. "Georgica" was written in 1934 and is subtitled "Three Peasant Pieces for Orchestra" since it is based on folk tunes of the composer's native Bavaria. Mr. Schuricht, prior to his tour last season with the Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, was known in this country principally by his many recordings. His first appearance in the United States was with the St. Louis Symphony in 1929. Earlier this summer Mr. Schuricht conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival, and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, Aug. 3, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance' by Samuel Barber. The ballet "Medea" from which this work is an excerpt was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it is dedicated, in 1946.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Veekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 1 1957



GUEST CONDUCTOR . . . Carl Schuricht, noted conductor, who will direct the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood this Friday evening.

[1947]

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550

JUL 25 1957

BSO to Feature Brahms Works on Aug. 2 Weekend

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, Aug. 2. The concerts in the Music Shed Saturday evening, Aug. 3, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 4, will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

RUDOLPH SERKIN

ISAAC STERN

Mr. Schuricht's program will include Brahms Tragic Overture and First Symphony and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer, Werner Egk.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival Saturday evening, Aug. 3, at 8:30, when he will close the program with a performance of the Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber.

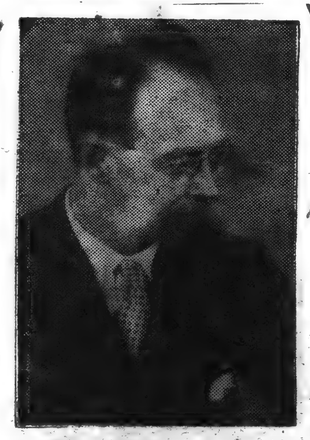
Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5 at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Converts July 31 at 8:30 will be devoted to a song recital by the French baritone, Gerard Souzay, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano. Mr. Souzay will present a program including early French airs and groups of songs by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms. After the intermission, Mr. Souzay will perform two groups of songs by Maurice Ravel in observance of the twentieth anniversary of the composer's death. Proceeds from this concert will go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship of the Berkshire Music Center.

A public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held on Saturday morning, Aug. 3, at 10 o'clock.

Town Crier & Herald
WESTPORT, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,200

AUG 1 1957



RUDOLF SERKIN, pianist, returns to Tanglewood this year to appear as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2, on Sunday afternoon, August 4

Thursday, August 1, 1957

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

RUDOLF SERKIN, pianist, returns to Tanglewood this year to appear as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2, on Sunday afternoon, August 4 at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Shed. Charles Munch directs the Boston Symphony.

The Berkshire Eagle, Friday, Aug. 2, 1957

Carl Schuricht Makes Tanglewood Debut Tonight

The fifth weekend of the 1957 season at Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood will open tonight in the Music Shed at 8:30. Carl Schuricht, the well-known German conductor, will make his first appearance at Tanglewood, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two works of Brahms, the Tragic Overture and the First Symphony, and a contemporary work, "Georgica," by Werner Egk. Mr. Schuricht, who arrived at Tanglewood on Monday, has recently conducted four concerts of the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park.

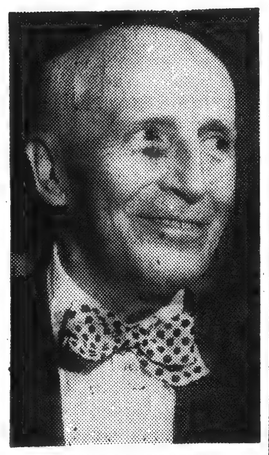
Munch Tomorrow

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the concerts on Saturday evening at 8:30, and Sunday afternoon, at 2:30. Isaac Stern will make his second appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival on Saturday, playing the Brahms Violin Concerto, and Rudolf Serkin will be soloist on Sunday afternoon in the Second Piano Concerto of Brahms. On Saturday evening, Mr. Munch also will present the Brahms Variations on a Theme of Haydn and "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by the American composer Samuel Barber. The Sunday program will include, in addition to the Brahms Piano Concerto, the same composer's Academic Festival Overture, and the Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston will come to Tanglewood from his home near Boston especially to attend this performance.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 o'clock will again be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund.

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 28, 1957

Schuricht of Vienna To Lead in Berkshires



CARL SCHURICHT

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX
Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Rudolph Serkin, pianist.
Academic Festival Overture; Brahms
Piano Concerto No. 2; Brahms
Symphony No. 5; Piston

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. World premiere of Mark Bucci's one-act opera, Tale for a Deaf Ear, presented by opera department of Berkshire Music Center. The program will also include other operatic excerpts.

TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Special concert of modern chamber music sponsored by the Fromm Foundation.
Program of works by Piston, Babbitt, Chavez, Palmer, Krenek and Stravinsky.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Zimbler Sinfonietta assisted by James Pappoutsakis, flutist; Menahem Pressler, pianist; Roger Voisin, trumpeter.
Symphony No. 1; Boyce
Triptych; Tansman
Concerto for flute and strings; Boccherini

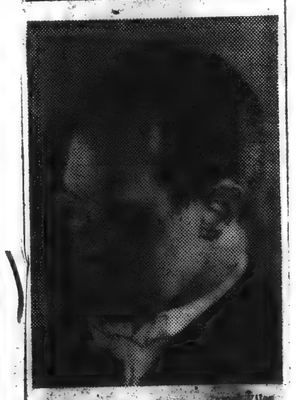
Carl Schuricht, celebrated conductor of the Vienna Philarmonic Orchestra will make his first appearance in The Shed, "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. next Friday night when he leads the Boston Symphony in works by Brahms and Egk. He also will conduct a concert there Saturday night, Aug. 10, featuring works by Blacher, Schubert and Beethoven.

The Berkshire Music Festival, Dr. Charles Munch, director, now is in mid-season with concert in The Shed week-ends through Aug. 11. Guest conductors this season include Pierre Monteux. "Tanglewood" is the summer home of the Boston Symphony and houses the Berkshire Music Center where hundreds of students in choral work, orchestral conducting and opera are in attendance.

"Tanglewood on Parade" is set for Thursday night, Aug. 8 with a gala concert in The Shed, performed by the Boston Symphony under Dr. Munch and the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler. In addition there will be demonstrations by students in the several departments of the Music Center. Pierre Monteux conducts his afternoon's concert in The Shed.

On Saturday night, Aug. 3, and Sunday afternoon Aug. 4 Dr. Munch will conduct. Soloist on Aug. 3 will be Violinist Isaac Stern. On Aug. 4 at the afternoon concert, soloist will be Rudolph Serkin, pianist.

The Fromm Music Foundation concerts and composers' forums are attracting considerable attention, as is opera presented in the Theater Concert Hall, Boris Goldovsky directing. Open rehearsals of The Boston Symphony take place Saturday mornings at 10 o'clock in The Shed with admission fees going to the Orchestra's pension fund.



PIANIST—Rudolf Serkin will play Brahms today at the Berkshire Festival.

N.Y. TIMES 8-4

Thursday, August 1, 1957

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Schuricht to Conduct At Tanglewood Friday

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, August 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening (August 3) and Sunday afternoon (August 4) will be conducted by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, August 3, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto.

Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts on Sunday afternoon.

A public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held on Saturday morning, August 3, at 10:00 o'clock.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408

AUG 1 1957

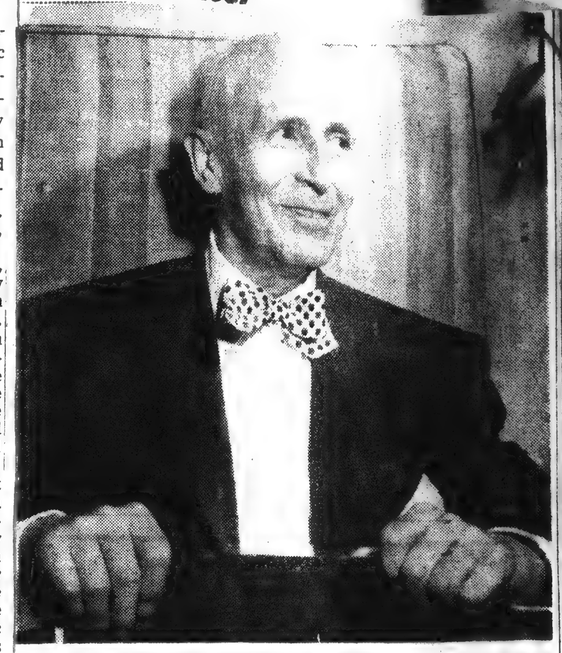
Carl Schuricht Is Guest Conductor At Tanglewood

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening August 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening (Aug. 3) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 4) will be conducted by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time. His program will include Brahms Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. "Georgica" was written in 1934 and is subtitled "Three peasant pieces for Orchestra" since it is based on folk tunes of the composer's native Bavaria. Mr. Schuricht, prior to his tour last season with the Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, was known in this country principally by his many recordings. His first appearance in the United States was with the St. Louis Symphony in 1929. Earlier this summer Mr. Schuricht conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival, and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

AUG 2 - 1957



Carl Schuricht will conduct the Boston Symphony in two concerts this summer at Tanglewood—~~the first tonight~~, and the second on Saturday night, Aug. 10.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,404

JUL 27 1957

TO CONDUCT

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms Friday evening. The concerts in the Music Shed next Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin, Schuricht, who arrived in this country July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time. His program will include Brahms' Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and "Georgica" by the composer Werner Egk. Schuricht, prior to his tour last season with the Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, was known in this country principally by his recordings. His first appearance in the United States was with the St. Louis Symphony in 1929. Earlier this summer he conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival, and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival

...England Newspaper Agency, Inc.
... 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 442,970
1957

...ill make his next Friday ...nductor of the ...rchestra at the ... Lenox, Mass. ...rts of the fifth ...night and Sun... ...t, will be con... ...hestra's musi... ...Munch. These ...ize the music ...will be pianist ... Isaac Stern, ...e his A... ...e Louis ... ...en that me ...United ...ater ...the Vienna ...season, Mr. ...s principally ...h many re... ...to Tangle... ...where he ...at Ravinia ...Symphony, ...ude Brahms' ...First Sym... ...ca" by the ...Werner Egk, ...osed in 1934. ...ee Peasant Pieces ...stra," and is based on ...n folk tunes. Programs of ...k will be as follows: ...at 3:30 p.m., Music Shed, ...Monteux conducting, Berlioz: ...from "Romeo and Juliet"; ...m: Overture to "News of the ...Mathis der Maler."

...day at 8:30, Theater—Concert ...erard Souzay, baritone, accom... ...by Ralph Berkowitz, piano. ...by Machaut, Lully, Rameau, ...de Lizt, Brahms, and Ravel's ...opular Greek Songs" and "Three ...Melodies."

...at 8:30, Music Shed. Charl... ...t conducting, Brahms: "Tragic ..., Werner Egk: "Georgica" ...Symphony No. 1, in C minor.

...y at 8:30, Music Shed. Charles ...nducting. Brahms: Variations ...me by Haydn; Samuel Barber: ...Meditation and Dance of ...; Brahms: Violin Concerto ...ist, soloist).

...Aug. 4 at 2:30, Music Shed, ...Munch conducting. Brahms: ...c Festival" Overture; Walter ...mphony No. 5; Brahms: Piano ...o. 2 in B-flat major (soloist: ...erkin).

...nday Journal
...VIDENCE, R. I.
...Independent
...Circ. 185,173
JUL 28 1957

...Schuricht, who con... ...the American tour of ...enna Philharmonic Or... ...last season, will make ...but as guest conductor ...e Berkshire Festival, ...wood, Friday night at ...t of the weekend con... ...in the Music Shed. He ...to Tanglewood from a ...a Park engagement with ...icago Symphony and is ...ded for a second ap... ...nce Aug. 10.

...Friday's concert he will ...ct the Boston Sym... ...Orchestra in the Ameri... ...premiere of Werner ..."Georgica," subtitled ...e peasant pieces for Or... ...." The program will ...include the "Tragic" ...ure and the First Sym... ...of Brahms whose ...are featured this week-

...rles Munch will conduct ...aturday night and Sun... ...afternoon concerts. Sat... ...'s bill will be Brahms' ... Variations and Violin ...erto, with Isaac Stern, ...k, and Barber's "Medea's ...tation and Dance of Ven... ...e." Sunday: Brahms' ...amic Festival Overture ...iano Concerto No. 2, with ...f Serkin, and Piston's ...Symphony.

...dnesday evening's cham... ...music recital will be given ...erard Souzay, baritone, ...Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, ...nting early French airs ...orks by Schubert, Liszt, ...s and Ravel.

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 442,970
JUL 28 1957

erkshire estival

Schuricht will make his ng debut next Friday ning as guest conductor of the ton Symphony Orchestra at the Tanglewood Festival in Lenox Mass.
ree opening concerts of the fifth ekend, Saturday night and Sun-afternoon, Aug. 4, will be con-ted by the Orchestra's music
tor, Charles Munch. These certs will emphasize the music
Brahms. Soloists will be pianist dolf Serkin and Isaac Stern,

Schuricht made his Ameri-debut with the St. Louis Symony in 1929. Between that time the time of the United States ered Canada with the Vienna
harmonic last season, Mr.
richt was known principally this country through many redings. He comes to Tangled from Chicago, where he s four concerts at Ravinia
k with the Chicago Symphony. programs will include Brahms' ic Overture and First Symny, and "Georgica" by the arian composer, Werner Egk.
"Georgica" was composed in 1934, is subtitled "Three Peasant Piece Orchestra," and is based on ian folk tunes. Programs of week will be as follows:

day at 1:30 p.m., Music Shed, Munch conducting Berlioz:
ture to "Romeo and Juliet";
ner: Overture to "News of the
" from "Die Meister."

day at 1:30, Theater—Concert
Ian Souzay, baritone, accomed by Ralph Berkowitz, piano.
ks by Duvernoy, Duparc, Bachaut, Lully, Rameau, ert, Liszt, Brahms, and Ravel's ral Greek Songs" and "Three Indian Lyrics."

day at 1:30, Music Shed. Carl richt conducting. Brahms: Tragic ture; Egk: "Georgica"; Brahms:
phony No. 1, in C minor.

day at 1:30, Music Shed. Charles ch conducting. Brahms: Variations a Theme of Haydn; Samuel Barber:
ea's Meditation and Dance of geance"; Brahms: Violin Concerto
D major. (Soloist).

day at 4, at 2:30, Music Shed.
Munch conducting. Brahms:
demic Festival" Overture; Walter ston: Symphony No. 5; Brahms: Piano certo No. 2 in B-flat major (soloist: Serkin).

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 185,173
JUL 28 1957

Schuricht, who con-
the American tour of Philharmonic Or-
last season, will make guest conductor
Berkshire Festival,
Friday night at
of the weekend con-
at the Music Shed. He Tanglewood from a
Park engagement with Symphony and is
for a second ap-
Aug. 10.

Munch's concert he will
the Boston Sym-
estra in the Ameri-
miere of Werner
"Georgica," subtitled
Peasant pieces for Or-
The program will
ude the "Tragic"
and the First Symof Brahms' whose featured this week-

Munch will conduct
Sunday night and Sun-noon concerts. Sat-night will be Brahms' Variations and Violin

erto, with Isaac Stern, and Barber's "Medea's
tation and Dance of Ven-Sunday: Brahms'
mic Festival Overture
Concerto No. 2, with Serkin, and Piston's
Symphony.

Tuesday evening's chammusic recital will be given
Gerard Souzay, baritone,
Ralph Berkowitz, pianist,
ing early French airs
ngs by Schubert, Liszt,
s and Ravel.

Carl Schuricht to Conduct Tanglewood Concert Friday

Eminent German Musican Makes Lenox Debut in Program of Works by Brahms and Egk; Stern And Serkin Soloists This Week

Lenox, July 27—The fifth week end of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, August 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening (August 3) and Sunday afternoon (August 4) will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time. His program will include Brahms Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. "Georgica" was written in 1934 and is subtitled "Three Peasant Pieces for Orchestra" since it is based on folk tunes of the composer's native Bavaria. Mr. Schuricht, prior to his tour last season with the Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, was known in this country principally by his many recordings. His first appearance in the United States was with the St. Louis Symphony in 1929. Earlier this summer Mr. Schuricht conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival, and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, August 3, at 8.30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber. The ballet "Medea" from which this work is an excerpt was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it is dedicated, in 1946. The present scoring for full orchestra of "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" was completed in 1955.

Rudolf Serkin

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon, August 4, at 2.30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. The symphony was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music and was first performed there in 1956 by the Juilliard Orchestra conducted by Jean Morel. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Concerts on July 31 at 8.30 will be devoted to a song recital by the French baritone, Gerard Souzay, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano. Mr. Souzay, who made his first Tanglewood appearance earlier this season in a performance of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present a program including early French airs, and groups of songs by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms. After the intermission, Mr. Souzay will perform two groups of songs by Maurice Ravel in observance of the twentieth anniversary of the composer's death. Proceeds from this concert will go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

A public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held on Saturday morning, August 3, at 10 o'clock. Admission is $1, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Programs for the week are as follows:

Wednesday, July 31, 8.30
Chamber Music
Gerard Souzay, Baritone
Ralph Berkowitz, piano
Machault: Rondeau
Anonymous (14th century): Dance dam jolie
Lully: Air of Cadmus
Rameau: Hymn to the sun (from "Les Indes Galantes")
Schubert: Der Schiffer; from "Rosamunde"; Der Doppelganger
Liszt: Uber allen Gipfeln ist Ruh; Freudvoll und Leidvoll; Es rauschen die Winde
Brahms: Sonntag; Dein Blaues Auge; O wehliche Wunde
Ravel: Cinq Melodies Populaire Grecques; Trois Melodies Hebraique

Friday, August 2, 8.30,
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Conductor: Carl Schuricht
Brahms: Tragic Overture
Egk: "Georgica"
Brahms: Symphony No. 1

Saturday, August 3, 8.30 p. m.,
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Conductor: Charles Munch
Brahms: Haydn Variations
Barber: Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance"
Brahms: Violin Concerto
(Soloist: Isaac Stern)

Sunday, August 4, 8.30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Conductor: Charles Munch
Brahms: Academic Festival Overture
Piston: Symphony No. 5
Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2
(Soloist: Rudolf Serkin)

Student Concerts

Tickets are available for all these concerts at the Tanglewood box office (Lenox 600), and general admission to the grounds is sold on the day of each performance.

Student concerts during the week will include on Monday evening, July 29 at 8.30, the second demonstration of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department and its program of training for stage directors and new materials for scenic design. Boris Goldovsky will act as master of ceremonies, introducing each of the opera scenes. On Tuesday evening at 8.30, the Tanglewood Choir will present a program of choral works in the Theater conducted by students and faculty of the school's Choral Department.

On Thursday evening, August 1, Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center, and music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the final portion of the student orchestra concert to be held in the Music Shed at 8.30.

A special concert by the musicians associated with the program of contemporary music study and performance at the school this season instituted by the Fromm Music Foundation will be presented on Saturday afternoon, August 3 at 2.30. On Sunday, a Chamber Music concert in the morning at 10, and Composer's Forum in the evening at 8.30 will complete the student concert schedule for the week.

All of these performances are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553
JUL 28 1957

GERMAN CONDUCTOR AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Carl Schuricht, eminent German conductor who directed the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra on its American tour last year, will make his first appearance at the Berkshire Music Festival on Friday evening. The 77-year-old conductor, who has conducted every major European orchestra during a long and distinguished career, is known to the majority of music lovers in this country through his recordings with such orchestras as the Vienna Philharmonic, the Berlin Philharmonic, the London Philharmonic, and the Paris Conservatoire Orchestras.

The music of Brahms is to be featured in the coming weekend's three concerts by the Boston musicians. Schuricht, in the first of two scheduled Tanglewood appearances this season, will conduct the composer's Tragic Overture and the First Symphony. The other work to be heard in Friday's concert is titled, "Georgica," and was written in 1934 by Werner Egk. The composition is based on folk tunes of the composer's native Bavaria.

Charles Munch will conduct the concerts on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. The Haydn Variations and the Violin Concerto are the two Brahms works scheduled for Saturday's program. Isaac Stern will be the soloist in the latter. Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" will round out this program.

On Sunday afternoon, Rudolph Serkin is to be the soloist in another predominantly Brahms program. The great pianist will play the Piano Concerto No. 2 and the other Brahms work will be the Academic Festival Overture. The Symphony No. 5, by Harvard's Walter Piston, will be sandwiched in between the two better known orchestral favorites.

This week's regular chamber music program on Wednesday evening will present baritone Gerard Souzay, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano. Composers from the 14th century to the late Maurice Ravel will be included. Two groups of Ravel songs will be performed in observance of the 20th anniversary of the composer's death. They are the Cinq Melodies Populaire Grecques and the Trois Melodies Hebraique.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
JUL 27 1957

Carl Schuricht To Conduct As Guest At Tanglewood

The fifth weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, Aug. 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Sat. evening Aug. 3 and Sunday afternoon Aug. 4 will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchetra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time. His program will include Brahms Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. "Georgica" was written in 1934 and is subtitled "Three peasant pieces for Orchestra" since it is based on folk tunes of the composer's native Bavaria.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Sat. evening, Aug. 3, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert on Aug. 5, at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Fesival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts on July 31 at 8:30 will be devoted to a song recital by the French baritone, Gerard Souzay, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano. Mr. Souzay will present a program including early French airs, and groups of songs by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms. After the intermission, Mr. Souzay will perform two groups of songs by Maurice Ravel in observance of the twentieth anniversary of the composer's death. Proceeds from this concert will go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

A Public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held on Sat., Aug. 3, at 10:00 a.m. Admission is $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Tickets are available for all concerts at the Tanglewood Box Office and general admission to the grounds at $2 is sold on the day of each performance.

Student concerts during the week will include on Mon. July 29 at 8:30, the second demonstration of the Berkshire Music Center. Opera Department and its program of training for stage directors and new materials for scenic design. Boris Goldovsky will act as master of ceremonies, introducing each of the opera scenes. On Tuesday at 8:30 the Tanglewood Choir will present a program of choral works in the Theatre conducted by students and faculty of the school's Choral Department.

On Thursday, Aug. 1, Charles Munch, will conduct the final portion of the student orchestra concert to be held in the Music Shed at 8:30.

A special concert by the musicians associated with the program of contemporary music study and performance at the school this season instituted by the Fromm Music Foundation will be presented on Sat. afternoon, Aug. 3. On Sunday, a Chamber Music concert in the morning at 10:00 and Composer's Forum in the evening at 8:30 will complete the student concert schedule for the week.

All of these performances are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

FAIRFIELD, CONN.
NEWS
Circ. W. 2,745
AUG 1 1957

RUDOLF SERKIN, pianist, r turns to Tanglewood this yea to appear as soloist with th
Boston Symphony Orchestra
a performance of Brahms' Pia no Concerto No. 2, on Sunda afternoon, August 4

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, NORTHAMPTON,

Fifth Weekend At Tanglewood

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, Aug. 2. The concerts in the music shed on Saturday evening, Aug. 3, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 4, will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time. His program will include Brahms Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. "Georgica" was written in 1934 and is subtitled "Three Peasant Pieces for Orchestra" since it is based on folk tunes of the composer's native Bavaria. Mr. Schuricht, prior to his tour last season with the Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, was known in this country principally by his many recordings. His first appearance in the United States was with the St. Louis Symphony in 1929. Earlier this summer Mr. Schuricht conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival, and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, Aug. 3, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance' by Samuel Barber. The ballet "Medea" from which this work is an excerpt was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it is dedicated, in 1946.

[1907]

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 27 1957

Schuricht to Conduct at Tanglewood

The fifth weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, Aug. 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening (Aug. 3) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 4) will be conducted by Charles Munch, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Herr Schuricht, who arrived in this country July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park. He will conduct the Boston Symphony for the first time. His program will include the Brahms "Tragic" Overture and First Symphony, and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. "Georgica" was written in 1934 and is subtitled "three peasant pieces for orchestra," since it is based on Bavarian folk tunes.

* * *

Herr Schuricht, prior to his tour last season with the Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, was known in this country principally by his many recordings. His first appearance in the United States was with the St. Louis Symphony in 1929. Earlier this summer he conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival, and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, Aug. 3, when he will close the program with a performance of the Brahms Violin Concerto. Dr. Munch will open with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn and continue with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber. The ballet "Medea," from which this work is an excerpt, was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it is dedicated, in 1946. The present scoring for full orchestra was completed in 1955.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 4, at 2:30, performing the Brahms "Academic Festival" Overture, and the Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. The symphony was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music and was first played there in 1956 by the Juilliard Orchestra conducted by Jean Morel. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

* * *

The fifth in the series of Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Concerts on July 31 will be devoted to a song recital by the French baritone, Gérard Souzay, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano. M. Souzay, who makes his first Tanglewood appearance on tonight's program in a performance of Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ" with the Boston Symphony, will present a program including early French airs, and groups of songs by Schubert, Liszt, and Brahms. M. Souzay will also offer two groups of songs by Maurice Ravel in observance of the twentieth anniversary of the composer's passing. Proceeds from this concert will go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

A public rehearsal by the Boston Symphony will be held Saturday morning, Aug. 3, at 10 o'clock.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 2 - 1957

Carl Schuricht Will Make Tanglewood Debut This Evening

The fifth weekend of the 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open tonight at 8.30 in the Music Shed.

Carl Schuricht, German conductor, will make his first appearance at Tanglewood, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two works of Brahms, the Tragic Overture and the First Symphony, and a contemporary work, "Georgica," Three Peasant Pieces for Orchestra, by Werner Egk. Mr. Schuricht, who arrived at Tanglewood on Monday, has recently conducted four concerts of the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the concerts tomorrow evening at 8:30, and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Isaac Stern will make his second appearance at this year's Berkshire Festival tomorrow, playing the Brahms Violin Concerto, and Rudolf Serkin will be soloist Sunday afternoon in the Second Piano Concerto of Brahms. Dr. Munch will also present tomorrow night the Brahms Variations on a Theme of Haydn and "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by the American composer, Samuel Barber. The Sunday program will include, in addition to the Brahms Piano Concerto, the same composer's Academic Festival Overture, and the Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston will come to Tanglewood from his home near Boston especially to attend this performance.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 o'clock will again be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund.

On Saturday afternoon at 2:30, Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will attend a concert by Fromm Fellowship Players of works by contemporary composers including Powell, Revueltas, Webern, Capland, Milhaud and Trimble. Friends also may attend the Sunday morning Chamber Music Concert at 10. The program, presented by students of the school, will include works by Brahms, Nielsén and Franck. On Sunday evening, Friends may attend the Composer's Forum at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall where works of student composers are performed by Fromm Fellowship Players.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

JUL 31 1957

Berkshire Festival Slates Program

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms Friday evening.

* * *

THE CONCERTS in the Music Shed on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht's program will include Brahms Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. Before his tour last season with the Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, Mr. Schuricht was known in this country principally by his many recordings.

Isaac Stern will close the Saturday night program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto.

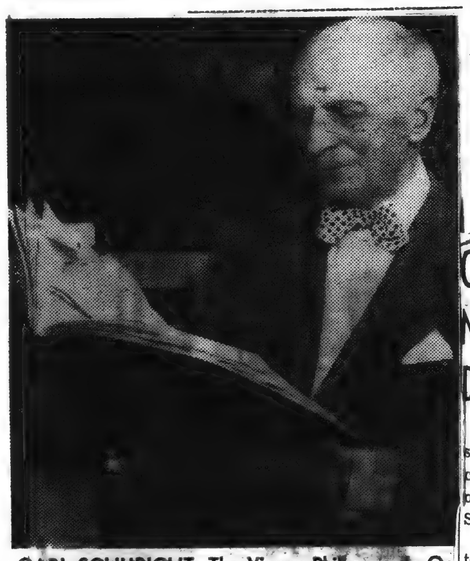
* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber.

Dr. Munch Sunday afternoon will conduct the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolph Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

JUL 27 1957



CARL SCHURICHT: The Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra conductor leads the Boston Symphony Friday at Tanglewood.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,794

JUL 30 1957

Fifth Weekend At Tanglewood

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, this Friday at 8:30 p.m. in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms. Programmed will be Brahms' Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and "Georgica" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk.

The concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed on Saturday evening, and on Sunday afternoon, will be conducted by Charles Munch. Soloists on these dates will be respectively Isaac Stern, violinist and Rudolph Serkin, pianist.

Isaac Stern, making his second appearance of the season at the Festival, will close the program on Saturday at 8:30 with a performance of Brahms' violin concerto. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra in the Variations and Theme of Haydn, by Brahms, and Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance."

The Sunday afternoon concert will feature the first half of the Brahms Academic Festival Overture and the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, with Rudolph Serkin, soloist, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston.

Improving S...

SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1957
NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE,

Tanglewood Novelty

A modern work will provide filling for an otherwise Brahmsian sandwich in each of the Boston Symphony's Tanglewood programs this coming week end. Carl Schuricht's choice for his Berkshire debut Friday night is a German work, Werner Egk's "Georgica," subtitled "Three Peasant Pieces for Orchestra" and based on Bavarian folk themes. It had its American premiere in the first of four Philharmonic-Symphony performances at Carnegie Hall under Werner Janssen on Nov. 14, 1934, but has not been heard in New York since.

Charles Munch has chosen American works of a later vintage for Saturday and next Sunday. Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" and Walter Piston's Fifth Symphony had their world premieres in New York in 1956. The former was introduced by the Philharmonic Feb. 2 and the latter by the Juilliard Orchestra Feb. 24.

* * *

BOSTON HERALD, FRIDAY, AUG. 2, 1957

German Conductor Tonight, Tanglewood

The eminent German conductor, Carl Schuricht, makes two appearances as guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival this summer on his first visit to Tanglewood. Tonight he will direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of works by Brahms and Egk, and on tomorrow evening, he will conduct a program devoted to works by Blacher, Schubert and Beethoven. Mr. Schuricht conducted the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra on its triumphal tour of the United States during the winter of 1956-57.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 101,254

JUL 28 1957

Brahms Friday At Tanglewood

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, Aug. 2.

The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 4, will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 442,970

JUL 28 1957

CARL SCHURICHT, the conductor, will make his first appearance at Tanglewood on Friday evening when he conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

RUDOLF SERKIN, pianist, returns to Tanglewood this year to appear as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2, on Sunday afternoon, August 4 at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Shed. Charles Munch directs the Boston Symphony.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

AUG 2 - 1957

German Conductor Tonight, Tanglewood

The eminent German conductor, Carl Schuricht, makes two appearances as guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival this summer on his first visit to Tanglewood. Tonight he will direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of works by Brahms and Egk, and on tomorrow evening, he will conduct a program devoted to works by Blacher, Schubert and Beethoven. Mr. Schuricht conducted the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra on its triumphal tour of the United States during the winter of 1956-57.

Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 533,311

JUL 28 1957

At Tanglewood

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Shuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts

The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon will be conducted by Charles Munch, with Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin as soloists.

LAKEVILLE JO...

saac Ste...
Perform ...

UEST CONDUCTOR ...
Schuricht, noted conductor ...
will direct the Boston Symp... t Tanglewood this Friday ...
ing.

THE VILLA... will now ...
with a new ...

Prime Rib of Beef, Au ...
Roast Vermont Turkey, ...
Baked Virginia Ham ...

erkshire Courier
. BARRINGTON, Mass.
ily Independent
Circ. 2,443

UG 1 1957

rt Schuricht ...
Conduct Symp...

s Podium at Tang...
Friday Night

g Debut With Boston ...
German Will Direct ... hms and Bavarian ...
rner Egk.—Isaac St...
olf Serkin Soloists.

fifth week-end of th...
ire Festival at Tan...
nox will open with the ...
debut of the German ...
arl Schuricht, who will ...
oston Symphony Orche...
t of three concerts em...
e music of Brahms on ...
. The concerts in the ...
an Saturday evening an...
fternoon, will be conduc...
Munch, music director ...
Symphony Orchestra, ...
oists will be Isaac Ster...
Serkin.

Schuricht, who arrived ... on July 12, will con...
wood from Chicago, wh...
ared in four concert...
ago Symphony at ...
o conduct the Bosto...
Orchestra for the fir...
ogram will include ...
Overture and First ...
and "Georgica" by the ...
mposed Werner Egk. ... as written in 1934 and ...
Three peasant pieces ...
," since it is based o... r the composer's ...

hricht, prior to h...
with the Vienna ...
n the United ...
was known in th... y by his many ...
first appearance ...
was with the S... n 1929. Earli...
Schuricht condu...
concerts of the ...
the last two ...
he Festival ...

YORK, N. Y.
LY NEWS
2,455 - S. 3,652,

28 1957

ood Deb... nductor Carl ...
e his first ap...
ewood Friday ...
e Boston Symp...
Brahms con...
nd Rudolf Se... at Saturday ...
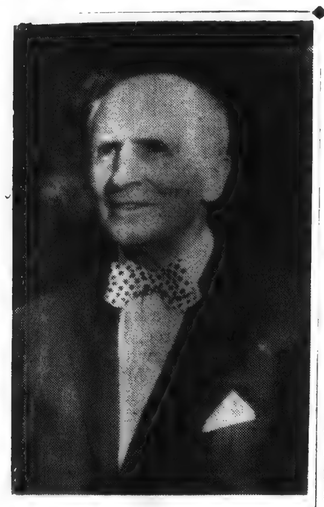
day afternoon ...
by Charles Mu...

TIGHT BINDING

Isaac Stern, Rudolf Serkin To Perform At Weekend Concerts



GUEST CONDUCTOR . . . Carl Schuricht, noted conductor, who will direct the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood this Friday evening.

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, August 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening (August 3) and Sunday afternoon (August 4) will be by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time. His program will include Brahms Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and Georgica by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. Georgica was written in 1934 and is subtitled "Three peasant pieces for Orchestra" since it is based on folk tunes of the composer's native Bavaria. Mr. Schuricht, prior to his tour last season with Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, was known in this country principally by his many recordings. Earlier this summer Mr. Schuricht conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival, and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, August 3, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Much will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber. The ballet Medea from which this work is an excerpt was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it is dedicated, in 1946. The present scoring for full orchestra of Merea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance was completed in 1955.

Dr. Much will also conduct on Sunday afternoon, August 5, at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

THE VILLAGE RESTAURANT

will now be open all weekend with a new Chef and a new Menu

Prime Rib of Beef, Au Jus	$2.25
Roast Vermont Turkey, Sage Dressing	2.00
Baked Virginia Ham, Pineapple Sa...	1.75

OPPORTUNITY to know the Pride and Joy of owning a GERMAN SHEPHERD DOG

Female Shepherd Puppies (A.K.C. Reg.)
Whelped May 21, 1957
Excellent Bloodlines — Good Temperament
Black & Tan Black & Silver

Elizabeth Louden
"Hilltop" Ghent, Columbia Co., New York

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

JUL 26 1957

Stern, Serkin Solo At Music Festival

Brahms Will Be Featured At Tanglewood Aug. 2-4

The fifth week end of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, August 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening, August 3, and Sunday afternoon, August 4 will be conducted by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber.

Dr Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon, August 5, at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

Berkshire Courier
GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443

AUG 1 1957

Carl Schuricht Will Conduct Symphony

To Podium at Tanglewood Friday Night

...g Debut With Boston Orches... German Will Direct Music By ... and Bavarian Composer, ...er Egk.—Isaac Stern and ...dolf Serkin Soloists.

...fifth week-end of the 1957 ...re Festival at Tanglewood ...ox will open with the Tangle... debut of the German conduc... ...rl Schuricht, who will conduct ...ston Symphony Orchestra in ... of three concerts emphasiz... ...e music of Brahms on Friday ... The concerts in the Music ...on Saturday evening and Sun... ...afternoon will be conducted by ... Munch, music director of the ... Symphony Orchestra, and ...oists will be Isaac Stern and ...Serkin.

...Schuricht, who arrived in this ...y on July 12, will come to ...wood from Chicago—where he ...eared in four concerts with ...ago Symphony at Ravinia ...to conduct the Boston Sym... Orchestra for the first time. ...rogram will include Brahms ... Overture and First Sym... and "Georgica" by the Bavar... ...poser Werner Egk. "Geor... ...as written in 1934 and is sub... "Three peasant pieces for or... ...since it is based on folk ...of the composer's native Ba...

...Schuricht, prior to his tour ...season with the Vienna Philhar... ...through the United States ...Canada, was known in this coun... principally by his many record... His first appearance in the ...ed States was with the St. Louis ...ony in 1929. Earlier this ... Mr. Schuricht conducted the ...o opening concerts of the Vienna ...al and the last two weeks of ...rich June Festival.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
...0. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302

JUL 28 1957

...nglewood Debut

...erman conductor, Carl Schu... ...ill make his first appear... ...Tanglewood Friday eve... ...ducting the Boston Symphony ... in a Brahms concert. ...ern and Rudolf Serkin ...soloist at Saturday eve... ...Sunday afternoon con... ...by Charles Munch.

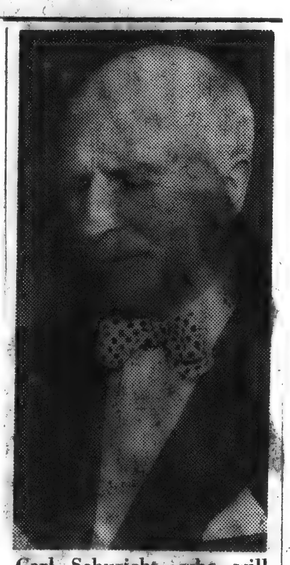
New York Herald Tribune 8-4

Isaac Stern, Rudolf Serkin Will Perform Tonight

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber. The ballet "Media", from which this work is an excerpt, was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it was dedicated, in 1946. The present scoring for full orchestra of "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" was completed in 1955.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. The symphony was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music and was first performed there in 1956 by the Juilliard Orchestra conducted by Jean Morel. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-the-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

A public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held on Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock. A small admission is for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.



Carl Schuricht, who will conduct at Tanglewood Saturday night.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 27,390 - S. 27,892

JUL 28 1957

Programs Set At Tanglewood

For the fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Carl Schuricht, German conductor, will make his Tanglewood debut. He will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday night. The concerts in the Music Shed Saturday and Sunday will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist, and Rudolf Serkin, pianist.

Student concerts during the week are open to friends of the Berkshire Music center. Tomorrow night, the second demonstration of the Music Center's Opera department, with Boris Goldovsky as master of ceremonies, will be presented. Tuesday night, the Tanglewood Choir will be heard in a program of choral works and Thursday night Mr. Munch will conduct the final portion of the student orchestra concert in the Music Shed.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

JUL 30 1957

NEXT TO LAST FESTIVAL WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Gerard Souzay, Baritone, Ralph Berkowitz, Pianist, Appear Tomorrow

Lenox, July 29—The next to the last week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood opens Wednesday with a concert in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8.30 p. m. by Gerard Souzay, baritone, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist. On Friday night Carl Schuricht, noted German conductor, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the works of Brahms and Egk. Saturday night and Sunday afternoon Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra, the Saturday concert featuring the Brahms violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and Sunday's the Brahms' piano concerto No. 2, Rudolf Serkin, soloist.

Programs through Aug. 4 are as follows:

Wednesday, July 31, 8.30 p. m., Theater Chamber Music: Gerard Souzay, baritone and Ralph Berkowits, pianist.
Douce dame jolie ..... Machault (14th Century)
Tambourin .. Anonymous (17th Century)
Air of Cadmus ..... Lully
Hymn to the Sun (from "Les Indes Galantes") ..... Rameau
Der Schiffer, Romanze from "Rosamunde"; Der Musensohn; Der Doppelganger ..... Schubert
Uber allen Gipfeln ist Ruh; Freudvoll und Leidvoll; Es rauschen die Winde ..... Liszt
Sonntag; Dein blaues Auge; O liebliche Wange ..... Brahms
Cinq Melodies Populaire Grecques; Trois Melodies Hebraique ..... Ravel
Friday, Aug. 2, 8.30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor: Carl Schuricht
Tragic Overture ..... Brahms
"Georgica" ..... Egk
Symphony No. 1 ..... Brahms
Saturday, Aug. 3, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor: Charles Munch
Haydn Variations ..... Brahms
"Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" ..... Barber
Violin Concerto ..... Brahms
(Soloist: Isaac Stern)
Sunday, Aug. 4, 8.30 p. m. Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor: Charles Munch
Academic Festival Overture .... Brahms
Symphony No. 5 ..... Piston
Piano Concerto No. 2 ..... Brahms
(Soloist: Rudolf Serkin)

NEW LEBANON ECHO
N.Y.
Tuesday, July 30, 1957

Brahms' Music This Week At Tanglewood

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of

CARL SCHURICHT

Brahms on Friday evening, August 2nd, The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening (August 3rd) and Sunday afternoon (August 4) will be conducted by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, Aug. 3rd, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon, August 5, at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Concerts on July 31 at 8:30 will be de-

TIGHT BINDING

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL, Section II, August 1, 1957

Isaac Stern, Rudolf Serkin To Perform At Weekend Concerts

GUEST CONDUCTOR . . . Carl Schuricht, noted conductor, who will direct the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood this Friday evening.

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, August 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening (August 3) and Sunday afternoon (August 4) will be l y Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time. His program will include Brahms Tragic Overture and First Symphony, and Georgica by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. Georgica was written in 1934 and is subtitled "Three peasant pieces for Orchestra" since it is based on folk tunes of the composer's native Bavaria. Mr. Schuricht, prior to his tour last season with Vienna Philharmonic through the United States and Canada, was known in this country principally by his many recordings. Earlier this summer Mr. Schuricht conducted the two opening concerts of the Vienna Festival, and the last two weeks of the Zurich June Festival.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, August 3, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Much will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber. The ballet Medea from which this work is an excerpt was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it is dedicated, in 1946. The present scoring for full orchestra of Merea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance was completed in 1955.

Dr. Much will also conduct on Sunday afternoon, August 5, at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

THE VILLAGE RESTAURANT
will now be open all weekend with a new Chef and a new Menu

Prime Rib of Beef, Au Jus	$2.25
Roast Vermont Turkey, Sage Dressing	2.00
Baked Virginia Ham, Pineapple Sauce	1.75

OPPORTUNITY to know the Pride and Joy of owning a GERMAN SHEPHERD DOG
Female Shepherd Puppies (A.K.C. Reg.)
Whelped May 21, 1957
Excellent Bloodlines — Good Temperament
Black & Tan Black & Silver
Elizabeth Louden
"Hilltop" Ghent, Columbia Co., New York

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159
JUL 26 1957

Stern, Serkin Solo At Music Festival

Brahms Will Be Featured At Tanglewood Aug. 2-4

The fifth week end of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, August 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening, August 3, and Sunday afternoon, August 4 will be conducted by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber.

Dr Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon, August 5, at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 2,443
AUG 1 1957

Carl Schuricht Will Conduct Symphony

On Podium at Tanglewood Friday Night

Debut With Boston Orchestra German Will Direct Music By [illegible] and Bavarian Composer, [illegible] Egk.—Isaac Stern and [illegible] Serkin Soloists.

[illegible]fth week-end of the 1957 [illegible] Festival at Tanglewood [illegible] will open with the Tangle[illegible]ebut of the German conduc[illegible] Schuricht, who will conduct [illegible]n Symphony Orchestra in [illegible] of three concerts emphasiz[illegible] music of Brahms on Friday [illegible] The concerts in the Music [illegible] Saturday evening and Sun[illegible]rnoon, will be conducted by [illegible] Munch, music director of the [illegible] Symphony Orchestra, and [illegible]ose will be Isaac Stern and [illegible]erkin.

[illegible]huricht, who arrived in this [illegible] on July 12, will come to [illegible] from Chicago, where he [illegible]ared in four concerts with [illegible] Symphony at Ravinia [illegible] conduct the Boston Sym[illegible]hestra for the first time. [illegible]ram will include Brahms [illegible] Overture and First Sym[illegible]ed "Georgica" by the Bavar[illegible]ed Werner Egk. "Geor[illegible] written in 1934 and is sub[illegible]d peasant pieces for or[illegible] since it is based on folk [illegible] the composer's native Ba[illegible]

[illegible]huricht, prior to his tour [illegible] with the Vienna Philhar[illegible]ough the United States [illegible], was known in this coun[illegible]ily by his many record[illegible] first appearance in the [illegible]ings was with the St. Louis [illegible]ny in 1929. Earlier this [illegible]r. Schuricht conducted the [illegible] concerts of the Vienna [illegible] and the last two weeks of [illegible] June Festival.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber. The ballet "Media", from which this work is an excerpt, was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it was dedicated, in 1946. The present scoring for full orchestra of "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" was completed in 1955.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. The symphony was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music and was first performed there in 1956 by the Juilliard Orchestra conducted by Jean Morel. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-the-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

A public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held on Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock. A small admission is for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

New York Herald Tribune 8-4

Carl Schuricht, who will conduct at Tanglewood Saturday night.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366
JUL 30 1957

NEXT TO LAST FESTIVAL WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Gerard Souzay, Baritone, Ralph Berkowitz, Pianist, Appear Tomorrow

Lenox, July 29—The next to the last week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood opens Wednesday with a concert in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30 p. m. by Gerard Souzay, baritone, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist. On Friday night Carl Schuricht, noted German conductor, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the works of Brahms and Egk. Saturday night and Sunday afternoon Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra, the Saturday concert featuring the Brahms violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and Sunday's the Brahms' piano concerto No. 2, Rudolf Serkin, soloist.

Programs through Aug. 4 are as follows:

Wednesday, July 31, 8:30 p. m., Theater Chamber Music: Gerard Souzay, baritone and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist.
Douce dame jolie ..... Machault (14th Century)
Tambourin ..... Anonymous (17th Century)
Air of Cadmus ..... Lully
Hymne to the Sun (from "Les Indes Galantes") ..... Rameau
Der Schiffer, Romanze from "Rosamunde" ..... Schubert
Der Musensohn; Der Doppelganger ..... Schubert
Uber allen Gipfeln ist Ruh; Freudvoll und Leidvoll; Es rauschen die Winde ..... Liszt
Sonntag; Dein blaues Auge; O liebliche Wange ..... Brahms
Cinq Melodies Populaire Grecques; Trois Melodies Hebraique ..... Ravel
Friday, Aug. 2, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor: Carl Schuricht
Tragic Overture ..... Brahms
"Georgica" ..... Egk
Symphony No. 1 ..... Brahms
Saturday, Aug. 3, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor: Charles Munch
Haydn Variations ..... Brahms
"Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" ..... Barber
Violin Concerto ..... Brahms
(Soloist: Isaac Stern)
Sunday, Aug. 4, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor: Charles Munch
Academic Festival Overture ..... Brahms
Symphony No. 5 ..... Piston
Piano Concerto No. 2 ..... Brahms
(Soloist: Rudolf Serkin)

NEW LEBANON ECHO
N.Y.
Tuesday, July 30, 1957

Brahms' Music This Week At Tanglewood

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, August 2nd. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening (August 3rd) and Sunday afternoon (August 4) will be conducted by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

CARL SCHURICHT

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, August 3rd, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon, August 5, at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Concerts on July 31 at 8:30 will be de-

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159
AUG 2 1957

Brahms will be featured at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. in all three weekend performances. Friday's concert includes the Tragic Overture and the Symphony No. 1; Saturday, the Haydn Variations and the violin concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist; Sunday, the Academic Festival Overture and the [illegible] Concerto [illegible] with Rudolf Serkin. Carl Schuricht will conduct on Friday night; Charles Munch on Saturday and Sunday. Concerts will be given in the Music Shed and are at 8:30 p.m. except on Sunday, when curtain time is 2:30 p.m.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 27,390 - S. 27,892
JUL 28 1957

Programs Set At Tanglewood

For the fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Carl Schuricht, German conductor, will make his Tanglewood debut. He will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday night. The concerts in the Music Shed Saturday and Sunday will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist, and Rudolf Serkin, pianist.

Student concerts during the week are open to friends of the Berkshire Music center. Tomorrow night, the second demonstration of the Music Center's opera department, with Boris Goldovsky as master of ceremonies, will be presented. Tuesday night, the Tanglewood Choir will be heard in a program of choral works and Thursday night Mr. Munch will conduct the final portion of the student orchestra concert in the Music Shed.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
[illegible] 2,077,455 - S. 3,652,302
JUL 28 1957

[illegible]lewood Debut

[illegible] conductor, Carl Schu[illegible] will make his first appear[illegible] Tanglewood Friday eve[illegible] the Boston Symphony [illegible] is a Brahms concert. [illegible] and Rudolf Serkin [illegible] soloist at Saturday eve[illegible]Sunday afternoon con[illegible]ed by Charles Munch

TIGHT BINDING

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE OFFERS A VARIED PROGRAM

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, on Thursday, August 8 from 6 to 11 p.m. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

At 8:15, in the big shed, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D Minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from Our Town, and excerpts from The Tender Land, his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens Carnival of the Animals with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, The Swan, will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to The Barber of Seville, Tchaikovsky's Marche Slav and a selection of tunes from My Fair Lady by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Mr. Fiedler comes to Tanglewood directly from a performance in Miami and will leave immediately after the concert for San Francisco where he will conduct between August 12 and September 4. Mr. Fiedler's busy schedule for this summer has included nine weeks of regular Boston Pops concerts in Boston in May and June, two weeks of free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, an appearance with the Milwaukee (Wisconsin) Orchestra, and a visit to San Francisco in July to conduct concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Summer Pops series.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address at 6 p.m., visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:15 p.m.

Grace Notes

NORFOLK MUSIC SCHOOL
By Peggy Munoz

On July 24 the Norfolk Music School completed its 1957 series of professional concerts with a stunning chamber music program featuring the Berkshire String Quartet and Warren Stannard, oboist, a member of the Norfolk faculty. The program consisted of Beethoven's Quartet in E Minor, Opus 59, No. 2, the Mozart Quartet in F (K. 370) for oboe, violin, viola and cello, and the Quartet in F by Ravel.

The members of the Berkshire Quartet (Urico Rossi, Albert Lazan, David Dawson, and Fritz Magg) performed as usual with the intelligent, clean-cut musicianship that has made their regular Sunday afternoon concerts at Music Mountain so famous throughout the Berkshire region. If, on this particular occasion, their reading of the Beethoven seemed a bit mechanical, it was also very nearly flawless and always in excellent taste.

Ravel's Quartet in F received a much more inspired performance. Where the Beethoven had seemed excessively cerebral in execution, the Ravel was warm and alive, and yet the players revealed with amazing precision every nicety of those intricate rhythms and dynamics which characterize the work. Obviously, every member of this finely balanced ensemble is an accomplished virtuoso in his own right.

But, in respect to virtuosity, the day triumphantly belonged to oboist Warren Stannard. The Mozart piece is a kind of technical tour de force, a demanding etude for oboe with string accompaninment. Mr. Stannard romped through its absolutely vicious maze of difficulties with exceptional brilliance and what appeared to be a complete lack of effort. The Adagio again displayed that marvelous tonal resonance and almost unbelievable sense of phrasing that so impressed us during the Bach program the week before. Once more a hearty "bravo."

PEOPLE ARE TALKING ABOUT

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

JUL 26 1957

Stern, Serkin Solo At Music Festival

Brahms Will Be Featured At Tanglewood Aug. 2-4

The fifth week end of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday evening, August 2. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening, August 3, and Sunday afternoon, August 4 will be conducted by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber.

Dr Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon, August 5, at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

Berkshire Courier
BARRINGTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 2,443

AUG 1 1957

Carl Schuricht Will Conduct Symphony

To Podium at Tanglewood Friday Night

Debut With Boston Orchestra German Will Direct Music By and Bavarian Composer, Egk.—Isaac Stern and Serkin Soloists.

...ith week-end of the 1957 ...e Festival at Tanglewood ... will open with the Tangle... debut of the German conduc... Schuricht, who will conduct ...n Symphony Orchestra in ... of three concerts emphasiz... music of Brahms on Friday ... The concerts in the Music ... Saturday evening and Sun... afternoon will be conducted by ... Munch, music director of the ... Symphony Orchestra, and ... ists will be Isaac Stern and ... Serkin.

...schricht, who arrived in this ... on July 12, will come to ... from Chicago, where he ...ared in four concerts with ...go Symphony at Ravinia ... conduct the Boston Sym... Orchestra for the first time. ...ram will include Brahms ... Overture and First Sym... and "Georgica" by the Bavar... composed Werner Egk. "Geor... was written in 1934 and is sub... rural peasant pieces for or... since it is based on folk ... of the composer's native Ba...

...schricht, prior to his tour ... last with the Vienna Philhar... through the United States ... was known in this coun... mainly by his many record... His first appearance in the ... States was with the St. Louis ... in 1929. Earlier this ... Mr. Schuricht conducted the ... concerts of the Vienna ... and the last two weeks of ... June Festival.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
...2,892,455 - S. 3,652,302

JUL 28 1957

...glewood Debut

...conductor Carl Schu... make his first appear... Tanglewood Friday eve... the Boston Symphony ... in a Brahms concert. ... and Rudolf Serkin ... at Saturday eve... Sunday afternoon con... by Charles Munch.

New York Herald Tribune 8-4

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert, opening the program with the Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and continuing with "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber. The ballet "Media", from which this work is an excerpt, was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced by Martha Graham, to whom it was dedicated, in 1946. The present scoring for full orchestra of "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" was completed in 1955.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. The symphony was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music and was first performed there in 1956 by the Juilliard Orchestra conducted by Jean Morel. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-the-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

A public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held on Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock. A small admission is for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Carl Schuricht, who will conduct at Tanglewood Saturday night.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 2 1957

Brahms will be featured at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. in all three weekend performances. Friday's concert includes the Tragic Overture and the Symphony No. 1; Saturday, the Haydn Variations and the violin concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist; Sunday, the Academic Festival Overture and the Piano Concerto No. 2, with Rudolf Serkin. Carl Schuricht will conduct on Friday night; Charles Munch on Saturday and Sunday. Concerts will be given in the Music Shed and ard at 8:30 p.m. except on Sunday, when curtain time is 2:30 p.m.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 27,390 - S. 27,892

JUL 28 1957

Programs Set At Tanglewood

For the fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass, Carl Schuricht, German conductor, will make his Tanglewood debut. He will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of Brahms on Friday night. The concerts in the Music Shed Saturday and Sunday will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist, and Rudolf Serkin, pianist. ... Student concerts during the week are open to friends of the Berkshire Music center. Tomorrow night, the second demonstration of the Music Center's opera department, with Boris Goldovsky as master of ceremonies, will be presented. Tuesday night, the Tanglewood Choir will be heard in a program of choral works and Thursday night, Mr. Munch will conduct the final portion of the student orchestra concert in the Music Shed.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

JUL 30 1957

NEXT TO LAST FESTIVAL WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Gerard Souzay, Baritone, Ralph Berkowitz, Pianist, Appear Tomorrow

Lenox, July 29—The next to the last week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood opens Wednesday with a concert in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30 p. m. by Gerard Souzay, baritone, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist. On Friday night Carl Schuricht, noted German conductor, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the works of Brahms and Egk. Saturday night and Sunday afternoon Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra, the Saturday concert featuring the Brahms violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and Sunday's the Brahms' piano concerto No. 2, Rudolf Serkin, soloist.

Programs through Aug. 4 are as follows:

Wednesday, July 31, 8:30 p. m., Theater Chamber Music: Gerard Souzay, baritone and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist.
Douce dame jolie ..... Machault (14th Century)
Tambourin ... Anonymous (17th Century)
Air of Cadmus ..... Lully
Hymn to the Sun (from "Les Indes Galantes") ..... Rameau
Der Schiffer; Romanze from "Rosamunde"; Der Musensohn; Der Doppelganger ..... Schubert
Uber allen Gipfeln ist Ruh; Freudvoll und Leidvoll; Im Rauschen die Winde ..... Liszt
Sonntag; Dein blaues Auge; O liebliche Wange ..... Brahms
Cinq Melodies Populaires Grecques; Trois Poesies Hebraique ..... Ravel
Friday, Aug. 2, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor: Carl Schuricht
Tragic Overture ..... Brahms
"Georgica" ..... Egk
Symphony No. 1 ..... Brahms
Saturday, Aug. 3, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor: Charles Munch
Haydn Variations ..... Brahms
"Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" ..... Barber
Violin Concerto ..... Brahms
(Soloist: Isaac Stern)
Sunday, Aug. 4, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor: Charles Munch
Academic Festival Overture ..... Brahms
Symphony No. 5 ..... Piston
Piano Concerto No. 2 ..... Brahms
(Soloist: Rudolf Serkin)

NEW LEBANON ECHO
N.Y.
Tuesday, July 30, 1957

Brahms' Music This Week At Tanglewood

The fifth weekend of the 1957 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open with the Tanglewood debut of the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts emphasizing the music of

CARL SCHURICHT

Brahms on Friday evening, August 2nd. The concerts in the Music Shed on Saturday evening (August 3rd) and Sunday afternoon (August 4) will be conducted by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists will be Isaac Stern and Rudolf Serkin.

Carl Schuricht, who arrived in this country on July 12, will come to Tanglewood from Chicago, where he has appeared in four concerts with the Chicago Symphony at Ravinia Park, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time.

Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season at the Festival on Saturday evening, August 3rd, at 8:30 when he will close the program with a performance of Brahms Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct this concert.

Dr. Munch will conduct the concert on Sunday afternoon, August 5, at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, closing the next-to-last week of Berkshire Festival concerts.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Concerts on July 31 at 8:30 will be de-

TIGHT BINDING

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 3 - 1957

TONIGHT'S SOLOIST, Isaac Stern, left, rehearses with Dr. Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Mr. Stern will be heard in Brahms' Violin Concerto. He will leave for New York tomorrow.

Big Crowd at BSO Rehearsal Points to Record Weekend

Close to 4,000 Turn Out at Morning Event—Isaac Stern Soloist Tonight, Serkin Tomorrow—Munch Back on Podium

TANGLEWOOD—This morning's public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra drew close to 4,000 persons to the Music Shed, indicating that tonight and tomorrow afternoon's attendance at the BSO concerts, with two soloists, may set a new high for the 1957 series of concerts at the Berkshire Festival.

Last night 6,195 persons attended the concert in which Carl Schuricht made his Tanglewood debut conducting the Boston Symphony.

Rehearsing this morning with Dr. Charles Munch and the BSO was Rudolf Serkin, who will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2 at tomorrow afternoon's concert.

Isaac Stern, who will make his second appearance of the season at the festival tonight, performing Brahms Violin Concerto with the BSO, Dr. Munch conducting, rehearsed with the orchestra yesterday afternoon.

Tonight's Program

Tonight's concert will open with the "Variations on a Theme of Haydn," and continue with "Medea's Mediation and Dance of Vengeance," by Samuel Barber. The ballet, "Medea," from which this work is an excerpt, was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced in 1946 by Martha Graham, to whom it is dedicated.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert tomorrow afternoon, beginning at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will close the program as soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2.

Munch Entertains

Following last night's concert, Dr. Munch entertained in the chamber music hall members of the Berkshire Nights Committee, headed by Mrs. Edward R. Cumpston Jr. of Pittsfield, who conducted a drive last spring to encourage more Berkshire residents to attend Friday night concerts at Tanglewood. In appreciation of their work, Dr. Munch presented to the committee members an RCA recording of Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony."

After tomorrow afternoon's concert, Dr. Munch and members of the orchestra will be entertained at a garden party by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge at her home, the Residence.

RUDOLF SERKIN who will be the soloist at tomorrow afternoon's concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, discusses the program with Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the BSO. Mr. Serkin will close the afternoon program with Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2.

MUSICAL LEADER SEPTEMBER 1957

New York

Editor and Critic: SHIRLEY CECILLE CASH, 42 Cloverfield Road, So. Valley Stream, N. Y. Tel: LOcust 1-8192
Other Critics: Harry L. Fuchs, Sherman Gottesman, Walter F. Loeb

Berkshire Festival

Brahms was the featured composer during the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Aug. 2, 3, and 4, with some contrast offered by Werner Egk, Samuel Barber and Walter Piston. At the Friday night concert, Carl Schuricht made his first Tanglewood appearance. His program included Egk's "Georgica," and Brahms' "Tragic Overture" and First Symphony. The Egk work sounded oversentimental and superficial, and only highlighted the beauty of Brahms. Mr. Schuricht conducted with steady, sober hand, and impressed us with his soundness of interpretation. Charles Munch wielded the baton at the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts. At the Aug. 3 concert, Isaac Stern made his second appearance of the season at the Festival and gave a moving performance of Brahms' Violin Concerto. Mr. Stern's playing did not seem to be affected by the rainy weather or the open-air conditions—his technique was true, his projection perfectly beautiful even to the softest whisper in the softer sections. It was an excellent performance by both soloist and orchestra. The program also included fine readings of Brahms' Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," which was appropriately punctuated by lightning. The weekend came to an exciting close when Rudolf Serkin gave a remarkably beautiful and intense rendition of the Brahms Second Piano Concerto. This was preceded by the same composer's Academic Festival Overture, and the Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston came to Tanglewood from his home near Boston especially to attend this performance. He may well have listened with pride, for this is a work well worth adding to the contemporary repertory. Dr. Munch was in top form at both concerts.

Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund

Over half of the students at the Music Center this summer received grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which was established in 1947 by the Radio Corporation of America and is maintained by contributions received from Friends of the Berkshire Music Center and from former students who benefited from the fund in previous years.

Boston Notes: Gail W. Rector, Assistant Manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, left the Orchestra at the close of the Tanglewood season on Aug. 11 to take up his duties as Executive Director of the University Musical Society of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Mr. Rector is taking over the administrative duties of Charles A. Sink who retires from active service after many years on Sept. 1.

Retiring from the Boston Symphony are two of its valued members, Gaston Dufresne, double bass, and Marcel Lafosse, trumpet, who also left Aug. 11. Mr. Lafosse has been in the orchestra since 1926, and Mr. Dufresne, since 1927.

Four new members will join the orchestra in October to fill these two vacancies and two others left by the deaths of Leon Marjollet, cellist, and Ludwig Juht, double bass, during the past season. The new orchestra members are Leslie R. Martin, double bass; Ortiz M. Walton, double bass; Winifred Winograd, cellist; and Andre M. Come, trumpet.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 193,863 - S. 178,068
AUG 5 1957

Rudolf Serkin's Performance Highlight At Berkshire Festiv

Pianist, Boston Orchestra Play Piston Fifth; Isaac Stern On Brahms Program

By JULIAN SEAMAN

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5 — A weekend of Brahms and some moderns ended rather moistly yesterday afternoon in The Shed at Tanglewood, where the Boston Symphony Orchestra is concluding its annual Berkshire Music Festival. Intermittent rain, which began the night before, had no appreciable effect upon the size of a crowd, counted officially at more than 8,000.

The regular conductor, Charles Munch, who succeeded the weekend guest, Carl Schuricht, on Saturday night, had chosen to perform Walter Piston's Fifth Symphony, the Brahms' Academic Festival Overture and the Second Piano Concerto (Opus 83, B-flat), with Rudolf Serkin as soloist. Mr. Munch has an affinity for some phases of the modern Veni, including Mr. Piston, into whose symphony he poured a veritable flood of driving devotion.

Major Performance By Serkin

One need not say that Mr. Piston has achieved the ultimate masterpiece in this work; one might, however, voice an appreciation of his craft. Some of it, to me, at least is needlessly tedious and of a dryness supreme. Jean Morel gave this a first performance by the Juilliard Orchestra Feb. 24, 1956.

Mr. Serkin's exposition of the Brahms Concerto easily was the most rapturous interval in this concert. He is not above the restraints of an ascetic temperament, imposed upon what might become an excessively romantic medium, yet manages to convey the classicism as well as the earthiness of Brahms, a performance of major importance.

Mr. Munch was the guiding hand on Saturday night, too. Again, the decor was Brahmsian, with one departure. This was a stunning and tremendous score—medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber (Opus 23A).

Stern Plays Violin Concerto

This is revision of an earlier and longer orchestral suite derived from a ballet co

sioned by the Ditson Fu
Columbia University. M
Graham and her compos formed it first there in and the Philadelphia Orch played the Suite in 1947.
Barber contrived the pr
revision in 1955.

It is stark, barbaric c a riot of pagan emotio
Mr. Munch, disdaining c tinements of the concer conducted it that way. W and shouts helped the pr
applause.

Isaac Stern was soloist in the Brahms Violin Concerto, after an opening Haydn Variations Overture. Mr. Munch and Brahms are not in sheer accord, although Mr. Stern, foresaking the soft discretion of his playing lately, became again the broad, full virtuoso.

It was a big performance, technically unblemished, totally entrancing.

NEW YORK

Music: E

Egk's 'Three Pea Pieces' on Progr

By EDWARD DOWN
Special to The New York Time

LENOX, Mass., Aug.
Boston Symphony,
half a chance, is always to listen to for the gorgeousness of its orch tone. It had more than chance tonight under the perienced baton of Schuricht, who conducted first of three week-end certs devoted chiefly to music of Johannes Brahms.

The novelty of tonight's p gram, if novelty it can called, was "Georgica, Th Peasant Pieces for Orchestra
by the Bavarian compos Werner Egk. It served as showpiece for the orche
Herr Egk, who was b
the first year of th
and is still compo
used traditional pea
of his native countrys inspiration.

No one will cry sacrile
the stamping Laendler, sentimental love son
earth humor of Bavarian ant lore are served wit
phisticated orchestral
But the flavoring of Egk's Bavarian Georgica perfumed, more than a trite and surprisingly old ioned. It is somewhat combination of Strauss'
enkavalier" waltzes,
"La Valse" and the lull
Stravinsky's "Firebird."

NEW YORK

arl Schuri stonians a

Francis D. Perkins

OX, Mass., Aug. 3.—Ca
icht, conducting the Bos
mphony Orchestra for th ime, won cheers from ce of 6,195 in the Music at Tanglewood last night close of the concert which the Berkshire Music Fes
semi-final week end.
program, like the tw
Charles Munch will dire and tomorrow afte onsisted of two works by and one by a contem composer. Last night's work was Werner Egk's
." Brahms was rep-
by the "Tragic" Over-
he First Symphony.

dity Is Praised

richt, who is seventy-old, made a notable h his only New York last November with hilharmonic. In his ebut last night, his revealed a memation of musical
lit and persuasion, elicit an orchestandard of per-ere was remark-
ality, proportion and tive and thorough clardetail. Inner parts became tionally apparent but not h receiving undue promivarious instrumental col-ad a vividness and lu-ity which recalled the tra's playing in Serge evitzky's days.
was usually economical
estures, but the perform-implied the orchestra's understanding of his intative ideas. The perform-of the Overture disclosed nificance of its title in al and classic sense
rits the score itself.
symphony, there were
than the customary of pace, and this left or differences of opinion.
somewhat unorthodox, his of tempo did not hinder ntinuity of the music expressive revelation. A mpo in the Andante re-not in lengthiness, but in tive eloquence.

Tunes Are Frank

Egk's "Georgica," which its title from Virgil's and its themes from ines of the composer's
Bavaria, had its only York production by the monic in 1934. The tunes lected with unabashed ss despite occasional ic pungency not inherent
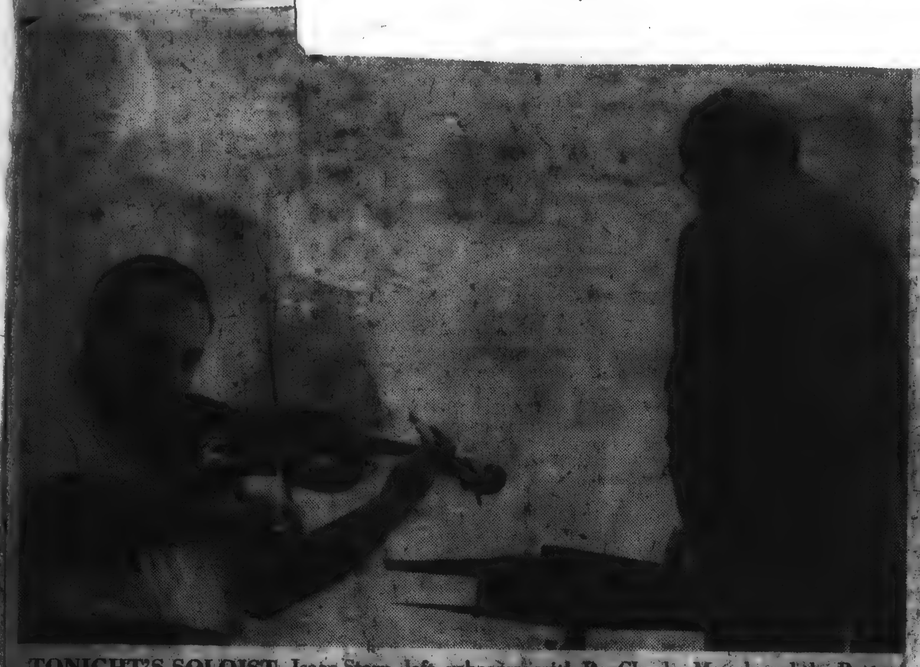
. But the result, al-

TIGHT BINDING

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 3 - 1957



TONIGHT'S SOLOIST, Isaac Stern, left, rehearses with Dr. Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Mr. Stern will be heard in Brahms' Violin Concerto. He will leave for New York tomorrow.

Big Crowd at BSO Rehearsal Points to Record Weekend

Close to 4,000 Turn Out at Morning Event—Isaac Stern Soloist Tonight, Serkin Tomorrow—Munch Back on Podium

TANGLEWOOD—This morning's public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra drew close to 4,000 persons to the Music Shed, indicating that tonight and tomorrow afternoon's attendance at the BSO concerts, with two soloists, may set a new high for the 1957 series of concerts at the Berkshire Festival.

Last night 6,195 persons attended the concert in which Carl Schuricht made his Tanglewood debut conducting the Boston Symphony.

Rehearsing this morning with Dr. Charles Munch and the BSO was Rudolf Serkin, who will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2 at tomorrow afternoon's concert.

Isaac Stern, who will make his second appearance of the season at the festival tonight, performing Brahms Violin Concerto with the BSO, Dr. Munch conducting, rehearsed with the orchestra yesterday afternoon.

Tonight's Program

Tonight's concert will open with the "Variations on a Theme of Haydn," and continue with "Medea's Mediation and Dance of Vengeance," by Samuel Barber. The ballet, "Medea," from which this work is an excerpt, was commissioned by the Alice M. Ditson Fund of Columbia University and was first danced in 1946 by Martha Graham, to whom it is dedicated.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the concert tomorrow afternoon, beginning at 2:30, performing in the first half the Brahms Academic Festival Overture and Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Rudolf Serkin will close the program as soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2.

Munch Entertains

Following last night's concert, Dr. Munch entertained in the chamber music hall members of the Berkshire Nights Committee, headed by Mrs. Edward R. Cumpston Jr. of Pittsfield, who conducted a drive last spring to encourage more Berkshire residents to attend Friday night concerts at Tanglewood. In appreciation of their work, Dr. Munch presented to the committee members an RCA recording of Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony."

After tomorrow afternoon's concert, Dr. Munch and members of the orchestra will be entertained at a garden party by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge at her home, the Residence.

RUDOLF SERKIN who will be the soloist at tomorrow afternoon's concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, discusses the program with Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the BSO. Mr. Serkin will close the afternoon program with Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 193,863 - S. 178,068
AUG 5 1957

Rudolf Serkin's Performance Highlight At Berkshire Festiv

Pianist, Boston Orchestra Play Piston Fifth; Isaac Stern On Brahms P

By JULIAN SEAMAN

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5 — weekend of Brahms and some moderns ended rather moistly yesterday afternoon in The Shed at Tanglewood, where the Boston Symphony Orchestra is concluding its annual Berkshire Music Festival. Intermittent rain, which began the night before, had no appreciable effect upon the size of a crowd, counted officially at more than 8,000.

The regular conductor, Charles Munch, who succeeded the weekend guest, Carl Schuricht, on Saturday night, had chosen to perform Walter Piston's Fifth Symphony, the Brahms Academic Festival Overture and the Second Piano Concerto (Opus 83, B-flat), with Rudolf Serkin as soloist. Mr. Munch has an affinity for some phases of the modern Veni, including Mr. Piston, into whose symphony he poured a veritable flood of driving devotion.

Major Performance By Serkin

One need not say that Mr. Piston has achieved the ultimate masterpiece in this work; one might, however, voice an appreciation of his craft. Some of it to me, at least is needlessly tedious and of a dryness supreme. Jean Morel gave this a first performance by the Juilliard Orchestra Feb. 24, 1956.

Mr. Serkin's exposition of the Brahms Concerto easily was the most nature interval in this concerto. He is not above the restraints of an ascetic temperament, imposed upon what might become an excessively romantic medium, yet manages to convey the classicism as well as the earthiness of Brahms, a performance of major importance.

Mr. Munch was the guiding hand on Saturday night, too. Again, the decor was Brahmsian, with one departure. This was a stunning and tremendous score—medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber (Opus 23A).

Stern Plays Violin Concerto

This is revision of an earlier and longer orchestral suite derived from a ballet, commissioned by the Ditson Fund of Columbia University for Martha Graham and her company. formed it first [illegible] and the Philadelphia Orchestra played the Suite in 1947. Barber contrived the present revision in 1955.

It is stark, barbaric music, a riot of pagan emotion. Mr. Munch, disdaining the refinements of the concert hall, conducted it that way. Whistles and shouts helped the proceedings applause.

Isaac Stern was soloist in the Brahms Violin Concerto, after an opening Haydn Variations Overture. Mr. Munch and Mr. Brahms are not in perfect accord, although Mr. Stern, forsaking the soft discretion of his playing lately, became again the broad, full virtuoso. It was a big performance, technically unblemished, totally entrancing.

MUSICAL LEADER SEPTEMBER 1957

New York

Editor and Critic: SHIRLEY CECILLE CASH, 42 Cloverfield Road, So. Valley Stream, N. Y. Tel: LOcust 1-8192
Other Critics: Harry L. Fuchs, Sherman Gottesman, Walter F. Loeb

Berkshire Festival

Brahms was the featured composer during the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Aug. 2, 3, and 4, with some contrast offered by Werner Egk, Samuel Barber and Walter Piston. At the Friday night concert, Carl Schuricht made his first Tanglewood appearance. His program included Egk's "Georgica," and Brahms' "Tragic Overture" and First Symphony. The Egk work sounded oversentimental and superficial, and only highlighted the beauty of Brahms. Mr. Schuricht conducted with steady, sober hand, and impressed us with his soundness of interpretation. Charles Munch wielded the baton at the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts. At the Aug. 3 concert, Isaac Stern made his second appearance of the season at the Festival and gave a moving performance of Brahms' Violin Concerto. Mr. Stern's playing did not seem to be affected by the rainy weather or the open-air conditions—his technique was true, his projection perfectly beautiful even to the softest whisper in the softer sections. It was an excellent performance by both soloist and orchestra. The program also included fine readings of Brahms' Variations on a Theme of Haydn, and Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," which was appropriately punctuated by lightning. The weekend came to an exciting close when Rudolf Serkin gave a remarkably beautiful and intense rendition of the Brahms Second Piano Concerto. This was preceded by the same composer's Academic Festival Overture, and the Symphony No. 5 by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston came to Tanglewood from his home near Boston especially to attend this performance. He may well have listened with pride, for this is a work well worth adding to the contemporary repertory. Dr. Munch was in top form at both concerts.

Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund

Over half of the students at the Music Center this summer received grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which was established in 1947 by the Radio Corporation of America and is maintained by contributions received from Friends of the Berkshire Music Center and from former students who benefited from the fund in previous years.

Boston Notes: Gail W. Rector, Assistant Manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, left the Orchestra at the close of the Tanglewood season on Aug. 11 to take up his duties as Executive Director of the University Musical Society of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Mr. Rector is taking over the administrative duties of Charles A. Sink who retires from active service after many years on Sept. 1.

Retiring from the Boston Symphony are two of its valued members, Gaston Dufresne, double bass, and Marcel Lafosse, trumpet, who also left Aug. 11. Mr. Lafosse has been in the orchestra since 1926, and Mr. Dufresne, since 1927.

Four new members will join the orchestra in October to fill these two vacancies and two others left by the deaths of Leon Marjollet, cellist, and Ludwig Juht, double bass, during the past season. The new orchestra members are Leslie R. Martin, double bass; Ortiz M. Walton, double bass; Winifred Winograd, cellist; and Andre M. Come, trumpet.

TIGHT BINDING

NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, AUGUST 3, 1957.

Music: Bavarian Georgics at Lenox

Egk's 'Three Peasant Pieces' on Program

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2—The Boston Symphony, given half a chance, is always a joy to listen to for the sheer gorgeousness of its orchestral tone. It had more than half a chance tonight under the experienced baton of Carl Schuricht, who conducted the first of three week-end concerts devoted chiefly to the music of Johannes Brahms.

The novelty of tonight's program, if novelty it can be called, was "Georgica, Three Peasant Pieces for Orchestra" by the Bavarian composer Werner Egk. It served as a showpiece for the orchestra.

Herr Egk, who was born in the first year of this century and is still composing, has used traditional peasant tunes of his native countryside for inspiration.

No one will cry sacrilege if [illegible] stamping Laendler, the [illegible] sentimental love songs and [illegible] with humor of Bavarian peasant [illegible] here are served with so[illegible]sticated orchestral spices. [illegible] the flavoring of Herr Egk's Bavarian Georgics seems [illegible]formed, more than a little [illegible] and surprisingly old-fashioned. It is somewhat like a [illegible]mbination of Strauss' "Rosenkavalier" waltzes, Ravel's "La Valse" and the lullaby of Stravinsky's "Firebird," but with lots of marshmallow, whipped cream and maraschino cherries added.

Carl Schuricht

One was thankful for the soberness of Brahms' "Tragic" Overture and his Symphony No. 1. In C minor. Mr. Schuricht, who made his American debut last season conducting the Vienna Philharmonic, presented the music with elegance and discrimination. His is not a theatrical manner with Brahms. Nor does he try to pump up the climaxes to hysterical emotion a la Tchaikovsky. And he does not try to interpose his personality between Brahms and the audience.

There was little to cavil at, objectively speaking. Yet there was a certain lack of intensity or vitality that, to this listener, robbed Brahms of something essential. It is only fair to add that the audience's applause was long and enthusiastic.

Tomorrow evening's program includes the Brahms Haydn variations, the Brahms Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance." The Sunday matinee offers Brahms' Second Piano Concerto with Rudolf Serkin as soloist, the "Academic Festival" Overture and the Fifth Symphony of Walter Piston.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE.

rl Schuricht Conducts stonians at Tanglewood

Francis D. Perkins

[illegible], Mass., Aug. 3.—Carl [illegible] conducting the Bos[illegible]ony Orchestra for the [illegible], won cheers from an [illegible] of 6,195 in the Music [illegible] Tanglewood last night [illegible]se of the concert which [illegible]e Berkshire Music Fes[illegible]-final week end.

[illegible]rogram, like the two [illegible]harles Munch will direct [illegible] and tomorrow after[illegible]sisted of two works by [illegible]e and one by a contem[illegible]composer. Last night's [illegible]work was Werner Egk's [illegible]." Brahms was rep[illegible]d by the "Tragic" Over[illegible] the First Symphony.

Lucidity Is Praised

[illegible]churicht, who is seventy[illegible]ears old, made a notable [illegible]ion in his only New York [illegible]ce last November with [illegible]na Philharmonic. In his [illegible]ood debut last night, his [illegible]tations revealed a mem[illegible] combination of musical [illegible]nce, spirit and persuasion, [illegible]ility to elicit an orches[illegible]highest standard of per[illegible]ce. There was remark[illegible]lucidity, proportion and [illegible]ceive and thorough clar[illegible] detail. Inner parts became [illegible]onally apparent but not [illegible]ugh receiving undue promi[illegible]e various instrumental col[illegible] had a vividness and lu[illegible]osity which recalled the [illegible]hestra's playing in Serge [illegible]nevitch's days.

He [illegible]s usually economical [illegible]th gestures, but the perform[illegible]ces [illegible] the orchestra's [illegible]ntire understanding of his in[illegible]pretative ideas. The perform[illegible]ce of the Overture disclosed [illegible]e [illegible]rilliance of its title in [illegible]ic [illegible] and classic sense [illegible] with the score itself.

In [illegible] symphony, there were [illegible]ore [illegible] the customary [illegible]hanges of pace, and this left [illegible]room for differences of opinion. But if somewhat unorthodox, his [illegible]hifts of tempo did not hinder [illegible]he continuity of the music [illegible]or its expressive revelation. A [illegible]ed tempo in the Andante re[illegible]d not in lengthiness, but in [illegible]itative eloquence.

Tunes Are Frank

Mr. Egk's "Georgica," which [illegible]kes its title from Virgil's [illegible]Georgics" and its themes from [illegible]lk tunes of the composer's [illegible]tive Bavaria, had its only [illegible]w York production by the [illegible]hilharmonic in 1934. The tunes [illegible]e projected with unabashed [illegible]ankness despite occasional [illegible]rmonic pungency not inherent [illegible]them. But the result, although at times restrictedly effective, is often more cosmopolitan than German in atmosphere.

At one point, there were hints of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka," at another of Ravel's "Bolero." The scoring, while missing the clarity which marks those masters, was still vivid and varied in hue. With some compression of the rather over-long second section, the work might be a useful item for Arthur Fiedler and his Boston "Pops" Orchestra.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, AUGUST 3, 1957

CARL SCHURICHT MOUNTS PODIUM AT TANGLEWOOD

German Pays Tribute to Brahms in Reading of First Symphony

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 2—A conductor new to Tanglewood, the eminent 77-year-old Carl Schuricht; a program which ended with a glorious performance of Brahms' "Symphony No. 1 in C Minor"; and perfect weather conditions, including a new moon, failed to attract as large an audience tonight as might reasonably have been expected under the circumstances. There were an estimated 6195 in attendance.

Little, Active Man

Carl Schuricht became known to this country the past season when he conducted the tour of the Vienna Symphony Orchestra. He is a little man, but extremely active, solid in the best German tradition and a musician first of all. He molds each phrase with loving care, has a special feeling for rhythm and tonight revealed great imagination.

The program opened with a penetrating reading of Brahms' "Tragic" Overture. This is not, in essence, a tragic work, although it has fleeting touches of individual emotion. The work is rather a powerful affirmation during which the listener will do well to use his imagination. At the opening of the work the brass seemed on the ascendency, but as it progressed, the balance became better and the ensemble more cohesive.

Between the overture and the First Symphony, Mr. Schuricht placed a work by Werner Egk, a German composer born in 1901. It is titled "Georgica" and comprises three peasant pieces for orchestra. Egk has drawn heavily on the folk tunes and dances of his native Bavaria for his material and molded them into an enchanting work. It is a realistic portrayal of rural life. The first movement is identified as a Bavarian peasant march and one is reminded of the village bands in any little German town. The second movement has as its theme an old Bavarian love song which is developed with charming grace, with a very expressive trumpet voicing it. The final movement depicts dances of the mountaineers in which jealousy and the contest for the possession of the peasant maidens play an important part. It is all very gay, whimsical and rhythmically exciting, one of those pieces where it is hard to sit still. The orchestra responded brilliantly to Mr. Schuricht's very clear cues.

Grand Time for Some

The audience didn't seem to get the humor in the composition, but those who did had a grand time.

The German conductor paid fine tribute to Brahms as he made known the First Symphon. Basically it was a reading solid as a rock, yet the romance within the work was not allowed to vanish beneath a load of granite. Never have we heard the joyous C Major melody sung more beautifully, nor the tender passages more sweetly. This was a reading of a scholarly, musical, disciplined musician of whom there are too few.

Saturday night, Mr. Munch takes over again, offering the "Variations On a Theme of Haydn" by Brahms and Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance." Isaac Stern will make his second appearance of the season playing the Brahms' "Concerto in D Major" for violin and orchestra.

Sat., Aug. 3, 1957 ★ New York Journal-American

C199

AT TANGLEWOOD:

Schuricht Acclaimed

By MILES KASTENDIECK.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 3.—Carl Schuricht won immediate acclaim on his debut here with the Boston Symphony in the first concert of the Brahms weekend of the Berkshire Festival last night.

Known to New York for his appearance with the Vienna Philharmonic last season, Schuricht again impressed this listener with his authoritative command of both music and orchestra. He draws a certain kind of homogeneous sound from the orchestra that is refreshing to hear. It creates a sense of solidarity where all appears well with the music—and the world.

It appeared quite well with the Brahms tragic overture and the First Symphony where a sense of grandeur pervades both performances. What pointed up his interpretations was a true musician's regard for phrasing in which the musical accent is a vital factor. It was an inspiration to hear this familiar music played with such poise and proportion.

Where the first movement of the symphony was imposing, the second was loving, the third gracious and the finale brilliant after the sense of tragedy conveyed in the opening measures. This interpretation went to the roots of German tradition.

Perhaps as an antidote to Brohms, Schuricht also programmed Egk's "Georgica," three peasant pieces for orchestra. This might be called almost a travesty on Bavarian folksong because of its impish orchestration. The three movements all suggest a German band in Holiday mood.

This departure from sobriety made the Berkshire-Bostonian audience raise a questioning eyebrow or two. Some puckish sense must have led Schuricht to pick it out. That it both fascinated and delighted many might be attributed to its bucolic flavor. Between its rhythmic liveliness and its outright sentimentality there was much to relish, however frivolous.

A perfect night, moon and all, in the perfect setting of the Tanglewood Estate, added to the enjoyment of hearing this program so understandingly played. An audience of 6,195 attended.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

AUG 3-1957

Carl Schuricht Makes Debut As Tanglewood Conductor

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Carl Schuricht made his Tanglewood debut last night conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the opening concert of Series "C" of the Berkshire Music Festival. There was an attendance of 6,195.

The distinguished German conductor is known in this country mainly through phonograph recordings. He toured the United States last season as conductor of the Vienna Philharmonic, and has just directed four concerts at the Ravinia festival in Chicago.

This weekend is featuring the music of Brahms. Last night's program was the "Tragic" overture and the First Symphony; also "Georgica," (three peasant pieces for orchestra by the Bavarian composer, Werner Egk.)

Craftsman

Schuricht is primarily a craftsman. He is small in stature, thoroughly unimpressive on stage from the physical standpoint, but abundant in vitality. He does not resort to visual extravagances to make known his wishes. Yet, he bothers much with minutiae, especially as regards melodic predominances and exact boundaries of volume changes.

The most telling illustrations of his metier were given in the Brahms.

He opened the "tragic" overture with bold and incisive strokes. Each theme was given a full sweep of dynamics. Fine interplay was activated between voices, such as between strings and brasses. The middle, slow section tended to become over-fussy with rhetoric, but it hardly lacked interest.

Schuricht saw to it that one particularly luscious melody was given full prominence in violas and cellos.

Egk Score

We can't dispute in the least either Schuricht's approach to the Egk score, or the orchestra's adroit playing of it.

The work is in three movements, each based on Bavarian folk tunes. First is a peasant march — humor-clad and exceedingly choppy. It specializes in fragmentary phases in strings, ridiculed by winds and firmly attacked in percussion.

Actually, it's pretty ridiculous music, instrumentally entertaining in the sense of horseplay. But it gets pretty boisterous over nothing.

The second movement is allegedly a "Bavarian love song." The same clowns make love who cavort through the first movement — more pathetic than impassioned. If this music could be seen, it would look like a trick mirror in an amusement park.

It was stated in the program notes that the third movement "Awakens memories of the pantomimic dances of the mountaineers, in which jealousy and the contest for the possession of the peasant maidens play the leading roles."

It's rugged, all right, and about as subtle as an approaching German band, well-stocked with growling brass.

Academician

Schuricht's conception of the Brahms symphony was that of an academician rather than a romantic.

The opening movement was read along heroic lines, poetized to a degree by rich nuances and strengthened by tonal opulence. The second movement was played at a slightly slower tempo than usual. It nevertheless represented a harvest of expressive solos, and Schuright brought out details, common scanted, through the simple expedient of suppressing their competition.

The third movement was singularly uneventful-sounded routine and a trifle metronomic [illegible] and orchestra [illegible] issues of the [illegible] generosity.

Tonight's program, conducted by Charles Munch, and played by the Boston Symphony, [illegible] variations on a theme of Haydn, Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," and Isaac Stern will be violin soloist in Brahm's D major Concerto, opus 77.

Music

Schuricht Scores Hit in Festival Debut

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY orchestra began the fifth week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood last night under the baton of a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, making the first of two appearances.

Schuricht visited the United States last year as director of the Vienna Philharmonic orchestra. He has held many eminent posts with European orchestras since 1900, when, as a young man of 20, he became connected with the Stadt-theater at Mainz.

The program last night conformed to the highly successful formula devised this year to concentrate each weekend on one of the great masters and to sandwich a contemporary work in each program. This week the honored composer is Brahms and Schuricht began his concert with the Tragic overture, ended it with the first syphony, and, in between, played three pleasant pieces of the German composer, Werner Egk entitled "Georgica."

* * *

EGK is best known at home for his operas. Last night's three short pleasant and diverting sketches are based on folktunes of his own Bavaria but their inclusion on programs of this stature is hard to justify. They are not even among Egk's major orchestral efforts. They date from 1934 when the composer was 33 years old. On all counts Schuricht would be hard pressed to account for this choice, even though no one will deny him the loyal right to present examples of contemporary German music production.

Egk went far afield for a title for these exuberant and vigorous vignettes. They are gay and the tranquil central waltz might have passed by way of Vienna but they are light and frothy and of the type clever and facile hands in the movie studios turn out swiftly and on demand.

* * *

SCHURICHT showed the stuff he is made of at once in the Tragic overture although the audience did not really take him to their hearts until after the symphony when they recalled him with complete and vociferously unrestrained approval. First of all he controls the orchestra with mature discipline and calls upon the total potential horsepower rarely if at all. There was transparent voice leading and tone balance, the prime and essential responsibilities of a man commanding an orchestra, factors which are often, too often, ignored.

Carl Schuricht

Shuricht is a small man, and, in spite of the years of demonstrations during his long and notable career, he seemed to be genuinely happy to be so cordially received by this new and strange audience. His gesticulations are definite but not vehement. He is more the effective short puncher than the wild Hurricane-Jackson type. He beats time with one hand, a gratifyingly thrifty and proper effort and one which Berkshire Music Center students might do well to watch and consider. His left hand politely requests what he wishes to ask. There are no imperious demands.

* * *

HIS TEMPI were comfortable for our ears. The virtuosity of the orchestra is not here an issue. We heard Brahms and not necessarily Schuricht. He was faithful to a degree far beyond that usually observed. The lovely noble theme of the last movement which is played after the introductory adagio seemed a trifle undistinguished at first but then, when it recurred, Schuricht gave it all its full and due majesty exactly, the score reveals, as Brahms planned it.

Schuricht allowed us to hear many of the joys Brahms provides in their true light. The wonderfully sonorous horn solos in this same introduction were played with full-blown resonance but not all-out force. These are probably evening Angelus bells from a country churchyard. The late Olin Downes opined they might have been a gesture of respect by Brahms for the honorary degree the University of Cambridge offered him and for which he attempted to compensate by the sounds of their chapel bells. In any event the Boston orchestra was heard last night in all its glory.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

AUG 11 1957

A Most Welcome 'Stranger'

By MILES KASTENDIECK

AGAIN ignorance asserted its limiting force at the Berkshire Festival last weekend. The concert which Carl Schuricht conducted on Friday drew just over 6,000 people while the other two topped 8,000 and 11,000. Rain kept many away when Serkin played on Sunday, for he is the most popular of soloists to appear at Tanglewood in recent years.

Schuricht is a newcomer at Tanglewood. Indeed, most people have heretofore known him, for his life has been spent in Europe. He visited the United States first as conductor of the Vienna Philharmonic last Fall. His initial appearance in Carnegie Hall was an occasion to remember. Music lovers who heard him wondered why he had not been invited to conduct here long before.

Because no special fanfare had been made about him, people stayed away from the Tanglewood concert, classifying him as an "unknown" conductor. Once again the spirit of musical adventure was stultified.

Rare Touch

At 77 Schuricht commands attention, not so much for his years as for the authority those years have brought to his conducting. His music-making is solid in the sense that his Brahms is deeply rooted in German culture. There was a quality about the playing of the Boston Symphony under his direction and the sound of the music indicative of a mastery quite rare in conductors these days.

To be sure, the element of superficial excitement was absent. The element of vibrant fullness, however, gave such a familiar work as the Brahms' First Symphony the depth and the breadth to convey a new feeling of completeness.

One of the interesting aspects of Schuricht's conducting is his capacity to pull the music out of an orchestra. He does this almost literally.

His gesture suggests the feeling to which the orchestra should respond naturally. Thus the impression that the music wells out of the orchestra establishes the idea of more homogeneous playing.

Only a conductor of great musical integrity can extract such response. This is Schuricht's achievement, the hallmark of a great musician. To hear a concert under his direction is to experience the finest kind of music-making. It is most unfortunate that opportunities to hear him have been so rare.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

AUG 3 1957

Beguiling Program At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 2 As the Berkshire Music Festival entered its next-to-closing weekend here tonight, there were a number of cheerful things to beguile the customers.

There was, for example, a fine, cool night and a half a silvery moon, no doubt the same one that shone down on Hartford. There was a conductor making his first appearance at Tanglewood and being very well received for the concert which he offered with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He was Carl Schuricht, who has led a number of major German orchestras and who became known to American audiences where he toured with the Vienna Philharmonic last year.

Strong Results

The program included the "Tragic" overture and first symphony by Brahams (this is Brahms weekend to shine here, along with the moon,) and the "Georgica" by Werner Egk, contemporary German composer. Mr. Schuricht served them all up well and interestingly. Though he is 77 years old slightly bent and considerably bald, he dominates the Boston Symphony with vigor and authority. His style of conducting is a bit jerky and he is an especially determined giver of cues. But he gets results that are convincing in their musicianship and strong in their impact.

From the outset of the evening, Mr. Schuricht gave the audience a kind of Brahms different from what Charles Munch, regular conductor of the Boston orchestra, customarily offers. It is entirely Germanic, being thick, resonant, emotional and a rolling forward. It was this way in the overture, and again in the symphony. It recalled to considerable degree the Brahms that the late great Serge Koussevitsky created, being on the intense side in interpretation and performance. Mr. Munch, on the other hand, gives us a Gallic Brahms, if such a thing exists evcept in figurative writing. His Brahms is neater, leaner in the reading and the playing, more intellectualized, and more brittle.

Also intriguing this evening was Herr Egk's "Georgica: Drei Bauernstuecke", rooted in Bavarian peasant tunes. This is a work to be played beneath a window by a German band whose leader once shook hands with Igor Stravinsky. From its basic material takes for the most part a rather - decided "Oopah" effect. Its three sections are described in the program as approximating a Teutonin march, an old Vacarian love sono, and a variety of mountaineer dances.

Herr Egk naturally has metamorphosed all this into sophisticated symphonic writing. The "Georgica" take warm, bright tunes, sharpen them with unusual harmonies, and heighten their pulse with provacative rhythms. Much of the means and effect recall "Petrouchka", and Herr Egk,s habit of isolating instruments all across the score, so that the orchestration sounds sparse.

In any event, the "Georgica" are fun, shrewd and engaging. And though a certain feeling of "Burlescaz" hangs over them, their sentimentality and their irony alike, there is the greatest musical sincerity all through the score.

The final work of the evening, the Brahms First Symphony, was especially "Herzlich" as Mr. Schuricht and the Boston played it here tonight, tender, warm, almost visionary. Above all, Mr. Schuricht sought out musicality in the score and in the performance. This is a particular attribute of European musicianship, as opposed to the insistence on sheer virtuosity It is very rewarding to hear and feel it.

—T.H.P.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, AUGUST 5, 1957

Real Thunder Effects Liven Boston Symphony Program

By Francis D. Perkins

LENX, Mass., Aug. 4.—With the accompaniment of rain, the Boston Symphony Orchestra completed the fifth week end of the Berkshire Music Fesival inn Tanglewood's music shed with two concerts of works by Brahms and modern American composers under the direction of Charles Munch.

Despite the weather, last night's crowd of 11,238, was the season's largest thus far, with all of the regular seits sold. There was no atmospheric accompaniment for Brahms variations on a theme by Haydn at the beginning, but thunder boomed inappropriately at first and later appropriately during Medea's meditation and dance of vengeance by Samuel Barber, and added some unscheduled percussion effects while Isaac Stern was playing the Brahms "Violin Concerto."

This afternoon, when the rain began before the starting hour, the count was 8,195. Brahms was represented by the "academic festival overture" and the "second piano concerto" with Rudolf Serkin as the soloist; the American contribution was Walter Piston's 'fifth symphony."

Both American works had first New York hearings last year. Mr. Barber's 'meditation,' grave, lyric, conservative, served its implied expressive purpose last night and might well do so still more persuasively as a part of the, ballet for which this music was originally composed, or if its lucid interpretation under Mr. Munch had had more intensity. The 'dance of vengeance' which followed revealed its full emotional significance in this performance by the admirable Bostonians; this part of the work scores primarily through its rhythmic pattern, drive and energy.

Mr. Piston's symphony meets the test of rehearing well; it is concise and coherent and its ideas have a definate shape and character. The introduction is convincing in its steadily waxing expressive concentration and its thematic prophecies; the second movement has ingratiating melodic lines and considerable reflective depth. Some on the music's livelier measures, such as the sprightly finale, have an energetic idiom of a type which has served other contemporary composers, but this provided a desirable contrast and range of mood. Both the grave and the spirited elements of the symphony were admirable disclosed by Mr. Munch and his musicians.

The Brahmsian part of last night's program fared sometimes variably from an expressive standpoint. The Haydn variations were played corectly, but with a routine uniformity of mood not usually associated with this conductor and orchestra. The damp weather was not favorable to stringed instruments, and this seeme dsometimes apparent in Mr. Tern's interpretation of the violin concerto, despite its skill, musicianship and understanding.

Notable zest and vividness of color combined with breadth and pomp for the closing episode marked the playing of the Festival Overture this afternoon. Mr. Serkin presented the B Flat Major Piano Concerto with expected expertness and understanding of its stature and emotional resources. An occasional impression that, despite notable striving, he did not quite attain all the sonority needed for some of its most proclamatory measures could probably be ascribed to atmospheric dampness.

But the interpretation was generally convincing, especially when it dealt with intimate and, finely distinguished moods.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, MONDAY, AUGUST 5, 1957

WORKS BY BRAHMS PLAYED AT LENOX

Serkin and Stern Soloists in Concertos—Piston, Barber Scores on Programs

By EDWARD DOWNES

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4—A whirlwind performance of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto by Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Orchestra brought the fifth week-end of the Berkshire Festival to a triumphant close this afternoon. Charles Munch conducted the program, which opened with Brahms' "Academic Festival" Overture and included the Fifth Symphony of Walter Piston.

Mr. Piston's symphony, commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for its festival of American music, was given its first performance at the school last February. One was grateful for another chance to hear it, both because of its intrinsic strength and because the orchestral programs of the Berkshire Festival have usually tended to be conservative rather than adventurous.

Not that there is anything startlingly radical about Mr. Piston's symphony. Its forms, as the composer points out in a program note, are traditional. The harmonies are strongly tonal and not even especially dissonant. Mr. Piston seems deliberately to avoid any sort of sensationalism. This inward-turned concentration on the music itself rather than its external clothing is a trait he shares with Brahms, however far apart the two composers' styles may otherwise seem to be.

Three-Movement Work

Of the symphony's three movements, the jaunty finale, with a distinctively American ring to its dance rhythms, is probably the easiest to grasp at a first hearing. But there were other, quieter, moments, which seemed even more persuasive this afternoon. Among these were the pensive flute melody, which opens and closes the first movement, and long stretches of the adagio second movement. Best of all, it is music that arouses a desire to hear it again.

It was startling at first and then very pleasant to see the quiet-mannered American composer besieged by a crowd of autograph hunters at his seat in the audience.

It is perhaps unfair to call Mr. Serkin's performance of the Brahms B-flat major Concerto a whirlwind. Mr. Serkin, for all the tempestuous drama of his performance, was no mere showman. In fact, his generous gesticulations, which disturb some music lovers, seem to this listener the most inevitable outcome of the pianist's personal feelings.

One has almost the feeling that Mr. Serkin wishes he were conducting Mr. Munch's orchestra as well as playing the solo part, so completely does he identify himself with the orchestra's every phrase, every note, with the intensity of feeling and significance that Mr. Serkin does. One has the feeling that each part of the music, even when the orchestra plays without him, is a matter of life-and-death importance. Even in the magical nocturne-like passages of the slow movement, while Mr. Serkin did not strain, he preserved this characteristic feeling of vitality and intense feeling.

Last night Mr. Munch conducted the Brahms Violin Concerto and Variations on a Theme of Haydn and Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," adapted and [illegible] from Mr. Barber's [illegible] "The Serpent [illegible]." It proved again an enormously [illegible] piece. As Mr. Munch's forces piled climax upon climax last night, a thunderstorm broke over the Music Shed, and the reverberations from the Berkshire Hills joined in chorus with the rolling timpani of the orchestra. The lightning flashed, and nature itself seemed in sympathy with the raging heroine of Euripides and Mr. Barber. Yet when it was all done, this listener could not get over the feeling that this was one of the more external pieces of a usually very sensitive composer.

The soloist in the Violin Concerto was Isaac Stern, who was in excellent form, despite the [illegible] rainy weather. Contrary to what one might expect in such a huge semi-open-air auditorium, the solo violin was most moving in the very [illegible] parts of the slow movement, with its intimate exchanges with the woodwinds of the orchestra. But it was all-round performance won soloist, [illegible] orchestra long and [illegible] applause.

UNION-SPRINGFIELD, MASS., MONDAY, AUGUST 5, 1957

SERKIN PLAYING AT TANGLEWOOD IS IN TOP FORM

Pianist, Boston Symphony Join in 'Unforgettable' Performance

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Tanglewood, Aug. 4 — Rain and more rain failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the 8159 persons who thronged Tanglewood this afternoon. Aside from posing a number of traffic problems within the grounds, the downpour made little difference. The festival authorities are sure of one thing. When Rudolf Serkin is booked to appear, a record audience will be present. His popularity is enormous and truly deserved.

Composer Hears Work

Continuing the music of Brahms which has been featured during the week end, Charles Munch opened the program with a performance of the "Academic Overture," in the grand tradition. The work was inspired [illegible] Brahms was given an honorary degree by the University of Breslau. The overture on student airs was a handsome present to the student body. It sounded as [illegible] and flamboyant this afternoon as the day it was written. Mr. Munch labored mightily and the communication was strong.

The composer, Walter Piston, was on hand this afternoon to hear a splended performance of his Fifth Symphony. Mr. Munch seems to have a great respect for the music of this eminent composer and has presented several of his symphonies with marked success. Personally, we find this particular symphony less interesting that the fourth or sixth symphonies, but it has its points, if somewhat obscured, particularly in the first movement by a heavy orchestral texture. The audience enthusiasm for the work was evident and indeed lucky is the composer to have a work played with such gorgeous tone and animation as the Boston players performed this symphony.

Great Concerto

The second portion of the program was devoted to one of the greatest concertos of all times, the "Piano Concerto No. 2 in B Flat Major" by Brahms. This is a concerto of symphonic size, gigantic in outline and of incredible difficulties. Mr. Serkin was in top form which means that the audience heard a performance of this concerto which probably no other pianist today can equal. He was magnificently aided by Mr. Munch and the orchestra. Tremendous vitality, combined with a formidable technique combined to enhance the elemental grandeur of the opening Allegro and the Appassionata. There was tenderness, ethereal beauty in the Andante and the final Allegretto was tossed off in a manner which brought bravos from the listeners.

It was an unforgettable performance, one which did not stray from the musical path for an instant, nothing unmusical could come from Rudolf Serkin, we believe. His scholarship and musical resources permit him to play music as it is written.

C20J

14—The Berkshire Eagle, Monday, Aug. 5, 1957

Music Review

Brahms at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE NEXT-TO-LAST weekend at Tanglewood closed yesterday afternoon with the audience in a tumult finding it almost impossible to let Rudolph Serkin know just how much they were carried away by his performance of the Brahms B flat piano concerto played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch.

A disastrous rainstorm prevented the use of the adjacent lawns as listening posts for additional thousands who might have come to hear the last of the three programs devoted mainly to Brahms. As it was, the Shed itself was jam-packed beyond any previous record. Just how 8,000 could get under the shelter of a roof which normally accommodates 6,000 is a problem for someone other than a mathematician.

Following the pattern devised for this season of concentrating each week on one of the old masters with a contemporary work inserted in each program, yesterday afternoon Walter Piston's fifth symphony was played; Saturday night it was Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance."

* * *

SERKIN played with galvanic fury and then with the most tender pathos. The comprehension of the great concerto was illustrated by a magnificent tone which prevailed in all graduations of tempo and dynamics, an articulate clarity which was maintained in the most bravura and tempestuous flights and a spacious grandeur which suggested dimensions of infinite proportions.

Fully as telling as the most dazzling pyrotechnical displays were the passages of understatement in which a master of less stature might not have felt secure. One did not have to wait beyond the initial ascending arpeggio to discern the command he possessed and the means to execute it.

Rudolph Serkin

The orchestra was inspired by the spark he constantly supplied and joined the soloist in a tremendous performance. It was a transcendental conquest of the formidable score. The cello solo in the andante by Samuel Mayes was beautifully played although a slightly diminished tone would have still sufficed.

* * *

PISTON'S symphony, written in 1954, was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music. Of the three movements the outside two are swift and vigorous and gay, although the first has a slow introduction to which it reverts before the end. There is great rhythmic drive and momentum and the harmonic harshness recedes within the forward surge of the playing. A quieter sustained second theme in the violins uses material played by the flutes in the introduction. Munch allowed the wind instruments to overshadow the strings here and distort the balance, as he did in the Brahms Academic overture with which the program had started.

The center adagio begins with plucked notes in the celli and basses which employ the 12-tone system, but which is not maintained when the violins enter with a more conventional theme. The final allegro has jazz-like syncopated rhythm and is a happy, care-free dance. Piston was called from his seat in the audience to acknowledge a noisy demonstration of approval the audience was happy to accord him.

* * *

ON THE PRECEDING evening Brahms had been represented by the Variations on a Haydn Theme and the violin concerto in which Isaac Stern had been the soloist.

Munch never displayed greater devotion to any music nor did he ever play the orchestra with more love than in the Haydn Variations. The St. Anthony chorale which Brahms uses, first in the woodwinds, was balanced just right and the orchestra reflected his devotion with a corresponding warmth. There was moderation in every variation. Brahms here confines himself to calm and graceful flights of fancy and does not indulge in excessive demands until the final coda where he expands majestically for only a short minute. Munch caught the spirit of this whole work with deep penetration and the performance was highly impressive.

Stern played the Tchaikovsky concert last week and will play the Beethoven the final week. His playing is on a level where one can marvel at the last performance heard. His success can only vary with the composition and the circumstances. It used to be said that Brahms wrote a concerto for violin not "with" orchestra but "against" the orchestra. It is true to a certain extent for although the solo instrument is indubitably highlighted and does not suffer the obstacles the viola, for example, experiences in Berlioz' "Harold," yet he has to play while the accompanying orchestra has a message of symphonic importance of its own. This cannot easily be subdued nor should it be entirely rendered unnoticed. That was the case Saturday and Stern was shrouded in the enveloping clouds at some parts of the journey.

* * *

AGAIN conspicuous was the basic simplicity with which he played those portions which are elemental and the absolute reckless freedom with which he attacked such episodes as that with which the final movement begins. He used the Joachim cadenzas Saturday night which are not this reviewer's preferred ones. Their references to the thematic material are oblique at best and the frilly embellishments are not the most effective nor even applicable. The ovation continued with recall after recall. Oboist Ralph Gomberg was signalled for the credit due him for his performance in the slow movement, and the entire cast was required to rise endless times.

The middle section of the program was Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," his Opus 23-A. This was ballet music originally, and it is always a fair question to ask how much is sacrificed by severing the visual complement of an art work primarily conceived for an interlocking unified performance. In any case, it did not require too much attention to easily perceive and sense Barber's protrayal of the two moods of his classical drama. Barber's orchestra sounds right. The placement of his instruments is one of his most favorable talents. In working toward such specific purposes, however, he appears to be most concerned with intensifying the stage action effectively. We did not find it absorbing as music alone.

* * *

THE BRAHMS Tragic overture with which the program opened is far from being a depressing, lugubrious piece. Munch let the orchestra be heard in its best dress and left the tremendous audience in a happy mood which they had reason to expect would persist the whole evening. Unfortunately, rain and thunder which soon made its appearance more than dampened their spirits. The thunder first lumbered up while the violins in the orchestra were playing with muted strings and Stern later had to appear to ignore continuing growls of thunder while he was playing the sustained and heavenly slow movement of his concerto.

VIOLINIST STERN HEARD BY 11,238 AT TANGLEWOOD

Season's Largest Crowd Also Hails Munch in Brahms, Barber Works

BY WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 3—The names of violinist Isaac Stern, conductor Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, plus the music of Johannes Brahms and Samuel Barber, drew 11,238 persons to Tanglewood tonight and constituted the largest audience of the season.

Rush for Shelter

A bit of thunder and lightning and some rain caused a rush for shelter in the big shed, but many remained on the lawn under the trees.

This final concert of the week end continued the music of Brahms. Mr. Munch opened the program with an incandescent reading of the "Variations on a glowed and one could only marvel again at the imagination, wit and variety of means Brahms used in writing the variations. Of course, they are thrice familiar, yet conductor and orchestra approached them as though each were a fresh and joyful experience.

Samuel Barber, one of the most distinguished American composers, wrote his ballet "Medea" for Martha Graham who first danced it in New York in 1946. In 1955 Mr. Barber rescored "Medea," meditation and dance of vengeance, for full orchestra. That was the music we heard tonight.

Fondness for Melody

Mr. Barber, unlike many of his contemporaries, has a fondness for melody and while the meditation does not make for pleasant music, there does run through the score a pattern of melody, sometimes harsh, sometimes despairing. The dance of vengeance is powerful, cruel music, rhythmically strong and savage. Mr. Munch used a tremendous amount of energy in his communication of the music and it had a tremendous impact on the audience. There was a real ovation after this performance.

There is little left to say about Mr. Stern's performance of the "Violin Concerto in D Major" by Brahms. Now, at the peak of his powers, it is doubtful if any violinist can surpass him in his interpretation of this work. His playing tonight was in lofty vein, yet it often yeilded to the romance which runs through the concerto from beginning to end. Technically, it was a flawless performance, rich-toned and superbly phrased. He received splendid collaboration from Mr. Munch and the orchestra.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AUGUST 4, 1957

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

AUG 5 - 1957

[202]

Brahms Featured

Stern and Serkin Soloists In Concerts Guided by Munch

By Klaus George Roy

Lenox, Mass.

At Tanglewood last weekend Johannes Brahms was the honored patron composer of three concerts, with two compositions of his on each program to throw protecting arms around a 20th-century work less ripe in classic romanticism.

It fell to the venerable but admirably youthful German conductor Carl Schuricht to jar the audience out of a complacent acceptance of a thrice-familiar masterpiece when he concluded his first Tanglewood appearance, Friday evening, with the most individualistic recreation of Brahms's First Symphony in this listener's memory.

There was much argument whether his conception, especially of the last movement, was traditionally "correct" and faithful to the score. To these ears, the freshness of approach and the illumination of unexpected facets (especially in tempi and counter-melodies) served to prove a remark once made by Lawrence Gilman: "Masterworks have an infinite capacity for self-renewal."

Playing from a specially marked set of parts brought to this country by Dr. Schuricht, the Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians surpassed themselves. Their respect and personal liking for this master conductor was evident, and the audience tendered him an ovation.

Having begun with a grandly shaped performance of the "Tragic Overture," Dr. Schuricht continued with "Georgica" by the German composer Werner Egk (born 1901). Given its première in 1934 by Werner Janssen with the New York Philharmonic, the work is subtitled "Three Peasant Pieces."

♪ ♪ ♪

Entertaining as it is, one regretted that the conductor decided on this lightweight and early piece of Egk's instead of the originally scheduled "Sonata for Orchestra" of 1949. For the "Georgica" is really Pops music (the Boston Pops have done it), a somewhat dubious treatment of Bavarian folk tunes and folk songs.

The composer, who has a penchant for treating older material in a modern orchestral fashion (as in his splendid "French Suite" after Rameau, 1949), has here dressed up some rather boorish tunes in the most outrageous disguises of subtle sonorities and off-key harmonizations. The real trouble is that the listener cannot be sure whether Egk was laughing with his peasants or at them. Dvořák and Bartók have left less doubt about this in music of similar origin.

Charles Munch led the Brahms concerts of Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Two of Tanglewood's favorite soloists were heard: Isaac Stern on Saturday in the Violin Concerto, Rudolf Serkin on Sunday in the Second Piano Concerto. A sharper contrast of performing styles between two superb artists could hardly be imagined.

With Stern it all seemed to be apparently effortless and nonchalant control, breathtaking in security; with Serkin there was a total physical as well as mental involvement, as if the music were being composed at white heat right then and there. While Stern exudes a consistent serenity and grace of style, Serkin electrically charges the atmosphere. Not only the instruments of the two performers differ; their expressive aims do also.

♪ ♪ ♪

Comparisons, in the arts, are not odious but essential; we are not measuring dexterity. Beautiful, sensitive, and near-perfect as Stern's performances almost always are, one may feel that, even with occasional imperfection, it is Serkin who comes close to the elemental creative excitement.

The collaboration of Mr. Munch and the orchestra was inspired, and his readings of the "Haydn Variations" on Saturday and the "Academic Festival Overture" on Sunday were balanced and satisfying.

In the first of his concerts, before the violin concerto, Mr. Munch offered Samuel Barber's Opus 23A, "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" (1955), an expanded excerpt from his earlier "Medea" ballet music (1946). The incandescent fury unleashed by this work is of overwhelming impact. An expressive and meaningful composition, this is music worthy of its subject as ancient and timeless tragedy. Its competition, moreover, with the timpani rolls of a thunderstorm outside the Music Shed, was aptly timed and by no means ineffective; art and nature seemed once more on equal terms. Having conducted this piece of Barber's in Boston and Tanglewood, Mr. Munch should now let us hear the entire "Medea" Suite of seven numbers.

On Sunday afternoon, an audience somewhat decreased by intermittent rains heard Walter Piston's Fifth Symphony in its first Tanglewood performance; it had been done in Boston last October. This work of 1954, written just before the buoyant Sixth, is less accessible than its younger companion or the vivacious Fourth of 1950.

♪ ♪ ♪

Piston rarely experiments in a large published score; here, this American symphonic master seems to be making many intriguing departures: new textures, new aspects of rhythmic and structural motion, new melodic shapes supplied by tone rows.

There are some visionary sounds; there are moments that do not yet communicate. The bright rondo-finale, perhaps, is not of sufficient weight for the first two movements; it acts like a scherzo, and one would be eager for a large-scale closing movement.

The body of the symphony is, without question, music of high seriousness, introspection, complexity; it must be heard again and lived with to reveal its full humanity. Let it not be forgotten, after a Brahms weekend, that the now comfortably popular C minor Symphony was in 1878 considered by a Boston critic as "a remarkable expression of the inner life of this anxious, introverted, over-earnest age. . . ."

AT TANGLEWOOD: N.Y. Journal American

Stern, Serkin --And Brahms

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 5 — Two soloists dominated the Saturday and Sunday concerts of the Berkshire Festival weekend featuring Brahms. Rudolf Serkin played the B Flat Piano Concerto yesterday afternoon, Isaac Stern the violin concerto on Saturday night. Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra on both occasions.

Munch showed wisdom in not including a Brahms symphony for these events, allowing the symphonic nature of the concertos to compensate. Instead, he singled out the works of two American composers to vary the program. Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" was heard on Saturday; Piston's Fifth Symphony yesterday afternoon. Both were very well received. Piston was present to acknowledge the applause.

Jaunty Gaiety

That the Medea is one of Barber's finest works becomes more evident on each hearing. Its dramatic content found a willing interpreter in Munch. Admiration for Piston's symphony grows with each performance, but the feeling about it remains the same. Its contemplative adagio still leaves a listener on the outside. The jaunty gaiety of the brilliant finale appears more and more American.

Serkin never fails to excite this music lover on every occasion. The intensity of his nature always makes a performance more vital and vibrant. His rhythmic absorption in the music is probably the key. Whatever it is, Serkin has emerged as the unique pianist of our times. And he never fails a listener.

With an equally dramatic consciousness present in Munch, the performance of the B Flat Concerto was, in short, tremendous. Yet without the Boston musicians playing at their best, the total effect would not be quite so overwhelming. They are playing superbly these days

Stern was handicapped by muggy weather on Saturday night, but he played the concerto with poise and reliable artistry. The concert opened with the Brahms-Haydn variations. Yesterday it began with the "Academic Festival Overture."

Rain curtailed the size of the Sunday crowd to 8,159. Over 11,000 turned up for the Saturday concert. The total for the weekend came to 25,592. The festival will end next week with a series of Beethoven programs

Sunday Telegram
ESTER, Mass.
lican
06,047
4- 1957

of Brahms 238
YMOND MORRIS
m Music Critic
X — The second
certs, specializing of Brahms, was nglewood last night
oston Symphony onducted by aac Stern was hms' Violin Concerto or, Opus 77.
start there was of 11,238 which upon the discipline of a thunderstorm
cided with the erpercussive tation and Dance
e" by the contemporary erican composer
Barber.
rformed was Brahms'
on a theme
pus 56A.
rber score is a
It's one of the accomplishments orchestra
The most rhythmic and certainly dest.
came from
of Medea by Euripides which was produced reece in 431 B.C. Originally written for ballet, Barber's compassed Medea's dance and ferocious theme of vengeance, the sweep of her magical powers and her ruthless murder of her children by which to avenge herself upon the unfaithful Jason.

Brilliant Study

With or without these dramatic incentives, the Barber score is a brilliant study in orchestral efects. Most of them are intriguing and mystical, with solos interspersed, during the "Meditation" episodes, for concert-master, first violist, and woodwinds.

Medea's meditations were embellished with some unscored thunderclaps that didn't quite dovetail with Barber's sinous melodies, harp passages, and chattering snare-drum.

As she began to rant and rave her vengeance through the full resources of the Boston Symphony, the obligato became more asertive.

This portion is based on a arring, syncopated figure that ounts in intensity until it ursts through at several oints. In the final orgy, the hunderbolts were ineffectual nd then the rain came down n earnest.

The Haydn-Brahms variations received a thrilling performance.

Serene, bucolic atmosphere was initiated in the St. Anthony chorale upon which the ariations are based. Most eautiful was the work of the

NEWTOWN BEE, FRIDAY, AUGUST 9, 1957

Serkin's Performance Of Concerto Praised

Music Of Brahms Heads Tanglewood Concert

To an obbligato of raindrops falling on the roof of the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, performed the familiar, but always dynamic and passionate Brahms Second Piano Concerto in the next-to-the-last of the Sunday afternoon concerts in the Berkshire Festival series, August 4. The shed was packed, but the usual crowds on the lawn were considerably diminished by the wet weather, although there were a number of stout-hearted, rain-impervious Tanglewood buffs huddled under tarpaulins, umbrellas and blankets.

Opening with a spirited reading of Brahms' Academic Festival Overture, Dr. Munch next led the orchestra in the Symphony Number 5 by Walter Piston, the Maine-born American composer. Written in three movements, this modern composition is pleasingly devoid of much of the cacophony, which to ears more attuned to the classic and romantic works, make so much of contemporary music

The first movement, marked "lento; allegro con spirito; lento," contains a slow introduction, in which the origins of all of the subsequently developed ideas in the symphony may be found. The main theme is announced by horns, with the secondary, more relaxed and melodic theme introduced by the oboe. The flute melody of the introduction brings the movement to a close. Cellos and basses, outline in pizzicato the basic pattern of the second movement, "adagio," with violins playing the theme. Three variations, engaging clarinet, strings, piccolo and tuba are developed, with a coda finishing the movement. The last movement, "allegro lieto", is in many ways the most appealing, being gay and rhythmic, resembling in form a rondo. The main body of the composition is in sonata form.

The tempestuous, haunting and evocative Second Piano Concerto by the great master of romantic composition, was never more excitingly played to this reviewer's mind (and this is a favorite concerto) than in Serkin's performance Sunday. At home after the concert, we put on his recording of the composition with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy, and even making the allowances for the stimulation of a live performance and the rapport that this pianist, through his own involvement with the music, establishes with his audience, it seemed to us that Sunday's presentation was richer, more intense, more poetic in the lovely dream-like andante movement, than the recording.

It is quite possible that Dr Munch's sensitive conducting, the obvious rapport between him and the soloist in the concerto's interpretation, is partly responsible for this heightening of the emotional values, Sunday. Technically, Serkin's musicianship is always on the same high level.

Pianist, conductor and the cellist, whose soaring notes enriched the andante movement, were called back time and again by an audience that had been unable to restrain itself from abundant applause even between movements.

This Sunday's final concert in the festival series will feature Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Berkshire Festival Chorus. Complete details of this concluding week at Tanglewood will be found in the weekly calendar elsewhere in the paper.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047
AUG 4 - 1957

Music of Brahms

11,238 Attend Lenox Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The second of three concerts, specializing in the music of Brahms, was given at Tanglewood last night by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. Isaac Stern was soloist in Brahms' Violin Concerto in D Major, Opus 77.

At the start there was an audience of 11,238 which diminished upon the discouragement of a thunderstorm that coincided with the already overpercussive "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by the contemporary American composer, Samuel Barber.

Also performed was Brahms, variations on a theme of Haydn, Opus 56A.

The Barber score is a "rip-snorter." It's one of the most brilliant accomplishments in contemporary orchestration, one of the most rhythmically exciting works, and certainly one of the loudest.

Inspiration came from the tragedy of Medea by Euripides, which was produced in Greece in 431 B. C. Originally written for ballet, Barber has encompassed Medea's dark and ferocious theme of vengeance, the sweep of her magical powers and her ruthless murder of her children by which to avenge herself on the unfaithful Jason.

Brilliant Study

With or without these dramatic incentives, the Barber score is a brilliant study in orchestral efects. Most of them are intriguing and mystical, with solos interspersed, during the "Meditation" episodes, for concert-master, first violist, and woodwinds.

Medea's meditations were embellished with some unscored thunderclaps that didn't quite dovetail with Barber's sinous melodies, harp passages, and chattering snare-drum.

As she began to rant and rave her vengeance through the full resources of the Boston Symphony, the obligato became more asertive.

This portion is based on a jarring, syncopated figure that mounts in intensity until it bursts through at several points. In the final orgy, the thunderbolts were ineffectual and then the rain came down in earnest.

The Haydn-Brahms variations received a thrilling performance.

Serene, bucolic atmosphere was initiated in the St. Anthony chorale upon which the variations are based. Most beautiful was the work of the woodwinds, with subdued reinforcements in brass.

Soaring qualities appeared in strings as the variations were forwarded, and a vigor that didn't get out of hand carried great weight in contrasts. We were particularly impressed with the psychological pauses that Munch made between variations.

There were passages in finely-woven counterpoint.

Swift variations were nothing short of virtuosic in technical treatment, spot-second rhythms and accents, including tricky syncopations.

Just as telling was the consumate care with which the poetic sections were woven into the tapestry. The finale was quite magnificent and hugely proportioned.

The storm was no kinder to Stern than it had been to the Barber music. In spite of pelting rain on the wooden roof of the huge music shed, soloist and orchestra kept going, although quiet passages were seen rather than heard.

It was nevertheless obvious that Stern was in good form and determined that the Brahms concerto would receive a forceful performance. There was some letdown of competition during the cadenza of the first movement, of which Stern made a brilliant spectacle, engaged with dashing technique and climactic impact.

He received resounding applause at the end of the movement, but it was some time before the slow, and inaudible second movement got under way. The weather is always a lively topic of conversation, even at Tanglewood.

Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in this afternoon's concert. The works are Brahms' "Academic Festival" overture, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 5, and Rudolf Serkin will be soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 in B Flat Major, Opus 83.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
AUG 5 - 1957

Rain, Lightning Battle Music At Tanglewood

A drenching rain, flashes of lightning, and the clatter of thunder formed a backdrop for works by Brahms and Barber performed by the Boston Symphony orchestra Saturday night at Tanglewood.

The largest audience of the season, 11,238 persons, were attracted to the musical event with Charles Munch directing the orchestra and Isaac Stern featured as violinist. Most deserted their lawn blankets for standing posts around the Big Shed.

Sunday's concert found rain and more rain but still 8159 persons were on hand as Rudolf Serkin gave one of his great performances in the afternoon.

Saturday the color of Brahms' Variations on a Theme of Haydn, Op. 56A was brought to the fore by Mr. Munch who brought his own imagination to play on the many variations, contrasting them distinctly. The rich sweep of the violin section was especially effective in this performance.

The strong rhythms of Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," Op. 23 A, originally written as a ballet and later rewritten for orchestra were powerful. The work which brings out psychological states of jealousy and vengeance, tied on to the mythical figures of Medea and Jason, has a modern flavor, but does not lack melody. The jazz-like syncopations, the sometimes wierd strains of the wind instruments multiplied with addition of the entire orchestra worked to bring out the vehemence and passion of the work.

Ovations followed this modern work and the playing of violinist Isaac Stern in Brahms' Concerto in D. Major for Violin, O. 77.

Mr. Stern's skill as a violinist is noted and his performance Saturday night was delightful to hear. The beautifully rich tones he achieved, shading them to perfection, provided wonderful listening. The lyrical qualities of Mr. Stern's playing was sometimes given an exclamation point by the sound of thunder. The orchestra in turn assisted him very ably, providing the light for the diamond-like quality of his playing to sparkle.

I. R. M

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006
AUG 5 - 1957

[203]

Rain Cuts Tanglewood Attendance

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—A steady rain and inclement weather diminished the usually larger Sunday afternoon attendance at Tanglewood to 8,159 yesterday afternoon.

The occasion was the last of three concerts, specializing in the music of Brahms, played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch was conductor and Rudolf Serkin soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major, Opus 83. The weekend attendance was 25,592.

Munch and the orchestra gave an invigorating performance of Brahms' "Academic Festival" Overture, Opus 80. Many of the same qualities appeared in this that identify Munch with inspired and astute interpretations of the German master's music.

Features

One of the most satisfactory features was choice of tempos. Another was absence of unbecoming emotional intensity even when it seemed the leaning of soloists.

The "Academic" opened with pulsating stealth, an alive speed, while giving full recognition to melodic interest upon which it necessarily thrives.

The orchestra did superlative work, collectively and in solo. A magnificence was projected by trumpets in the sequence, "We have built a stately house." There was elasticity between the four college songs that Brahms wove so deftly into a rhapsodic medley. The huge strokes of the pen with which Brahms glorified the "gaudeamus igitur" were quite something to hear.

Contemporary

Each program has sandwiched a contemporary work between two pillars of proven classic worth.

For this concert it was Walter Piston's Symphony No. 5, premiered last season in New York. The composer was on hand at Tanglewood yesterday to accept personal recognition for his work.

The work is not revolutionary or offensive in its harmonic elements. Nowhere does it make you cringe nor does it attract undue attention with tonal histrionics. Its melodies are individually interesting, but loosely coordinated. The most beautiful of these are for flute and were exquisitely played by Doriot Anthony Dwyer.

Appraisal

Now to appraise each of the three movements as a separate unit.

The first opens with disturbed harmonies beneath one of the flute solos we mentioned. It gradually works itself into a state of nervous excitement, with everything from full blasts in brass to vigorous drawings of bows.

The movement incorporates some interesting, if not ingenious, problems of instrumentation. There is, for example, a Prokofieff-like section in nagging rhythms that presumably attempts to raise quite a storm.

For the most part we found the slow movement an abyssmal bore. It embarks on an enticing possibility, engaging pizzicato in low strings to a warm, slightly meandering melody in violins.

That's about as far as it gets, in spite of episodes of great volume, and intermittently attractive effects, involving harp.

Foggy

Most of the time, it traverses foggy terrain, resorting to odd instrumental effects to maintain interest. It leaves you wondering exactly what it had to say and why.

The third movement tries to dissipate the "elegiac" mood of the second. The implements are again great volume, and a snappy, syncopated figure of the scherzo genre. It does generate a degree of heat.

This is good music for review by a scholar who interests himself in instrumental usages that border on the novelty. As a work, titled "Symphony," that's intended to provide continuity of related interests in three movements, it fails to do more than excite a respect for the composer's knowledge of instruments — and deplore one's inability to succumb to his emotional objectives.

Mannerisms

Serkin gave a studious, technically adept, virile performance of the Brahm's piano concerto.

He is called "a musician to his fingertips which he is, audibly. Each time we are to see Serkin play, we expect to be irritated by his mannerisms, and yesterday was no exception. Occasional remnants remain of the school of piano playing so successfully caricatured by Vladimir de Pachmann. Such picturesque antics as flying arms to close each bravura phrase, impassioned facial expressions, and the rest contribute less than an iota to the music of Brahams—or to the sounds they would seem to generate.

Musicianship

In no sense does this defile the status of Serkin's musicianship or the fine points of his interpretive judgements. As important to the superior quality of yesterday's performance was superb cooperation from conductor and orchestra. In the Brahms concerto, this is of paramount importance.

Thursday is "Tanglewood on Parade," to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. The program will be given by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Munch and Aaron Copland —also the Boston Pops Orchestra, under Arthur Fiedler.

Final Series

The final series of concerts begins Friday, and will feature the music of Beethoven. Munch will conduct Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3, and Isaac Stern will be soloist in the violin concerto. The modern work is Honegger's Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique").

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL,

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD
Friday and Saturday
August 2, 3
By A. C. S.

Carl Schuricht made his first appearance at Tanglewood Friday evening conducting the first of three concerts featuring the music of Johannes Brahms. Mr. Schuricht has a straightforward approach to Brahms which is most refreshing, while giving the emotional content of the music its due, he abstains from excesses often heard in readings of these works. The performance of the First Symphony gave ample evidence of this notably in the second movement, but in the overall choice of tempi as well.

Sandwiched between the Tragic Overture, which opened the program, and the Symphony was a novelty by Werner Egk entitled Georgica. In three short movements, it utilizes Bavarian peasant tunes in a variety of ways, none of which make the piece worth playing. Certainly its tawdriness was made even more apparent in contrast with the Brahms works.

Charles Munch found an unmanageable interloper in the musical forces Saturday evening during the playing of Samuel Barber's adaption of a ballet score, called in this version Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance. An inherently dramatic work was made even more so by a very vocal thunder storm. If anything, the intrusion enhanced rather than detracted from Mr. Barber's eloquent commentary on the Greek tragedy.

Brahm's Variations on a Theme of Haydn and Violin Concerto in D Major completed the program. Isaac Stern appeared as violin soloist and, in spite of the high humidity and off-stage rumblings, gave a first rate performance. The Variations seemed slightly muddy to this listener, but a capacity audience gave enthusiastic applause to all the works.

TANGLEWOOD
Sunday, August 3
By E. G. B.

Other concert goers might benefit by our experience if we state frankly the first number on last Sunday's program will not be reviewed here, because of our being wedged for exactly half an hour in the line of traffic stretching toward the entrance gates. It was Brahms week—interspersed with contemporary music— brought to a close on Sunday afternoon with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Academic Festival Overture of Brahms, the Fifth Symphony by Walter Piston, and Brahms' second Piano Concerto with Rudolf Serkin at the keyboard.

The symphony by Maine-born Mr. Piston had its premiere in New York a year and half ago. It is traditional in form, and clear, almost transparent, in harmony and structure. The thematic material is well developed, with quite frequent use of solo wind instruments. The contrast between the three movements is heightened by variety of color within each movement. We look forward to another hearing and further exploration of the emotional content of the work. Mr. Piston was present at the concert and came forward to acknowledge the audience's warm response.

Serkin was in top form in the concerto. He was very much the interpreter, and the orchestra the accompanist. It was an interpretation of tremendous power and speed and great breadth of conception. Pensive and lyric passages were played with the utmost delicacy and control, and were skilfully fused into the dramatic intensity of the whole.

One feels compelled to note, that viewed at close range, Serkin's violent antics are distracting. However, the result of his inner and outer forcefulness, while making the trembling concert grand piano seem an inadequate vehicle for such mightiness, was convincing as well as intensely exciting.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047
AUG 4 - 1957

Music of Brahms

11,238 Attend Lenox Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The second of three concerts, specializing in the music of Brahms, was given at Tanglewood last night by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. Isaac Stern was soloist in Brahms' Violin Concerto in D Major, Opus 77.

At the start there was an audience of 11,238 which diminished upon the discouragement of a thunderstorm that coincided with the already overpercussive "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by the contemporary American composer, Samuel Barber.

Also performed was Brahms, variations on a theme of Haydn, Opus 56A.

The Barber score is a "ripsnorter." It's one of the most brilliant accomplishments in contemporary orchestration, one of the most rhythmically exciting works, and certainly one of the loudest.

Inspiration came from the tragedy of Medea by Euripides, which was produced in Greece in 431 B. C. Originally written for ballet, Barber has encompassed Medea's dark and ferocious theme of vengeance, the sweep of her magical powers and her ruthless murder of her children by which to avenge herself on the unfaithful Jason.

Brilliant Study

With or without these dramatic incentives, the Barber score is a brilliant study in orchestral efects. Most of them are intriguing and mystical, with solos interspersed, during the "Meditation" episodes, for concert-master, first violist, and woodwinds.

Medea's meditations were embellished with some unscored thunderclaps that didn't quite dovetail with Barber's sinous melodies, harp passages, and chattering snare-drum.

As she began to rant and rave her vengeance through the full resources of the Boston Symphony, the obligato became more asertive.

This portion is based on a jarring, syncopated figure that mounts in intensity until it bursts through at several points. In the final orgy, the thunderbolts were ineffectual and then the rain came down in earnest.

The Haydn-Brahms variations received a thrilling performance.

Serene, bucolic atmosphere was initiated in the St. Anthony chorale upon which the variations are based. Most beautiful was the work of the woodwinds, with subdued reinforcements in brass.

Soaring qualities appeared in strings as the variations were forwarded, and a vigor that didn't get out of hand carried great weight in contrasts. We were particularly impressed with the psychological pauses that Munch made between variations.

There were passages in finely-woven counterpoint.

Swift variations were nothing short of virtuosic in technical treatment, spot-second rhythms and accents, including tricky syncopations.

Just as telling was the consumate care with which the poetic sections were woven into the tapestry. The finale was quite magnificent and hugely proportioned.

The storm was no kinder to Stern than it had been to the Barber music. In spite of pelting rain on the wooden roof of the huge music shed, soloist and orchestra kept going, although quiet passages were seen rather than heard.

It was nevertheless obvious that Stern was in good form and determined that the Brahms concerto would receive a forceful performance. There was some letdown of competition during the cadenza of the first movement, of which Stern made a brilliant spectacle, engaged with dashing technique and climactic impact.

He received resounding applause at the end of the movement, but it was some time before the slow, and inaudible second movement got under way. The weather is always a lively topic of conversation, even at Tanglewood.

Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in this afternoon's concert. The works are Brahms' "Academic Festival" overture, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 5, and Rudolf Serkin will be soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 in B Flat Major, Opus 83.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
AUG 5 - 1957

Rain, Lightning Battle Music At Tanglewood

A drenching rain, flashes of lightning, and the clatter of thunder formed a backdrop for works by Brahms and Barber performed by the Boston Symphony orchestra Saturday night at Tanglewood.

The largest audience of the season, 11,238 persons, were attracted to the musical event with Charles Munch directing the orchestra and Isaac Stern featured as violinist. Most deserted their lawn blankets for standing posts around the Big Shed.

Sunday's concert found rain and more rain but still 9159 persons were on hand as Rudolf Serkin gave one of his great performances in the afternoon.

Saturday the color of Brahms' Variations on a Theme of Haydn, Op. 56A was brought to the fore by Mr. Munch who brought his own imagination to play on the many variations, contrasting them distinctly. The rich sweep of the violin section was especially effective in this performance.

The strong rhythms of Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," Op. 23 A, originally written as a ballet and later rewritten for orchestra were powerful. The work which brings out psychological states of jealousy and vengeance, tied on to the mythical figures of Medea and Jason, has a modern flavor but does not lack melody. The jazz-like syncopations, the sometimes wierd strains of the wind instruments multiplied with addition of the entire orchestra worked to bring out the vehemence and passion of the work.

Ovations followed this modern work and the playing of violinist Isaac Stern in Brahms' Concerto in D Major for Violin, O. 77.

Mr. Stern's skill as a violinist is noted and his performance Saturday night was delightful to hear. The beautifully rich tone he achieved, shading them to perfection, provided wonderful listening. The lyrical qualities of Mr. Stern's playing was sometimes given an exclamation point by the sound of thunder. The orchestra in turn assisted him very ably, providing the light for the diamond-like quality of his playing to sparkle.

I. R. M.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006
AUG 5 - 1957

Rain Cuts Tanglewood Attendance

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—A steady rain and inclement weather diminished the usually larger Sunday afternoon attendance at Tanglewood to 8,159 yesterday afternoon.

The occasion was the last of three concerts, specializing in the music of Brahms, played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch was conductor and Rudolf Serkin soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major, Opus 83. The weekend attendance was 25,592.

Munch and the orchestra gave an invigorating performance of Brahms' "Academic Festival" Overture, Opus 80. Many of the same qualities appeared in this that identify Munch with inspired and astute interpretations of the German master's music.

Features

One of the most satisfactory features was choice of tempos. Another was absence of unbecoming emotional intensity even when it seemed the leaning of soloists.

The "Academic" opened with pulsating stealth, an alive speed, while giving full recognition to melodic interest upon which it necessarily thrives.

The orchestra did superlative work, collectively and in solo. A magnificence was projected by trumpets in the sequence, "We have built a stately house." There was elasticity between the four college songs that Brahms wove so deftly into a rhapsodic medley. The huge strokes of the pen with which Brahms glorified the "gaudeamus igitur" were quite something to hear.

Contemporary

Each program has sandwiched a contemporary work between two pillars of proven classic worth.

For this concert it was Walter Piston's Symphony No. 5, premiered last season in New York. The composer was on hand at Tanglewood yesterday to accept personal recognition for his work.

The work is not revolutionary or offensive in its harmonic elements. Nowhere does it make you cringe nor does it attract undue attention with tonal histrionics. Its melodies are individually interesting, but loosely coordinated. The most beautiful of these are for flute and were exquisitely played by Doriot Anthony Dwyer.

Appraisal

Now to appraise each of the three movements as a separate unit.

The first opens with disturbed harmonies beneath one of the flute solos we mentioned. It gradually works itself into a state of nervous excitement, with everything from full blasts in brass to vigorous drawings of bows.

The movement incorporates some interesting, if not ingenious, problems of instrumentation. There is, for example, a Prokofieff-like section in nagging rhythms that presumably attempts to raise quite a storm.

For the most part we found the slow movement an abyssmal bore. It embarks on an enticing possibility, engaging pizzicato in low strings to a warm, slightly meandering melody in violins.

That's about as far as it gets, in spite of episodes of great volume, and intermittently attractive effects, involving harp.

Foggy

Most of the time, it traverses foggy terrain, resorting to odd instrumental affects to maintain interest. It leaves you wondering exactly what it had to say and why.

The third movement tries to dissipate the "elegiac" mood of the second. The implements are again great volume, and a jaunty, syncopated figure of the scherzo genre. It does generate a degree of heat.

This is good music for review by a scholar who interests himself in instrumental usages that border on the novelty. As a work, titled "Symphony," that's intended to provide continuity of related interests in three movements, it fails to do more than excite a respect for the composer's knowledge of instruments — and deplore one's inability to succumb to his emotional objectives.

Mannerisms

Serkin gave a studious, technically adept, virile performance of the Brahm's piano concerto.

He is called "a musician to his fingertips which he is, audibly. Each time we are to see Serkin play, we expect to be irritated by his mannerisms, and yesterday was no exception. Occasional remnants remain of the school of piano playing so successfully caricatured by Vladimir de Pachmann. Such picturesque antics as flying arms to close each bravura phrase, impassioned facial expressions, and the rest contribute less than an iota to the music of Brahams—or to the sounds they would seem to generate.

Musicianship

In no sense does this defile the status of Serkin's musicianship or the fine points of his interpretive judgements. As important to the superior quality of yesterday's performance was superb cooperation from conductor and orchestra. In the Brahms concerto, this is of paramount impertance.

Thursday is Tanglewood on Parade," to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. The program will be given by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Munch and Aaron Copland ...also the Boston Pops Orchestra, under Arthur Fiedler.

Final Series

The final series of concerts begins Friday, and will feature the music of Beethoven. Munch will conduct Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3, and Isaac Stern will be soloist in the violin concerto. The modern work is Honegger's Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique").

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL,

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD
Friday and Saturday
August 2, 3
By A. C. S.

Carl Schuricht made his first appearance at Tanglewood Friday evening conducting the first of three concerts featuring the music of Johannes Brahms. Mr. Schuricht has a straightforward approach to Brahms which is most refreshing, while giving the emotional content of the music its due, he abstains from excesses often heard in readings of these works. The performance of the First Symphony gave ample evidence of this notably in the second movement, but in the overall choice of tempi as well.

Sandwiched between the Tragic Overture, which opened the program, and the Symphony was a novelty by Werner Egk entitled Georgica. In three short movements, it utilizes Bavarian peasant tunes in a variety of ways, none of which make the piece worth playing. Certainly its tawdriness was made even more apparent in contrast with the Brahms works.

Charles Munch found an unmanageable interloper in the musical forces Saturday evening during the playing of Samuel Barber's adaption of a ballet score, called in this version Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance. An inherently dramatic work was made even more so by a very vocal thunder storm. If anything, the intrusion enhanced rather than detracted from Mr. Barber's eloquent commentary on the Greek tragedy.

Brahm's Variations [illegible] Theme of Haydn and [illegible] Concerto in D Major completed the program. Isaac Stern appeared as violin soloist and, in spite of the high humidity and off-stage rumblings, gave a first rate performance. The Variations seemed slightly [illegible] to this listener, but [illegible] audience gave enthusiastic applause to all the works.

TANGLEWOOD
Sunday, August 3
By E. G. B.

Other concert goers might benefit by our experience if we state frankly the first number on last Sunday's program will not be reviewed here, because of our being wedged for exactly half an hour in the line of traffic stretching toward the entrance gates. It was Brahms week—interspersed with contemporary music— brought to a close on Sunday afternoon with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Academic Festival Overture of Brahms, the Fifth Symphony by Walter Piston, and Brahms' second Piano Concerto with Rudolf Serkin at the keyboard.

The symphony by Maine-born Mr. Piston had its premiere in New York a year and half ago. It is traditional in form, and clear, almost transparent, in harmony and structure. The thematic material is well developed, with quite frequent use of solo wind instruments. The contrast between the three movements is heightened by variety of color within each movement. We look forward to another hearing and further exploration [illegible] content of the [illegible] was present at the [illegible] me forward to acknowledge the audience's warm [illegible]

Serkin was in top form in the concerto. He was very much the interpreter, and the orchestra the accompanist. It was an interpretation of tremendous power and speed and great breadth of conception. Pensive and lyric passages were played with the utmost delicacy and control, and were skilfully fused into the dramatic intensity of the whole.

One feels compelled to note, that viewed at close range, Serkin's violent antics are distracting. However, the result of his [illegible] forceful [illegible] seem [illegible] for such mightiness, was [illegible] as well as intensely exciting.

NEWBURGH NEWS—9
Friday, August 9, 1957

[204]

Local Reviewer Hails Tanglewood Orchestra

By BERNARD LOTH

At Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Sunday, Aug. 4, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch presented a program of music of Brahms and Piston, with Rudolf Serkin as soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major. The orchestra played the well-known Academic Festival Overture by Brahms and the Symphony No. 5 of Walter Piston.

Mr. Piston smiled most happily from his chair in the audience as he shared the enthusiastic applause following the playing of his Fifth Symphony, this listener is sure that Mr. Johannes Brahms would have smiled just as happily if he had been present to hear his music played by one of the truly great orchestras of our day. The beauty of sound produced by the Boston Symphony in all three strikingly in the third or slow movement of the Piano Concerto, literally took our breath away.

o o o

RUDOLF SERKIN, one of our finest contemporary pianists, was a very fitting soloist for such an orchestra as the Boston Symphony, and Charles Munch, with the physique of a football player and the bounce of a teen-ager, conducted with all the confidence and virtuosity of a great organist knowing that his every motion would bring forth its proper response from the mighty but most sensitive organ, built not of wood and metal but of the men and women of the orchestra.

